By letter dated 4/30/65, Legat, Mexico, advised that the Mexico City Station of CIA, by memorandum 2/18/65, captioned "American Communists' Contacts in Mexico City" which was classified "Secret" with instructions that the information not be disseminated outside the Bureau, furnished information indicating that a leading member of the National Liberation Movement, a pro-Cuba, anti-US Communist front, stated that LEO HUBERMAN and FRANCES KELLY, both of whom are editors of New York "Monthly Review" were in Mexico. According to the memorandum, HUBERMAN and KELLY were interested in discussing the possibility of publishing English translations of the writings of DAVID ALFARO SIQUEIROS, a well known Mexican artist and a member of the Central Committee of the Mexican CP. The memorandum also indicated that KELLY arrived in Mexico on 2/14/65, and both she and HUBERMAN were in contact with American Communists in Mexico. (S)

The enclosed LHM is being classified "Secret" as it contains information furnished by CIA which was classified "Secret". (S)

England and who recently returned to England, was employed by the publication "Monthly Review" in New York for several years. NY T-2 advised that while residing in New York, she resided at 45 Carmine Street, Apartment 25, New York, New York. NY T-2 advised that Frances Kelly is the sister of Pat Kelly, 19 Gunter Grove, London, Southwest 10, England. NY T-2 advised that her Social Security number is 043-51-2909. U

NY T-2 further advised that in June, 1964, Frances Kelly directed correspondence on behalf of "Monthly Review" to the Ghana Mission to the United Nations indicating that she had done some research work regarding a cumulative index for the party book shop in Accra, which had been requested by the Ghana Mission to the United Nations. ~~S~~(U)

The March, 1964 issue of "Monthly Review" on page 623, contains a book review by Frances Kelly in which she is identified as an assistant to the editors of "Monthly Review". U

On June 3, 1965, Mrs. Jay Sapienza, Superintendent, 45 Carmine Street, New York, New York, advised that Frances Kelly resided at 45 Carmine Street, for approximately two years until January, 1965, at which time she indicated that she was going to make a trip to Mexico and then return to England. Mrs. Sapienza stated that she believed that Frances Kelly originally came to the United States from England as she had an English accent. Mrs. Sapienza stated that Kelly is in her early 30's and was a journalist who worked for a magazine in New York, New York. Mrs. Sapienza stated that during her residence at 45 Carmine Street, Frances Kelly was an excellent tenant. U

APPENDIX

FAIR PLAY FOR CUBA COMMITTEE

The April 6, 1960, edition of "The New York Times" newspaper contained a full-page advertisement captioned "What Is Really Happening In Cuba," placed by the Fair Play for Cuba Committee (FPCC). This advertisement announced the formation of the FPCC in New York City and declared the FPCC intended to promulgate "the truth about revolutionary Cuba" to neutralize the distorted American press. U

"The New York Times" edition of January 11, 1961, reported that at a hearing conducted before the United States Senate Internal Security Subcommittee on January 10, 1961, Dr. CHARLES A. SANTOS-BUCH identified himself and ROBERT TABER as organizers of the FPCC. He also testified he and TABER obtained funds from the Cuban Government which were applied toward the cost of the aforementioned advertisement. U

On May 16, 1963, a source advised that during the first two years of the FPCC's existence there was a struggle between Communist Party (CP) and Socialist Workers Party (SWP) elements to exert their power within the FPCC and thereby influence FPCC policy. This source added that during the past year there had been a successful effort by FPCC leadership to minimize the role of these and other organizations in the FPCC so that their influence as of May, 1963, was negligible. U

The SWP has been designated pursuant to Executive Order 10450. U

On May 20, 1963, a second source advised that VINCENT "TED" LEE, FPCC National Office Director, was then formulating FPCC policy and had indicated that he had no intention of permitting FPCC policy to be determined by any other organization. This source stated that LEE believed that the FPCC should advocate resumption of diplomatic relations between Cuba and the United States and should support the right of Cubans to manage their revolution without interference from other nations. LEE did not advocate supporting the Cuban revolution per se. U

The November 23, 1963, edition of "The New York Times" reported that Senator THOMAS J. DODD of Connecticut had called FPCC "the chief public relations instrument of the CASTRO network in the United States." It is to be noted that Senator DODD was a member of the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee which twice conducted hearings on the FPCC. U

The December 27, 1963, edition of "The New York World Telegram and Sun" newspaper stated that the pro-CASTRO FPCC was seeking to go out of business and that its prime activity during its lifetime had been sponsorship of pro-CASTRO street rallies and mass picket lines, and the direction of an active propaganda mill highlighting illegal travel-to-Cuba campaigns. Its comparatively brief span of life was attributed to mounting anti-CASTRO American public opinion, the 1962 Congressional hearings which disclosed FPCC financing by CASTRO's United Nations Delegation, and ultimately, the bad publicity which the FPCC received from disclosure of activities on its behalf by suspected presidential assassin, LEE H. OSWALD. U

On February 6, 1964, the previously mentioned second source advised that V. T. LEE had recently remarked that the FPCC was dead and that there were no plans to organize another similar organization. U

On April 13, 1964, a third source advised that there had not been any FPCC activity in many months and that the FPCC had been dissolved. U

MONTHLY REVIEW

A source advised on March 24, 1953, that Monthly Review, Inc., was incorporated in the State of New York on October 19, 1951, and the corporation papers reflected it succeeded the individual business of LEO HUBERMAN at 66 Barrow Street, New York, New York, which operated since 1949 under the title, Monthly Review Press. u

The publication is "An Independent Socialist Magazine" with editorial and business offices at 333 Sixth Avenue, New York 14, New York, and mailing address at 66 Barrow Street, New York, New York, according to the March, 1961, issue of "Monthly Review." Its editors are listed as LEO HUBERMAN and PAUL M. SWEEZY. u

LOUIS F. BUDENZ, former editor of the "Daily Worker," an East Coast Communist newspaper which suspended publication on January 13, 1958, advised on June 23, 1950, that LEO HUBERMAN was a member of the CP in 1945. u

Another source advised on November 2, 1954, that PAUL M. SWEEZY was known as a Marxist, but not as a Communist Party (CP) member. The same source stated that the CP hard core had been critical of SWEEZY because of his independent application of Marxist theory. According to the source, SWEEZY was used to advantage in many CP front activities in the 1930's. u

The CP has been designated by the Attorney General of the United States pursuant to Executive Order 10450. u

Information has been received from a confidential source abroad that according to a South African who was trained in guerrilla warfare at the Nanking Military School in China in 1963, there were seventeen American negroes also training at this school. The source further stated that this was not the first group of American negroes to receive such training there. (S)

No additional information has been developed corroborating the above allegation. However, a review of our files indicates that a source of your Agency, who utilizes the cryptonym "Sugar," evidently has a wide acquaintanceship in African nationalist movements and therefore may be in a position to furnish information concerning this matter. It is therefore requested that "Sugar" be contacted for any information he may be able to furnish in this regard. (S)

Source was questioned in this matter in effort to obtain identifying data. He was unable to recall any additional info of value and explained that his recollection was based on brief examination of a paper which came across his desk with many others. Source repeated there is a possibility that captioned case is identical with the case involving an American whose occupation ~~which~~ was repairing pipes, and stated his recollections concerning this was also very vague. Source could not recall the case officer from the Seventh Department who handled captioned case. X (U)

[UNSUB; CODE CLERK ALLEGEDLY RECRUITED BY KGB MOSCOW, SPRING, 1960] X (U)

Photograph of Sergeant [CHARLES BRYANT] (S) was displayed to source who advised the face was familiar especially the characteristic twisting of the mouth to one side, but advised he could not recall any circumstances which made his recollection of the picture possible. In view of the current status of NOSENKO he was not furnished with the facts in this case at this time. X

[AMERICAN PRIESTS IN MOSCOW - STUDIED BY KGB] X (U)

Source advised that prior his departure from Moscow GENNADIY GRYAZNOV, the KGB official, who was then Chief of Section, had told him that two American priests in Moscow were being studied and that one was under consideration for approach on the basis of blackmail. GRYAZNOV told source that a Russian girl who is employed at American House is on very friendly relations with this priest and KGB has knowledge that he has carressed and fondled her and anticipates they may succeed in catching him having intimate relations with this girl in which case a recruitment approach will be made. 1. On 8 December 1972 the Directorate of the Service of Intelligence and Prevention (DISIP) was reorganized by its Director, Dr. Remberto Uzcategui Bruzual. (Source Comment: Uzcategui believes DISIP will be in line for criticism during the election year of 1973 and he wants to remove from positions of responsibility any of his controversial section heads.) The gist of the document issued by Uzcategui reorganizing DISIP follows.

2. The Director of DISIP sets the general policy based on instructions from the Ministry of the Interior and has ultimate control of the Services. The Deputy Director assists him in carrying out these responsibilities and substitutes for the Director during his absence. As its supervisory and fiscal units, DISIP has an Inspector General of Services who has the responsibility of disciplining personnel and investigating employees, and an internal comptroller who verifies the administration of the Services.

3. The following are the DISIP executive positions: (Directorate of the Service of Intelligence and Prevention)

a. Secretary General of Services, which has been assigned to Dr. Oswaldo Dominguez.

MEMORANDUM TO: File

FROM: Robert Olsen RO

SUBJECT: Interview of March 4, 1975, with E. Howard Hunt and his Daughter, Lisa Hunt

The interview commenced at approximately 4:00 PM and was conducted at 712 Jackson Place.

Mr. Hunt is presently residing at 1245 N.E. 85 8~~2~~th Street, Miami, Florida 33138. He has a silent telephone number of 305 758-6159.

Lisa Hunt resides at 3406 Nimitz Road, Apt. A-2, Kensington, Maryland 20795. She has an unlisted telephone number which she declined to give us. She was born on March 9, 1951.

The interview concerned allegations that Mr. Hunt was involved in the assassination of President John Kennedy and other public figures. He is aware of the public statements made by Dick Gregory and Ralph Schoenman in early February 1975 relative to his being involved in the assassination of President Kennedy. He states that most of the information that Mr. Gregory and Mr. Schoenman referred to is drawn from a book by Tad Szulc entitled, E. Howard Hunt, the Compulsive Spy. Hunt states that the book is saturated with errors. One of those errors is the claim that Hunt was Chief of Station in Mexico City in the fall of 1963.

The Bay of Pigs Background

Hunt states that in 1960 he was assigned to the job of organizing a "government in exile" for Cuba among Cuban exiles in Florida. The plan adopted by the National Security Council under President Eisenhower called for the formation and training of a brigade of Cuban exiles who would invade Cuba, establish a provisional government, receive recognition by the United States and overthrow the Castro government. The brigade had its own air force and was otherwise fully equipped by the United States Government. The operation, however, was not supposed to be one involving United States Government participation. The venture was to involve training and launching from outside the United States.

In connection with his political activity and the organization of the government in exile, Hunt went to Mexico in 1960. Shortly thereafter the Mexican government demanded that they leave and he returned to the United States. Richard Nixon, then Vice President, was working closely with the CIA on the project.

When President Kennedy was elected in November 1960, he was briefed on the project and confirmed the plans, including the plan to provide air cover to the invading Cuban force. In early 1961, however, the Kennedy administration decided that the political organization of the Cuban government in exile would have to be broadened so as to include all elements of the Cuban society. Even radical leftwingers were to be included. Hunt was assigned the job of convincing the leaders of the Cuban community to accept such a broadening of the political structure of the government in exile. Hunt found this to be an impossible job to accomplish because the Cubans recruited to make up the invasion force had been promised that the government in exile would be solidly anti-Castro and anti-communist. Hunt asked to be relieved of his assignment because he thought it was an impossible one to achieve and he returned to Washington to work on propaganda and similar non-political aspects of the forthcoming invasion.

Within twenty-four hours prior to the time that the Cuban brigade was to hit the beaches at the Bay of Pigs, President Kennedy made two critical decisions that affected the final outcome: he cancelled plans for an airstrike on Cuba which would have destroyed the six remaining combat planes that were available to Castro; second, the order that there be no air cover for the invading brigade. The result was that the invading force was chopped up while it was still in the water; the ships carrying the armored vehicles were sunk, as were the supply ships, and the troops were left abandoned on the shore. The remnant of the Cuban Air Force was entirely adequate to demolish the invasion fleet.

Hunt concedes that he was bitter about the decisions made by President Kennedy, but he primarily blames Arthur Schlesinger, Adlai Stevenson and Robert Kennedy for advising the President to follow the course he chose. He particularly feels that the Cubans had been recruited with certain promises and that those promises were withdrawn at the last minute. Hunt says, in fact, that the decision not to make the airstrike and not to provide air cover was made after the invasion fleet had arrived at the point of no return, i.e., when radio communication to the invasion fleet had already terminated for security reasons.

After the Bay of Pigs disaster, Hunt worked with Allen Dulles until early 1962 at which time Dulles was replaced as DCI. In January 1962, Hunt was assigned to the Domestic Operations Division of the Deputy Directorate for Plans. He was involved in handling proprietaries based in the United States, which have their impact abroad. His immediate superior was Stanley Gaines, who was either Chief of Operations or Executive Officer of the Domestic Operations Division and Tracy Barnes, who was Division Chief of DOD (Barnes is a cousin by marriage to Vice President Rockefeller.)

The proprietaries which Hunt was engaged in managing were [Continental Press] 24 which prepared news and radio 24 broadcasts for foreign use; 24 [Allied-Pacific] Publishing Company [of Bombay] which was engaged in publishing [textbooks for Indian schools]; the [Rome Daily American], 24 a cover 24 operation; and Fodor's Travel Guides, a proprietary which Hunt questions as to whether it had any use. (Fodor's had been set up in 1946 as a cover operation but served no apparent use during the years Hunt was with DOD.

The headquarters for the DOD was at 1717 H Street, N.W., in Washington, D. C., and then later it was on Pennsylvania Avenue.

Hunt's assignment with DOD lasted until the spring of 1965.

During the period from January 1962 until 1965, he states that he never traveled to Mexico or any other Latin American country. His first trip to Mexico after 1961 was in 1970, when he traveled there for the Mullen Company after his retirement from the CIA.

Hunt's Whereabouts on November 22, 1963

Hunt states that he had never been in Dallas until 1971, with a possible exception of a change of planes on his way to Mexico with his family in 1960. He does not recall whether that change of planes took place in Dallas or in Houston. In any event, he and his family never left the airport on that occasion.

He has never had any contact, directly or indirectly, with Lee Harvey Oswald, Jack Ruby or anyone else thought to have been associated with the assassination of the President.

He was never in New Orleans in 1963 and has never had anything whatever to do with the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, which he identifies as a communist organization.

During the period from January 1962 to 1965, he traveled once or twice per year to India, two or three times per year to Paris, once or twice per year to London, and, during that period, he traveled two or three times to Rome. His only domestic travel in 1963 was between Washington and New York. All travel, whether domestic or international, was in his own name.

Hunt states that in 1961 he used the pseudonym of Edward J. Hamilton in connection with his work on the Cuban project in Florida. With the exception of that pseudonym and the pseudonym he used on the identification papers provided him for the Ellsberg break in, he has never used a pseudonym.

On November 22, 1963, he and his wife were driving on H Street at about 9th in Washington, D. C., when he turned the car radio on and learned that the President had been shot. He and Mrs. Hunt had been shopping in a Chinese grocery store in that immediate vicinity, immediately prior to their getting into the car. The Hunts lived at 5215 Balton Road, Sumner, Maryland. On their way home they drove to the Sidwell Friends school on upper Wisconsin Avenue and picked up their younger daughter, Kevan. Kevan told them that Robert and Courtenay Kennedy, children of Attorney General Robert Kennedy, were students in the same school and had been picked up by the Secret Service. The children in the school knew that the President had been shot.

Mr. Hunt states that the following persons are witnesses to the fact that he was here in Washington, D. C., at the time the President was shot in Dallas:

1. His son, Howard St. John Hunt, then ten years of age.
2. His daughter, Lisa, then twelve years of age.
3. His daughter, Kevan, then eleven years of age.
4. The family maid, Mary Trayner, now employed by a family living at 4806 DeRussey Parkway, Chevy Chase, Maryland, and whose phone number is 652-2930.

Mr. Hunt believes that he was either taking the day off from work as a part of annual leave on November 22, 1963, or he may have been recuperating from a hospitalization for ulcers. He had been hospitalized at about that period at Sibley Hospital in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Hunt states that he held the following oil company charge account and credit cards in 1963 and that such accounts may provide corroboration as to his presence in Washington, D. C., on November 22, 1963: Esso Oil, Gulf Oil, Texaco Oil, Cities Service Oil, Brooks Brothers (New York), Garfinkle's, Woodward and Lothrop, Sears Roebuck & Co., Hecht Co. He also states that telephone records might be checked with Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.; that the CIA might have travel voucher records showing his travel during that year and that CIA should also have records on the dates on which he took sick leave or annual leave.

Mr. Hunt categorically denies that he has been involved in any way whatsoever with the assassination of President Kennedy, Senator Robert Kennedy, Martin Luther King, or any other person either within or without the United States. He similarly denies any participation or involvement whatever in the attempted assassination of Governor Wallace, the disappearance of Congressman Hale Boggs or the shooting of Senator Stennis.

He states that in connection with the planning for the Cuban invasion in 1961, he did suggest that Fidel Castro should be assassinated either before or contemporaneously with that invasion, but his suggestion was not acted upon or otherwise approved.

Attached are copies of a press statement made by Mr. Hunt in early February 1975 in Florida, in which he denies the allegations made by Dick Gregory and others with respect to his involvement in the assassination of President Kennedy and a letter written to Mr. Hunt by the former family maid, Mary Traynor.

Lisa Hunt confirms her father's account that he was at home with the family in the afternoon and evening of November 22, 1963. She recalls that her father assembled the family in front of the television set. He wanted them all to watch the program because it was an important historical matter. They were all shocked about the assassination of the President.

Senior Counsels

The allegations made by Dick Gregory and others connecting me to the murder of President John Kennedy are totally without foundati They constitute a false and vicious libel.

These charges are bizarre . products of sick minds. The Political Left has never been able or willing to accept the fact that Kennedy's assassin was a man of the Left; thus the Leftist preoccupation with finding an alternate assassin.

Dick Gregory's smear represents the ultimate in slander and innuendo customarily characterized as McCarthyism.

The Rockefeller and other investigative committees will probably examine Gregory's charges - as indeed they should. For my part I would welcome a thorough high-level investigation and a full airing of all relevant findings. Only if this takes place will I have any hope of clearing my name and living free from the threats against my life already made by neurotics.

I was not in Dallas, Texas, on November 22, 1963; in fact I never visited Dallas until eight years later. I did not meet Frank Sturgis until 1972, nine years after we were allegedly together in Dallas. I was not in Mexico in 1963, and I did not meet Lee Harvey Oswald there or at any other place or time. Moreover, I shared the nation's grief over the murder of our President. These are the facts.

Until authoritative investigative bodies make known their judgment concerning my alleged involvement in the Kennedy murder I will continue to bring libel actions against any and all parties who repeat the libel. I must take this course because the libels are prejudicial to my position before the Court now considering my Appeal from the Watergate affair. And because the libels threaten my only means of livelihood, as a writer. But of even greater concern to me is that continued publicity given to these reckless charges could stimulate some yet-unpublicized maniac into violent action against me and my family.

Dear Mr Hunt

I am so glad you thought writing to me. I remember the day President ennedy was shot very well, and I certainly emember you were there.

If you recall, Mrs Hunt's Aunt nie, (I am sorry I can't remember her last name)
Chicago was staying with you for a few ays, and on the Friday Mrs Hunt, her Aunt,
d the three children were going down town a movie matinee, when Veronica Moffet lled from the Spanish Embassy to tell Mrs Hunt at the President had been shot. I remember all stood around and stared at each other en you put the television on, and the st thing we heard was the Newsman saying at it was now 45 minutes since the shot d been fired, and that they still did t know how badly he had been injured

I know that Mrs Hunts Aunt is now dead, but it is possible that when she went back to Chicago she may have mentioned that you were there when the news came through, to her daughter (Mrs Hunts cousin Phyllis) Although she might not remember it. She just may be able to corroborate your story too.

I can of course remember lots more details. It was the sort of day that stays in your mind

I hope you a still getting along well. Did you manage to sell the House on River Rd?

Let me know if there is anything I can do for you.

If you should run across Miss Stella remember me to her

Please give my regards to the children,

Sincerely

Mary

BOX 2: MEMORANDA FOR RECORD

File: November 29, 1961 - April 5, 1962

December 5, 1961, Meeting with Attorney General Kennedy - "Lansdale operation" mentioned in paragraph 12.

December 27, 1961, Meeting with Attorney General Kennedy - "Lansdale operation" mentioned in paragraph 5.

January 22, 1962, Meeting with Attorney General Kennedy - Reference to a "Lansdale paper" to be discussed by the 5412 Committee plus Robert Kennedy.

April 5, 1962, Memos on Special Group/Mongoose Project - General discussion of possible military intervention in Cuba.

File: April 7, 1962 - August 21, 1962

(40) - April 10, 1962, phone call to Bundy explaining that Attorney General upset that Perrez was apparently telling people in Miami about his five meetings with the Attorney General. Cardona was to meet JFK that day.

(61) - July 3, 1962, meeting with Attorney General - included a short discussion of "Reuther plan" for labor operations apparently in Italy.

(86) - August 21, 1962, meeting with Rush, McNamara, Alexis Johnson, the Attorney General, Director of Central Intelligence, General Taylor, Lemnitzer, and M. Bundy - a general discussion of Cuban situation and possible courses of action if MRBM's are discovered in Cuba:

> "McNamara expressed strong feelings that we should take every possible aggressive action in the fields of intelligence, sabotage and guerrilla warfare, utilizing Cubans and do such other things as might be indicated to divide the Castro regime."
> (emphasis added)

File: August 24, 1962 - December 31, 1962

(97) - October 5, 1962, Meeting between DCI and Bundy: McCone wanted to be more activist toward Cuba - Bundy was more conservative. (No specifics)

(118) - December 17, 1962, DCI memo re Earman Report on Cuba [MISSING]
[Apparently not a meeting or phone call]
(Comments on Report on Missile Crisis, according to Elder)

(119) - December 18, 1962, DCI memo re Earman Report on Cuba [MISSING]

BOX 8: MEMORANDA OF MEETINGS WITH THE PRESIDENT

File: October 25, 1961 - July 31, 1962

(B) - December 14, 1961, at a meeting with the President and General Taylor, DCI advised Kennedy that there were possible dangers that he might be the subject of an assassination attempt on his planned trip to Colombia and Venezuela, which the CIA could not guarantee the safety of.

(6) - February 11, 1962, at a meeting with the President, Bundy, and Taylor, DCI discussed efforts to convince one Charles Murphy not to write a certain article for Life magazine on some subject related to Cuba. Apparently, the article was revised to DCI's satisfaction and then published.

(12) - May 7, 1962, at a meeting with the President and Taylor, DCI discussed Operation Mongoose in some detail. No mention of assassinations.

File: July 31, 1962 - November 29, 1962 [actually covering through Dec. 18, 1962]

(28) - July 20, 1962: At a meeting with the President, Taylor, and Alexis Johnson, Mongoose was discussed. No mention of assassination.

(52) - October 26, 1962: At a meeting of NSC Executive Committee, DCI discussed Mongoose. No mention of assassination.

(55) - October 30, 1962: "Memo to DDCI outlining Presidential Directive to CIA; no provocative actions by refugee groups; estop Alpha 66; stop Mongoose ops; no contact with Press." [MISSING]

(70) - November 29, 1962: At a meeting of the NSC Executive Committee (President absent), DCI discussed Mongoose. No mention of assassination.

File: January 1, 1963 - March 31, 1963

(7) - January 23, 1963 (4:30 p.m.): Meeting with President, DCI, and Helms." No memo present. Listing does not indicate whether or not memo was prepared, even though it generally indicates when memos were not prepared. Secretary's note of 1/27/72 (MB) notes: "No MR in file"

(8) - January 23, 1963 (4:45 p.m.): Meeting between DCI and President - missing memo; same situation as #(7) above.

(28) - March 25, 1963: In meeting with President, DCI "reviewed the requirements for telephonic and audio surveillance intelligence at selected embassies and foreign residences within the United States..." President suggested that the DCI talk with J. Edgar Hoover on this matter.

File: April 1, 1963 - July 1, 1963

(33) - April 16, 1963: In meeting with the President, DCI discussed two methods of dealing with Castro: (1) "Working on" Castro to turn him from Soviets; (2) Pressuring USSR to remove from Cuba and "then to bring about the downfall of Castro by means which could be developed after the removal of Soviet troops..." No mention of assassination.

(43) - May 27, 1963: In meeting of President, DCI, and others, policy towards covert operations against Haiti were discussed. No mention of assassination.

(50) - June 19, 1963: In meeting with the President and others, DCI discussed plans for covert operations against Cuba, including "external sabotage." Vague memo of record by Desmond FitzGerald, but no mention of assassination.

File: July 1, 1963 - November 12, 1963

(74) - November 12, 1963: At a meeting of the President, DCI, and others, "McCone emphasized that to a very considerable extent these [Cuban exile groups] are uncontrollable and forecast that once Artime was in business, we might expect some events to take place which were not exactly to our liking." (This was in a general discussion of covert actions against Cuba; no mention of assassination.)

File: November 23, 1963 - December 31, 1963

(1) November 23, 1963 (memo of November 25): DCI told Lyndon B. Johnson of information received from Mexico City. DCI later called Rusk to tell him of information from Mexico City: "...the holding of a Mexican employee of the Cuban embassy by Mexican officials for interrogation concerning Lee Oswald."

(4) November 25 and 26, 1963 (memo of November 26): In meetings with the President and the DCI, the President expressed "contempt" at Justice Department suggestion of independent investigation of John F. Kennedy's assassination. He instructed the DCI to insure CIA cooperation with the FBI report.

(4) November 29, 1963: In a meeting with DCI, Lyndon B. Johnson, McNamara, and Bundy, the DCI apparently gave latest developments in Mexico City investigation of Oswald. A list of "late developments" is in file, to be used for this purpose. (Obtain copy.)

File: January 1, 1964 - April 2, 1964

Nothing relevant.

File: April 3, 1964 - May 20, 1964

(19) - April 7, 1964: Meeting of DCI, President, and others re Cuba Covert Action.
Here DCI advocates strong program to obtain overall objective set forth in a paper of June 8, 1963: "The ultimate objective of this policy would be to encourage dissident elements in the military and other power centers of the regime to bring about the eventual liquidation of the Castro/communist entourage and the elimination of the Soviet presence from Cuba." (emphasis added) [OBTAIN COPY]

File: May 21, 1964 - October 5, 1964

September 30, 1964: Meeting of "DCI; President; et al" to discuss "Warren Commission Report - (to set up Presidential Committee)" - No memo indicated to have been prepared.

File: October 6, 1964 - December 28, 1964

Nothing Relevant.

BOX 1: 303 COMMITTEE, COUNTERINSURGENCY, SPECIAL GROUP, CHRONO (1962)

File: 303 - January - December, 1963

Several sets of minutes have the following notations after paragraphs dealing with Cuban operations: "See special minutes for additional items." - No such "special minutes" appear to be contained in this file.* However, this same notation appeared in connection with other subjects.

This file contains several discussions of the Haitian problem. Although it's clear the participants would like to be rid of Duvalier, there is no mention of assassination.

Nothing else relevant.

File: January - December, 1964

Contains discussion of Haitian problem, and CIA agreed to "explore methods of dealing with the Duvalier problem in the immediate future." (May 12, 1964)

---

*Other than certain memoranda prepared by McCone.

The minutes of the June 18, 1964, meeting (dated June 22, 1964) contained the following: [OBTAIN COPY] (signed by Peter Jessup)

"A paper was discussed on alleged plans which involve the underworld to assassinate certain Cuban leaders. Mr. McCone was somewhat skeptical of the reported plots and stated that he would like to go into the matter further. Others, including Mr. Bundy, felt that the United States was being put on notice and should do everything in its power to ascertain promptly the veracity of the reports and then undertake prevention. It was decided that Mr. Bundy would call the matter to the Attorney General's attention as a matter of law enforcement."

Mr. McCone's personal memorandum for the record on this meeting (dated) June 18, 1964, contains substantially the same information. [OBTAIN COPY] It refers to a June 10, 1964, CIA memorandum "reporting plans of Cuban exiles to assassinate leading Cuban government leaders." This memo apparently had been sent to Special Group members and the Attorney General. [OBTAIN COPY] McCone's memo contains the following:

"ACTION: Discuss with General Carter and Mr. Helms steps we should take to establish the credibility of the report; also communicate with the FBI through Mr. Papich. Also I should call the Attorney General personally."

The official minutes of the July 30, 1964, 303 Committee meeting (dated July 31, 1964) (referred to in 1967 IG report) contain no mention of assassination or even of Cuba. Mr. McCone's personal memorandum (dated July 31, 1964) had only the following reference to Cuba:

"Proposed infiltration/exfiltration operations into Cuba for August were approved and the July operations were noted."

Subject: MONGOOSE MATERIALS RETAINED BY THE CIA

Joseph Selzer of the Inspector General staff made available to me all the materials he has been able to assemble from CIA sources concerning Project MONGOOSE. These consist of three file folders and one loose-leaf binder. I have examined them to determine if any reference is made to assassination, liquidation, or elimination of Castro.

The first document in this pile is a copy of the minutes of the August 10, 1962, meeting of the special group augmented, prepared by Tom Parrot. They were forwarded to Dr. Chamberlain, the CIA Inspector General, by Robroy Ratliff, a CIA employee detailed to the National Security Council. A cover memo of April 18, 1975, was attached, may be of some interest, and reads as follows:

> "FYI, We received a request from Belin of the Vice President's Commission to examine our files on MONGOOSE and other Cuban and D.R. files. While this request has not been resolved, the preliminary response is not to allow this access. Signed Robroy Ratliff."

The minutes of the August 10, 1962, meeting contained no mention, implicit or explicit, of assassination.

The first complete file examined was a long green cardboard file without a title on it. Inside, however, it is indicated to be a record of Special Group meetings and Special Group (Augmented) meetings at which General Carter participated and discussions of Cuba and/or Cuban overflights during the period August 15 to November 14, 1962. This file contains a memorandum dated October 16, 1962, from General Carter to the Special Group Augmented, Subject: "Operation MONGOOSE Sabotage Proposals." Paragraph 1c of this memorandum contains a proposal that the CIA undertake 24(grenade) attack on 24(the Chinese Communist Embassy) in Havana, to be carried out by a recruited Cuban agent who has access to a roof overlooking the (embassy) 24 garden and who has volunteered for this mission."

The second file in this collection is entitled simply "MONGOOSE." This contains nothing relevant to the assassination inquiry.

Next in this collection in a large manila envelope on which is written in ink the following notation: "Separate cover attachment to ER75-5938." This envelope contains miscellaneous papers related to MONGOOSE. The documents in this envelope contain, among other things, a long list of potential sabotage targets within Cuba. I found no reference to assassination, either explicit or implicit.

The next file examined is marked "Cuba Special Subject." This file also contains miscellaneous papers relating to Project MONGOOSE, none of which contain any references to assassination.

The last item of this MONGOOSE package consists of a bulky loose-leaf binder of papers assembled for General Carter's reference of significant things that happened during the period of August to October, 1962. In this notebook, the Inspector General has already flagged entries which refer in any way to Operation MONGOOSE. I have examined all such entries.

From: Mason Cargill MC

Subject: PROJECT ZRRIFLE AND QJWIN

On April 25, 1975, I was given three file folders containing material on the above subjects by Mr. Joseph Selzer of the Inspector General's staff. According to Mr. Selzer, his review of these files indicates that the basic purpose of ZRRIFLE and its asset QJWIN was the burglarization of premises outside the United States for the purpose of obtaining cryptologic materials. He assures me that there is nothing in these files which refer explicitly or implicitly to assassination or "executive action" in any form. His opinion is that clandestine operatives of the type who wrote the documents contained in these files would never commit to writing anything having to do with the subject of assassination.

C

The first file reviewed is entitled "ZRRIFLE/QJWIN/RYBAT OPERATIONAL." The following entries in this file seem to have some potential relevance:

12-10 1. Dispatch, dated November 1, 1960, to Chief of Station, Dakar, and Chief of Station, Luxembourg, from Chief, KUTUBE/D at headquarters. This three-page dispatch apparently deals with a mission on which a recruited agent, Jose Marie Andre Mankel, will be sent from Luxembourg, where he was recruited, to Dakar for the purpose of recruiting certain other agents from among criminal elements there, specifically Corsicans. The purpose for which these agents would ultimately be used is not clear from this dispatch. However, paragraph 2a reads as follows: "In view of the extreme sensitivity of the objective for which we want him to perform his task, he was not told precisely what we want him to do. Instead, he was told that we have evidence of Soviet operations among nationality groups in Africa, specifically, Corsicans, and that we would like to have him spot, assess, and recommend some dependable, quick-witted persons for our use. (Comment: It was thought best to withhold our true, specific requirements pending the final decision to use MANKEL.) He agreed to go on the trip for us." It is not clear from this dispatch that Chiefs of Station in Luxembourg and Dakar were completely 12-10 witting of the purpose for which Mankel is being sent to Dakar. Paragraph 3 contains the following sentence: "Rabney gave Jouvenoy [Chief of Station, Luxembourg] the same briefing 12-10 concerning our purposes as he had given to the COS, Dakar." The remainder of the dispatch deals with details of the contacts with Americans which Mankel may make in Dakar if he requires further assistance, including instruction for bringing about a clandestine meeting.

2. Cable dated November 2, 1960, from Frankfurt to th Director with the notation: "Action: C/FI/D-4." This cab contains the following statement in paragraph 1: "Altman m Mankel 2 November. He accepted offer to procede Leopoldvil Precise mission not conveyed to him, he only informed that mission might involve large element of personal risk."

"Leopoldville may be released

3. Cable, dated November 3, 1960, from Director to stations at Luxembourg and Dakar. This cable contains the first identification of Mankel with the code name QJWIN. The cable reads as follows: "AUDW 147 on QJWIN trip Dakar pouched both stations 3 November. 22 Confirm receipt by cable."

20-20 "Luxembourg: will advise when to brief him on Dakar mission after receipt further info from Altman per paragraph to FRAN 6959/(IN36814) on Leopoldville mission." This cable contains the following code word references: RYBAT, LAURICLE, ZRACORN.

4. Cable from Leopoldville to Director, with action to C/FI/D4, dated 5 November 1960. It contains the following paragraph:

61nJ

"Please inform Mankel he should proceed Leopoldville as soon as shots completed. Not necessary have Congo visa. Should go Paris and take Air France flight to Brazzaville and can obtain visa for Brazzaville in Paris."

Air FRANCE can be released

This cable contains a handwritten note in the margin as follows: "One copy given to Mr. Bissell by IS/Duty Off. Saturday. Action to be taken by DDP. - E.B."

5. Cable, dated November 9, 1960, to Luxembourg from Director. It contains the following statement: "Unless yo advised to contrary by Altman, brief QJWIN on Dakar mission, using notes left during Rabney visit...Please insure he thoroughly rehearsed all details since we anticipate he will go from Leopoldville to Dakar with no opportunity reviewing briefing..."

6. Cable, November 11, 1960, to Director, from Luxembourg. Paragraph 2 contains the following statement: "QJWIN recommended two French contacts who agree undertake unspecified job. Arrangement made for direct access without QJWIN if Altman interested..."

7. Cable, dated November 12, 1960, to Director, from Leopoldville. This cable requests the immediate departure of QJWIN for Leopoldville, and contains the following statement: "Local operational circumstances require immediate expediting of QJWIN travel to Leopoldville."

8. The file contains several documents apparently describing various Italians in the area of Trieste who have the capability to break and enter and crack safes. They appeared to be of questionable morality. Reports on the safecrackers were transmitted in a dispatch from the Chief of Station in (Rome) to the Chief, KUDOVE/D. The names of the 06 safecrackers in 15-9 question are (Sabatti) 06, (Cuccagna) 06, and (Bernardini).

9. Cable, dated December 8, 1960, from Leopoldville to the Director. It indicates that one purpose of QJWIN's presence in Leopoldville is to recruit a major in the "[Yugoslavian] air force, through framing him up in an illegal smuggling transaction.] This recruitment is apparently for the purpose of collecting information from within the (Yugoslavian) government."

6/PV

10. Cable, dated December 14, 1960, from headquarters to Leopoldville. The cable criticizes Leopoldville for using QJWIN for the purpose of recruiting the "(Yugoslav) major, since this was not his primary purpose in Leopoldville." Cable contains the following statement: "Would like restrict QJWIN to activity directly pertinent his mission Leopoldville or forthcoming mission Dakar and possibly elsewhere (e.g., Milan) for KUTUBE/D purposes. He our only asset of this type and we wish keep him clean of any operational involvement other than that originally planned for him." This is the first cable from headquarters on which the name of William K. Harvey appears.

11. Cable, dated December 17, 1960, from Leopoldville to Director. This cable concerned a new asset entering the picture for the first time, who arrived in Leopoldville on December 2. The cable states that WIROGUE was the asset with whom initial contact has been made in Leopoldville. WIROGUE is living in the same hotel as QJWIN with whom he conversed. QJWIN has reported: "WIROGUE had offered him $300 per month to participate in intel net and be member execution squad. When QJWIN said he not interested, WIROGUE added there would be bonuses for special jobs. Under QJWIN questioning, WIROGUE later said he working for PBPRIME service."

12. Cable, dated January 19, 1961, from Director to Luxembourg. This cable apparently indicates that the Agency plans to use QJWIN in Leopoldville for more than one particular mission. It contained the following statement: "Inform QJWIN we planning use him Leopoldville indefinitely as discussed with him there."

13. There follows a series of cables reflecting the fact that QJWIN proceeds to Italy to recruit other assets. One cable admonishes field agents to tell QJWIN not to give reason to any of the candidates to be recruited in Italy to believe that ODYOKE or PBPRIME is involved. I get the impression that ODYOKE refers to the U.S. CIA, and PBPRIME refers to the intelligence service of some other nation. However, no document uncovered so far confirms this. Cables which follow seem to indicate that the people QJWIN was to recruit were intended to be professional burglars. There is no indication that they are intended to be assassins. There are many other indications that these recruits were intended for safecracking and breaking and entering. QJWIN told them he could offer a job for a large firm which wanted certain commercial documents stolen.

VpV

14. Subsequent cables and dispatches indicate other efforts on the part of QJWIN to recruit safecrackers in France and Italy.

15. Dispatch dated June 7, 1961, from headquarters, Chief, KUTUBE/D to the Chief of Station in Luxembourg. It contains a long discussion of the Agency's relationship with QJWIN and his main purpose as an agent. This dispatch makes it clear that the primary purpose of QJWIN's employment by the Agency is to recruit burglars and safecrackers for use by the CIA. This dispatch contains the first reference I have found to the code word ZRRIFLE. The one thing that seems rather unclear is why QJWIN was initially sent to Leopoldville, and apparently was contemplated to return to Leopoldville, when all of his recruiting of safecrackers and burglars takes place in Europe. The fact that his return to Leopoldville was contemplated may be easily seen from paragraph one of this cable. The releasing officer on this cable was Mr. William K. Harvey.

16. Correspondence and cables indicate that one James Rabney from CIA headquarters visited Europe in April and March of 1961 for the purpose of meeting with Mankel to discuss possible recruits for safecracking operations.

17. Dispatch dated December 15, 1961, from Chief of Station in Luxembourg to Headquarters, Chief, KUTUBE/D. It discusses the efforts of QJWIN to recruit two safecrackers in Switzerland. oC It indicates that two French citizens, named 06 Santelli and Garioni were asked to come to Switzerland under false pretenses by QJWIN for the purpose of being interviewed, The following passage in the dispatch indicates clearly these men were to be recruited for the purpose of the safecracking and surreptitious entry. "During the interview with Santelli, oC 06 Garioni observed that for a night job he would need an assistant to help him with carrying the equipment and to act as lookout. He said he would prefer to do the job during working hours; for this he would get three or four others to help him and force someone in the office to open the safe."

18. Dispatch dated February 2, 1962, from Chief of Station Luxembourg to Headquarters, Chief, KUTUBE/D. It discusses the efforts of the Luxembourg station to provide acceptable cover for Mankel in Germany, where the Agency has decided to locate him. The plan seems to be for Mankel to develop a business as an art dealer in some German town selling French paintings. It is contemplated that the Agency will supply the initial capital for the formation of his business. The final sentence in this dispatch asked headquarters for projected operational plans for QJWIN.

19. Cable, dated March 17, 1962, from Director to Luxembourg indicates that the Agency still contemplates some activity for Mankel in Leopoldville. Paragraph 2 of this cable reads as follows: "Tell him will at same time discuss Leopoldville assignment and have him sign contract." The cable directs Luxembourg to tell Mankel to meet James Rabney at certain locations in Germany on the 28th and 29th of March, 1961, telling him to be prepared to travel in Europe for about two weeks.

20. Cable dated April 18, 1962, from ol Headquarters to Luxembourg states that another agent QJBANNER-5 had informed the Agency that QJWIN is going on trial after Easter on charges of cobalt smuggling from 1957 or 1958 and could receive up to a six-year sentence. Paragraph 2 of the cable states, "Please contact QJWIN for all details including specific charges and name prosecutor. If 01 QJBANNER-5 info true we may wish attempt quash charges or arrange somehow salvage QJWIN for our purposes." Paragraph 3 states, "Still do not have basic decisions but fully anticipate we will need QJWIN."

21. Cable, dated April 26, 1962, from Luxembourg to Headquarters indicates that QJWIN's trial will be completed on April 29. He expects to be fined but not subject to a jail sentence. Some indication of the Agency's intents with respect to QJWIN may be discerned from paragraph 4 which reads as follows: "While we do not know present long-term plans for QJWIN, he has no lead to other candidates. His potential appears restricted activation to candidates OLLA 1426 or personal spot action. Suggest either could be done from Leopold base and question if not preferable move him to Leopold assignment now." There is a handwritten notation beside the first sentence of paragraph 4 which states, "Not the point." Beside the last sentence of this paragraph is the handwritten notation, "How?"

22. Cable dated May 24, 1962, to Luxembourg from Headquarters indicates that the Agency has changed its plans about assigning QJWIN any duties in Leopoldville. Paragraph 2 reads, "Decision made keep QJWIN Europe. Leopoldville assignment canceled." Cable also indicates that headquarters approves of Mankel's proposed move to Germany, probably Baden-Baden.

23. Memorandum dated July 3, 1962, WKH [presumably William K. Harvey] from AMS, re ZRRIFLE. This memo discusses possible future uses for QJWIN. It seems perfectly consistent with the use of QJWIN merely for the purpose of recruiting safecrackers and burglars. Paragraph 4 of this memo refers to some ZRRIFLE authorization paper: "I have already given you the ZRRIFLE authorization paper signed by Helms and Skip has been given QJWIN contract, including the extension to 1 March 1963." An attachment to this memorandum gives details on two possible candidates for burglary and safecracking. In this attachment there are two references, however, which may be somewhat disturbing: One candidate is stated to be "willing to use gun"; the second "wanted to know if he should be armed for job--ready to go to the end."

24. Immediately following a dispatch dated December 7, 1962, from Luxembourg to headquarters, there appears in the files two pages of penciled notes on yellow "buck-slip" type paper which are difficult to read but may be relevant. At the top of the first page appears the word QJWIN. On this page appears the following words, which are barely legible: "In 1961 by Bill H or Bissell used (Arnold C/ Estale) [or (Estate)] 03 direct action capability established in 03 B [illegible] QJWIN Luxembourg principal prelim capability for fourth country. QJWIN spotted three or four--moved to Italy..."

25. Dispatch from Luxembourg to Headquarters Chief, KUTUBE, dated February 14, 1964, indicates that QJWIN has been terminated. Paragraph 1 reads in part, "QJWIN has been terminated. "Rozeney told him on 21 April that the operation in which he was to play a role had been shelved and therefore his contract, which ran out on 29 February, was not renewed. He was reassured that this action did not result from anything he had done and his past cooperation was appreciated. It was mentioned as conceivable that the operation might have been off and running if he had been able to establish his cover last year."

Another file examined was entitled "ZRRIFLE Administrative/Financial"; it is a long manila-type file. The following items of possible interest were noted in this file:

1. Memorandum dated January 11, 1961, to the Finance Division from William K. Harvey, Chief FI/D deals with the payments for Mankel's trip to Leopoldville. Paragraph 2 of this memo states, "In order to avoid any misunderstanding, it should be noted that QJWIN was sent on this trip for a specific, highly sensitive operational purpose which has been completed. Although future use of QJWIN is not precluded, it was not deemed fitting during this one use of him to enter into a continuing contractual relationship or to have him sign any memorandum of understanding."

2. Memorandum, dated January 31, 1961, for Chief, Accounts Branch, Finance Division, from Justin E. O'Donnell, Subject: Payments to QJWIN. Paragraph 1 of this memorandum reads as follows: "QJWIN was recruited in Frankfurt 1 November 1960 to undertake a one-shot mission to the Belgian Congo. Because the mission potentially involved great personal risk to him and he was obliged to separate himself from his business affairs, it was agreed orally by this writer with QJWIN that his compensation would be at the rate of $1,000 per month, plus his expenses, for a period of not less than one month and not more than two months." These two financial memoranda, numbers 1 and 2 here, seem to indicate a one-shot purpose for QJWIN in connection with a Congo operation, which seems inconsistent with many of the papers in the operational file reviewed above, which indicated an ongoing relationship with QJWIN for the purposes of recruiting safecrackers and burglars. These financial memoranda are certainly quite consistent with a plan to use QJWIN for a one-shot assassination attempt in the Belgian Congo. It is unclear that merely recruiting safecrackers and burglars or even performing safecracking and burglary missions, would have involved "potential great personal risk" to QJWIN.

3. Memorandum, dated March 24, 1961, for Cable Secretariat from William K. Harvey, Chief, FI/Division D, Subject: "Distribution of ZRRIFLE Traffic." Paragraph 1 of this memorandum reads, "Two copies of all cables bearing the ZRRIFLE indicator are to be delivered in a sealed envelope directly to Chief, FI/Division D, 1502 L Building. No other distribution is to be made without the specific approval in each instance of the Chief, FI/D." Paragraph 2 reads, "The above has been personally approved by the Deputy Director (Plans)." I question whether such close handling of cable traffic is not unusual even in a case involving safecracking and burglary. Perhaps Harvey intended traffic of more sensitive issues to be passed through the ZRRIFLE channel.

4. In a large manila envelope filed immediately after a dispatch to Luxembourg from the Chief, KUTUBE, dated September 30, 1963, is a large manila envelope marked "Documents in Receipt Supporting ZRRIFLE Activities." Within this envelope are several smaller manila envelopes, one of which is entitled "ZRRIFLE, Receipts for Accounting Submitted by WK Harvey, Receipt for Operational Phone Calls May 15, 1963." Within this envelope are two sheets of yellow legal size paper which contain lists of operational expenses submitted by W.K. Harvey covering the period April 13-21, 1963, all of which are to be charged as operational expenses to QJWIN/ZRRIFLE. These expenses cover hotel expenses in Miami and Perine, Florida, long distance hotel calls for these locations, plus $75 for a boat chartered for operational purposes at Islamorada, Florida. A hotel receipt indicates Harvey paid the bill of a Mr. John A. Wallston of 56510 Wilshire Boulevard, Los Angeles, California, for the nights of April 17, 18, and 19, and a Miami hotel, probably the Eden Roc. These documents are the first indication of any activities within the U.S. with respect to ZRRIFLE. Apparently they did not involve QJWIN but rather other activity, perhaps directed at Cuba because of his location in Miami. Perhaps Harvey should be confronted with this listing and asked to explain it.

A third file was examined, which was marked "ZRRIFLE-QJWIN Project/Contract. The following items of interest were found:

1. A long memorandum written in ink in longhand on sheets of yellow, legal size paper at the very back of this file entitled "Project ZRRIFLE." This is apparently justification material submitted for the project. The first portion of this memorandum seems to end abruptly at the end of the second page;

perhaps the subsequent pages are missing. These first two pages portray the objective of ZRRIFLE to be that of procurement of code and cipher materials by burglary and safecracking. However, subsequent pages, particularly the last four legal size pages in this file, contain what appears to be the outline of something which could be the establishment of an "executive action capability," although these words are not mentioned nor is the word "assassination." A copy of these pages should definitely be obtained. Paragraph 1 of these pages reads as follows, "Legal, ethical, moral, operational problems; political nonattributability." Paragraph 2 reads in part: "Our own experience (Bangkok) (and affect on DDP) and experiences with KGB...require most professional, proven operationally competent ruthless stable CE experience ops officers..."

Paragraph 3 of this memo is entitled "Maximum Security"; subparagraph 3b reads: "Within KUBARK one focal point for control, search, tracing, case officering, etc. DDP authority in this focal point mandatory. DCI officially advised?" Paragraph 3c reads as follows: "Max. security cable COMMO for innocuous cables only; no restrictions on travel; possibility of one man overseas (Europe) control base with own (nonstation) COMMO. Word of mouth and no bashfulness re trips." Paragraph 3f reads as follows, "No use of any agent who ever worked for a U.S. government agency. Tracing by opposition would reveal." Paragraph 3i reads, "Pretext: KUTUBE/D search; this established (e.g., Rome)." Paragraph 3j reads, "No discussion in stations." Paragraph 3k reads, "No 'team' until ready to go, if at all." Paragraph 4 reads: "Blackmail: A. No American citizens or residents or people whoever obtained U.S. visas. B. No chain of connections: Strictly person to person; singleton ops. C. No meeting any candidate in home territory. D. Exclude organizations; e.g., Sicilians, criminals, those with record of arrest, those with instability of purpose as criminals. E. Staffers involved--selection." Paragraph 5 reads, "Cover: Planning should include provision for blaming Soviets or Czechs in case of blow." [This seems to indicate ZRRIFLE is not limited to burglary of embassies; how could you blame the Soviets or the Czechs for burglarizing their own embassies?] Paragraph 9 reads, "Should have phoney 201 in records to backstop this [referring to blaming the Soviets or the Czechs], all documents therein forged and backdated. Should look like a CE file." Paragraph 11 reads, "Silverthorne."

On the following page of these papers, the paragraphs are numbered again from one. On this page a large ink X has been placed over the page; however, it is still legible. Paragraph 1 of this page reads, "Maximum security plus within KUBARK only (e.g., How much does Sivagusa[?] now know?). Limitation on number code clerks for enciphering and deciphering. Guise of LAURICLE objective." Paragraph 5 reads, "No chain of connections permitting blackmail."

2. Memorandum, dated February 19, 1962, from Richard Helms, Deputy Director (Plans), to William K. Harvey, Subject: "Authorization of ZRRIFLE Agent Activities." This memorandum authorizes Harvey to retain the services of agent QJWIN "and such other principal agents and subagents as may be required." Memorandum does not state the purpose of the ZRRIFLE project.

3. Filed immediately after a memorandum dated March 6, 1969, from Richard Helms to William K. Harvey, is a normal business size white envelope containing the following notation on the front in penciled handwriting, "Lloyd very personal from Bill H." Within this envelope is a small yellow piece of paper containing the following notation in penciled handwriting, "John Rosselli, alias John Ralston--Wm. Walker."

4. A memorandum dated June 27, 1963, for Chief, Foreign Intelligence, from William K. Harvey, Subject: QJWIN. This memo states that QJWIN is currently not being used for any operational purposes. It discusses whether or not he should be retained as an agent. Paragraph 2 seems to indicate that the executive action portion of QJWIN's project, if any, has been terminated. This paragraph reads: "As far as the ZRRIFLE aspects of this operation which has been covered under the QJWIN authorization for security reasons and with which Fletcher M. Knight is fully familiar as I orally advised you on June 26, 1963, except for one precautionary 'lifeline,' aspects of this case have been terminated and need no longer, except perhaps for minor accountings, be considered as a part of this project."

A last file of the ZRRIFLE series examined is entitled "ZRRIFLE Name Traces/Personality Sketches." Items of interest in this file are as follows:

1. Piece of thin white paper under tab C, the heading of which is "Secret-RYBAT." This document is a list of traits which desired recruits would have. This is similar to the list of traits deemed desirable in the handwritten memorandum contained in the far rear of the previous file reviewed. This set of characteristics, however, could refer to burglars and safecrackers as well as assassins. This is indicated by paragraph 8 which reads, "Commercial firms (unspecified)--industrial documents cover."

06

2. Included under tab M is a dossier of one Harold Meltzer, a resident of Los Angeles, with a long criminal record. This is the first instance in which I have noted a U.S. citizen under consideration for any recruitment with respect to the ZRRIFLE project.

06

3. Under tab T, information on Orlando Portale, an Italian citizen residing in Detroit, is included.

06

4. At tab Y is a page of information on one Hanna Yazbeck. The report states, "He often heads up a hatchet squad when disputes arise between the Moslem and Christian underworld factions in Beirut." The second paragraph of this page reads as follows: "During the period I was in Europe (1950-1958), his chief bodyguard was 06 a convicted murderer who owed his release from prison to Yazbeck's power. This bodyguard has since been murdered, but Yazbeck has an available pool of assassins."

the attempted assassination on two occasions of Fidel Castro and all the top military commanders that used to come to the Air Force Base. And remember that I had another job at the Air Force Base training the military police. And I also was still Chief of Security.

MR. OLSEN: Let me ask you, are you telling us that you participated as a Cuban Air Force officer, and Chief of Training military police and security and intelligence operations in the Cuban Air Force, that participated in an attempt to assassinate Castro?

MR. STURGIS: Yes, on two occasions, plus other military officials.

MR. OLSEN: When did those attempts take place, during the early part of 1959?

MR. STURGIS: Yes sir. I would say the first attempt -- and I set it up as an exercise, that if I was to get the green light -- which I did not anticipate that I would, because there is such a thing as getting a green light -- and there is another thing of doing something without the green light, in other words, they do it but don't get caught -- but I did set it up as an exercise, and I did have men on several occasions, like I said, as a training exercise, stationed at the gate with me there, with men stationed on the rooftops of the homes, -- my excuse was for the protection of the entourage, Fidel and the military commanders that he had with him, he had a hometown bunch with him when they came to the Air Force, even with General Bayo. And I felt that if I would get the nod to assassinate them, I could do it within 30 seconds, high tail it and everything.

MR. OLSEN: Was there something that you had drawn up in the way of exercise as the result of the discussions with the other Air Force officials?

MR. STURGIS: The Air Force and Army officials. This information was given to the American Embassy. I again did these exercises to try to get a diversion that if I would get the nod to do the execution, that I would have some means of diversionary tactics to draw attention away from the people who did the execution, and that I was there with my people to prevent it because of the security.

MR. OLSEN: Did you discuss these plans in advance with Colonel Nichols?

MR. STURGIS: No sir. At the very -- I would say about six weeks of the revolution was over with there was a great deal of discontent among many of the top ranking military officers. I knew these people personally, I was in with them at those meetings and various places, and that they discussed, we all discussed the assassination then. And some said, well, there are some officers that will be with the group, Fidel and Raoul and Che, that were not really with them. So they were split on the idea of assassinating them. So they asked my opinion.

And I told them, well, in war innocent people do get killed. If you are going to assassinate the man, the best place to do it is at the front gate when he approaches, and to just, if there is seven or eight jeeps, just to give everyone in all of the seven or eight jeeps, whether they are pro or anti -- if you are going to go ahead and kill him, people are going to get hurt.

MR. OLSEN: I didn't understand whehter you answered my question as to whether or not you had discussed in advance with Colonel Nichols.

MR. STURGIS: No sir, after the meeting with the different military commanders, I reported to Nichols the type of discussions that were made at those meetings.

MR. OLSEN: And what was Colonel Nichol's response?

MR. STURGIS: Can we go off the record?

MR. OLSEN: If you want.

MR. STURGIS: Let's go off the record.

He told me to stand by, don't do anything, stand by, stall.

MR. OLSEN: And did you then stand by and stall?

MR. STURGIS: Yes sir, I not only stood by, but then I proceeded to do these exercises without asking Colonel Nichols, I did those on my own, to prepare a special group of men to set this up.

MR. OLSEN: You prepared the exercise. Did you ever get the green light from the people in Castro's Air Force and Army to go ahead with an attempt?

MR. STURGIS: Oh, they wanted to do it, sir. The only thing that held them back was me, I am the only one that held them back, because they wanted to kill him in a minute.

MR. OLSEN: And so they ere urging that this be done, but you were holding back on it?

MR. STURGIS: Right.

MR. OLSEN: And were you holding back on it at least in part because of the request made by Colonel Nichols that you would hold up on it, and not do anything?

MR. STURGIS: Right.

MR. OLSEN: Was any actual attempt made now to carry out an assassination on Premier Castro?

MR. STURGIS: The only attempt was what I was doing in these exercises.

MR. OLSEN: So that there was some planning, but no attempt?

MR. STURGIS: Well, let me say this. We are on a very thin piece of string there, because I was several times making those exercises, and I was really, because of my high position in the military. and because of the things that I knew -- and you must understand that I did break into the headquarters of the Cuban Army at Columbia Barracks, and did steal documents out of there. And I also at my own headquarters, in my files, I did photograph some things that were in my files from the past regime that was there, but also of other officers that were there that I could not trust, I wanted to see what kind of reports and things that were made. So I did photograph those. So I did make a breakin.

MR. OLSEN: What I am trying to do, Frank, is to draw a distinction, if I can, between some plans for, some setting up of exercises that would be preparatory to an attempt to assassinate Premier Castro, Che Guevara and Raoul Castro and others that might be with them. I am trying to distinguish that kind of planning and preparation for an actual attempt to carry it out.

MR. ROETHE: Were there any shots ever fired?

MR. STURGIS: No sir. As a matter of fact, in order to avoid that, because my people wanted to do it so badly, I had to take the ammunition away from them just to contain them.

MR..ROETHE: Was this an exercise that was going to be -- was this going to be a shooting?

MR. STURGIS: Oh, yes.

MR. ROETHE: So it was not a bombing or anything of this sort, strictly a shooting?

MR. STURGIS: A shooting.

MR. OLSEN: How soon before you left Cuba did this setting up of the exercises take place?

MR. STURGIS: It was within, I would say, four to six weeks.

MR. OLSEN: Before you left?

MR. STURGIS: No, four to six weeks after we took over the country, July 1, four to six weeks was the first attempt. That was in the last of January or the first week in February 1959, four or five weeks.

MR. OLSEN: Did this fever about assassinating Castro, Raoul Castro and Guevara, subside after a little while?

MR. STURGIS: Oh,no.

MR. OLSEN: Did it keep on going all the time while you were in Cuba?

MR. STURGIS: Yes sir. I did arrange to train the same men for another attempt at assassination of him in the headquarters of the Air Force on the second floor.

MR. ROETHE: Before you go on to that, why did you never make an attempt the first time, why did you hold back?

MR. STURGIS: I was waiting for a nod from Nichols.

MR. ROETHE: And you never received that nod?

MR. STURGIS: I never received that.

MR. ROETHE: What got you started into a second attempt to try a different type of assassination?

MR. STURGIS: Yes, it would be a different plan to assassinate him. This came, I would say the last part of February, if I am not mistaken. Things came to a fever pitch. Even the American Government, through other agents inside of Cuba, in the military and so forth, were getting a lot of information about the Communist activity. And Fidel was coming on his big thing, you know, about talking against the Americans. And this was creating a lot of dissension with some of the top military brass.

MR. OLSEN: That is, the military brass of the Cuban Government?

MR. STURGIS: Of the Cuban military, yes. And at the same time I am trying to recruit Commander Camelo Cienfugo.

MR. OLSEN: You had attempted to recruit him?

MR. STURGIS: I attempted to recruit Commander Camelo Cienfugo, and also Commander Almejera. He was the National Chief of Police.

MR. OLSEN: And who was the first one, Cienfugo?

MR. STURGIS: Commander Camelo Cienfugo was the Chief of the Army -- I think Raoul was the Chief of the Armed Forces.

MR. OLSEN: Did you succeed in recruiting them?

MR. STURGIS: I met them at the Capri Hotel, where the show as at. And I got them stoned out of their minds. And we discussed money, how they would be willing to do, and so forth. I didn't want to get into it too much, because I had Camelo Cienfugo lined up more, he was thinking more in line with what I was talking about. Commander Almejeira got stoned out of his mind. And he just put his head on the table and went to sleep. That was it. And so I had a hard time keeping Camelo Cienfugo awake.

MR. ROETHE: At hose request were you trying to recruit these gentlemen?

MR. STURGIS: Remember Embassy told me, please try to recruit agents for them.

MR. OLSEN: You were attempting to recruit people who would provide the information for the Embassy?

MR. STURGIS: To provide agents for the American Embassy.

MR. ROETHE: You were not recruiting them especially for assassination attempt?

MR. STURGIS: No. Now, Camelo gave me enough information that night where I brok into the Chief of the Army headquarters -- he was Chief of the Army. I broke into their files, and I did photograph and steal documents.

MR. OLSEN: What did you do with those documents?

MR. STURGIS: I turned them over to the others.

MR. OLSEN: To Colonel Nichols?

MR. STURGIS: Yes.

MR. ROETHE: Were you operating here now for Colonel Nichols, or do you know if you were operating for CIA? Who was the creator of this policy, if you know, Colonel Nichols as a diplomat? Was he a diplomat at that time?

MR. STURGIS: Colonel Nichols was the American Military Air Attache, which could be a cover for the CIA.

MR. OLSEN: You don't know if he was CIA or not?

MR. STURGIS: No. Again I say, nobody shows if they are CIA, unless you are working yourself as an employee.

MR. OLSEN: Let me turn here, Frank, to this area. Were you ever by Colonel Nichols requested to organize any activity other than recuriting people to act as agent for the American Embassy, were you ever asked to carry out any kind of activity in Cuba?

MR. STURGIS: No sir.

MR. OLSEN: You were never asked to carry out any assassination?

MR. STURGIS: No sir.

MR. OLSEN: Were you ever asked to carry out any attempt to overthrow the Castro Government?

MR. STURGIS: Well, let's not say overthrow the Castro Government. Colonel Nichols was very much, in his thinking, in the discussions with him, against the Castro Government. But then here you have a man that goes by the book.

MR. OLSEN: Let me ask you this. Were you ever asked to carry out any, action in Cuba on behalf of the American Embassy?

MR. STURGIS: No sir.

MR. OLSEN: Or Colonel Nichols?

MR. STURGIS: No sir.

MR. ROETHE: So your breaking in and obtaining those documents was something that you did on your own for information

MR. OLSEN: After you came back from Cuba at the end of June 1959 did you then settle in the Miami area?

MR. STURGIS: Yes sir.

MR. OLSEN: Did you take up employment in some normal job in Miami, or did you become involved right away?

MR. STURGIS: I was not employed, sir.

MR. OLSEN: Did you engage in any business for yourself at that point?

MR. STURGIS: Yes sir.

MR. OLSEN: Before we get to that, when you left Cuba, did you manage to take with you any substantial amount of money or wealth?

MR. STURGIS: No sir. I took some documents here that beloned to Commander Ricardo Lorie in his preparation to leave Cuba and come to exile. I helped to arrange for the escape of the Chief of the Air Force and his wife. As a matter of fact, I made contact with the American Embassy to see if they would accept him in the Embassy. And I was told by the Embassy people no. So I had to come here to make the arrangements for his escape with his brother Sergio Diaz Bruil, who in fact himself personnaly went to a yacht basin, Bertrand's Basin and rented a boat, I believe it was a sailboat. With the plans that both he and myself made, I proceeded to Cuba to pick up his brother, the Chief of the Air Force.

MR. ROETHE: Before we get back here in ths US, the of the mountains and in and out of the US.

MR. OLSEN: Frequently as a part of your revoluntionary activities?

MR. STURGIS: In order for me to get very close with Fidel personally, I went through a great risk in buying guns and equipment and smuggling guns and equipment to Cuba, both by air, by automobiles, and in Key West by the ferry. And I had an elaborate system made up.

MR. OLSEN: Let's go into that just a little bit. We are going back into the revoluntionary period, before the revolution succeeded, while you were working for Castro, while he was up in the hills. Who did you buy guns from in the US?

MR. STURGIS: I bought guns in Alexandria, Virginia.

MR. OLSEN: From whom?

MR. STURGIS: I believe the name of the company was ARMCO. And the owner was an ex-CIA agent.

MR. OLSEN: Named what?

MR. STURGIS: I forget.

MR. ROETHE: Was this ostensiby a private enterprise?

MR. STURGIS: At least I thought it was a private enterprise.

MR. OLSEN: He asked, was it ostnsibly a private enterprise. Was it actually a private enterprise?

MR. STURGIS: Let me say this here. Can I go back a little bit, Mr. Olsen?

And he did get the money.

MR. OLSEN: That is the kind of information that I have been seeking. I am trying to pin down what the money was for, who told it was CIA money, and what steps were taken that led to your getting the money.

Were there any other operations or expenditures that you had which you feel you are on strong, sound ground in saying were financed by the CIA?

MR. STURGIS: I was asked to do an assassination.

MR. OLSEN: By whom?

MR. STURGIS: Can I hold back on that?

MR. OLSEN: No, I would prefer that you tell us,if you will.

MR. STURGIS: It never was carried out.

MR. OLSEN: That is all right.

MR. STURGIS: I was contacted by this agent -- I am trying to go ahead and think of the date again, because again I will say, I had notes, and I keep them so far, and then I destroy them. And I did tell the Senate Watergate Committee that a friend of mine who was a CIA agent contacted me and asked me if I would do an assassination. And I told him, yes, I would. He said, good. Then, I will pass it on to my superior. And he made contact with me later, at a later date. I believe we had -- I am not sure -- I think we had either lunch or dinner at some ranch house.

MR. ROETHE: Is this in Miami?

MR. STURGIS: Yes.

MR. OLSEN: First of all, can you go back and tell me when you were approached by this friend of yours.

MR. STURGIS: This is why I say, I can't remember by the exact date, and maybe by talking --

MR. OLSEN: How about, if you give us the season of what year?

MR. STURGIS: The seasons in Miami are all along all the year around.

MR. ROETHE: How about just the year?

MR. STURGIS: I can't remember the year.

MR. ROETHE: Are we talking about after you -- this is after you got back from Cuba, obviously.

MR. STURGIS: Yes, it had to be -- let me see if I can narrow it down just about what year. Let's see. It had to be either before the Bay of Pigs, which is 1961, or after the Bay of Pigs, which again could be 1961. So I would say approximately it would be 1961.

MR.OLSEN: Then, where were you approached?

MR. STURGIS: In Miami.

MR. OLSEN: And is this somebody, Frank, for the moment, let's defer to your wishes, or your reservations, at least, by naming them. But is this somebody whom you knew to be employed by the CIA?

MR. STURGIS: No, sir.

MR. OLSEN: Is it somebody who you knew to be a contract agent of the CIA?

MR. STURGIS: No, sir. All I knew is that he was an agent, and at a later date, it was proven that he was an agent. So my contacts with this man throughout the years, how he worked, my close contact with him, in Miami, the way of operation, the way he handles himself, the people that he was in close contact with,that the top political and military people who were in exile that he was in touch with, the formation of the Bay of Pigs itself before the invasion,came through this particular man. He was part of the forming of this -- at least of the Revolutionary Council. And I was approached by him and I told Sam about it. I said, Sam, what do you think? The idiot -- I hope this never gets publicized.

MR. OLSEN: Trust us.

MR. STURGIS: I said, this idiot took me out, and we had some lunch, and he asked me if I wanted to do an assassination, or if I would do an assassination attempt for the outfit.

And I looked him square in the face and I told him, why did you come to me? And he says, well, Frank, like, who else? You are a man that the Chief knows your background, and I know your background, and I know you are capable. And you a capable man. And if anybody can do it, you can do it.

But the thing is, would you be interested?

And I said, yes, I would be.

MR.OLSEN: Did he talk to you about a sum of money?

MR. STURGIS: No, no money was -- the discussion of money was not involved in it, because I would not do anything for money. And he knows better than to ask me, unless it would be, Frank, what do you need for your expenses?

MR.OLSEN: Who was the target of this assassination? Was it Fidel Castro?

MR. STURGIS: No. I don't know. What happened was that I had another meeting with him, and he said he would contact his Chief, and he would -- and he told me to contact him later on, and I think he gave me a certain day to contact him, and I said OK. You must remember that,how I know this man as an agent, because he does the same things as I do, in his wife, he types away, or at least, he has a wife who types away, he makes all the reports, and stacks them in a file cabinet. Ihave heard him talk to his case officer on the telephone. And to me that was very stupid of him in doing that even to me who was his friend. That is a stupid way of doing things. Because he did not suspect that I was in touch with Sam, he cannot know. And the only time that he suspected that I had anything to do with CIA is when we were in prison, and the man on the television said, yes, he used to work for the the CIA.

MR. OLSEN: When you say CIA, you were talking about the Watergate, not the other agent and me?

MR. STURGIS: I am talking about the agent and me, who was part of the Watergate group. And he was dumfounded and said, what, you work for CIA? And I said, yes, sir, you dumb bastard you, I was turning you in to my case officer.

MR. OLSEN: So neither one of you suspected --

MR. STURGIS: I knew he was an agent, but I didn't know that I was in contact -- I never used the word -- or at least I don't think I did, and I hope I haven't used it today -- thatI said I was an employee of CIA.

MR. OLSEN: No, I haven't even said that you were an agent of the CIA.

MR. STURGIS: Or that I was connected with the CIA.

MR. OLSEN: Now, who was the target of this conversation about assassination?

MR.STURGIS: I had a second meeting with him at the Ranchhouse, and he told me, he says, well, there is interest, Frank. He said, about this assassination, and I said, fine. I said.

And then he started to questioning, how would you do it? And I said, how do you mean how I would do it? There are several ways of trying to do assassination. The things have to know is who the person is, that is number 1, it is important, and where the person is at, which is important. And then, I will have to go ahead and go to the place where this man lives or what have you, after I know this information. And I said then, I can go ahead and tell you how I can do it. And he said, with a body, this and that, he will be discovered, you know we can't be connected with it. And I said, well, if you are worried about that, you do it. And he said, well, I can't do it. And I said, OK, beautiful. And I want --

I wanted to tell you something, I will do this, because you are a friend of mine, and because you asked me. But I will want more than that. And he said what is that? I said I want it from somebody higher than you, from somebody with authority. If you tell me -- and you are my friend, and I believe you -- but I want it more from somebody else that has some authority. You have a case officer.

I want your case officer to tell me to do an assassination plot, and I will do it. But coming from you, you are my friend, my buddy, but I have got to have more than that for my protection.

MR. OLSEN: Did he ever put you in contact with his case officer?

MR. STURGIS: I knew who his boss was.

MR. OLSEN: Who was his boss?

MR. STURGIS: Edwardo.

Wait just a minute. I am sorry. I could be wrong there. I said the wrong thing.

If I am going after the Bay of Pigs invasion, if this did happen, as far as the date is concerned, after the Bay of Pigs invasion, Edwardo did quit the operation and go on some other assignment or what have you. So that means he was no longer in the Miami area. So this part I had to get a new case officer.

MR. OLSEN: Edwardo left Miami before the Bay of Pigs, didn't he?

MR. STURGIS: He left after -- well, I don't know I am sorry. Because there is a possibility that he may have been either in Miami or he may have been in the Headquarters in Washington. But I can't pin it down because I don't know exactly where he was at.

MR. OLSEN: Did he ever make contacts with this man's case officer?

MR. STURGIS: No, sir, because it had to be one of two people, it either had to be Edwardo, whom I had never met, or it had to be possibly Jim Knowles 03 after Edwardo left.

MR. OLSEN: Did Jim Knowles 03 take his place, then?

MR. STURGIS: I believe so, I believe Jim Knowles 03 did take his place as this party's case officer.

MR. OLSEN: And then, you did not actually have any contact with his case officer?

3/18V

MR. STURGIS: When I told him that, I think I kind of stung him a little bit. And he said, well, OK, all right. Then, you will go through with it? And I said certainly, I will go through with it, I don't care who the hell it is. I said, you let me know. And hopefully, I was thinking of Fidel Castro, because I could have snuck into Cuba, I have done it so many times, and I would have taken a crack at killing Fidel.

MR. ROETHE: I missed something when I was out of the room. I take it you did not know the identity of the person whom you were being asked to assassinate?

MR. STURGIS: No, sir, I did not. I asked him -- you see, I didn't publish it, in other words, I was told no publicity. I was told, because Sam says, go ahead and work with him, and he said, let me know what is progressing.

MR. ROETHE: Is Sam what you would call your case officer?

MR. STURGIS: Sam is my contact, the man I was connected with.

MR. ROETHE: And you would always go to him before you would go ahead with some action like this?

MR. STURGIS: Oh, exactly. I wouldn't do anything unless I received an OK from somebody.

MR. ROETHE: Did you have any idea that this had anything to do with Cuba?

MR. STURGIS: It always had to do with Cuba.

MR. ROETHE: You were aware that this assassination had something to do with Cuba?

MR. STURGIS: I was thinking that it did, I could have been wrong. I was thinking that it could have something to do with Cuba.

MR.ROETHE: Did Sam seem to know anything about the subject -- about this, or did this seem to come as a surprise?

MR. STURGIS: It was a surprise. He was surprised that my friend approached me on something like this. And he said, don't say, no. I said, I will do it to anybody. I said, Sam, if it is all right, if this case officer -- Sam said, tell me who the case officer is, and if it is true, OK.

MR. ROETHE: What was your motivation for saying that you would do this?

MR. STURGIS: You know what a whore is?

MR. ROETHE: Do I know what a whore is?

MR. STURGIS: Yes.

MR. ROETHE: I guess I do.

MR. STURGIS: I don't mean to go ahead and question you. I am sorry. But in intelligence a whore is an agent that they would want that would do anything. But he has got to be motivated by patriotism. And that he would do anything for his country, regardless of what it was.

MR. ROETHE: Assuming that it was something that an official request made on behalf of the government?

MR. STURGIS: Well, you would think that if a case officer -- and you would be surprised how powerful a case officer -- what power a case officer has in his hands. He has got a lot of power.

MR. OLSEN: Thank you very much, Frank.

(Whereupon, at 6:00 o'clock p.m., the interview was concluded.)

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: Review of Personal Papers of Mr. Dulles

I reviewed the personal papers of Mr. Dulles covering the period after his departure from the Agency and while he was a member of the Warren Commission. I also reviewed Agency historical documents relating to Cuba. The review did not turn up anything of special significance or importance. For the most part, Mr. Dulles' papers included correspondence dealing with his book, personal contacts, and social activities. I have attached copies of all material in his papers that in any way dealt with the Kennedy assassination or the work of the Warren Commission. I have also attached relevant individual items culled from his daily diary.

ear Mr. Dulles,

I was sorry not to have the pportunity to see you during my rief visit to Washington. I would ike to have paid my respects and o have offered to assist you in any way that I might during your service on the Commission of Investigation f the Presidents assassination.

The labors of this Commission will e most vital and can contribute o - must contribute to - the preservation the political and social fabric of e nation.

It was my feeling that perhaps I uld help you again as I used to in CB and Special Group matters as an ntelligent and informed leg man, a ordinator, a gatherer of information - in ense "a hewer of wood & carrier water." As you know I have handled ings before - The British & Chemists, been know my way around Washington in all branches of the government – the National War College.

Of most importance, I have a personal angle. Mr. Kennedy was a friend and classmate. I would like to contribute to a dignified assessment of the whys and to the positive conclusions which would lay a basis for favorable socio-political awakening:

The Commission, I presume & recommend, would work through existing agencies. It must however guide the reporting from those agencies and, at times, suggest further lines of investigation. In this area I could also be of help.

At present I am awaiting the start of the next school year when I shall resume my pre CIA career as a Professor of Economics so I am available if you should need my services.

However you do need my services or ut I know that the investigation f this tragic event is in good ands. It is a most important esponsibility. Its results will have nanifold implications for the future. I wish you well.

Sincerely,

Sherman Hoar

Annex to Noven r 29, 1963, Diary:

About 5:30 on Friday, November 29, while I was sitting around the fire after a game of golf at Lloyd Neck, the telephone rang and I was advised that the President wanted to speak with me. I went to the phone and the White House operator said that the President wanted to speak with me, that he was on another line, and would I hold on for a minute. After a short wait the operator told me that someone had gone into the room and that she would call me back.

She called me back in five minutes. This gave me a brief chance to puzzle out what it was the President wanted to say to me. As it turned out, aided by some news items that the President was considering appointing a high-level commission to look into all the circumstances of the assassination of the President, I was led to put this as the first possibility. Soon the call came through. The President was on the line. I told him how much my thoughts had been with him in recent days. He thanked me. Then in a very kind expression of appreciation for what he thought I had done for the country over the years, he said he wished me to do a job for him. I asked him what it was. He said he was appointing a commission to look into all the circumstances surrounding the assassination and the later killing of the man believed responsible for the assassination. This commission would include the Chief Justice, members of the House and Senate from both parties, and two men outside of government, including myself, if I would serve.

I told the President without hesitation that I was prepared to serve if he felt I could be of service to him and the nation. I said that I assumed that he had considered my recent job and that he did not consider that this service was in any way an impediment. He said he had carefully considered it and he felt that, on the contrary, it would be helpful. I said I assumed that what he had told me was entirely confidential. He said it was until it was announced and he did not know the exact hour of that. I said I would, of course, maintain the confidence.

Please see enclosed letter from Jose Colon. Over the phone he told me that he had some information, rather vague, about some plot of air force officers to "impeach" President Kennedy, including an Air Force officer who had been attache in Czechoslovakia. I told him that such information should be brought to the attention of the FBI. He promised to do it but whether he will or not, I do not know.

I can only judge by telephone conversation in that he talked quite sanely but very vaguely.

Memorandum for: The Honorable Lee Rankin

Attached are a few items of possible interest:

(1) a copy of an article in the January 1964 British "Labour Monthly" by, I believe, R. P. Dutt. I understand he is the editor of the "Labour Monthly" and a British Communist. I am seeking further data with regard to Dutt. I call your attention particularly to the section beginning on page 13, entitled "A C.I.A. Job?". I suggest that you might wish the CIA to send to you directly all important items of this general nature and also items bearing on the future Communist propaganda treatment of the assassination issue with their estimate, preferably coordinated with the State Department, showing the general trend of such propaganda, if there is one. It has been my experience that the Communist party of the Soviet Union exercises a good deal, but not complete, control over the propaganda activities of the various Communist parties in the free world and often uses these parties or selected ones to launch various trial balloons in the propaganda field.

(2) a letter I obtained from a source I will indicate to you orally written by George de Mohrenschildt, who you may recall appears in the Commission's records as one of the men who had contact with, and as I recall, some influence over Oswald. You will recall that the State Department had interrogated him briefly, I believe, at the insistence of the FBI. This letter might furnish a desirable basis for some further interrogation as I did not find the State Department interrogation wholly satisfactory.

(3) a letter from Robert C. McManus, who writes on stationery of the Senate Judiciary Committee and makes certain allegations bearing on the Commission's work. I do not know the writer and I have merely acknowledged the letter and stated I was referring it to the Commission. It may require no further answer.

Here are one or two additional thoughts I have.

(a) that we study the use made of post office boxes in connection with Oswald's activities and crimes and also ascertain the terms and conditions under which post office boxes can be rented, and whether there are uniform regulations or whether it is left more or less to the whim of local postmasters. Oswald's ability to hire a post office in a fictitious name and to use it for the receipt of firearms seems to have facilitated his criminal activities. Later the Commission might possibly wish to make some suggestions on this subject.

(b) I should be glad to see the conclusions of the recent report outlined a few days ago in The New York Times giving arguments for the shifting of the Narcotics Bureau from the Treasury Department.

(c) Do we have an adequate study by the State Department of their policy, of any legislation affecting it, with regard to the terms and conditions of the registration of undesirables? I assume that an American citizen who has not forfeited his rights as such has an undeniable right to return to the United States, but I am not clear whether this is under law or merely established practice.

(d) Do we have any recent study available as to the extent to which, under the Constitution, the rights of citizens (or residents?) to acquire and retain firearms - apart from the question of legislation with regard to the bearing of concealed arms?

Someone asserted to me the other day that tax collections in Texas applicable to the maintenance of its police force, etc., were unusually low as contrasted with other states. I doubt whether this was a correct judgment as I do not think that one can segregate in Texas or elsewhere the tax collections for police as against other public services.

DUTT, Rajani Palme

Dutt was born in 1896 at Cambridge, England. His father, a doctor in Cambridge, belonged to a prominent Bengali family. His mother was Swedish. Was educated at Perse School in Cambridge, Balliol Oxford. He became a charter member of the British Communist party in 1920. Has been the British Communist party's leading theoretician since then.

He founded the "Labour Monthly" in 1921 and has been editor since then. Has taken an active interest in Indian Communist party affairs and was Secretary-Chairman of the British Communist party for a period in 1939. He also served for a time in the Communist party of Great Britain politburo. His standing with Moscow is excellent. In 1962 was afforded an honorary doctorate of history at Moscow University, where he lectured in April and May 1962. These lectures were published by Lawrence and Wishart in London 1963 under the title of "Problems of Contemporary History". One part of his lecture dealt with the cold war. The main theme of this section was to establish that the responsibility for the origins of the cold war rested with the West and that the West merely continued the policies of the Nazis and the Fascists.

Dutt's current position has been described as head of the international department of the Communist party of Great Britain, an office which he has held since at least 1956. He is also vice-chairman of the Communist party of Great Britain and again a member of the political and national executive committee.

Memorandum for The Honorable Lee Rankin

From

A. W. Dulles

I read with great interest the papers attached to the agenda for the Commission's meeting February 24, 1964. In J. Edgar Hoover's letter to you of February 10, 1964, on page 2, last paragraph, there is reference to Mr. Robert Storey's statement to Mr. Wade that when he, Storey, was with the War Crimes Commission in Germany after World War II, he ascertained that "the Central Intelligence Agency had informants that no one knew about, except the Central Intelligence Agency agent, and that the informant might have been an informant".

While this statement is not very clear, I would point out that the Central Intelligence Agency was not organized until late 1947 under the National Security Act of that year and that the Agency Mr. Storey is presumably referring to, if he did make the statement, must be the Office of Strategic Services, which was dissolved in late 1945. Of course, during the period of existence of the OSS, Lee Harvey Oswald was an infant.

With respect to J. Edgar Hoover's letters to you of February 11 and 13, 1964, I suggest that it may be desirable to try to clear up the confusion as to the existence of the "law enforcement officer in Dallas" who allegedly claimed that L. H. Oswald had been contacted by the FBI to become an informant. As I read the record available to me, there seems to be some conflict in the testimony of newsmen Hudkins and Golden. Very possibly this has arisen from the three contacts the FBI had with Oswald on June 26, and August 10 and 16, 1962. I do not find in the affidavits any indication of the purpose of either the June 26 or August 16 visits. The August 10 visit apparently related to the New Orleans Fair Play for Cuba incident. Have we memoranda on these visits to Lee Harvey Oswald?

FROM: A. W. Dulles

I have spoken to Mr. McCone and Mr. Helms about the general subject matter of your memorandum of March 17, 1964, regarding Lee H. Oswald and the charge that he was a paid informant of the FBI, CIA or another Federal agency.

Mr. McCone is away from Washington this week, but I have suggested to Mr. Helms that the first procedure suggested by you be followed; namely, an appropriate affidavit. I understand that this is now being prepared and will be submitted to Mr. McCone upon his return early next week.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE HONORABLE LEE RANKIN

FROM A. W. DULLES

Last evening Attorney General Carr dined with Jack McCloy and me and had one or two suggestions:

1. that the Commission might wish to interview (a) Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cabell. They were in a strategic position in the automobile procession at the time of the assassination. We saw them briefly when we visited Dallas. (b) Lewis Nichols, former President of the Dallas Bar Association, who called on Oswald in connection with the question of his being legally represented. Carr seems to think that he has some interesting information that has not been obtained. (c) Elgin Crull, City Manager of Dallas, who, as such, was in direct over-all command of the police.

2. Carr also mentioned a black notebook belonging to Oswald which had two Washington telephone numbers: (a) the Russian Embassy and (b) a telephone number with no name but which was called by the Dallas police. The person answering was apparently a Negro pastor here.

Memorandum for Lee Rankin

From A. W. Dulles

As a result of my weekend reading which I have returned with comments, I have the following comments in addition to comments noted on the material returned.

1. Where have we dealt with the evidence as to Oswald's ability to handle a rifle?

2. Where do you plan to discuss Oswald's escape pattern or plans; did he have any - if so, why did he leave $170 at the Paines and start out with less than $20? If he killed the President to make a name, gain notoriety, etc., why did he try to escape at all and then deny the shooting when caught? I feel we must deal with these difficult issues. I have some speculations on the subject.

3. If Marina had admitted that she had once been a member of the Komsomol, would that have changed the decision regarding her visa? I believe this has been considered by the State Department. I feel we should look into this.

4. A great deal of the description of the motorcade and the shooting will be unclear unless we have a street map and, if possible, a photo taken from the sixth floor window. Is this possible?

5. Would it be possible and desirable to add to Chapter II a description, second by second - taken from the frames of Zaprudeis photos? This, if well done, would be a most dramatic method of describing the action. I don't think we have given enough use to these photos.

6. Has there been any follow-up on the letters to the Militant - mentioned to us by Isaac Don Levine - that possibly were written by Oswald?

7. Is there any section of the report which deals with the protection of the President and Vice President when abroad? Should we not deal with this briefly?

Dear Mr. Olsen:

I am attaching, in answer to your request, CIA comments on certain questions raised by Mr. Paul Hoch.

I am advised that the references to HTLINGUAL (mail opening) material on pages 15 and 17 of our summary memo on the right side of the folder involved material which by our lights was innocuous, but which we made available to the FBI.

Let us know if there are any details you may wish to pursue. Our check, meanwhile, continues.

Memorandum by Paul Hoch Concerning CIA Activities and the Warren Commission Investigation

Mr. Paul Hoch, a long-time critic of the Warren Commission report, has been associated with Ramparts magazine, NBC news, and US News and World Report in the past. He has been in touch with CIA on the Warren Commission investigation since at least 1971. Our files show that Mr. Hoch was one of 12 people who, in 1967 or earlier, received a copy of the original unexpurgated list of all Warren Commission material held by the National Archives before a new list without CIA titles was prepared by Archives at our request.

In the introduction to his copyrighted 24 March 1975 memorandum (Tab 1), Mr. Hoch notes that he "concentrates on the CIA, with emphasis on specific questions relevant to domestic CIA activities, possible CIA nondisclosure to the Warren Commission, and possible links between the assassination and CIA attempts to kill Fidel Castro." A review of the memorandum reveals that it contains a number of questions and allegations concerning CIA. However, it also contains questions and allegations concerning the FBI, the Department of State, and various military departments. It appears to be a general criticism of Warren Commission methods and findings with particular emphasis on CIA's alleged role in obfuscating what Mr. Hoch believes to be the true nature of its own activities leading up to and following the assassination.

E 2 IMPDET CL BY 018186

We are not competent to comment on Mr. Hoch's questions or allegations concerning other Government agencies or the Commission. He has raised a number of points concerning CIA that we address below. Before doing so, however, a few words are in order concerning the set of mind with which Mr. Hoch seems to have approached this matter.

On page 11 of his memorandum, Mr. Hoch quotes Mr. James Angleton as having made the following remark to Mr. Seymour Hersh when asked by the latter about alleged CIA wrong-doing and domestic activities: "A mansion has many rooms and there were many things going on during the period of the [anti-war] bombings. I'm not privy to who struck John." Mr. Hoch then expresses puzzlement over this latter statement. He notes that "who struck John" may be a literary allusion or cliche unfamiliar to him and goes on to say:

> It may have been a reference to some other John-- e.g., Mitchell. Also, it is conceivable that "Who struck John" was some sort of code name for the CIA study of the Kennedy assassination. Angleton should be asked to explain that statement, and whether he is aware of any CIA investigations of Oswald or the assassination, particularly any which may have reached conclusions different from the Warren Commission's. Regardless of what Angleton now says he meant by his comment, an intended reference to John Kennedy seems as likely as any other explanation.

Mr. Hoch's willingness to attribute sinister implications to such a common phrase is both humorous and revealing. It belies the impression of reasonably objective scholarship he has sought to project in his memorandum.

The following questions are paraphrases of points concerning CIA raised by Mr. Hoch. They are keyed to the page on which the substance with which they deal appears in his memorandum.

Did CIA intercept a letter and money order which Oswald's mother sent to him shortly after he defected to Russia?

Answer:

No. CIA did not intercept a letter and money order sent to Oswald by his mother shortly after his defection. Mr. Hoch's question probably refers to a matter taken up by Mrs. Marguerite Oswald with the FBI on 28 April 1960 and described in the 12 May 1960 report by the Dallas FBI office in Tab 2 .

P. 3

What dissemination in CIA was made of the FBI report "Fair Play for Cuba Committee--New Orleans Division" which dealt only with Oswald and "A. J. Hidell," Oswald's alias? Other than this report, were any CIA employees or informants aware of Oswald's activities in New Orleans?

Answer:

A copy of this report is attached at Tab 3. It was transmitted to CIA by the FBI under a cover note dated 8 November 1963. The date stamp on the reverse of the cover sheet indicates it was logged in to the Agency on 12 November 1963. The DDP Counterintelligence Staff liaison office received it on 15 November 1963. The report then went to the counterintelligence office of the DDP Special Activities Staff which was then concerned with Cuban matters (no date indicated). The registry for the Special Activities Staff counterintelligence office handled the report on 21 November 1963. On 22 November 1963, the report was received by the DDP Counterintelligence Staff special investigations office, presumably because it concerned a former defector to the Soviet Union. Apparently it was being processed by that office when President Kennedy was assassinated. Prior to the assassination, CIA had no information concerning Oswald's activities in New Orleans beyond this report.

P. 4

544 Camp Street: Is there a CIA connection with Guy Banister? With David Ferrie? With other associates of Banister?

Answer:

According to CIA records, during 1960 Guy Banister operated a private detective agency in New Orleans called Banister and Associates. CIA considered contacting him for use as a foreign intelligence source and for possible use of his firm for cover purposes. However, security investigation revealed derogatory information about his professional conduct, and he was not contacted. With regard to Mr. Ferrie, Agency files indicate that CIA never considered contacting him for any purpose at any time. Our record search to date has not revealed any contacts with other associates of Guy Banister.

P. 5 and footnote #12

Was Oswald ever a CIA informant? Was he debriefed by CIA in Moscow? on his return from the USSR? If not, any particular reason? Did CIA ever receive in whole or in part Oswald's manuscript about his life in Russia? Is #110669 an identifying number used by CIA in any way?

Answer:

Lee Harvey Oswald was never associated or connected, directly or indirectly, in any way whatsoever with CIA (see Tab 4 for testimony of John A. McCone and Richard Helms before Warren Commission and Affidavit of John A. McCone). As a former marine and as a returned defector, he was of primary interest to military authorities and to the FBI who were responsible for any debriefings of him upon his return from the USSR. CIA received copies of Oswald's manuscript from the FBI and the Warren Commission in the material disseminated by them after the assassination. The number 110669 is not a CIA identification number of Lee Harvey Oswald for any purpose including registration as a source. Within CIA records, the number 110669 identifies an individual of Austrian birth who was of intelligence interest in East Asia during the 1940's. 24 The Inter-Agency Source Register (ISR) (which is managed by CIA) lists by name and number military intelligence sources since 1957. We have searched the ISR for both Oswald's name and the number 110669. His name and that number are not registered in the ISR.

Answer:

We have had previous communications with Mr. Hoch concerning this matter (see Tab 5).

The Agency at no time in its dealings with the FBI in the Field or with the Warren Commission in Headquarters described or suggested that the unknown individual whose photograph was taken in Mexico City on 1 October was Lee Harvey OSWALD. Our total coverage of the unknown individual numbers twelve photographs taken on 1 October (USSR Embassy), 4 October (USSR Embassy) and 15 October (Cuban Embassy). OSWALD left Mexico City, it is known, at 0830 hours, 2 October. It is clear, therefore, that this individual could not be OSWALD. Mr. Helms, in a memorandum to the Warren Commission Chief Counsel, indicated very clearly that the photograph of this unknown individual had nothing to do with the OSWALD case. In the light of all of the facts in the file, we find no reason to modify this judgment.

Mexican intercept operations: Did CIA have recordings of calls between Cuban and Soviet Embassies in which Oswald is discussed or in which Oswald participated? Did we have a recording of Oswald's conversation with a guard at the Soviet Embassy?

Answer:

CIA has transcripts of such calls, including a conversation between Oswald and a guard at the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City, which were made on 27 and 28 September and 1 October 1963. These transcripts were reviewed in their entirety by the Warren Commission at CIA Headquarters and in Mexico City at the Station in April 1964. The recordings were erased routinely after the transcripts were made. Oswald identified himself only in the course of the 1 October conversation, and a summary of that conversation was the first indication of his presence in Mexico reported by the Station on 8 October 1963 and disseminated by CIA Headquarters on 10 October 1963.

P. 7

Who had substantial knowledge of matters pertaining to Oswald in the CIA Station in Mexico City at the time of Oswald's visit there? Was E. Howard Hunt the acting chief of station in Mexico City at or near that time?

Answer:

The operations which produced the transcripts of the calls connected with Oswald on 27 and 28 September and 1 October 1963 were quite closely held at the station. Few people beyond the chief and his deputy, one or two senior officers, and the monitor would have been privy to the material.

E. Howard Hunt served in Mexico City from December 1950 to June 1951. From November 1960 until his retirement in 1970, he was assigned to Headquarters. During the period in which Mr. Hunt was alleged by Mr. Hoch to have been acting chief of station in Mexico City--August-September 1963--Mr. Hunt was assigned to a DDP desk at Headquarters. See Tab 6 for documents covering Mr. Hunt's activities then. (Mr. Hunt made one extended trip to Europe during this period, from July 1965 to September 1966.)

P. 7-8

Did CIA personnel play any role in building up, disseminating, then denigrating a report that Oswald had received money to kill Kennedy from someone at the Cuban Embassy in Mexico City? Was there a CIA connection with Gilberto Alvarado Ugarte, the source of the story?

Answer:

As stated in information provided to the Warren Commission by the Agency, CIA had no connection with activities or statements by Gilberto Alvarado Ugarte concerning allegations that Oswald received money to kill President Kennedy from someone at the Cuban Embassy in Mexico City. After Gilberto Alvarado came to the American Embassy in Mexico City on 26 November 1963 and made his allegations, his story was investigated by local CIA and FBI representatives in liaison with responsible Mexican law enforcement authorities. The Agency representatives informed the FBI that Alvarado was a well known Nicaraguan Communist underground member who was an informant of a Nicaraguan Security Service officer who was, in turn, a CIA source. On November 30, 1963, Alvarado admitted to Mexican security officials in writing that his whole story of having seen Lee Oswald receive money in the Cuban Embassy in Mexico City to assassinate President Kennedy was false. On the same day, CIA reported to appropriate U. S. Government authorities that Alvarado stated his motive in telling his false story was to get the United States to take action against Fidel Castro. He also said that he hated Castro and thought that his story about Oswald, if believed, would help cause the U. S. to take action against Castro.

P. 9

Is there any indication that CIA believed Oswald's defection and return might have been connected with a mission for another intelligence organization (e.g., military) and that this kept CIA away from his case?

Answer:

No. An Inter-Agency Source Registry is maintained [by 24 CIA] as a service of common concern. Such a registry was in existence throughout the 1960's. Its purpose is to preclude accidental contact or use of an intelligence source of one agency by another. Oswald's name never appeared in the registry.

VPN

P. 9

What was the purpose of a CIA-State study concerning defectors in general in 1960?

Answer:

There was no formal "study," but there was inter-agency preoccupation and exchange of information caused by the fact that there had been 13 U. S. defectors, including Oswald, between 1958 and 1960. Among the 13, there were five ascertained KGB agents: Davis, Dutkaniez, Martin, Mitchell, and Sloboda.

P. 9

Did Dr. Alexis Davison who served in the U. S. Embassy in Moscow when Oswald was there have any contact with Oswald of a non-medical nature? As Assistant Air Attache, did Davison coordinate intelligence activities with the CIA station? What was his connection with the Penkovsky case?

Answer:

A search of our files has revealed no CIA knowledge of the contact between Dr. Davison and Oswald during the latter's stay in the Soviet Union. At the time of Dr. Davison's assignment to Moscow, the CIA station chief was not charged with the function of coordinating the intelligence activities of the service attaches there. Dr. Davison's connection with the Penkovsky case and with CIA is described in Tab 7.

P. 10

Was J. Walton Moore connected with CIA? Was he connected with the Oswald case?

Answer:

Mr. J. Walton Moore was employed by CIA in the Contact Division office in Dallas during the early 1960's. His only contact with the Oswald case prior to the assassination is recorded in his 1 May 1964 memorandum to the Acting Chief, Contact Division, attached at Tab 8 (a typed version of the document is also attached because of the poor legibility of the original). He may have been involved in the Agency's effort to support the Warren Commission during the Commission's investigations. Mr. Moore has stated that he was never asked by Mr. de Mohrenschildt for advice concerning Oswald. We find no indication that there was ever any contact between Oswald and Mr. Moore.

P. 10

What actions did CIA take in Dallas or in Washington after Kennedy was shot or after Oswald was arrested?

Answer:

A special cable channel was established at headquarters to insure that all correspondence concerning Oswald would be controlled in a central repository. The resultant correspondence was subsequently incorporated into the Oswald file which was reviewed in full by the Warren Commission. Extensive investigative and analysis work was performed by the Agency in coordination with other Government agencies and with the Warren Commission.

Following the assassination of President Kennedy, DCI McCone instructed the Domestic Contact Service (DCS) to send an officer from its Dallas office to Parkland Hospital to contact and offer assistance to the FBI and Secret Service. Mr. Linwood Davis of that office went immediately to the hospital where he identified himself to the FBI and offered his services during the emergency. To date, our file review shows no indication that any particular use was made of Mr. Davis at that time.

P. 13

Does CIA have files with references to Oswald or his family other than CD692?

Answer:

CIA had only one general file on Oswald at the time of the assassination. That file had been opened as a result of Oswald's defection to the Soviet Union. At the time of the assassination the Warren Commission reviewed and received a copy of that file in its entirety. As the Agency continued to cooperate with the Commission, the Oswald file grew. It numbers 58 volumes now and contains all information in possession of the Agency on Oswald or his family.

The single exception to the above statement concerns one HTLINGUAL document dated 8 July 1961 but discovered only on review triggered by press publicity following the Oswalds' return to the U. S. in June 1962. The sensitivity of this intelligence precluded its inclusion in the Oswald file in general circulation. However, a copy of the document was forwarded to the FBI immediately upon discovery. (Also see question concerning Marina Oswald keyed to p. 14 of Mr. Hoch's memorandum.)

Was there any FBI-CIA liaison concerning Oswald's intention to attend Albert Schweitzer College in Switzerland? Was there any CIA intelligence interest in the school during that period?

Answer:

Information concerning Oswald's intention to attend Albert Schweitzer College in Switzerland was passed to CIA by the FBI in the report of the FBI's interview with Mrs. Marguerite C. Oswald on 28 April 1960 (see pp 5-6 of that report in Tab 2). A search of CIA files has revealed no CIA knowledge of an Albert Schweitzer College in Switzerland.

~~SECRET/SENSITIVE~~

P. 14

Has CIA had any contact with Marina Oswald and are there any CIA records on her not previously turned over to the Warren Commission.

Answer:

CIA has had no contact with Marina Oswald. Our records show that a complete set of HTLINGUAL documents on Marina were turned over by hand to Mr. Sam Papich of the FBI on 23 November 1963 for use by the FBI in the course of their investigations. One other HTLINGUAL document received after that date was passed to the FBI in September 1964. To date, we have found no record indicating that CIA also passed these documents to the Warren Commission; nor do we have any record of how they were used by the FBI during the Warren Commission investigations.

P. 15

Who was the unidentified man at a meeting with Richard Helms on 12 March 1964 who would have known if Oswald had been a CIA informant?

Answer:

The unidentified man who accompanied Mr. Helms to the 12 March 1964 meeting was Mr. David E. Murphy, then Chief of the Soviet Russia Division, DDP. See paragraph 6 of the Tab 9 memorandum of record of this meeting for Mr. Helms' reported remark that he and Mr. Murphy were the two Clandestine Services officers who certainly would know whether or not Oswald had been an agent for CIA in the Soviet Union.

P. 16

Has CIA pursued independent investigations of the assassination and developed any new information not already provided to the Warren Commission, the Justice Department, or other responsible authority? For example, what use did the Agency make of the Zapruder film?

Answer:

As noted by Mr. Helms in the course of his testimony before the Warren Commission (see Tab 4, pp 123-124), the case of Lee Harvey Oswald and the assassination of President Kennedy is not closed and "will never be closed" as far as the Agency is concerned. CIA has continued to be alert for new information abroad concerning this matter, and the Oswald file has grown over the years. The follow-up in Mexico City was particularly active during the 1960's. Throughout this period, no credible information has been developed which would substantially change the conclusions of the Warren Commission report. Any substantive information developed independently by the Agency has been shared with appropriate authorities, in particular the FBI.

A copy of the Zapruder film was acquired by CIA from Time, Inc., at the request of the Office of Training in February 1965. The agreement with Time, Inc., specified ". . .this film will not. . . be exhibited or published in any fasion except for internal training. . ." The Agency has adhered to these restrictions on the use of the film. From 1965 to 1969, the film was viewed by some officials in the Office of Training. Since April 1969, the film has been used by Special Operations Group, DDO, in courses designed to assist foreign government protective services in protecting their Chiefs of State and heads of government (see Tab 10).

P. 17

Has CIA engaged in any activities regarding critics of the Warren Report, including dissemination of information about them?

Answer:

Tab 11 contains a copy of Book Dispatch 5847 which transmitted guidance to certain CIA stations and bases concerning the countering of criticism of the Warren Report. This guidance for the field was prepared in response to a rash of books and articles criticizing the Commission's findings. It was sent out in April 1967. Our investigations to date have turned up no other guidance or activities undertaken in this connection.

P. 18

Did CIA have a connection with any member of the Odio family, including knowledge of an abortive plot to kill Castro which resulted in the imprisonment of Sylvia Odio's parents? Does CIA have any knowledge of the identities and activities of three men who reportedly visited Sylvia Odio two months prior to the assassination of President Kennedy, particularly the man introduced to her as Leon Oswald?

Answer:

The only relationship between CIA and the Odio family was the debriefing of Cesar Humberto Odio del Toro, Sylvia Odio's brother, during the early 1960's on a routine basis as part of a general program of eliciting positive intelligence from Cuban refugees in the United States. There is no connection or relationship between the Agency and the imprisonment of Sylvia Odio's parents for involvement in anti-Castro activities. According to our records, Sylvia Odio's parents were not imprisoned because of involvement in an assassination attempt against Castro. The following background information concerning the circumstances surrounding their imprisonment was provided by Cesar del Toro. The parents of Cesar and Sylvia were arrested by the Cuban Government in 1961 and sentenced to thirty years and nine years in prison respectively. They were imprisoned for participation in an organization named the Movimiento Revolucionario del Pueblo. Amador Odio Padron had been obtaining food and medical provisions for the care of Cubans in asylum at various foreign embassies in Havana. His wife had been helping him in that activity. Prior to his arrest Amador Odio Padron had been the owner of Cuba's largest inter-provincial trailer truck concern. (In fact, our records indicate that he had used his trucking concern to smuggle arms to anti-Battista forces during the 1954-56 period.) During the mid-1960's, Cesar Odio made several attempts to secure the release of his parents by offering to purchase large quantities of spare parts and transport them to Cuba.

The identities of the three men who reportedly visited Sylvia Odio two months prior to the assassination of President Kennedy were established in the course of the Warren Commission investigation. (See Report of The President's Commission on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., 1964, pp 321-325.)

Is there any CIA connection with an anti-Castro group which held meetings at 3126 Hollandale Street in Dallas or with a Cuban group which allegedly held meetings attended by Oswald at 3128 Harlendale Street in Dallas?

Answer:

Our file search to date has revealed no information concerning these two addresses. However, we are not satisfied that all possible CIA records have been consulted. A final report concerning this question will be forwarded to the Commission by 2 May 1975.

Hoch's Questions

1. Did the CIA intercept a letter & money order from Marguerite Oswald to Lee Harvey O. shortly after O. defected to Soviet U. ?

CIA says No.

Mail intercept program discussed in Rock. Comm. report

No [illegible] investig. made as to how FBI learned of the letter & M.Order because

- FBI functioning not w/in our Charter.
- Even if CIA had intercepted the ltr & reported it to FBI, it wd not be distinguishable from other mail interceptions or justify a separate investig.
- The mail intercept program of the CIA was not directed vs. Oswald individually.
- The Warren Commn received detailed evid. from the FBI with respect to the letter & money O.
- Certainly if Oswald was a CIA agent, as some have alleged, the CIA wd not have been reporting to the FBI on such mail recd by Oswald.

2. Angleton's "I'm not privy to who struck John."

- The whole Angleton quotation makes it clear that he was being asked about CIA activities occurring during the period of anti-war bombings in this country, and that he was responding to that question.

  The ~~only~~ reasonable meaning of his answer was: "There were a lot of things going on in the Agency during that period of anti-war bombings, and I wasn't aware of everything that was going on."

- The period of anti-war bombings didn't begin until 1967 or 1968, some 4 years or more after Pres K's death.

- The line "I'm not privy to who struck John," is drawn from the Bible (and its literary meaning is "I don't know.")

W - Weak	Performance ranges from wholly inadequate to slightly less than satisfactory. A rating in this category requires positive remedial action. The nature of the action could range from counseling, to further training, to placing on probation, to reassignment or to separation. Describe action taken or proposed in Section C.
A - Adequate	Performance meets all requirements. It is entirely satisfactory and is characterized neither by deficiency nor excellence.
P - Proficient	Performance is more than satisfactory. Desired results are being produced in a proficient manner.
S - Strong	Performance is characterized by exceptional proficiency.
O - Outstanding	Performance is so exceptional in relation to requirements of the work and in comparison to the performance of others doing similar work as to warrant special recognition.

SPECIFIC DUTIES

ist up to six of the most important specific duties performed during the rating period. Insert rating letter which best describes the anner in which employee performs EACH specific duty. Consider ONLY effectiveness in performance of that duty. All employees ith supervisory responsibilities MUST be rated on their ability to supervise (indicate number of employees supervised).

State suggestions made for improvement of work performance. Give recommendations for training. Comment on foreign language competence, if required for current position. Amplify or explain ratings given in Section B to provide best basis for determining future personnel action. Manner of performance of managerial or supervisory duties must be described, if applicable.

Subject has performed in a manner quite consistent with his long and broad experience in many aspects of the craft of intelligence, His senior grade, his special expertise in the field of propaganda and publication and his very high intellect have contributed to the division's operations in the public media field a sharp focus, an economical concentration of money and effort and a consequently heightened impact. In the WUHUSTLER project, Subject vindicated his faith in a moribund clandestine asset by demonstrating, after about a year and a half under his personal direction, that it is one of the most effective activities of its kind. Before Subject assumed direct responsibility for this project, it had suffered from visionary and diffuse direction and from poor case officer-agent rapport. Subject's personal handling of this operation is marked by excellent rapport and the project prospers on an entirely reoriented basis which the agent himself enthusiastically welcomes.

Subject's supervisory responsibility has extended over two secretaries, from one to two professional staffers under official cover and three professional career employees under unofficial cover. The fairness and precision of his management has patently won their respect and inspired their performance.

Special mention should be made of Subject's objectivity and integrity in carrying out his responsibilities. These were best demonstrated when he promptly and swiftly terminated a large and effective radio broadcasting project, to establish which he and his subordinates had labored hard, immediately upon belated discovery that insuperable, practical obstacles precluded realization of the project's theoretical potential.

Subject's professional background has attuned his constant attention to FI operational opportunities arising in the course of his current CA activities, a practice consistent with his habit of seeking maximum benefit for every dollar spent in time, effort or cash.

12 March 1964

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: Meeting with the Warren Commission on 12 March 1964

1. On 12 March 1964, Mr. Helms, Mr. Murphy and Mr. Rocca met with Mr. Rankin, Chief Counsel for the Warren Commission, Mr. Willems, and other members of Mr. Rankin's staff. The purpose of this meeting was to discuss the current status of the CIA contribution to the work of the Warren Commission.

2. The first topic raised by Mr. Rankin concerned information on Lee Harvey Oswald's stay in the Soviet Union as reported by the FBI, based on their interview of the defector, . This discussion is reported in a separate memorandum.

3. After disposing of the question of information on Oswald, Mr. Rankin's staff showed us a detailed memorandum they had prepared based on all of the information available to them, including our own contribution concerning Oswald's stay in the USSR. This material, together with some questions specifically related to the material we provided, will be forwarded to us by Mr. Rankin's staff. It was then suggested that a CIA officer most familiar with the material provided by CIA on the USSR aspects of the Oswald case visit the Commission in order to review on the spot the testimony given to the Commission by Marina Oswald. We agreed to send the appropriate officer to review this testimony but suggested that we wait until after receipt of the material just shown to us.

4. Members of Mr. Rankin's staff then spoke about having found a book in Oswald's possessions which had certain letters cut out giving the impression that this might have formed the base or key for a cipher system. They asked whether it would be useful in our opinion to send this book to NSA for review. We assured ~~them that~~ NSA was the appropriate Agency for this and Mr. Rocca commented that when this was done reference might also be made to the portion of Lee Oswald's notes which mentioned microdot. Another member of the Rankin staff commented on the fact that Oswald had obtained employment in this country in a photographic firm through a Russian friend. He thought this might have a possible bearing on any clandestine communications systems he might have received from the Soviets.

RELEASE OF THIS DOCUMENT

5. Members of Mr. Rankin's staff then commented on the testimony of Mrs. Oswald to the effect that the letters from her son regarding his desire to return to the United States had the appearance of being dictated since they contained none of his usual grammatical errors and used legal language with which he would not have been familiar. In this connection, the fact that Lee Oswald wrote to the Embassy requesting help in arranging his return to the U.S. soon after receipt by the Embassy of a telegram from the Department reporting on correspondence with Oswald's mother seemed to indicate to members of Mr. Rankin's staff that the Soviets might have had access in some fashion to the contents of the telegram. They did not believe it was coincidental that Oswald's letter to the Embassy came immediately on the heels of the telegram from the Department. This led to a discussion of the appearance in the press of another telegram or report, from the Embassy in Moscow to the Department. Mr. Rankin said he would undertake to clarify this.

6. Mr. Willems noted that Mrs. Oswald had introduced a statement to the effect that she suspected her son to be a CIA agent. Mr. Willems asked whether in fact Oswald had been a CIA agent. Mr. Helms replied that he had not been. Mr. Willems then asked if there were any way of proving this. Mr. Helms first remarked that in him and Mr. Murphy the Commission had the two Clandestine Services officers who certainly would know whether or not Oswald had been an agent for CIA in the Soviet Union. He then said that the Commission would have to take his word for the fact that Oswald had not been an agent. Mr. Rankin interjected the view that the Commission had not adopted this procedure with other agencies and wondered whether there was not some way to clarify this point more effectively for the Commission. One suggestion he made was to have Mr. Dulles, who is familiar with CIA records procedures, review the material which would normally be held on agents and report to the Commission. Another suggestion was to follow the lead of the Director of the FBI who forwarded an affidavit to the Commission regarding the nature of FBI relations with Oswald.

7. A considerable part of the meeting from this point forward consisted of a review by Mr. Rankin and his staff of the gaps in their investigation to date. They noted that the most significant gap appeared in the Mexican phase. For example, they had no record of Oswald's daily movements while in Mexico City nor could they confirm the date of his departure or his mode of travel. The original assumption that he had returned by bus could not be proven. Several possibilities were discussed whereby the Commission could fill in the gaps of its investigation of the Mexican phase. The suggestion was made that the most effective way of resolving the questions they had would be to have a member of the Commission visit Mexico City and discuss the issues on the spot with those American and Mexican officials directly concerned. Mr. Helms noted that it would be possible for a member of the Commission to visit our Chief of Station who would then be able to work out with the Warren Commission staff member the best way to handle interviews with Mexican police officials, particularly if it is desired that these interviews be informal in nature. Our Chief of Station would also be able to put the Warren Commission staff member in contact with the FBI officials and Immigration and Naturalization Service officers stationed in Mexico City. Mr. Helms cautioned that our Chief of Station(would be 32 under State Department cover)and that it would be proper to advise the Department of the planned visit and upon arrival to meet briefly with the Ambassador or Minister Counselor before proceeding to work out details with the CIA Chief of Station.

8. In connection with the Mexican phase of the investigation, members of Mr. Rankin's staff questioned Mr. Helms and Mr. Rocca regarding the extent of the CIA file on Oswald for the period 8 October to 22 November 1963. They questioned the sanitized extracts which they had been shown and wondered if there were not more. Mr. Rocca summarized the materials that had come to the attention of the Secret Service, or had been disseminated to the Secret Service, immediately after the assassination. Mr. Rocca said there was not additional substantive information and that the sanitized version seen by the Commission constituted the sum of our holdings. Mr. Helms then explained that as a matter of practice we did not release actual copies of our messages because they contained codewords and digraphs which would be unintelligible to a person not familiar with them. He added, however, that he would be happy to show the file with the original messages to any staff member of the Warren Commission who might come to visit him at Langley.

9. The question of why no action was taken by other agencies of the government after their receipt of CIA information that Oswald was in contact with the Soviet and Cuban Embassies in Mexico City was next discussed. Mr. Rankin and members of his staff clearly felt that this was a crucial question which needed careful review. They appeared to believe that the information on Oswald was unusual enough to have caused recipients to take special measures which might conceivably have led to a closer scrutiny of Lee Harvey Oswald and his movements. Mr. Helms pointed out that the information on Oswald's visit to the Cuban and Soviet embassies in Mexico City came from telephone intercepts which were placed on both embassies. These intercepts were recorded on tape and reviewed by persons at our Station for any information affecting U. S. security. Such information is routinely passed to other agencies and entered in CIA files. Given the enormous bulk which is involved, the tapes are not kept on file but erased after a brief period of time. Thus the information on Oswald was similar to that provided on other American citizens who might have made contacts of this type. In Oswald's case, it was the combination of visits to both Cuban and Soviet Embassies which caused the Mexico City Station to report this to Headquarters and Oswald's record of defection to the Soviet Union which prompted the Headquarters dissemination. At the conclusion of his remarks on this subject, Mr. Helms specified that the information he had given Mr. Rankin was extremely sensitive and that the very existence of these telephone intercepts had to be very carefully protected.

10. The Commission, Mr. Rankin said, would be interested in any information held by CIA on Jack Ruby. Mr. Rankin said the Commission staff had prepared a roundup on Ruby, a copy of which he handed Mr. Helms. He said he would appreciate any file reflections or comments that CIA analysts might make on this material. Mr. Rankin and members of his staff then discussed Ruby's confirmed trip to Havana in 1959. The Commission has received information from an unspecified source that Ruby was in Havana again in 1963 under a Czech passport. Mr. Rankin asked whether CIA could provide any assistance in verifying this story. Mr. Helms replied that CIA would be limited in its possibility of assisting, to air manifest checks in Mexico. These would be carried out he said.

11. Mr. Helms was then asked if CIA had done any follow up to its original telegraphic dissemination of the information on Oswald's visits to the Cuban and Soviet embassies in Mexico City. Mr. Helms replied that there had been no CIA action following our initial dissemination. Mr. Willems then asked if there were any liaison problems faced by CIA in its efforts to deal with other agencies in matters affecting internal security. Mr. Helms replied that there were always understandable human problems in conducting any liaison on any subject but that by and large the procedures for dealing with internal security and counterespionage information which needed to be brought to the attention of other agencies were effective.

12. Mr. Willems then asked if CIA's intelligence collection system was automated. Mr. Helms replied that we did in fact have a machine records system for recovering file information which was unique in that it had been designed specifically with the requirements of the CIA Clandestine Services in mind. Thus, any information reposing in our files could be recovered by means of this machine system rapidly and efficiently. Mr. Helms invited Mr. Rankin and members of his staff to visit the Langley Headquarters and inspect the machine records system which he had described.

13. In speaking of the broader question of protection for the President, Mr. Rankin asked about our procedures for working with the Secret Service when the President travels abroad. Mr. Helms described how the system works and cited examples from the past to illustrate. He commented on some of the South American trips and on the visit to West Berlin to show the way in which the effectiveness and competence of the local police force plays a key role in efforts to insure the President's safety.

14. Mr. Willems asked if we could check on a memorandum sent to Mr. Karamessines on 12 February regarding one of the pictures identified by Mrs. Oswald as that of Jack Ruby. These pictures were from clandestine photographic coverage of the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City which was provided by the FBI and then cropped to make a display to show to Mrs. Oswald soon after the President's assassination. The Commission has not been able to determine which of these pictures was shown Mrs. Oswald. Mr. Rocca will follow up on this.

MEMORANDUM FOR: File

FROM: James B. Weidner

SUBJECT: Interview with John Stein

I interviewed Mr. Stein in his office at the CIA Headquarters, Langley, Virginia on March 18, 1975. The interview commenced at 11:10 a.m. and continued until approximately 1:20 p.m. No one else was present. At the outset of the interview, Mr. Stein signed an Advice and Waiver which is annexed hereto.

Mr. Stein, along with several other Deputies, were assigned to an Ad Hoc Committee to review various alleged domestic activities of the CIA. Stein's particular area was the counter-intelligence staff, except for the activities of that staff relating to the CI/SO project and to the mail intercept project.

Stein said that, after his review, he concluded that the job of the CI staff was essentially to "horse" the FBI into doing something. In fact, according to Stein, once you eliminate CI/SO and the mail intercept project from the CI staff, their activities were benign insofar as the scope of this Commission's scope of inquiry was concerned. He said that, unless you conclude that keeping records relating to Americans, per se, is improper, the CI staff files contained little of interest.

(a) Action-oriented Matters

I asked Stein whether he had found any evidence of domestic breaking and entering directed by the CI staff. Stein said that he had found no such activities, with one possible exception. Stein stated that, if such activities seemed appropriate, the CI staff would inform the Bureau which would accomplish the activities. This was because, if anything were discovered by virtue of the action which would lead to a prosecution, the action should be taken by the FBI, since the Department of Justice would have responsibility for the prosecution.

~~CIA HAS NO OBJECTION TO DECLASSIFICATION AND/OR RELEASE OF THIS DOCUMENT AS SANITIZED~~
16-8-94 lee

The only possible exception to the absence of any "breaking and entering" by the CI staff was the Tofti case. Tofti was a long term employee of the Agency, who put his house up for rent. Coincidently, another Agency employee went to look at the house for possible rental. In the course of so doing, the second employee found that there were quite a number of classified documents on the third floor of the house. The employee then reported what he found to the Agency, which sent personnel over to recover the documents. (The documents related to world-wide proprietaries of the Agency with which Tofti had been involved. Ultimately, Tofti explained that he intended to write a book about these matters and that was why the records were in his home.) The Agency undoubtedly did not have time to advise the Bureau much in advance (if at all) of the Agency's effort to recover the subject documents. Stein also noted that this incident did not, in fact, involve "breaking and entering" since the house was already opened to allow prospective renters to examine it.

Stein said that he had found no instances of physical surveillance done by the CI staff, although the staff would probably have been aware of surveillance accomplished by other agency components or by the Bureau. Stein cited as an example an instance where a female Agency employee was found to be living with a man who could well have been working for a foreign Government. The Office of Security, therefore, put a surveillance on her house for approximately three weeks. Discussions were also had with an informant within the Agency concerning this employee. (Files on this case would be maintained by the Office of Security).

Stein found no evidence of any electronic surveillance or telephone taps accomplished domestically by the CI staff. The staff had no personnel who could actually take any action. The staff, in this regard, would have had an advisory capacity, if it participated at all. The CI staff would simply advise the Bureau or other components of the Agency such as the Office of Security or the Office of Technical Services. In such instances the CI staff would not hold the file, except perhaps a memorandum relating to the particular case, but Stein found no such memoranda.

As a digression, Stein commented that, to the extent that CI staff may have gotten into "gray" areas, this may well have been as a result of an effort to restrict knowledge of a particular incident to the smallest possible number of people. Thus, rather than going to the Bureau, where control over the dissimilation of the subject information would not be possible, the staff might go to another Agency component such as the Office of Security. Similarly, where an investigation proved fruitless, continued maintenance of relevant files by the CI staff, rather than by the Agency or the Bureau generally, constituted part of an effort to avoid prejudicing the particular subject of the investigation.

Another general area mentioned by Stein was that involving the use by CI staff of people having an historical relationship with the staff. These persons would be used against clearly foreign targets in the United States. As an example, Stein said that such persons might be used to obtain access to codes or the like in this country.

Stein mentioned the allegations relating to the reported breaking and entering into the Chilian Embassy. I told him that we had already reviewed this instance, and, therefore, there was no need for him to review it any detail.

(b) Files on Americans.

The major source of files on Americans maintained by CI staff was the "American Targets Program" (ATP). This program involved information received by CI staff from Agency sources, from the State Department, and from the Military. Information might also be received from the FBI. The purpose of ATP was to collate all contacts between any American and any foreign intelligence officers, particularly those from the USSR. The concept of the program was that all such contacts would be reported to CI staff, which would index them for future reference.

Stein noted that, although the State Department actually had a formal regulation requiring that all contacts with Soviets be reported, it was extremely difficult to convince State officers so to report. Stein spent a substantial amount of time overseas under State cover. He said that, as a result of that experience, he knows that State officers are reluctant to report this kind of information. (A State officer probably will not achieve promotion by his contact with Soviet personnel.) As a result of this reluctance, the information obtained by the CI staff generally originated with the State Department's Office of Security.

The ATP program for filing was simply that when a name was reported to CI staff, it was mechanically processed by personnel who exercised no judgment in recording the name. The names of both the Soviet and the American people involved in the contact would be recorded. As a result of this process, the ATP file index was able to develop a great deal of information on Soviet contacts with Americans. If, as a result of information obtained, CI staff had reason to believe that a aprticular person had been recruited by the Soviets, that information would be forwarded to the Office of Security for the Agency, if any Agency officer were involved, or to FBI, if an American outside the Agency was involved.

Stein explained that this program was conducted by CI staff instead of by the FBI or State, because the program might well contain information which would be relevant to CIA purposes, but not relevant to the purposes of the other Agencies. Thus, the files might well contain information concerning known KGB Agents. That information, in turn could have derived from a sensitive source, the identity of which CIA would not want to have revealed. Accordingly, the information was stored by the Agency rather than the other possible Governmental components. Information relevant to those components, however, was made available to them from the ATP project.

The information utilized by ATP could have been derived,as noted, from reports of other Governmental components or from information provided by any American. This would be information provided voluntarily, either by a person actually having a contact with a foreign intelligence officer or by persons with knowledge that someone else had had such a contact. The information could be particularly useful, not only to the CIA, but to other Governmental components. For example, the State Department's Office of Security might report that a State officer had had a contact over a long period with a Soviet. The CI staff could check all its information on that Soviet and confirm whether they had reason to believe that the Soviet was in fact an agent.

Another source of files on Americans held by CI staff might be the product [of code-breaking by NSA. Thus, in reading codes, names of Americans may appear.] Some of these may be innocuous, and some may be spies. In any event, all these names are also indexed, although the index is separate from ATP, because of the [sensitivity of the NSA program] as well as the information derived therefrom.

The information plugged into the indexing system will not become an actual file until there is some reason for opening a file on a particular person. At that point (for example, a file search requested by another Agency) all information relating to a particular person will be collated in one place. This, in turn will be developed into a separate file (a personality file). If the information on a particular person is requested by a CIA field office, the collation process would occur and the field would be told how the particular person had come to the attention of the Agency in the first instance and would also be told any derogatory information which the field station would want to know.

Other CI files derived from on-going cases. Part of these files emanate from information provided to the Agency by defectors. For example, one element of this information is designated "Soviet leads." This is because the CI staff learned from a defector that all Soviet women employed in the United States Embassy in the USSR during a certain period were Soviet agents. Some of these women, in turn, married Americans, and, as a result, now live in the United States. The FBI is advised of the identity of all these women. The CI staff, under official cover, occasionally goes out to interview these women, in an effort to convince them to reveal what they know about KGB operations. The effort was first to determine whether the women continue to be KGB agents, and, if not, to gather information from them. The general modus operandi would be to tell the women that we know that at one time they were KGB agents and, while we did not intend to take any action against them, to request them to reveal information that they may have learned at that time concerning KGB operations. Generally, the women would agree to do so. If they did not, the contract would, at least temporarily, be dropped. These women are, in short, used as "defectors who did not defect".

Other examples of going cases are: a journalist who had private contact with George Blake, a former KGB agent in England; an American who was tied into the Able case (in this instance, the actions are taken by the Bureau, but guidance is given by CI staff); and a journalist who the KGB, on three occasions, attempted unsuccessfully to recruit.*

Other files may relate to actions begun because of some kind of counterintelligence implication in a particular situation. In these instances CI would maintain the files because of the particular sensitivity of the matter, even though action may be taken by another Agency component.

*Stein noted that the decision as to whether to utilize someone as a double agent is made by the CIA. If the decision is affirmative, the double agent would be handled by the Agency (if he is abroad) or by the FBI (if he is in this country). The only exceptions to this pattern would be where the double Agent is in the United States for only a brief time or where he has a special relationship with a particular CIA officer.

Other files are maintained concerning the Soviet Embassy. CIA's position on this matter is that this is a State case which the Agency is running on behalf of State.

There is also a file on Vesco held by the CI Staff. The Agency became involved in this situation because John Dean of the White House called and stated that President Nixon's brother had obtained a job with IOS. He wanted to know what IOS was all about. CIA, in fact, had a file on IOS, because it was known that the Soviets had been attempting to penetrate that institution as a vehicle for getting agents into this country or at least allowing them to learn of economic matters relating to the United States. Stein said that, at one point, Vesco's lawyer called to say that he wanted to have an account of everything which had been said about Vesco over South American radio channels. The Agency refused this request, stating that it was beyond its charter.

(c) Defectors

There are four sorts of defectors handled by the CI Staff. The first group are those under low level cover which are being used to scan Soviet publications and to extract anything relating to Soviet intelligence which they, in light of their expertise, may recognize. The second group of defectors are those with "talents". This group are former KGB agents who, as a result, have special knowledge. They may be used from time to time to go and talk with (either in the United States or abroad) USSR citizens. Another sort of defector is one from Czechoslovakia. This particular person is highly knowledgable in Maxist-Leninist matters. Accordingly, he is used to write propaganda which is disseminated abroad. The last category of defectors are those who are no longer in regular contact with the agent. These particular persons are seen from time to time for some particular reason which could simply be an administrative matter concerning their pensions, etc.

The CI Staff also maintains a file on defectors from America to some other country (such as the Soviet Union, Cuba and others). These names are recorded because the persons involved may eventually end up in the United States once again or in some country other than the Soviet Bloc. This would not necessarily mean that that person is a spy, but it does mean that he would be of counter-intelligence interest, At approximately the time of the Kennedy assassination the Secret Service and the FBI became particularly interested in potential defectors from the United States. (Recall that Oswald had had connections with Russia). This was an operation which the CIA did not particularly want to undertake. Nonetheless the Agency did trace the names which the Bureau and Secret Service provided in this regard. The number of these names was perhaps 2,000 including crackpots who may have as an off hand comment, suggested that they intended to defect to, for example, Russia. The CIA attempted to turn the program over to the Secret Service for the Bureau, but they would not take it. The CIA ultimately stopped the project and cleared all the files out. This would have been approximately three years ago. Stein noted that although the files had been eliminated, it was possible that some of the names provided to the Agency had made it into the Central Agency files, and would not have been eliminated therefrom.

I briefly discussed the NOSENKO Case with Stein. Nosenko had defected to the United States and was admitted to this country as a "parolee". That is, the Immigration and Naturalization Bureau have a quota of persons which the Agency can bring into the country without regular immigration papers. These persons are the responsibility of the Agency. There was some initial doubt, as to whether, in fact, Nosenko had been sent to the United States by the KGB. Information obtained from another defector tended to confirm this suspicion. The question then was what to do with Nosenko. It was decided for a variety of reasons, that it would be unwise to attempt to deport him; as a result, he was kept in the United States in isolation. After several years it was determined that Nosenko was, in fact, not an attempted double agent. He was thereafter rehabilitated and now lives happily in the United States. Although the CI had an interest in this case, it was actually run by the Office of Security.

As one aspect of the Agency's duty to help in services of common concern to all Governmental agencies, the CIA recorded in computer form at the request of the FAA, all information relating to hijackers. Stein thinks that this was probably because the CIA had the only equipment which could handle the needed material in the proper fashion. The information so provided would, for example, include names of all those who were on board hijacked planes. Approximately two years ago the CIA tried to give this program to the FAA. That Agency, however, would not accept the program, and, therefore it was terminated by CIA.

MEMORANDUM OF DEPOSITION FOR THE RECORD

DATE: Friday, April 4, 1975

PLACE: 712 Jackson Place, N.W.
Washington, D. C.

PARTICIPANTS:
Mr. Frank Sturgis - Witness
Mr. Wilfredo Navarro - Witness
Mr. Robert B. Olsen, Commission Staff
Mr. James N. Roethe, Commission Staff

OLSEN: Frank, continuing from our interview of yesterday which was being taken down by a court reporter, as you can see we don't have a court reporter present this morning, which is Friday, April 4, 1975, and we are beginning at 9:15 am. Do you understand, Frank and Wilfredo, that you are still under oath as you were yesterday and that this is a continuation of the deposition in effect that was being taken yesterday?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

NAVARRO: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: All right. We are going to have to stop from time to time to change belts, but we will try to speed it along as fast as we can. Yesterday we were talking about an approach which was made to you in Miami sometime after you had returned to the United States from Cuba in 1959, in which you were asked if you would be willing to undertake an assassination?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Would you tell us this morning who it was that approached you with that subject.

OLSEN: Mr. Sturgis has asked that we go off the record and we have had a conversation off the record, during the course of which Mr. Navarro was invited to leave the room and he is now absent from the room. The only parties present in the room at this time are Mr. Sturgis and myself. Now the question that I put to you, Frank, was: Can you identify for us at this time who it was that approached you with the question of whether you would participate in the performance of an assassation?

STURGIS: Bernard L. Barker.

OLSEN: And when was it, as best you now recall, Frank, that that approach was made?

STURGIS: I believe it was in approximately 1961, either before the Bay of Pigs or it was after the Bay of Pigs.

OLSEN: Was it very shortly before or shortly after?

STURGIS: I would be very honest with you, I don't remember.

OLSEN: Well, the Bay of Pigs operation actually took place in April of 1961, didn't it?

STURGIS: 1961, Yes, sir.

OLSEN: As I understand from your testimony yesterday, when you were approached about this, you indicated that you would be willing to do so.

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: But you thereafter checked with Sam Jenis about what he thought about it, and Sam Jenis indicated to you that he thought you should cooperate with Barker, but that you should make sure that it was going to be an authorized operation by insisting to Barker that the word come to you directly from someone who has identified himself as Barker's Case Officer. Is that a fair statement of what you have just told me?

STURGIS: Either his Case Officer, or his Station Chief.

OLSEN: Did you know at that time who Barker's Case Officer was?

STURGIS: I assumed at that time that it was possible that it was Eduardo, who he was the assistant under Eduardo.

OLSEN: But, am I correct in understanding now that you do not know whether Eduardo was still on the scene or whether he had been replaced?

STURGIS: No, sir, I do not know. Now let me say this. I did ask E. Howard Hunt do use the code name Eduardo while we were in Danbury, Connecticut, and present -

OLSEN: Now you are talking about 1972?

STURGIS: Now we are talking about 1972. I asked him if he gave any orders to Bernie, or Barker, or Maucho, whatever -- these names -- I called him by these names.

OLSEN: In other words, Barker was known as either Bernie or Maucho?

STURGIS: Right.

OLSEN: Okay.

STURGIS: I did ask Howard: Did you ever ask Maucho Barker to do an assassination, to approach me on an assassination. He says "Hell, no".

OLSEN: That was Mr. Hunt's answer to you in 1972?

STURGIS: Right.

OLSEN: All right then. Did you thereafter-- going back to the 1961-- did you have any further conversation with Bernard Barker about the subject?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. I was advised to not to discuss the assassination attempt with him -- to let Bernie bring up the subject -- whenever I saw him. Bernie did bring up the subject --

OLSEN: Where did you talk to Bernie the next time about this subject?

STURGIS: It was either one or two places; it was either at his home in the --I believe the northwest section of town, or at a dinner that he invited me to at a steak house--and I believe it was a ranch house; this ranch house was located on 36th Street just before LeJuene Road.

OLSEN: And what happened when you next met with Barker about the subject?

STURGIS: He told me that this invitation was -- his Case Officer said "Take Frank out and have a dinner."

OLSEN: And what did he do? Did he explore further your willingness to undertake this?

STURGIS: Yes. Bernie asked me how I would go about it were the subject about the assassination, and he asked me how I would do it. And I told him, I says "Well, it would all depend. I don't want to know the man or the victim's name at this time, but it would depend on the man, his position, for me to determine how I would get rid of the man.

OLSEN: And also where?

STURGIS: Where--the location, right. Also, in the conversation I told him--he went into detail with me, and he said that there was a possibility that he would like to go on the thing with me. And I told him that "Well Bernie, I don't like anybody to come with me; I'll be very honest with you. I prefer to do it myself," because naturally I did not want to have a witness to something that I would do even if he is an agent or not, that I would do the thing. He said "Well, how could I know that it was done."

I says, "Well, there are several ways; No. 1, the person would eventually be reported missing; No. 2, I will cut off his ear or his finger and give it to you." I says, "because there won't be no body to recover." I told him -- he says how would you do it? I says "well, I could go the Everglades; I could dig a hole and put lye in it--the lye will eat up his body; I could take an airplane and fly over the gulfstream and I could dump him in the gulfstream weighted down -- I would have to cut his stomach and his intestines so that he wouldn't float. Even weighted down, a body will float unless you cut open the insides of his stomach and intestines." Or, I says, "I could go with a boat out into the gulfstream and use explosives in order to destroy the body completely."

OLSEN: Did you know at that time where this assassination attempt was to be undertaken in Florida?

STURGIS: No, sir; I again --knowing how agents work because I in turn have trained some people as far as intelligence was concerned; there is such a thing called compartmentation, and even though I was willing to go on this assassination,at that time I did not want to know who the person was in case if I did not do the assassination and someone else did the assassination, at least if it was uncovered that I would not be brought in as some one who knew of the conspiracy to assassinate someone here if it was in the United States or a foreign country.

OLSEN: Frank, did anything further transpire about this assassination? Other than this second conversation with Barker?

STURGIS: No, sir. Nothing came about because I nailed him to the wall, telling Barker that I would want someone much higher than he who would identify himself, his position with the company, and then I would do the operation.

OLSEN: Did anybody ever contact you then who was higher in the company?

STURGIS: No, sir. No one, but I still maintained my friendship with Barker throughout these years.

OLSEN: So that ended the matter with respect to assassinations?

STURGIS:Yes, sir.

(end of first tape)

OLSEN: All right, here we go back on record. And let the record show that Mr. Roethe has just recently re-entered the office and is now present for the rest of the conference. Jim, in order that your voice get picked up properly on this thing, would you move closer -- pick a chair that is a little closer to the mike.

Continuing then, Frank, did you ever have any further contact with anyone who you believed had any connection whatever with the Central Intelligence Agency about an assassination?

STURGIS: No, sir. Maucho Barker was the only one at that time. Now, Maucho asked me to help some other leaders who naturally were in touch with him. You must understand that because he asked me -- you can understand his position; his position was political under Eduardo; as I said before, E. Howard Hunt or Eduardo was a political officer with CIA with the planning of the Bay of Pigs invasion.

OLSEN: Well, what I'm getting at is: Did anybody ever contact you--that is, anybody who had any connection whatever with the CIA, contact you about an assassination after the one that you have just described to us?

STURGIS: In the United States, No, sir.

OLSEN: H w about outside the United States?

STURGIS: Well, there is a very thin line here. I have discussed assassinations of several top Cuban political and military leaders with the Havana Station.

OLSEN: When you say with the Havana Station, who in the Havana Station?

STURGIS: Well, with the United States Embassy, Colonel Nichols.

OLSEN: This was while you were still in Cuba? --

STURGIS: Yes, sir. --

OLSEN: Before leaving there in June 1959?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. That's in the first part of January and February of 1959.

OLSEN: Well, these were all discussed with us yesterday on the record when you described to us the discussions that took place among officials of the Cuban Air Force and Cuban Army about plans to assassinate Fidel Castro, Raul Castro, and Che Guevara?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: And people of their entourage.

STURGIS: Yes, sir..

OLSEN: And you described yesterday some exercises that were worked up, plans that were drawn up with respect to possible places to perform the assassinations?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: And then you described to us yesterday the fact that Colonel Nichols had on the occasions when you had discussed it with him --- Colonel Nichols had urged you to hold off on any such assassinations.

STURGIS: Right.

OLSEN: Now, in addition to those discussions that took place in Cuba early in 1959, when you were an officer of the Cuban Air Force, and the discussions that you had with Bernard Barker sometime in 1961 about a possible assassination of some unnamed person at an unnamed location, have you ever had any other discussions with anybody whatever associated with the United States Government about assassinations?

STURGIS: No, sir; not that I can remember at this time.

OLSEN: You mentioned to me when we talked over the telephone, Frank, that you had had some contact with or some relationship with a planned assassination of Premier Castro in New York. What was that that you were referring to?

STURGIS: There was a time--I don't remember the exact date--that Fidel was in New YOrk; there was a conspiracy or at least talk of a conspiracy to want to kill him. Now as far as CIA is concerned, I don't believe that they were involved or any agents were involved in that conspiracy.wanting to assassinate Fidel.

OLSEN: Was this then something that was discussed among elements of the Cuban exiles in Florida?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. New York and Florida.

OLSEN: Did you have any contact or know of any contact whatever in connection with such discussions of assassinating Premier Castro in New YOrk-- did you have any contact whatever with anybody in the Government of the United States?

STURGIS: That is very difficult to answer, Mr. Olsen, because of the dates.involved. I would think that I had contact with the Agency, but again I will state that whether they knew about or were involved in any conspiracy myself I do not know.

OLSEN: Well, when you say you had some contact with somebody from the Agency, did you have some contact with somebody from the Agency about such an assassination?

STURGIS: No, sir. No, I did not.

OLSEN: Was there any contact that you have had of any nature relating to any assassination any place with any official of the United States Government, other than the ones that you have already described to me?

[off the record]

OLSEN: All right, we are going back on the record again. Mr. Sturgis having said he was having difficulty thinking about exactly what answer he would give to the question that was posed because he didn't want to use up tape time while he was engaged in his thinking process. He has--while we have been off the record--explored the subject with us further and is now prepared to answer the question. Go ahead, Frank.

STURGIS: After that meeting with Barker, I, as far as I know, with the Cuban friends of mine who were working with the company or who was working under the company, there was a great deal of talk among the Cubans about wanting to assassinate Fidel Castro in New York, inside of Cuba, or in Latin America because Fidel did make several trips. There were talk, but as far as I know I don't know if CIA sponsored any of the Cubans in any attempt to kill Fidel or finance them in any attempt to kill him, nor supported any attempt by the Cubans to want to kill him, or whether these Cubans were simply patriots or were working for or associated with CIA.

OLSEN: You don't know then, Frank, whether any of this conversation about killing Fidel Castro was initiated or promoted or sponsored in any fashion by the Central Intelligence Agency?

STURGIS: I do not. No, sir.

OLSEN: Okay. Now, was there any other discussions about assassinations that you could tell us about that you participated in or knew of, other than what you have already described to us?

STURGIS: No, sir. At this point I cannot think of any. other attempt or discussion in any other assassination attempt on any one.

OLSEN: Did you ever have any conversation with anybody about assassinating President Kennedy?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Did you ever have any conversation with anyone about assassinating Attorney General, or later, Senator Robert Kennedy?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Did you ever have any conversation about assassinating Martin Luther King or any other legislative or executive or public figure in the United States?

STURGIS: No, sir.

[End of Tape #2]

OLSEN: All right, we are beginning belt No. 3 of this interview with Frank Sturgis on Friday, April 4, 1975. Frank, you have just told us that you have never had any conversations with anybody relating to the assassination of President Kennedy or any other political or other public figure in the United States. Is that correct?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Did you have any part whatever in planning or carrying out the assassination of President Kennedy or any other public figure of the United States?

STURGIS: I have not been involved in any of that, sir.

OLSEN: Were you in Dallas at any time in November 1963?

STURGIS: I don't recall, sir, but I do know one thing I was not in Dallas on November--I believe it was--November 22, 1963, when President Kennedy was asaassinated.

OLSEN: Where were you on that day?

STURGIS: I was at home in Miami.

OLSEN: Were you literally at home, or were you at work?

STURGIS: I remember, sir, that I saw the assassination of President Kennedy on television.

OLSEN: Now, of course, it had been taped on television; so you could have seen it anytime during that day or the succeeding days. It was replayed many times on television, wasn't it?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Where were you when you first heard that President Kennedy had been shot.

STURGIS: At my home.

OLSEN: Who was with you in your home at that time?

STURGIS: My wife, Mrs. Janet Sturgis; my mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Hunt; and I believe, my nephew, James Hunt.

OLSEN: And, is your mother-in-law alive today?

STURGIS: No, sir, she is dead.

OLSEN: When did she die?

STURGIS: You will have to call my wife. My mother-in-law lived with me for several years and offhand I forget the exact date that she died.

OLSEN: Now, the shooting of the President in Dallas on November 22, 1963, occurred at about 1:30 in the afternoon Miami time, can you tell us what you were doing at home on a Friday at 1:30, when the news first came that the President had been shot?

STURGIS: No, sir, I couldn't. All I know is that I was home at that --

OLSEN: What kind of a job did you have at that time?

STURGIS: 1963 would be very difficult for me at the present time to just remember what I was doing in 1963 --

OLSEN: Were you selling used cars at that time?

STURGIS: I really don't know at this time. It is possible because I was involved through the years in selling used cars.

OLSEN: How did you first get the news that the President had been shot?

STURGIS: On television.

OLSEN: And did you remain at home the rest of the day?

STURGIS: Well I was at home for that day.

OLSEN: But I said, did you remain at home for the rest of the day after getting the news?

STURGIS: I'm sorry. Yes, sir, I did.

OLSEN: And were there anybody else who was aware of the fact that you were at home that day other than your wife, your mother-in-law, and your wife's nephew?

STURGIS: To the best that I can remember, sir, I believe they were the only ones -- I'm not too sure if anyone else stopped by the house or anything.

OLSEN: Do you recall calling anybody or talking to anybody that day by telephone or in person?

STURGIS: Well, not exactly, because everyone was upset in the house because of the assassination.

OLSEN: Were you ever taken into custody by any police in Dallas?

STURGIS: No, sir. Never.

OLSEN: Have you ever visited the scene of the assassination of President Kennedy in Dallas?

STURGIS: No, sir. Never have.

OLSEN: Have you turned over to us, Mr. Sturgis, a series of some 30 to 35 photographs taken of yourself in the late 1950's and early 1960's for purposes of identification of what you looked like in those days?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Do we have your permission to have those photographs copied and analyzed to determine whether there is any correspondence between your appearance at that time and the appearance of certain persons who were taken into custody in Dallas, Texas, on November 22, 1963?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. You have my permission.

ROETHE: Have those photographs been dated by you on the back of each photograph?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. These photographs have been dated to the best of my knowledge. They should be the correct date or approximately that date.

OLSEN: There are several instances, Frank, in which a date shows on the print itself, where you have separately identified the year in which the photograph was taken on the back of the photograph. Is that correct?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: And would those pictures where the date is shown on the front, wouldthe date shown on the front be reasonably close to the date on which the pictures were taken?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Would they be generally within six months or less of the date that the photographs were taken?

STURGIS: I would think so; yes, sir.

OLSEN: Frank, we have handed to you for your examination a series of five photographs which have been marked as "Groden Exhibits 9A, 9B, 9C, 9D and 9E" depicting certain persons who were being accompanied by police in Dallas, Texas, as they were walking along in the general vicinity of the Texas School Book Depository; can you tell us whether any of those photographs show you?

STURGIS: The people in the photograph that I have seen were not me.

OLSEN: Did you recognize any of the people in the photographs?

STURGIS: No, sir, I did not.

OLSEN: Can you tell us whether in your opinion any of those photographs show E. Howard Hunt?

STURGIS: Not that I know, sir, because at that time I did not know E. Howard Hunt.

[Off the record]

OLSEN: We have again bean off the record for a few moments while I have been thinking about the next line of inquiry or whether there is in fact anything else that we would like to talk to Frank Sturgis about. And we've concluded that we are about finished with the interview, but Mr. Sturgis has indicated that he would like to make a statement to us about his willingness to submit himself to a polygraph dealing with certain subjects that we have covered in this interview. Would you go ahead, Frank, and make whatever statement you want to make on that subject.

STURGIS: Yes, sir, Mr. Olsen, I am willing to take a polograph on the subject of either conspiracy on my part or the attempt on the attempt to assassination of President Kennedy, Martin Luther King, Robert Kennedy, or any official of the United States Government. Plus, I am willing to take a polygraph on what I have just told you about Bernie Barker asking me about an assassination attempt.

OLSEN: You're talking about these two conversations now that you had with Bernie Barker in which -- in about 1961 -- he approached you about your willingness to perform an assassination on some unknown person at some unknown place?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. I'll take a polygraph on that too, if necessary.

OLSEN: Is there anything else, Frank, that you would like to reveal to the Commission, that you would like to talk to the Commission about, relating to the activities of the Central Intelligence Agency in any respect whatever?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. I would like to make this statement. I think that there are elements in this country who are trying to destroy the Central Intelligence Agency. I believe in order for a country to have some defense or to protect our national security we do need an agency like Central Intelligence Agency. I do feel that there may be elements within Central Intelligence Agency who probably who have exceeded their orders and so forth, that may have went off on some things of their own that probably either their Station Chief or sometimes the Case Officer or anyone higher than whoever the people are that may have or would want to do certain illegal activities.

OLSEN: Okay. We are going to have to break again here because we are at the end of another belt on the dictating unit, but I do want to come back to one other question that I want to ask you on another case.

[end of Belt No. 3]

OLSEN: Frank, we are now beginning tape No. 4, or belt No. 4, here on this interview. And I would like to go into the subject a little bit further about any connections that you may have had with the assassination of President Kennedy.

First, let me ask you, have you ever in your life met Lee Harvey Oswald?

STURGIS: Not that I can remember, sir.

OLSEN: Do you know whether you had any contact with him in Florida?

STURGIS: Not that I can remember, sir.

OLSEN: Do you ever recall having had any contacts with somebody by the name of Jack Ruby--either in the United States, Cuba, or elsewhere?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Jack Ruby, I understand that his real name was Rubenstein; did you ever meet anybody in Cuba or in Florida by the name of Jack Rubenstein, or Jake Rubenstein?

STURGIS: Not that I can remember sir.

OLSEN: Have you ever in your life met Clay Shaw of New Orleans ?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Have you ever met a man by the name of David Ferry of New Orleans?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Or David Ferry or Clay Shaw from any place else?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Did you ever have any contacts with anybody at 544 Camp Street or that vicinity in New Orleans?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Did you ever visit anybody related to the Cuban Revolutionary Movement in New Orleans?

STURGIS: In New Orleans, No, sir.

OLSEN: Have you ever been to New Orleans?

STURGIS: Yes, sir, I have. Several times.

OLSEN: And do you know whether you were in New Orleans at any time in 1962 or 1963?

STURGIS: I can't remember, sir. I don't recall the dates.

OLSEN: What was the occasion for your being in New Orleans?

STURGIS: I believe once or twice in leaving the country, one time I believe going to Panama, --

OLSEN: That is, you just flew to New Orleans in order to catch a flight to Panama?

STURGIS: To Panama. A direct flight to Panama. Also a direct flight to Guatamala when I went there to visit President Udios (?).

OLSEN: And, on either of those occasions did you go into the City of New Orleans or did you just stay at the airport between flights?

STURGIS: I stayed at a motel, which I believe was one of the largest motels in New Orleans. I did go into the French Quarter in New Orleans one time--the date I don't remember. But it was on one of these visits.

OLSEN: Was it just for an evening on the town, or what?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Just for social contact?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. Because New Orleans is a famous city in the French Quarter and I wanted to at least if I had the time at that time at the motel to visit the French Quarter.

OLSEN: Did you ever make contact with or confer with anybody relating to the Cuban Revolutionary Movement or any other Cuban anti-Castro groups in New Orleans?

STURGIS: No, sir. I didn't.

OLSEN: Did you ever have any contact with an organization known as the "Fair Play for Cuba Committee"?

STURGIS: No, sir. At least not that I can remember.

OLSEN: Did you have any connection at all with the prosecutions initiated in New Orleans by District Attorney Jim Garrett?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Were you ever called as a witness?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Were you ever interviewed or had your deposition taken in that matter?

STURGIS: By them; no, sir.

OLSEN: By anybody in cases involving charges brought against Clay Shaw?

STURGIS: Oh, no, sir. I was thinking about the FBI visting me several days after the assassination.

OLSEN: Were you contacted and visited by the FBI shortly after the assassination of President Kennedy?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Who contacted you?

STURGIS: Two Special Agents from the Bureau, FBI. I believe one of the agents--if I'm not mistaken--his name was Bob Davis.

OLSEN: And do you know the name of the other one?

STURGIS: Offhand I forget, sir.

OLSEN: And do you know how long after the assassination that that interview took place?

STURGIS: No, sir. I don't; I really don't remember the exact date.

OLSEN: Did they tell you why they were interviewing you?

STURGIS: They wanted to know my whereabouts before, during and after the assassination of President Kennedy.

OLSEN: Did they say why they wanted to know your whereabouts?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. In the friendly(?) discussion that we had there-- I believe it lasted maybe two hours, to two and a half hours-- I asked why that they wanted to speak with me concerning this. And they said, "Well, Frank, we feel that you are one of several persons that is capable of doing this sort of thing."

OLSEN: Why did they think that you were capable of doing this kind of thing?

STURGIS: I really don't know, sir.

ROETHE: Was this interview in Miami?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. It was in Miami at my home. I believe--I'm not sure just where I was living at at that time, sir.

OLSEN: Do you recall having made any statements which were quoted in the Miami newspapers or any Miami newspaper about the assassination of the President?

STURGIS: I may have, sir.

OLSEN: Do you know whether you stated at that time that you knew any of the characters who were involved in the assassination?

STURGIS: I don't remember, sir.

OLSEN: Do you remember at that time stating whether you thought that there was a conspiracy or not a conspiracy in connection with the President's assassination?

STURGIS: I believe that to this day, that there is a possibility that there was a conspiracy to assassinate the President of the United States.

OLSEN: Well, what I'm asking you is do you remember stating at that time to the press or otherwise in Miami that you thought there was a conspiracy?

STURGIS: I would say yes, because I felt that way all along.

OLSEN: Frank, do you have any facts that you would be willing to give us -- or that you know of--that would indicate that there was in fact a conspiracy to assassinate the President?

STURGIS: Well, the only thing that I can add would --what makes me think that there was a conspiracy at that time in assassinating the President was the fact that knowing the political situation in Cuba before Castro and during Castro,with many of the Cubans who supported Batista that were involved and were connected with the crime syndicate, the Cuban crime syndicate, the American crime syndicate, with the Batista government at the same time supporting the Fidel Castro rebels, in order to safeguard not only their position in the crime syndicate --not only to get themselves better situated personally within the rebel groups; if they were successful, I believe that these same people would -- in my experience with them, what I have seen, from the people I was in contact with that came over to the United States into exile, now this is only a small group of people we are talking about--it probably would represent maybe several hundreds of people--many of these people were integrated in the revolutionary forces, the Frende (sp?), or the Revoluntionary Council, the brigade , or whatever you want to call it; this force which CIA supported. Now these same people came here; they got connections with the Central Intelligence Agency; many of them got to be agents. And even to this present day, they are involved in some of the biggest international crime and drug smuggling that is going on in this country.

OLSEN: These elements of the Cuban crime syndicate associated with the Batista government who became exiles in this country --

STURGIS: --who then supported the Castro rebels, who then in turn, when Fidel took over the country, was with the new Cuban government; and then leaving for one reason or another: (1) Fidel wanted to clear out the crime situation there

[interruption-- end of Belt No. 4]

OLSEN: All right. Here we are back on belt No. 5, continuing the interview with Frank Sturgis on Friday the 4th of April. Go ahead Frank. You were just giving us your thoughts with respect to the possibility of a conspiracy to kill President Kennedy.

STURGIS: The same group of people whom I have just said that supported Batista, then the rebels, then Fidel who came into power after January the 1st, for one reason or another--especially Fidel telling me personally "If I'm in this office, I'm going to run all these gangsters, all these crime people out of Cuba" -- which he did; he gave me orders, and I did close up the gambling casinos for ten days in Cuba. These same people then had to turn against him that supported him and had positions as officers, military, and so forth, then had to leave Cuba and came to the United States as refugees.

OLSEN: And they were very hostile to Castro at that point?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. They were very hostile to him because he took away their livelihood.

OLSEN: And they then supported the anti-Castro movement in south Florida and they strongly supported the attempt to overthrow Castro that was involved in the Bay of Pigs operation?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. Many of these men were integrated into CIA, which still maintained contact with the American crime syndicate, especially in Miami Beach.

OLSEN: You are talking about the fact that they--that the Cuban crime syndicate maintained relationships with the American crime syndicate?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: And the Cuban crime syndicate was involved as a part of the anti-Castro movement in south Florida?

STURGIS: Well you must understand that the Cuban crime syndicate was being busted up in Havana because of their close working, not only political but business-like deals that they had with the American syndicate. These people losing their businesses there--the Americans and the Cubans--came into the United States here, which still maintained contact with each other; many of these people because,you must understand, they had friends and contacts in Cuba, CIA needed them to work for them. Many of these people got to be agents for CIA.

OLSEN: You mean sources of information?

STURGIS: Led up to be agents for CIA; as agents because of their contacts inside of Cuba that they had that was part of the underground organization, part of the business life that they had there, which part of them was the Cuban crime syndicate.

OLSEN: Now let's move on to what the relationship is between the Cuban crime syndicate and its relation to the American crime syndicate, the anti-Castro movement in south Florida, and the assassination of the President. What is the connection? Do I understand from you, Frank, that after the Bay of Pigs operation that there was a great deal of hostility to President Kennedy and Senator Robert Kennedy on the part of the anti-Castro Cubans in south Florida.

STURGIS: Right. Yes, sir, there was.

OLSEN: And do I understand further that it is your thought that because this anti-Castro movement in south Florida also included a lot of the crime syndicate people from both the United States and Cuba --

STURGIS: Yes, sir. (interrupting)

OLSEN: -that therefore there was a capability as well as motivation for killing President Kennedy.

STURGIS: I believe from the information and discussions that I have had in the Cuban colony that the thing was more against Bobby Kennedy because he was the top law enforcement official in this country, that if --you know like "Hey, if you get rid of Bobby Kennedy, you still got his brother which is President Kennedy." So the thing was to -- the hostility was then put off against President Kennedy.

OLSEN: So assuming that there was both a strong enough motivation on the part of these elements, crime elements within the anti-Castro group, to kill the President and that there was the capability also to do it, do you have any evidence indicating that the killing of President Kennedy in Dallas was actually carried out by people who were involved in this anti-Castro movement in Florida?

STURGIS: Well, my thoughts were, and still is, the fact that there is a good possibility that Cuban and Americans who are part of this crime syndicate, using the Cubans and then setting up possibly a conspiracy--there is a lot of talk of, you know, of wanting to kill Fidel. So if you have to kill Fidel, why not Bobby Kennedy and why not the President of the United States.

OLSEN: But what I am asking you is: Do you know of any facts indicating that the killing of President Kennedy on November 22, 1963, was actually an outgrowth of any planning, conspiracy, or activity of the anti-Castro Cubans?

STURGIS: No, sir, I don't.

OLSEN: Or any other portion of the Cuban community?

STURGIS: No, sir, I don't have any facts on that.

OLSEN: It's just kind of your suspicion, like that -- or speculation?

STURGIS: Yes, sir; there is that possibility.

OLSEN: That because of the feeling, the anti-Kennedy feeling --

STURGIS: Yes, sir. (interrupting)

OLSEN: -- that they could have been involved?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. That they could have been involved because that --they need motive, motivation; and that was the motivation-- that would be the motivation.

OLSEN: Do you have any personal knowledge, or have you ever heard of any contacts between the anti-Castro Cuban element any place in the United States and Lee Harvey Oswald?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Have you ever heard that Lee Harvey Oswald made contact with, was friendly to, or attempted to penetrate any anti-Castro group?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: What is your information on that?

STURGIS: I'm not sure of the group; but there is a group called the "DR" -- the student directorate, which was being financed by CIA, and I believe one of the top officials of that group whom I was in touch with,both the president and lesser officials of/that group, supposedly-- they told me--that Oswald was in the Miami area, tried to penetrate their organization or some of the other Cuban organizations and possibly that he may have tried to make contact with me or spoke with me; to this day, I don't know if this is a fact or if it's not because I can't remember.

OLSEN: Who was the leader of this DR?

STURGIS: I don't recall offhand, sir, because the leaderhip did change-- I believe that it did change, the leadership ...

OLSEN: Who told you that there may have been such attempts by Oswald to penetrate or become involved in the DR?

STURGIS: One of the officials of the DR; I believe they had an office --a home that they used as an office--in the Coral Gables area I believe ..

OLSEN: Do you remember the name of this official?

STURGIS: No, sir, I don't at this time.

OLSEN: Do you know the name of any official of the DR?

STURGIS: Not at this time; no, sir. I was in touch with many Cubans at the time and unless I maintain a personal contact with people continuously, then I would naturally remember the names and so forth.

ROETHE: You mentioned this anti-Castro group, that you thought might have the capability to carry on an assassination, was presently still involved in certain drug smuggling activities and you also indicated that this group was in contact with CIA and was still on occasion doing some work for CIA . Is this right?

STURGIS: There was that possibility at that time. Because you must remember that I have picked up a lot of information by people talking with me and I have never followed through in investigating the type of information I was given by them.

ROETHE: The only implication that I wanted to have you direct your attention to was the implication that perhaps these people, in connection with CIA, were involved in some type of illegal activity, drug smuggling or some other activity of this nature.

STURGIS: Well, let me say this in reference to the CIA; a lot of these people were agents, whether or not in their illegal activities they were agents at that particular time or not, I have no proof of that.

OLSEN: Do you have any reason to believe that in running drug operations or other illegal activities, they were acting on behalf of the CIA?

STURGIS: No, sir.

[End of Tape #5]

OLSEN: All right, Frank, we are beginning Tape No. 6, and it is now about 11:00 am on Friday the 4th of April. Did you ever get interviewed within the last several years by a man by the name of St. George?

STURGIS: I wouldn't exactly call it an interview. But he has been in touch with me.

OLSEN: Did -- Where did you meet with him?

STURGIS: One time at the Holiday Inn --

OLSEN: Where?

STURGIS: This is LeJuene Road at 36th Street on top of the Holiday Inn, which was a restaurant -- if I'm not mistaken he was also checked in to that hotel.

OLSEN: Did you ever talk to him about his interest about writing a book about you?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

ROETHE: This is Miami?

STURGIS: In Miami; yes, sir.

OLSEN: Did you ever authorize him to write a book about you?

STURGIS: I gave him a little typed statement of the fact that I have authorized him to make contact with the different publishing companies, and so forth, to see if they would be interested, in giving me a contract in writing a book.

OLSEN: Did you ever authorize him then to write a book -- an authorized book about you?

STURGIS: No, sir, not for him. He would have to get with me to get the necessary information which it would take;to write a book of my life would take maybe, I would say eight months to a year with the research and information that I would have to supply him.

OLSEN: Did you ever tell him that you wanted to read over an outline or a transcript of his proposed book?

STURGIS: Well, sir, he mentioned that an outline would have to be made in order to present the outline to the publishing company to see if they would be interested in offering me a contract.

OLSEN: Did you ever have any conversation with him about your wanting to see an outline of the book before you authorized him to proceed?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. I asked "Andrew, when are you going to make the outline";because he had to come sit down with me, take notes for an outline--which he never did.

OLSEN: Did he ever tell you that he had prepared an outline?

STURGIS: He told me that he knew enough about my anti-communist activites and about my Cuban activities that he would make an outline to present to the publishing company. I says "fine, but I would want to see the outline." I insisted upon it.

OLSEN: Did he ever tell you that he had made an outline?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. At that time he said that he was going to make an outline; then at later discussions with him by telephone he told me he had made an outline and that one of the companies was interested, that they were prepared to offer me $70,000 if he would come to Miami with a contract and further discussion on that matter.

OLSEN: Did he then come to Miami further to discuss it with you?

STURGIS: Yes, sir; he did.

OLSEN: And where did you meet with him then?

STURGIS: Oh, I forget. I think he came to my home--yes, as a matter of fact, he did come to my home. Then he invited me out to either one short dinner, which we did go, and he showed me the contract; and upon showing me the contract he wanted me to sign, he was very very pushy on the matter. And I told him No that I was not going to sign the contract. I wanted my lawyer, Henry Rothflat, to look over the contract -- plus I wanted to see a copy of the outline that he prepared and I wanted my attorney to look at the copy of the outline. I --

OLSEN: When was this, by the way? (interrupting)

STURGIS: '72, I believe.

OLSEN: Was this after the Watergate break-in?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. After the Watergate break-in. I told him that I had to be very very careful, that I could not speak anything about my Watergate affair because it was an order handed down by Judge Sirica.

OLSEN: Did he tell you that he had prepared an outline?

STURGIS: Yes. Oh, yes.

OLSEN: Did he tell you what had happened to it?

STURGIS: Well, he was -- this was before the outline being taken -- he was being forceful with me and I was getting very angry with him because he was trying to get me to sign the contract, and I told him: No, it had to go to Henry Rothflat; that I would not sign it; plus I want to see the outline; not only that, I want it stipulated in the contract that any information or --you know--the manuscript, that I would have to go over the manuscript, that I would want to at least say what was going to be in the manuscript or not be in the manuscript.

OLSEN: Did he ever tell you that the manuscript had been stolen?

STURGIS: At a later date. He left here; he was irate with me; he talked to me on the telephone from New York; he told me "Oh, my goodness, Frank; while certain things were coming out of the newspapers, this is what happened."

OLSEN: Is it about you?

STURGIS: Oh, yes.

OLSEN: What did he say to you?

STURGIS: I confronted him on that. I called Seymour Hersh up. I told Seymour Hersh "What the hell are you putting in the newspaper about me?" He says "Well, bu -bu St. George's." I don't give a fuck about Andrew St. George." He says "Well, in your outline you stated.." I says "I haven't stated these fucking lies that you are putting in the paper about me." I says "Andrew St. George is a fucking liar, and I told him that on the telephone." He says "Well, I believe you Frank, I believe you." I says "Well, stop that bullshit". Because he mentioned about the break-in of the Chilean Embassy--supposedly that I did the break-in of the Chilean Embassy --

ROETHE: Here in Washington?

STURGIS: In Washington, D. C. I denied it; I told him that I had nothing to do with that; I knew nothing about it; why are you dragging the CIA into this thing? It is absolutely ridiculous.

OLSEN: Did you have any conversation about other mistakes that were appearing in the press about you?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: What other mistakes, or erroneous information did you discuss with Seymour Hersh?

STURGIS: Well, I don't remember at the present time. But most of the stuff that I would think -- you see, I can't remember everything that came out in the article by Seymour Hersh.

OLSEN: What about the article that appeared in 1974 in TRUE Magazine about you, written by Andrew St. George. Have you read that article?

STURGIS: Yes, sir, I have.

OLSEN: Is it an accurate article about you?

STURGIS: Most of the information in that magazine I did not give him. Most of it is lies. And I plan on bringing -- well, as a matter of fact, my lawyer in Miami, Mr. Ellis Rubin, has been instructed by me to bring a libel suit against TRUE MAGAZINE and Andrew St. George. I have written letters through my lawyer to TRUE MAGAZINE stating the utter lies of that article that came out, that had been in this article by Andrew St. George.

OLSEN: Was it stated in the TRUE MAGAZINE article that you told Andrew St. George that you had met Howard Hunt back in 1969.

STURGIS: I have never told Andrew St. George --

OLSEN: I am asking you whether that appeared in the TRUE MAGAZINE article?

STURGIS: I don't recall at this time.

OLSEN: If it appeared in the TRUE MAGAZINE article, was it true or false?

STURGIS: It was false, sir.

OLSEN: If it appeared in the TRUE MAGAZINE article that you had told Andrew St. George that you had discussed disposal and killings with Mr. Liddy, was that true or false?

STURGIS: That is false, sir.

OLSEN: IF it was stated in the TRUE MAGAZINE article that you had made a statement to the effect that Howard Hunt was a professional and that he had participated in several successful disposal operations, was that true or false?

STURGIS: False, sir. As a matter of fact, the day I received that magazine I took it to Wilfredo Navarro at Dodge Island in Miami, and I was very very hot about it. A newspaper reporter came over to me and took -- not a newspaper reporter--a T.V. reporter came over, and I categorically said on television that-- this was on Channel 4--(some one said 10 from the sideline, probably Navarro) Channel 10 and told them that this article was a lie and that I was going to bring a possible libel suit against the magazine and Andrew St. George.

OLSEN: Did you tell Andrew St. George that you were an old friend of E. Howard Hunt?

STURGIS: Never, sir. I may have told him that I was a friend of E. Howard Hunt at that particular time, which was in between trial.

OLSEN: Did you ever tell Andrew St. George that you had taken on the name of "Sturgis" from a character in the Hunt book written in 1949, called " Bimini Run" ?

STURGIS: No, sir. The first time I saw that book "Bimini Run" was two officers who arrested me in the Watergate. at Democratic Headquarters. They had the book. They did show it to me. I forget where and I was surprised. I did look it over. One of the chapters. And I was very very surprised that the character was Hank Sturgis, and I had a big laugh about it.

OLSEN: Was that purely a coincidence?

STURGIS: That was pure coincidence, and the first time I ever seen that book or heard about that book in my life.

OLSEN: I believe you testified to us previously that you had taken on the name of Sturgis as your legal name sometime in the 1960's after your mother had remarried a man by the name of Sturgis.

STURGIS: Ralph Sturgis. Yes, sir.

[end of Tape #6]

OLSEN: All right, we are beginning belt No. 7. Frank, did you state to Andrew St. George that if you had to do any killing that you would use your bare hands and a piece of wire.

STURGIS: That's hogwash. I never stated that. I may have stated in talking with Andrew about my activities in the Marine Corps and Edson's Raiders, which was the first raider battalion, that part of my training was for instance sneaking up on victims using the stiletto which we were equipped with to operate behind enemy lines, to go ashore in rubber boats, and so forth. I did receive that training to how to kill people with. Piano wire with this stiletto, sniper, telescopes, etc. -- that training I did receive in the South Pacific.

OLSEN: This was fairly common training received by people in the military services, or certain branches of the military services, during World War II?

STURGIS: I would say certain units in certain--for instance in the Marine Corps and the Army we had certain units that did this type of work; not everyone received this type of training.

OLSEN: All right, Frank. I think we are about near the end of this interview. But I did want to follow up on one other item. You said that you had had a telephone conversation, I believe, with Seymour Hersh about certain inaccuracies that were appearing in the press on articles he had written.

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Did he relate to you that he had received this information from Andrew St. George?

STURGIS: What happened, sir, as I remember calling him up late at night at the NEW YORK TIMES--this is after I spoke with Andrew St. George on the telephone and I called Andrew St. George every name in the book and Andrew told me "Well, Frank, I don't know how Seymour Hersh got this information "--because I accused Andrew St. George of making these lies that was supposedly part of his outline. I pinned him down good. "Did you put these lies in the outline; because if you did, that is not for me, and that is no good and I will not sign a contract with you; you are a son-of-a-bitch, you're a liar, and I have no confidence; it's the end of you with me in writing any type of book because you cannot be trusted. You are a liar." He says "Frank, look, I made an outline" this and that and "I did not give it to Seymour Hersh. What happened I gave it to one of the publishing companies and somehow Seymour Hersh did get this outline. He stole the outline. I am thinking right now whether or not I should sue the NEW YORK TIMES and Seymour Hersh. "That's what I should do, I --

ROETHE: You're quoting Andrew St. George?

STURGIS: Andrew St. George. For stealing. Well I says "If you don't sue him, I may go ahead and sue him for printing this shit that you have--and I may include you because I did not tell you all this bullshit. Where did you get this?"

OLSEN: What were the things in particular that you were angry about--the lies that were appearing in the paper about you? Do you remember which particular items aroused you the most?

STURGIS: I don't remember at this time because I was under so much pressure at that time because of the trial, because of all the publicity that was coming out, and because if my name was connected with anything especially--you know, I had to keep quiet, I could not counter of this publicity. I felt at that time--from what I know today, that the same people that we worked for were in turn trying to give us a bad reputation, trying to smear us in order to protect themselves from what I see what happened up to today from what I know. So, naturally I could not counter, and I was deadly afraid to talk with any newspaper people. And here Seymour Hersh came out with certain articles which I don't recall what they were today, making statements about at least one I can remember was the Chilean Embassy supposedly that CIA had something to do with the break-in and that I was the person who broke into the Chilean Embassy in Washin ton, D.C. And I confronted --I called Seymour Hersh after I spoke with Andrew St George late at night and told him "Who gave you this information? Why did you go ahead and print all these things? I don't know anything about what's in this outline that this man Andrew St. George wrote, and so forth. Who gave you this? Where did you get it at? He tells me you stole this outline. It is not my outline because it is not me telling Andrew St. George all this bullshit that's in there. How could you print these things? Why didn't you call me and talk with me personally to confirm or deny some of these things that supposedly is outlined. And you're saying directly that I said this."

OLSEN: Well, did Seymour Hersh then tell you where he got the information?

STURGIS: No, sir, because I was very hot at this and Seymour Hersh told me that it was in the outline--yes, he told me, I believe he told me, that it was in the outline that Andrew made up, supposedly that we both made together. And I told Seymour Hersh that I did not make no outline up with Andrew St. George. I don't know what's in it.

OLSEN: Do you know whether at any time while you were being interviewed by Andrew St. George he was making a recording of the conversation?

STURGIS: No, sir. I have never been to his room. He has never taken any notes or anything. I continually asked Andrew "When are you going to sit down with me to take notes for an outline?"

OLSEN: But you don't know for sure whether he was surreptitiously recording?

STURGIS: No, sir. Because I know many times--or at least this one time when I was talking with him, going back to my Castro days--and that's the only thing I have ever discussed with him, is my Castro days. Never anything about Watergate because ofthe order that Judge Sirica handed down not to discuss the case. But he did open up his briefcase; he had papers and so forth in his brief case.

OLSEN: Did you ever see any recording apparatus in his brief case?

STURGIS: No, sir. Not in his brief case.

OLSEN: Did he ever tell you that he was recording his conversation with you?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: Do you have anything else that you would like to offer to the Commission here relating to your connections with the Central Intelligence Agency?

STURGIS: Well, I do have some notes here when we get off the record to see if I got anything else I can add.

OLSEN: All right. Why don't we go off the record then, and you look through your notes and then you can tell us whether you have anything further you would like to add. Shall we do that?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

ROETHE: I would like to ask one more question. You indicated at the very beginning of our interview yesterday that you would tell us the truth, in whatever you answered and that there may be occasions when you might want to hold certain things back, and that you would tell us if you were doing that. I wonder if there has been any instance now where you held anything back from us, not by telling us a lie, but by simply not telling us everything that there is to tell.

STURGIS: Where it concerns the conspiracy or assassination attempts on the President of the United States, Martin Luther King, Bobby Kennedy or any American government official, I have told the truth; I have not held back anything whatsoever.

ROETHE: How about connections with CIA and their assassination attempts of foreign officials, such as the Cuban official?

STURGIS: To the best of my knowledge, I believe I have went over most of everything, and unless I, you know, go ahead and rack my brain, I may have forgot or in the --

OLSEN: Let me interrupt, Frank. Is there anything that you have intentionally withheld from us now about the whole subject matter that we have discussed with you in this interview?

STURGIS: No, sir. Let me think now --

OLSEN: Is it true now that what you are saying to us is that if you have omitted anything, it is because you just simply haven't remembered it?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Have you tried to be completely candid with us about the whole subject matter that we have covered with you in this interview?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. I have been candid and honest with everything that we have discussed.

OLSEN: And there is nothing that you have intentionally withheld?

STURGIS: No, sir. Nothing at all.

[Off the record]

OLSEN: Now there was one subject a while ago that you wanted to discuss with us in private; and you have discussed it with us in private, have you not?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Okay.

STURGIS: And there are a few more things that I would like --

OLSEN: All right, let's go off the record while you have an opportunity to review your notes and records that you brought with you and then you will tell us whether there is something else that you would like to add.

STURGIS: Right.

[end of Belt #7]

OLSEN: Mr. Sturgis, we've had a period here during which I've been having a conversation with Mr. Navarro, who accompanied you here on this trip, and now you have had an opportunity to look over your notes. Do you have anything else that you would like to tell us about that bears directly upon activities of the CIA within the United States?

STURGIS: Yes,sir. Mr. Sam Jenis and myself discussed an operation that I participated in,in 1968.

OLSEN: And when did you discuss this with Mr. Jenis?

STURGIS: It was in 1967 that I discussed this with Sam.

OLSEN: And what was that discussion; would you tell us about it.

STURGIS: To do a commando-type operation into Cuba for the purpose of releasing political prisoners in some of the concentration camps in the south part of Cuba.

OLSEN: Did you conduct that kind of an operation?

STURGIS: Yes,sir. I prepared for that operation in 1967 by going with Geraldine Sharma (?sp), who at one time worked as an agent for the United States Government, went to Caracas, Venezuela, where both of us had meetings with President Leon of Venezuela.

OLSEN: And was this operation paid for by Jenis?

STURGIS: No, sir. Money was obtained through certain private sources, approximately $5,000, for this particular trip. While I was in Venezuela, I was in touch with the local Cuban colony there, one was the medical committee which the doctor was in charge of--at the present time I forget what his name is--also, the Venezuelan labor movement, I was in touch with there who was supposedly to support when the operation did in fact come off to support the operation.

OLSEN: Did you have any reason to believe that this was an activity sponsored by, directed by, organized by, the Central Intelligence Agency?

STURGIS: Yes,sir, with my close working association with Sam Jenis.

OLSEN: Do you know whether Sam Jenis had any interests or activities other than acting as an agent for the CIA?

STURGIS: No, sir; at that time, no sir. I did return back to the United States prepared for this operation; made advertisement in the local paper in Fort Lauderdale, I believe the newspaper was called the Sun Sentinel or possibly the Fort Lauderdale News. I received thousands -- not thousands, I would go ahead and safely say hundreds of letters. I gave --

OLSEN: What were you advertising for?

STURGIS: For men who would like to be involved in adventure, good pay, etc. I left an address in this advertisement to get in touch with attorney Ray Sanstrom .(?sp), who had his office in Fort Lauderdale; he is a practicing attorney then, is now, and also on the side he was a pilot. Mr. Ray Sanstrom, I believe the company that he was associated with was called the Southern Air Transport Company. I have an address here and I'm not sure whether it's Southern Air Transport Company or his office number, which is 429 South Andrews Avenue, Fort Lauderdale, Florida. Southern Air Transport supposedly is a CIA front company.

OLSEN: Well, did you arrange with this attorney to receive the calls that came in in response to that ad?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. I made the arrangements prior that all calls or letters, preferably letters, of intent to be turned over to me for screening-- to screen these applicants for the coming operation.

OLSEN: Did you understand that this attorney was occupying offices at Southern Air Transport?

STURGIS: No, sir. I understand that possibly the address which I just gave you on Andrews Avenue may be his law firm's address, but Southern Air Transport is a CIA front.

OLSEN: But what does Southern Air Transport have to do with that ad?

STURGIS: Nothing with the ad, sir. What Southern Air Transport has to do with Ray Sanstrom is the fact that he was associated with Southern Air Transport.

OLSEN: In other words, he did legal work for them; or was he employed with them?

STURGIS: He was, I believe, employed by Southern Air Transport. If that is in fact the correct name, he was employed, I assume, with this particular ...

OLSEN: Was the operation then to free these prisoners in Cuba ever pulled off?

STURGIS: That is what I was supposed to tell the recruits-- the people that were to be accepted in this coming operation, that it was going to be a commando-type operation to release political prisoners in the concentration camps.

OLSEN: Was that ever done?

STURGIS: No, sir.

OLSEN: What was done with all these people who responded to the ad?

STURGIS: I screened the people; I spoke with them; and I picked twelve men out of this group, which one of them up to this day here I had working out of the country as an undercover agent for the United States Government.

OLSEN: Wait a minute here now -- wait a minute, you said you have had one of these people operating as an undercover agent for the United States Government ever since?

STURGIS: Up to this day, yes, sir.

OLSEN: Well,who's that?

STURGIS: Mr. Jerry Buchanan.

OLSEN: And where is he operating as an undercover agent for the United States Government?

STURGIS: He operated in Mexico and in the United States.

OLSEN: Did you turn him over to the United States Government in some way ?

STURGIS: Yes, sir, I did.

OLSEN: Who did you turn him over to?

STURGIS: I turned this man over to -- well, I'll have to go back -- Jerry Buchanan was the person who came to me and told me about the IRA, the Irish Republic Agents, who in fact were looking for someone to do assassinations attempts in the United States because of informants that they had within their organization of the United STates giving information to Government agencies concerning guns being exported out of the United States.

OLSEN: I don't understand what the connection is between Buchanan being recruited as a result of that ad that you put in?

STURGIS: I knew Jerry for years. Jerry did see the ad and did make contact with me and naturally I accepted him as a recruit because then because of the ad.

OLSEN: How did it happen then that he got turned over to the United States Government?

STURGIS: At a later date I have used up to this time here -- since 1974, in the year 1974, after Watergate when I came out of prison, I promised Jerry with the information that he gave me concerning the IRA, the Irish Republican Army, concerning the North Korean agents that were in Mexico and also the drugs, I immediately tried to get in touch with the Central Intelligence Agency. On January 25, 1974, I was in touch with Mr. McVan, that is his CIA code name, of the Miami station and his telephone at that time was 445-3658. I called him at my bank at 95th Street, N.W. 7th Avenue in Miami, Florida, at approximately 10:35 A.M. He gave me a description of himself after I told him my name was Frank Sturgis. He named the Holiday Inn at LeJeune Road and 36th Street, where we were supposed to meet at 11:00 A.M. in the lobby of the hotel. Naturally I waited for an hour, and the bum never showed up.

OLSEN: Frank, I'm having a hellva time trying to understand what the hell this is all about? I thought you started telling me about the ad that you placed in the Fort Lauderdale paper in 1967 to recruit people ..

STURGIS: '68

OLSEN: --'68, to recruit some people to perform an operation to free political prisoners from a concentration camp in Cuba?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Now, did you recruit anybody at that time? Did you recruit 12 people?

STURGIS: Yes, sir, I did recruit recruit ....

OLSEN: You got a lot of responses to the ad ?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: You picked 12 people out of it?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Was one of those people Buchanan?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Did you use him in any project with respect to Cuba?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. This was a 1968 project.

OLSEN: All right. Did you actually go ahead with the project to free people from Cuba?

STURGIS: I went with the project.

OLSEN: Did you successfully complete the project?

STURGIS: No, sir. We did not successfully complete the project.

OLSEN: Did you do anything other than engage in some planning ?

STURGIS: Yes, sir, I did.

OLSEN: Did you actually attempt to go into Cuba to free these prisoners?

STURGIS: Yes, sir, I did. I made the attempt to go -- let me say, not into Cuba -- what happened, sir, is I sent the men into Mexico, into Guadalajara, Mexico, all twelve men. I then at one time did arrive in Guadalajara,Mexico.

(End of Tape #8)

OLSEN: All right, Frank, we're back on the record with the next belt here. You were talking about this effort in 1968 with respect to freeing political prisoners. I understand that the contact that led to this venture being undertaken was the contact that you had from Jenis?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: And that was the connection with the CIA?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: Did you receive any money from Jenis?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: How much money did you receive from Jenis in connection with that project?

STURGIS: $2,000.

OLSEN: Now you recruited some people, sent them to Mexico--to Guadalajara--you made a trip yourself down to -- where was it, Venezuela?

STURGIS: Well, that's before. That was 1967 in reference to this type of an operation.

OLSEN: All right. Anyway, did an actual attempt take place to go into Cuba to free any political prisoners?

STURGIS: Let me say this, sir, because you do not know the complete operation. I was instructed to tell the men that this was going to be a commando-type operation; when I left --before I left-- I was the last person to leave Miami -- to Mexico, Sam told me "Frank, you are to hijack-- or rather you are to meet another ship off the coast of Yucatan Peninsula, rendezvous with that ship; this ship will have information on the arrivals and the leaving of certain ships in the Western Hemisphere." I was supposed with the assistance of this ship -- was supposed to hijack a Russian vessel, and in hijacking this Russian vessel, I was supposed to go off the coast of Venezuela, receive assistance from the local Cuban colony there, plus the officials that I was in touch with of the Venezuelan LaborParty, to assist and use the hostages and the ship to approach the Cuban Government for the release of Cuban political prisoners. It was a known fact at that time that Fidel would not release the prisoners. That would be a propaganda victory, in one aspect to this operation. But the main overall idea was that when Fidel refused to release the prisoners, it was then going to be where we were going to ask for the release of the USS PUEBLO and the American crew that was captured and being held by the North Koreans. This was to create -- the capture of this Russian vessel was to create an international incident, possibly put world pressure on the Russians to release the American crew members and the USS PUEBLO.

OLSEN: Did that ever take place -- did you ever meet that ship off the Mexican coast?

STURGIS: No, sir. I went off the Mexican coast; I went into a small town called Progresso (?sp); at the time in 1968, (Mr. Jack Stuart) 03 was the Station Chief -- CIA Station Chief in Merida, Mexico. I did rent--lease--a boat in Progresso, Mexico; I went off the coast with this boat; I gave a written document to the captain of the boat that if this boat and the crew and myself and the members of the group were captured either by any foreign government, that he would have a document signed by me saying that we did in fact hijack him and the boat. The boat was leased for one week, ...

OLSEN: Was it paid for?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. It was paid in advance.

OLSEN: How big a boat was this?

STURGIS: I'm not sure how big the boat was at this time, but the records are -- the Government has about this operation and the boat and the people involved.

OLSEN: Was this your understanding that this was all a CIA venture?

STURGIS: Yes, sir, that was my understanding. I did get the boat; did put the guns and the equipment and the men aboard this boat. When I left Progresso I came at night offshore close to an encampment or an area where the men were waiting to come aboard. We did leave, went up to where Yucatan Peninsula was on the other side of an island called Cossamo (?sp) Island, south of Cossamo Island, or at least southeast of Cossamo Island was supposed to be the rendezvous spot. This boat I was supposed to rendezvous with did not show up. On the second day of not showing up, bad weather did come about in the area and in trying to get close to the shore, we did run aground on some coral reefs where the propeller, the rudder was bent, the ship was leaking badly, I had to throw some of the things overboard. We stayed all night on this coral reef ...

OLSEN: (interrupting) It was all ventured and scrapped?

STURGIS: Well, no sir. No, sir , the whole venture was not scrapped. Because of the damage to the boat, because the rendezvous was on the second day--was late in rendezvousing with the other boat which did not show up, I proceeded off the coast of Belize, which is the capital of British Honduras; I put the men ashore, and the guns and equipment ashore in a small atoll. I proceeded with a skeleton crew to go into Belize to fix the damages of the boat. While we were in Belize two hours, the authorities there came aboard and took us to their headquarters for questioning.

OLSEN: Was this Mexican authorities?

STURGIS: No, sir. This was British Honduras --

OLSEN: Honduras authorities?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. This was the British authorities. We were interrogated; at least, I was interrogated by the Chief of Intelligence there wanting to know what we were doing in the area, and so forth. We were immediately arrested; they somehow found out--not through me--but found out that the men and guns were put ashore on an atoll. They went out with airplanes and ships, got the men off the atoll, came in. We stayed there approximately 9, 10, 11 days -- I forget offhand -- went to trial, deported out of Belize to the Miami area. I was contacted by the American Consul there. He was very irate. There were a lot of newspaper articles that we came in from Guatemala to invade Belize. I assured the authorities in Belize--the Chief of Intelligence, that that was not the case. If you remember, or you may not remember, there was some talk of friction between Guatemala and the British Honduras because Guatemala's claiming British Honduras as their territory. And they felt that we were sent over by CIA from Guatemala to stir up some kind of goings-on, and so forth. I did not tell them of the actual operation because the men did not know about the actual operation--only myself knew the actual operation. I told the men, at a later date, to tell the truth to the authorities of how they were recruited and for what reason they were recruited for.

OLSEN: Did the whole operation get started again, then?

STURGIS: No, sir. I believe the operation was aborted. That is one reason why after two hours in-port that we were picked up and charges put against us. The boat and the crew was sent back to Mexico. My men and myself were then deported after a trial under a judge there and sent back to Miami, and that was the end of the operation.

OLSEN: Is there anything else that you would like to tell us?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. I was -- well I gave you the name of January 25, 1974, about my contact with CIA in Miami concerning national security business --

OLSEN: (interrupting) Where you attempted to contact them and where they wouldn't talk to you, and these CIA men did not even show up at the hotel?

STURGIS: That is true. I --

OLSEN: Is there anything else?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. I am going to give you a list of names here -- go over it briefly, of people I have been in contact with in the past who were, I believe, to be CIA agents. Many of these are my personal friends, and many of them have worked with me.

OLSEN: Would you leave that list for us in writing, and then just quickly run over the names right now without discussing them so that we can get them on the record, and then leave the paper with us?

STURGIS: All right, Sir. One is Jack Stewart 03 he was a CIA man in Havana.

OLSEN: (interrupting) Just give us the names.

STURGIS: Ragelio Gonzalez Corso in Havana; Rafael Hanscom, in Havana; Ray Sanstrom, Fort Lauderdale, Florida, lawyer; Ricordi Lorie; Salvador Aller; Paul Bethel in Havana and also Miami; Captain Antonio Montis Yunkles ? -- he is very close with General Wesson of the Dominican Republic and a very good close friend of mine; Colonel Gerard de Berly, his business office 800 Douglas Road, Coral Gables, phone number 448-7453, he was communications chief of CIA before the Bay of Pigs invasion.

OLSEN: Is there anything else that you would like to tell us?

STURGIS: Yes, sir.

OLSEN: We are going to have to put another belt on, Frank.

[end of Tape #9)

VR

OLSEN: All right, Frank, we are on a new tape now. Go ahead and wind up what additional information you want to give us relating to your activities associated with the CIA.

STURGIS: Here's another name, sir -- two names: Juan Mesa, he was in charge of communications in the brigade for CIA in the year 1960-61; there was also another friend called Monalitto (sp?) Treto, who was a skindiver and who worked closely with Juan Mesa. There is another fellow here, Alvaro Govea; his nickname is called "Kirk"; he was a sergeant in the Marine Corps in Havana at the American Embassy and he was attached with Nino Diaz' expedition, also in a camp in Louisiana which he participated in training;the camp was called the Algerian Naval Base, which is a training base. He was a CIA agent that worked closely with the Commander Nino Diaz during the invasion of the Bay of Pigs. Here is a couple more names and friends of mine: Mr. Sergio Abreu; he was in Bolivia for CIA; he was a friend of Sam Jenis. Also, Salvador Levi, CIA radio communications man that was working before and during the Bay of Pigs invasion. I gave you Yanos Montomara, Montes Yanos, Captain Montonio who I just told you about General Wesson Wesson, very close to him in the Dominican Republic, who has worked closely with me throughout many years. Let's see, my friend Sam Jenis naturally was working or based in South Florida a CIA agent in charge--one of the agents in charge in Guatemala was called Colonel Encente Leon during the Bay of Pigs with the brigade before the Bay of Pigs. I don't know whether you recall this, but on April 18, 1959, two Americans,Howard Anderson and Agnus McNair--both these people had contact with me, both in Havana, Anderson in Havana and McNair here in Miami. I sent Agnus McNair on a infiltration team to go into Havana to contact Howard Anderson; both these men were captured and were sentenced and executed in Penovalario(?).

OLSEN: What were they sent into Cuba for?

STURGIS: Mr. Olsen, the reason why --one of the reasons why I sent Angus McNair in was two-fold. One was to bring guns, ammunition, and radio equipment into Cuba for the underground; the other --

OLSEN: (interrupting) This was the anti-Castro underground?

STURGIS: Yes, sir. The other was to make contact with Howard Anderson and tellhim that Cuban intelligence was hot on him and if possible to return to -- with the boat that McNair went in to - Miami. I gave you the name of the Santianese (?) family early in the tapes; one naturally, was Sergio Roger San Jenis, or "sanhesise"(?) as we call it in Spanish. He at the present time is working atWilliam Leahman Mazda in Miami, Florida. The address there is 6310 S. Dixie Highway. The telephone number is 661-4261.

OLSEN: You have just indicated to us in a moment while we had the recorder stopped, that the first name of the Colonel Nichols at the American Embassy in Havana in 1959 was what?

STURGIS: Colonel Erickson Kicho -

OLSENL K -i - c -h ?

STURGIS: I'm sorry. I don't know where I get "K"; it is "Nichols".

OLSEN: Okay. You have also just shown to us a set of blank application blanks for employment with Central Intelligence Agency and instructions relating to the filling in of those blanks. When did you receive those blanks and from whom did you receive them?

STURGIS: I received these blanks in the early part of the 1960's by Sam Jenis, which he asked me if I wanted to fill out the applications and become an employee of Central Intelligence Agency. I told him I did not; he asked me why. I told him that I did not trust some of the agents that CIA had working for them per se as agents, because I felt that some of them were double-agents; I felt that many of the agents had too much power in their hands where a good possibility that their case officer or their station chief did not know totally what some of the agents were doing or orders that the agents were giving to underlings under them or people who were closely associated with them on a contract basis or whatever.

OLSEN: Frank, we've had a rather lengthy interview with you now; you've covered a great deal of information with us, and you've shown us records, photographs-- you've loaned to us some photographs which we are going to have copied and returned to you. Is there anything else at all that you would like to present to the Commission, or have the Commission know about relating to your contacts with the Central Intelligence Agency over the years, or your activities on behalf of the Agency?

STURGIS: I think I covered the area pretty good. I realize that it has been over many many years that I was trying to think about. As far as I know, I covered just about everything that I thought was important. If in the future that I would think of something or come across any documents or anything pertaining to any of my activities, I would gladly call you; and if it is necessary that you need copies of them, I will send them to you; or if it is not documents or anything that I can think up in my mind that I haven't covered with you, I could call you and give you that information.

OLSEN: Good. I want you to know that we appreciate very much your willingness to come up here to Washington from Florida and to spend the time that you have with us. I have given you a letter, I think already, the original of which was sent to your address in Miami, covering the matter of reimbursement of your travel expenses and per diem for the time that you have been with us. If there is nothing else on the subject now, let's conclude the interview at this point. And I want to assure you again that if you wish , you will have an opportunity to read the transcript of this interview and to make any corrections that you feel should be made, either because the thing has not been transcribed correctly or because you may have made a mistake in your recollection and you want to correct the record on that score. YOu will be given a chance to do that. We will not, however, be able to send the transcript to Miami to you because of the fact that much of the information that you have talked about is almost certain to be classifed. You will not be given a copy of the transcript. But as I say, you will be given an opportunity to read it and to make any corrections. Is there anything else that you would like to ask us, or that you would like to offer at this time?

STURGIS: Well, thank you. I believe we have covered a good period of my life and my association with the company; and I want to thank you for being so kind both to my friend and myself. And anything I can do now or in the future, I'm at your disposal.

OLSEN: Thank you very much, Frank. We appreciate it very much. And, Mr. Navarro, the same goes for you. We appreciate your coming and for all the help you've been to the Commission.

STURGIS: Thank you very much.

MR. BELIN: Secretary Rusk, if you would stand and raise your right hand and be sworn, this is Ruth Johnson who is a Notary Public for the District of Columbia.

MRS. JOHNSON: Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

MR. RUSK: I do.

TESTIMONY OF DEAN RUSK

MR. BELIN: Could you please state your name for the record?

MR. RUSK: Dean Rusk.

MR. BELIN: And you served as Secretary of State, sir, in the Administrations of John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, is that correct?

MR. RUSK: Yes.

Secretary Udall, Secretary Freeman and I were the only three who served throughout the terms of both Presidents.

MR. BELIN: Secretary Rusk, what is your present occupation?

MR. RUSK: I am Professor of International Law in the School of Law in the University of Georgia.

MR. BELIN: And prior to your service as Secretary of State with the Kennedy Administration, could you give us a little bit of a summary of your background?

MR. RUSK: Well, I was President of the Rockefeller

Foundation and General Education Board for about eight years during the 1950's. During the Truman Administration, with the exception of a few months when I was Special Assistant to the Secretary of War, Robert Patterson, I was in the State Department under Secretaries Marshall and Acheson, first in charge of United Nations Affairs, then Deputy Under Secretary for Political Affairs, and then Assistant Secretary for Far Eastern Affairs.

Prior to that, I had over five years of active duty during World War II, and prior to that, teaching at Mills College in California while studying law at Berkeley.

And I can go back even further, if you wish.

MR. BELIN: During World War II, you were involved somewhat with intelligence, is that correct?

MR. RUSK: Yes, I was. I was in G-2 from October in 1941 until the summer of '43 when I went out to the China, Burma, India theatre. There I was Chief of War Plans, and had a relation with the operations of OSS of the China, Burma, India theatre.

MR. BELIN: Could you briefly give us an overview from your personal experience as to what kind of intelligence the United States government had during World War II?

MR. RUSK: Well, I think it is important for us to realize that in the background of CIA was a shocking ignorance of world affairs and situations in other parts of the world at the outbreak of World War II. As a Captain in the Army, I was called back to G-2 in October, 1941, two months before Pearl Harbor, to organize a new section of G-2 to cover everything from Afghanistan through the India Subcontinent, Burma, Ceylon, Malaya, Australia, New Zealand and the British Pacific Islands. They had no section in G-2 interested in that part of the world up to that point.

When I got there I asked to see what materials we had on hand as a start, and I was shown one file drawer by an old lady named Mrs. North. In that file drawer was one copy of Murphy's Tourist Handbook to India and Ceylon which had been stamped Confidential because it was the only copy in town, and they wanted to keep track of it; one 1925 military attache report from London on the British Army in India; and then a considerable number of clippings from the New York Times that this old lady, Mrs. North, had been clipping since World War I, and that was it.

Well, I passed my first test, because on the second day that I was there, a Colonel from the great War Plans Division of the General Staff called down and said, Rusk, I can't remember, is Indochina in South China or North China, and when I located Indochina for him he hung up in great satisfaction and feeling that he had great intelligence support from G-2.

Now, there is no way to describe how deficient we were and we had to scramble around and try to find a missionary here or a businessman there, or anybody who knew anything about some of these vast areas and, of course, we could get a good deal of information from the British, but you couldn't overload those lines all of the time, because we were starting from scratch.

We flew the hump with maps that were supposed to be on a scale of 1 to 1 million, but much of the material on those maps was purely honorary. I mean, I didn't even have maps that would show us the scale of 1 to 1 million the terrain in which we were operating. We tried to organize a Burmese language program in our Army and we looked around the United States for a native Burman. We asked the Census Bureau for a list of the people living here who had been born in Burma and they came up with about twelve names, but most of them were McDougall or McLanahan, the children of British soldiers who were born in Burma. We finally found one and we looked him up and he was in an insane asylum.

Well, we fished him out of the insane asylum and made a Burmese language instructor out of him.

The impact of this on the need for information after World War II cannot be exaggerated, because we just ran all the time, we were running into this factor of ignorance, and so I think it is important to bear that in mind. And I hope we will never get caught in that situation again.

MR. BELIN: Subsequent to World War II, with the build-up of the CIA and other intelligence agencies, of course, the information gathering facilities of the U.S. government became much greater. And I wonder if you have any opinion as to whether or not we might have at times gone to the other extreme so far as the storage of information?

MR. RUSK: I think partly because of this absence of information earlier that we tended to let intelligence become a thing in itself. I had the impression, for example, that in the intelligence community, and I don't point the finger at any particular agency, there developed a kind of a catalogue of desirable information, almost as a Sears, Roebuck catalogue, and it was the duty of the intelligence community to fill in all of the blanks. I hope the Commission will use discretion? disgression in what it does with some of the examples I might give here today, because I don't want to cause difficulty, but for example, Ambassador David Bruce in London told me that a member of the British Government had come to him and said, David, don't have your military attache planes flying over our factories at low level taking pictures. If you want pictures of our plants, we will give them to you, but all of this kind of business makes our workers nervous, and people don't know what's going on. All they were doing was filling in the blanks, and we tended to go at it without a direct relationship to what might be called policy needs. And I think this was one of the inherent senses of one's ignorance of pre-World War II times.

MR. BELIN: I think you also mentioned during our amt 7 interview last night that you thought the syndrome of avoiding another Pearl Harbor might have contributed to trying to collect a tremendous amount of information, and you gave as an example the attack on South Korea by North Korea.

MR. RUSK: Yes.

Our intelligence did not predict Pearl Harbor, but they certainly predicted the Roberts Commission. And I think that that experience has infected to some extent the intelligence community.

Now, I once wrote Mr. Schlesinger a little note about this and one or two other matters when he became Director of CIA. One of the nightmares of people in the intelligence community is to have something serious happen which they have not predicted, and so one of the results of that is that policy offices get a continual flow of possibilities, 90 or 95 percent of which never happen at all, and the policy officer has the problem then of trying to sort out which is for real and which is not. And that is, sometimes, very difficult.

In the case of Korea, after the North Korean attack was launched, people went back through thousands of bits of information. They came out with a handful, six or eight pieces on the basis of which some of them said oh, yes, you see, we knew this was coming. Well, no one picked up the phone and called me. I was Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs at that time, and no one picked up the phone and called me and said the North Koreans are going to attack. On that evening, I was having dinner with Judge Alsop and Mr. Pace and Justice Frankfurter, and I certainly would not have been out having dinner if I knew that an attack was imminent.

Indeed, Mr. John Foster Dulles, who was in Tokyo at the time, said it was not until the Tuesday after the Sunday of the attack that the MacArthur Headquarters accepted that it was anything more than a border incident, and so I think we tend to multiply alleged predictions, partly to cover your trail in case something happens, and I think this is something that policy officers have to get used to, and on which they have to make some discriminating judgments.

And it emphasizes the importance of multiple sources of information.

Now, when I was a Special Assistant to Judge Patterson, the Secretary of War, I personally supported his efforts to combine all of the intelligence agencies into a single agency and put them altogether in one organization. I since have changed my mind radically on that because I think it is very important that you have not competitive sources of information but diverse sources of information. One of the several reasons for the tragic mistake in the Bay of Pigs was that those who proposing the operation were the same people who were furnishing the information on which judgments were to be made. And I had a specific directive from the President not to consult my own Bureau of Intelligence and Research in the Department of State to get their judgment on the situation inside Cuba.

So I think it is very important that we maintain diverse sources of information as a kind of check against each other, among other things, and also because that way you get some insights and some guesses that might not come through a single channel.

MR. BELIN: And so what you are saying is that some duplication, perhaps, so far as the sources on a particular problem, might not be adverse to the best interests of the country?

MR. RUSK: Well, I think there should be a very full exchange of information among the different elements of the intelligence community. But I think we ought to, that we ought to have diverse sources of judgment, of analysis, and matters of that sort.

MR. BELIN: Now, to go back to your previous comment concerning the Pearl Harbor syndrome and to cover all bases, is it a fair statement that perhaps the inundation of thousands of pieces of information to cover all possibilities does not necessarily lead to the best kinds of intelligence?

MR. RUSK: Well, we are faced, the intelligence community is faced, with an inherently difficult problem because of the blizzard of information that has fallen in on the world.

Now, a very large part of the CIA's information gathering has to do with getting materials that are in the public sector, publications from all over the world including the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China, and the sheer management analysis of the information that is available in the public sector is a massive problem.

Now, the processes by which that mass is reduced to some estimates or judgments are very important. To some extent, policy officers are the prisoners of the information they have available to them, and policy officers should be in a pretty sceptical frame of mind about decisions. I mean about judgments of that sort.

Very often we try to get information that is not present in the real world, and we ought to, I think, be a little more candid in saying to ourselves that we don't know, but if you want our guess, here's our guess.

For example, on a certain Tuesday evenining in August, 1968, Russian forces went into Czechoslovakia. We thought later that we had learned that the Russians had made that decision on the preceeding Saturday night, three days earlier, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday.

Now, if we had asked our intelligence community before that Saturday night whether or not the Russians were going into Czechoslovakia, there is no way they could know, because the Russians didn't know. I mean, I used to smile occasionally at the enormous effort made by foreign people, foreign governments, to ascertain our intentions when I knew we didn't have any intentions, and so I think we ought to distinguish more clearly between information that is real and information or estimates that are rather speculative in character.

MR. BELIN: I am going to change the subject now to the statutes which were adopted by the Congress and which formed the charter of the CIA.

Last night, you had some comments concerning your observation of these statutes on the relationship to what has actually happened since the enactment of the statutes.

MR. RUSK: Well, I think one must bear in mind that these statutes are the public expressions of the will of the Congress, and there are some things that you don't say publicly. You don't lay out in the statute a capability, say, for political observations in a particular situation. You don't lay out in the statute, a public statute, the complete functions of the National Security Agency, for example.

Now, I don't think there was any doubt in the minds of the Congress over these past twenty-eight years that CIA had certain capabilities in the political action field as well as in the espionage, counter-espionage field, or any doubt about the real purposes and functions of the National Security Agency. And so although as a matter of law this may raise some curious questions, I don't think that one can honestly say that the Congress was in any way misled about what kind of an organization

CIA was, or what kind of an organization NSA is.

There was a kind of a common law of the matter behind the written word, or there was whatever you want to call it, I will leave that to the distinguished members of your Commission. But some of these things that have been criticized lately as a part of the attack on the CIA I do not think can be measured by reading the exact wording of the public aspects of the CIA charter.

MR. BELIN: Is it your understanding that at least the Oversight Committee leaders of Congress did basically know major areas of policy determination by the CIA?

MR. RUSK: Yes.

To what extent, I don't know. I do know that the Director of CIA consulted frequently with Senator Russell, for example. He was the one who had basically handled CIA's budget since he was chairman of the Armed Services Committee and practically chairman of the Appropriations Committee because of the chairman's age, and I know that there were pretty frequent discussions between the two of them.

I never sat in on any of those, so I can't testify directly as to what was said. But I had a good many discussions myself with Senator Russell on a good many foreign policy matters, and I never heard him complain about feeling that he needed to be better informed.

MR. BELIN: Now, we also discussed the practical fact of how CIA in your phrase was drawn into things that other agencies might not, or might have done if they had had the money available overtly, but they did not have, and the CIA was drawn in because CIA had the money.

Is that a fair summary of our discussion?

MR. RUSK: Yes.

A good many things that CIA has done over the years could have been done directly, and overtly by the Department of State if the Department of State could have gotten the appropriations.

For example, support to the National Student Association to send delegations to international conferences and things of that sort, activities similar to the activities of the British Council in Great Britain. But the chairman of our Appropriations Subcommittee in the House, Mr. John Rooney, didn't care very much about things cultural and scientific exchanges and U.S.I.D. and the Bureau of Cultural Affairs, and things of that sort, and now here was CIA who was able to come up with the money and so I think some activities sort of gravitated towards CIA because Dick Russell got their money which could have just as well or better been done overtly.

I don't know whether the situation can significantly change in that respect, but support of things like Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe could just as well have been done overtly by the Department of State as they were attempted on a covert basis by CIA. A good many things of that sort happened because they had the money.

MR. BELIN: Secretary Rusk, we also talked about internal executive oversight about CIA and the role of the Director of Central Intelligence, the DCI, as the head of the intelligence community.

Do you have any observations concerning the question of executive oversight of the Agency, or any suggestions in that area?

MR. RUSK: Well, as I look back on it, I do have one specific and potentially important suggestion. CIA by statute reports to the National Security Council. Of course, the President is the Chairman, and his decisions in the National Security Council are the decisions. There is no voting procedure there. But the statutory members of the National Security Council, in my recollection, never once sat down and looked at the major tables and the budget of the CIA. We were sort of in the intelligence and operational chain of command in a sense, but not in the administration chain of command.

I would assume that what happened was that the CIA would take their budget to maybe two or three members of the Bureau of the Budget, and then it would be discussed briefly with the President, and then it would be taken down and discussed with Senator Russell, and that was about the end of it.

In retrospect, I think it would have been helpful if the statutory members of the National Security Council had at least once a year taken a look at the organizational structure and the manning tables and the budget of CIA in order to have a little bit better feel of not only what was going on but what might be going on that they would not normally bump into.

So I think that that would be a step, that would be an improvement that would be desirable.

MR. BELIN: Now, I want to turn to the area of possible CIA involvement in coup d'etats abroad. Perhaps it is not within our charter specifically, but you made a comment last night concerning your eight years as Secretary of State.

MR. RUSK: Well, I have stated publicly, and I have been continuing to scratch my mind for exceptions, I have stated publicly that there was some 82 or so in the world somewhere during the eight years in which I was Secretary of State. That is unconstitutional changes of government.

There were substantially larger changes through elections and things of that sort. I don't remember a single one of those that was triggered by or caused by the CIA.

MR. BELIN: And by those, you mean coup d'etats?

MR. RUSK: Coup d'etat. The coup d'etat.

Now, I think one thing that requires a rather careful look, and some rather careful distinctions, the CIA people consider that one of their jobs is to keep in touch with different elements within a population, and they do have contacts with dissident groups here and there. Sometimes people in our embassies, mostly CIA people, but sometimes on the diplomatic side, get inquiries from dissident groups and various countries as to what the attitude towards the United States would be in the event of a coup d'etat.

I tried to get the word established that we would not respond to any such inquiries, partly as a practical matter, because I suspected that many of these were from provacateurs of the governments involved and they were trying to find out what our answer would be to such a question. But I had no doubts the CIA was in touch with dissident groups, and may have at times been buying information from them. But that does not translate in my mind to their calling the shots of it or becoming the boss or directing a coup d'etat.

MR. BELIN: In your experience as Secretary of State, were you aware of the practices of other governments and their intelligence, both in this country and abroad?

MR. RUSK: Yes. To a very considerable extent. Of course, you always suspect there are practices that you haven't caught up with, but there is a mean, dirty, unsavory, back alley struggle going on in the world in which a good many governments particpate, some of them close friends of ours, and most of them, including targets in the United States, because the position of the United States in world affairs is such that influencing American policy is a major effort on the part of almost every foreign office in the world. Wherever a dispute develops, the parties will each come in to try and get the United States to take their side, and so we are the target of a great deal of effort to find out what we are thinking, to influence our decisions and judgments, and a struggle to undermine some of the things that we are trying to accomplish in the world.

MR. BELIN: Were you ever aware, for instance, of forged documents being used to try and put the blame on the CIA for things?

MR. RUSK: Well, I think there were two or three instances that I recall. The exact timing and countries I don't recall at this point. It is somewhere in the records where forged documents were planted on African leaders to try to persuade them that CIA was trying to overthrow them. Fortunately, these forgeries were so crude that it was very easy to demonstrate that they were, in fact, forgeries, and I think we were able to satisfy the local chiefs of state that CIA was not trying to overthrow them.

But there were all sorts of things. If I could go off the record for a moment?

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. RUSK: I must confess I am worried about a kind of euphoric and unilateral repeal of the Cold War in this country these days, because there are those who are out to bring the United States down, and they are working away at it, not only in this country, but in other parts of the world. Whether or not we ought to make that more public, that information public, I think is a major policy question that you gentlemen and those who are carrying present responsibility might want to think about, because there is no question about the fact that these people are conducting such operations, both here and abroad.

We did make a decision during the Vietnam affair not to make public what we knew about the activities of certain governments in this country because we knew that there were a lot of opponents to Vietnam, most of them who had no connection with outside governments, who were opposing it for perfectly reasonable, valid considerations, and we did not wish to start another wave of McCarthyism in this country.

But anyone who thinks that the Communists were not making every effort to influence American public opinion is just out of his head.

MR. GRAY: Sir, did you receive any specific information of such attempts to influence the young people that were demonstrating against the war, and so on?

MR. RUSK: There were bits and pieces occasionally, but at the moment I can't cite one of them in terms of chapter and verse.

MR. GRAY: Do you recall whether the CIA had an estimate as to the extent of any such involvement?

MR. RUSK: No.

Before we left office in 1969 there had been put together a world, a study of youth movements worldwide, and one of the interesting conclusions of the study was about the only thing these various youth movements had in common was technique, that their objectives varied widely.

For example, the young people in Eastern Europe appeared to be reaching out for what could be called the establishment values in the United States. But that study might throw some light on your question, if you can get ahold of it.

MR. BELIN: You also mentioned that you thought that attacking the CIA is a built-in process that certain groups including even the Russian intelligence agency might be involved in. Is that an accurate summary of your conversation last night?

MR. RUSK: Yes.

I think there is a substantial variety of motivations behind attacks on the CIA. I would say first that there have been some failures, and there have been some mistakes on the part of the CIA. Those things will happen among frail human beings. And I cite the Bay of Pigs as one notable and public example, and that has exposed the CIA to some criticism. I think there are interests who are hostile to the United States that are at work in this field.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

Anti-CIA propoganda is good propoganda in many parts of the world, and among sections of this country.

And then I think there are some personal motivations that I don't care much about, such things as desire to win a Pulitzer Prize or money or a sense of revenge. But I think more broadly, I think this is partly a reaction coming from a swing towards isolationism in this country, which I think is real, as I travel around this country in small and large cities, and again, this is sort of decisions on the part of a lot of people here that somehow the Cold War is over, despite the fact when you look through the world from Southeast Asia through Portugal, Spain, Italy, Greece, Turkey, the Middle East, the Cold War is very much alive, at least from the point of view of the other side.

MR. BELIN: In this connection, do you have any specific recommendations as to whether or not this government should make available to the public more information about what other governments are doing, both in this country and abroad, to influence world affairs?

MR. RUSK: I think we probably ought to find some way to alert people to the fact that detente does not mean that a new Heaven and earth has been accomplished here on earth, and for example, I object to the use of the term domino theory, and I never used it myself, although President Kennedy seemed to embrace it on two or three occasions in Press conferences, and originally I believe it was President Eisenhower.

To me, the domino theory is a euphenism for something else. The theoretical basis for it is the Marxist doctrine of the world revolution, and we at least ought to talk about it in those terms. Is it there, what are they doing about it, is this still a real matter in the real world, and not obscure it by talking about a power game?

And I think that we could do more in that direction. We could be more frank and candid about the differences that still separate us even though it remains important that we try to find points of agreement between ourselves and those who might become our adversaries. I think the process of trying to find points of agreement like the Test Ban Treaty and the Nonproliferation Treaty, the Arms Limitation, the SALT talks and things of that sort, those are absolutely essential, but we ought not to be under an illusion about it, and I am afraid there has been so much illusion around what we are up against, and this is why I feel that the CIA and its capabilities are absolutely vital to the safety of the United States.

And I think one of our problems now is how to maintain some capabilities in the present atmosphere and discuss these, and in the face of the various investigations which we anticipate, and the investigative reporting and all of the rest that goes along with it.

MR. BELIN: Secretary Rusk, I want to turn to another area now concerning the allegations of assassination of foreign leaders.

Were you ever aware of any plans or proposals to assassinate any foreign leaders?

MR. RUSK: No proposal ever came to me seeking my approval for a plan to kill anybody. Now, those are not chosen words. I mean, no proposal ever came before me, period, involving the assassination of a foreign leader, period. Excuse me.

MR. BELIN: Go ahead.

MR. RUSK: On one occasion, the late great Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, who was then, I believe our representative on the 303 Committee, I think it was named during that period, came in and more or less in a jocular frame of mind said that he had heard that somebody down the line, and he had not identified the person or the agency, was talking about the possible assassination effort, and I made it absolutely clear to him, and he fully agreed, that political assassination was contrary to the most elementary notions of American foreign policy, and that if we go down that trail, we are in the law of the jungle, and it would be out of control. That was my personal attitude throughout the period.

On one other occasion the matter came up in an indirect form which could be, I think, coverted by gossip into meaning something else. I had heard that Trujillo had been assassinated before the Dominicans had announced it. President Kennedy was then in Paris.

I called and got Pierre Salinger on the scene, and he tells about this in his book, by the way.

MR. BELIN: He was President Kennedy's Press Secretary?

MR. RUSK: He was President Kennedy's Press Secretary, and I told him Trujillo had been assassinated and to keep his mouth shut, because it had not been, it had not been announced.

Well, he stubbed his toe and announced it, or referred to it in one of those glancing remarks at a Press conference. My concern was that Trujillo's son was in Paris, that if Trujillo's son heard this announcement first from an American source that he would think that we had something to do with the assassination of Trujillo and might take it out on President Kennedy personally in Paris, and I was concerned about Kennedy's personal safety under those circumstances.

But those were the only two things that I remember in the assassination field.

MR. BELIN: When Mr. Thompson talk to you about it, did he indicate what potential foreign leader was involved?

MR. RUSK: If he did, I just don't remember it. I don't remember it.

MR. BELIN: With particular reference to the Trujillo assassination, do you know of any approval that was ever given by the State Department for American participation with any group that might be involved in overthrowing the government and assassinating Trujillo in the process?

MR. RUSK: Well, I knew that our intelligence people were in touch with a variety of Dominican groups, both in the Dominican Republic and abroad, and any one of them would have been glad, I think, to assassinate Trujillo. But I was not aware of any operational involvement of the United States government in his assassination.

MR. BELIN: If records were to show any cables going from the State Department under your name to any Ambassador in the Dominican Republic, would you state that those indicated personal knowledge on your part?

MR. RUSK: Well --

MR. BELIN: And I don't know, by the way, whether or not such cables existed. I am using it as a hypothetical example.

MR. RUSK: During my years, over 2,100,000 cables went out of the Department of State with my name signed to them, and I had seen only a tiny fraction of 1 percent of them before they went out. Now, I am responsible, I mean I cannot avoid the responsibility for what was done in a Department of which I was Chief.

In terms of my personal involvement, in the first place I don't recall such cables, but if you could get ahold of the green copies, the original greens of the outgoing cables, if I had seen and approved any of those, they would carry my initials. I always put my initials, small dr, on the cables that I personally approved, and it may be for cryptographic reasons that the State Department doesn't maintain the green copies, I just don't know. But if they have them then you can find out whether I was, in fact, aware of any of those cables.

MR. BELIN: Did you have any knowledge concerning the death of President Diem in Vietnam, or did you give any directions?

MR. RUSK: No, no directions at all. There was a cable that went out in August, 1963, sent out at a time when President Kennedy, Secretary McNamara, and I, all three, were out of town, and this cable was "cleared" with us on an open telephone. And when George Ball called me, he spoke in very guarded terms and told me that President Kennedy had already approved it.

Well, this was on an open telephone and with that kind of information I said use your own judgment, go ahead as far as I am concerned.

When the three of us got back to town, we looked at the cable in detail and felt that it went further than we wanted to go in the direction of Diem must go kind of thinking, and we pulled back on it. Now, we did make an effort in the months immediately following that, to try to persuade President Diem to get his brother Nhu, and Madame Nhu, out of the country. We told the President to send him as Ambassador to Washington, or Paris, or give him any kind of a job that would get him out of the country, because it was his brother, we felt, who was the principal motivator and executor of policies which were rapidly alienating the Buddhists, the military, and the students, and we felt that Brother Nhu was going to bring President Diem down.

I do recall very specifically that Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge had instructions that if a coup should develop, that he should do his best to insure President Diem's personal safety, and, indeed, I understand that on the morning of the day that it was clear that the military we moving, he called up Diem and suggested some arrangements to Diem that would insure his personal safety. Diem refused those suggestions and tried to get off into another part of the country where he thought he had some forces that might be loyal to him, and on the way was captured and killed.

MR. BELIN: Is it your testimony, then, that you don't know of any action by this government, or any agency of the government which contributed, directly contributed to the death of Diem?

MR. RUSK: It was not the policy of the United States Government to see that President Diem was assassinated. We had put some pressure on him trying to bring about some changes in his policy, and to separate him from his brother, Nhu. For example, we had made some adjustments in our aid program. We cut back on our aid program. I think you will remember that, General Lemnitzer. And some of that was interpreted by the press, some of whom, by the way, were among the Diem must go group, by the press and by some of the people in South Vietnam, undoubtedly as being indeed, as it was pressure on President Diem, but maybe even they might have read it as a signal that we would be in favor of a coup.

MR. BELIN: Secretary Rusk, during your service with the Government, did you ever hear any discussion of the phrase known or called Executive Action Capability, which was defined as a built-in capability to be able to assassinate foreign leaders if it became a policy of this government to do so?

MR. RUSK: I don't recall it, no.

MR. BELIN: Is there any remembrance on your part of any plan or direction to have a plan to assassinate any Cuban leaders which might include, among others, Fidel Castro?

MR. RUSK: I assume that there were a good many Cubans who would have been glad to assassinate Castro, and I also am aware of the fact that the State Department and CIA both were in touch with various dissident Cuban groups. We had been since the Eisenhower administration. But, the specific point of the assassination of Castro, to my recollection, did not come to me for my attention. I cannot testify that down the line there might not have been some talk of this, but it never came to an action, a policy action judgment or a decision.

MR. BELIN: By that you mean the decision to go ahead with the plan?

MR. RUSK: That's right.

MR. BELIN: There are some documents which the Commission staff has seen which indicate that at a meeting at the State Department on August 10, 1962, which memoranda say that you were present, a meeting of a group known as the Special Operations Group, or the MONGOOSE group, that there was some discussion about the development of a possible plan to assassinate Castro.

Do you have any recollection of such a meeting or such discussion?

MR. RUSK: I don't, but that doesn't prove very much at this point. I do have an 11:00 o'clock telephone date with my appointment books at the LBJ library to determine whether, in fact, I was at that meeting, and I will report back to you as soon as I can find that out. It is entirely possible. You know, my own personal practice was to do a lot of listening in such groups, but not to get into the decision phase until the President and Secretary McNamara and I were ready to face a decision on the matter, because otherwise you would discourage the considerations of the widest range of possibilities or options that might be available.

Mr. Arthur Schlesinger in his book, Thousand Days, once referred to the fact that I used to sit there in the Cabinet room silent like an old Buddha. Well, that's right, quite right, because in most of those meetings with 30 or 40 people around the room, I did remain silent, and I would see the President either before the meeting or after the meeting and have my talk with him on the subject matter, because I had the feeling that if I sounded off and debated my President in front of these 30 or 35 people, that we would read about it in the New York Times or the Washington Post the next morning. So typically I would sit in a good many meetings without saying very much, but when we got to the point of decision, that was a different matter.

MR. BELIN: We also discussed the question of -- well, let me strike that and go back with one other question in this area. As I understand your statement, you have no specific recollection of any such discussions at any meetings. What you do say though is that they might have occurred so far as discussing the possibility, but they did not occur so far as an operational plan approval is concerned?

MR. RUSK: Yes. Yes. I am genuinely not trying in any way to be evasive. I do want to say that when I left the Department of State, I took no papers, files, records or memoranda of any sort. I took away my appointments books, which are available to anyone who wants to see them at the LBJ library, and copies of my income tax returns, and that's it. Everything else was left there. I have had many interviews and discussions with people writing articles, dissertations, books on things, in which I was involved, and I have long since learned, because of the mass of things that happened during those eight years, that my recollection on matters of detail simply isn't all that reliable. The record is there, and as far as I'm concerned, you are welcome to it now over in the State Department or wherever it might be.

But, it just means that I just cannot remember every detail of everything that happened. I averaged seeing 25 to 30 people for every day for eight years, and that is a good way to help you not to remember a lot of details that you are trying to recapture.

MR. BELIN: And I want to now turn to the area of possible oversight of the Agency. One of the concerns of this Commission is recommendations that it might make, and I would like to know whether or not you have any specific recommendations concerning the oversight of the Agency to make it a more responsive and a more effective agency?

MR. RUSK: Well, I think the National Security Council could give it more oversight along the lines that I have talked about. I'm not now talking about oversight of "operations," because I think that that on the whole worked pretty well through the 303 Committee, and the discussions that each of the principals had with his representative on the 303 Committee. I almost always had a talk, sometimes short, sometimes longer, with my representative on the 303 Committee before a meeting, to take a look at what was on the agenda and to express views on it. But I think that the statutory members of the NSC might take a little closer look at the total operations, the structure, the budget of the CIA, than they have done in the past.

MR. GRAY: Sir, for the record, could you state who the statutory members are that you are referring to?

MR. RUSK: Well, the President, the Vice President, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Defense, the Director of the CIA, and then such other officials, such as Cabinet officers who might be called in ad hoc because of the subject matter being discussed. The Secretary of the Treasury was frequently there during my day, and the Attorney General was frequently there during my day.

MR. GRAY: During your tenure, how many people beyond the statutory members were normally at NSC meetings, approximately?

MR. RUSK: I would think at an NSC meeting there might be as many as 20 to 25 people in the Cabinet room.

MR. GRAY: Do you think it would be preferable to cut it down to something more closely approximating the statutory membership as a general matter?

MR. RUSK: Not necessarily, provided those 20 or 25 people in the room are people who know how to keep their mouth shut. Now, that is some doing in our kind of government, because I do think that there is danger in considering problems of this sort in too small a group. I mentioned one of the reasons for the mistake of the Bay of Pigs. Another reason was that it was held in such a small circle that the talents and resources of the government were not brought to bear upon the problem, and I am a little concerned about holding these things too closely.

For example, in the famous Tuesday luncheon sessions that President Johnson had on Vietnam, there were usually five or six people, the Secretary of State, Secretary of Defense, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, the Director of the CIA, a note-taker, plus the President. Occasionally there would be one or two others there.

Now, however, each one of us knew what the agenda was going to be, and I would take over with me notes and suggestions from my Department that had been worked on ahead of time for those Tuesday luncheon sessions, and there we did not close off other input. And the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs undoubtedly had talked to the Joint Chiefs, for example, about the items that were coming up, you see.

MR. BELIN: General Lemnitzer is nodding his head in agreement, I see, for the record.

With regard to this oversight, I think one of the things we talked about last night was the fact that because of the busy job that each of these members of the NSC had, and their own work, that the oversight should be done perhaps chiefly through deputies. Was that an accurate summary?

MR. RUSK: Well, I think a week by week oversight should be exercised by the kind of interdepartmental committee in which senior and trusted deputies would normally be those who would attend meetings, and in the State Department such people as Alexis Johnson and Llewellyn Thompson, people of that seniority and integrity, but I do think the statutory members themselves ought to take a periodic look at the total intelligence community situation, including CIA as well.

I am concerned about Congressional oversight. If this isn't handled carefully, it could destroy the CIA and its capabilities. Members of Congress operate under a Constitutional immunity provided by the First Amendment. What they say in Congress is not subject to question in any other place, so basically they are subject only to the possibility of being expelled by the necessary what is it, two thirds vote of their particular houses.

Now, that is a most unlikely sanction. There is a precedent in the Congress which I think has worked very well, if the Congress would agree that that is the way they should do it, and that is the Joint Atomic Energy Committee. That Committee is carefully selected, it has facilities and staff which are highly secure, and they do receive the most sensitive kind of information in the nuclear field. I think there are very few nuclear secrets which that Joint Committee has not had discussed with them. And I do not recall at the moment any significant leak that ever came out of that Committee.

Now, if the Congress itself would approach this matter of oversight of the CIA in that mood and spirit, and recognize that you cannot have a CIA involved in espionage and counter-espionage and an occasional political operation somewhere, and have it shouted from the rooftops, then I think some Congressional oversight could be useful.

I personally, but I am biased because I am an Executive Branch man, I personally would prefer ex post facto assessment rather than pre-consultation with regard to whether or not a particular thing should be done, because that could raise the question of who makes the decision. You might get, you might get a steady stream of alleged confrontations between a President and some group in the Congress that could cause great difficulty.

Could I go off the record just a second?

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. RUSK: The Congress is the representative branch of the government only for those functions given to the Congress under the Constitution. The President is the representative branch of the government with respect to the duties assigned to the President, and so I see no particular reason why we have to say that the Congress has to participate in everything, nor is the Congress particularly willing to do it. For example, on the question of amnesty, vitally affected one of the most important powers of the Congress, the power to raise armies, and in a period when the Congress was asserting its desire to re-establish its authority under the Constitution, did anyone in the Congress say that they ought to have participated in the amnesty decision? Not at all because it was a no win situation. Whatever the decision was, you were going to come out behind.

So I don't know whether the Congress -- on one occasion I invited a subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee to come down to the State Department on a very private basis to take a look at some of the technology of the espionage and counter-espionage, and we showed them a good many gadgets, and how various things operate, and it was pretty startling to them. And afterwards, at least two of them said to me, we appreciate your motivation in inviting us down here, but I'm sorry you did it because we don't want to know.

Now, how much of this kind of thing does the Congress really want to know when you start to peel the peeling off the banana? My guess is most of them would prefer not to know some of these things and have a chance to quarrel about it later if they want to.

MR. CONNOR: May I ask one question in this connection? Even though generally speaking you think that a joint Congressional committee with oversight functions with respect to the CIA should have only a post-audit responsibility, are there some situations, such as the covert operations in the United States and elsewhere, that preceded the Bay of Pigs actions, where because of the magnitude and because of the foreign policy implications, and because of the possible direct war involvement, that there should be a preclearance?

WARD & PAUL

MR. RUSK: Yes. I think there would be situations where prior consultation would be important. My guess is that had there been prior consultation on the Bay of Pigs, that that might have helped us avoid a very serious mistake. President Kennedy did talk to Senator Fulbright about it, and also talked to the Vice President Lyndon Johnson about it, both of whom were opposed to the Bay of Pigs. And so I think there are some, there would be some things where preconsultation would be very, very much in point. I was concerned about the notion that somehow you could not do anything without prior consultation and the consent of representatives of the Congress, because very often you just don't have time.

MR. GRAY: It's 11:00 o'clock, sir.

MR. RUSK: I wonder if we could pause for two minutes while I try to establish the point of where I was on August 10th.

(A brief recess was taken.)

MR. RUSK: I can confirm that there was a meeting in my conference room on the afternoon of August 10th, 1962, at which I was present. There were about a dozen people there, and my appointment book shows names of those who were there. I have asked them to photostat that page, and I will get it to you as quickly as possible. It does not show that General Lansdale was there, but he might have been. The list might have been incomplete.

MR. BELIN: Your appointment book will show the members present on that?

MR. RUSK: McNamara, McCone, George Ball, and there were about ten or twelve there.

MR. BELIN: Secretary Rusk, we were talking about oversight, and I would like to ask you to discuss with the Commission a summary of what we talked about last night concerning your observations of the kind of a person that should be the Director of Central Intelligence, with a particular reference to internal oversight.

MR. RUSK: Well, I do believe that any agency which is involved with what I would call raw power must be a highly disciplined agency and from the President on down. I think the quality and character of the persons who are directors of CIA and directors of FBI are very important indeed. However, I would not rely entirely on that. I would myself urge that they be put on terms of office of not more than say eight years, but, of course, subject to the pleasure of the President for periods shorter than that, because I think it is very important that there not be individuals who are in a position to develop power that somehow is not subject to the normal controls of the people who are elected, the President and the Congress.

I don't want to speak unduly badly of the dead, but I think we allowed Mr. J. Edgar Hoover to develop just too much power, and we ought to rotate those offices, and that that would have a wholesome influence on the way they conduct their offices. I don't see any way in which one can through organizational structure or mechanics get complete protection against an occasional incident of pure indiscipline down the line. That is present in every large organization in our society, public and private, and so occasionally things like that will happen. But I think the quality is of great importance, and I think that during the period that I was there, I felt myself very fortunate in the men that were serving as Director of CIA.

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

MR. BELIN: You mentioned that among the restrictions you would include, in addition to a maximum number of years that a person could serve in a position of this kind was the question of whether or not the DCI should be the brother of the Secretary of State, or for that matter, the Attorney General should be the brother of the President.

Do you have any observations along those lines?

MR. RUSK: Yes, I have, for what they are worth. I may be wrong, but I am clear. I think that the members of the National Security Council ought, in personal terms, to be at arms length with the Director of the CIA and the Director of the FBI. I don't think that it was a particularly good idea to have the Director of CIA and the Secretary of State as brothers. This is something George Marshall taught most of those who worked with him, to keep a kind of an arm's length from people above you and below you, because you don't want personal relationships to interfere with public duty. And he is very special on that particular point.

I am sorry I didn't --

MR. BELIN: The other aspect was with regard to the Department of Justice, the Attorney General and the President.

MR. RUSK: Oh, yes. You know, it is kind of traditional in this post-War period that the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Treasury remove themselves from party politics because the issues they deal with are supposed to be and expected to be largely nonpartisan in character. I think our recent experience has indicated that it would be a good idea for the Attorney General to be added to that group, and that the Attorney General not be someone who is actively involved in party politics as the principal law officer of this government.

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

MR. CONNOR: Or a member of the family of the President, say?

MR. RUSK: I would think almost any other Cabinet job would be more appropriate for a member of the family of the President than the Attorney General or the Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense.

MR. KIRKLAND: How do you feel, Mr. Secretary, about the question of whether the DCI should be a career intelligence officer, perhaps?

MR. RUSK: My feeling on that is a little bit like my attitude to what extent Ambassadors should be drawn from career members of the foreign service, that you ought to try and find the best man that you can. There may be times when that person would be a career man, there may be other times when he would come from the outside, and I would a little bit rather not try to generalize on that particular point, because you really ought to find the best man you can get for the job.

MR. KIRKLAND: If one of the problems confronting the Director is substantial White House pressure to do things that might not be prudent, do you think someone who had an independent reputation or means of livelihood might be in a better position to protect the Agency?

MR. RUSK: I doubt that it would turn on money. At one period -- I don't know whether they still do it -- but at the moment anyone enters the Dutch Cabinet, from that moment on they are guaranteed a full year's salary when they leave the Cabinet, and one of my Dutch friends referred to this as the Go to Hell fund, and one reason was to try to increase the sense of independence of the Cabinet members.

I doubt that would make all that much difference in the face of the Director of the CIA. I do believe that it is very important that we distinguish between the White House and the President. During my period, I tried to get my colleagues into the frame of mind so that if some staff person from the White House called over there and said that the White House would like for you to do this, then they were supposed to go back and say who at the White House. It is one thing if they were literally conveying a message from the President and quite another thing if they were not, because I was old-fashioned enough to believe that if it was not a President speaking on foreign policy that I was the spokesman for foreign policy.

And so I think we ought to be careful about people in the White House junior to the President asserting any kind of command role, or supervisory role, or directive role, with regard to either the CIA or the FBI.

Now, I do not think we should try to remove a President from that role, but my guess is that office has been immunized for at least another century against abuse of that command.

MR. CONNOR: Mr. Secretary, along those lines, do you think that it is wise for the same person to hold the position of Secretary of State and Assistant to the President for International or for National Security matters?

MR. RUSK: Well, that would not be my choice. I have taken the liberty of reminding Mr. Kissinger that he had learned while he was at the White House that a Secretary of State must not permit a Henry Kissinger to be in the White House, and I suspect that that has something to do with his present arrangements. We had a very good personal working relationship in that three-corned arrangement, the President, McGeorge Bundy and myself as far as foreign policy matters was concerned, and later with President Johnson and Walt Rostow.

Well, it is important. Dean Acheson once said in the relations with the President and the Secretary of State, that it was of the utmost importance that both of them understand at all times which one of them is President. If that adviser on National Security Affairs in the White House, and the Secretary of State and the President, all three, have an adequate and an honorable working relationship on a basis of integrity in dealing with each other, there should not be any problems developing.

MR. CONNOR: Going back to a related question of the role of the Attorney General, was Attorney General Robert Kennedy present at that meeting in your office to which you referred?

MR. RUSK: I don't think he was. I don't recall him as being on the list, but I will have the list, and I will get it to the Commission.

MR. CONNOR: Was he personally involved in many of these policy questions having to do with the Cuban situation?

MR. RUSK: He would sit from time to time with the 303 Committee, and occasionally would make suggestions, some of them good, and some of them that I vetoed. But he was sort of interested in, you know, counterinsurgency and that kind of thing, and President Kennedy asked me to let him serve on the 303 Committee. But I always felt free to take up any problems if I needed to with President Kennedy himself.

MR. KIRKLAND: Are you aware of any independent contacts or relationships that he had with the CIA?

MR. RUSK: No, and it is very hard for me to dig into that particular point, because the three key people who would know about that are dead, President Kennedy, Robert Kennedy and Allen Dulles. But I would be surprised and disappointed if President Kennedy, for example, had any kind of understanding with Mr. Dulles that very much affected our foreign policy without the knowledge of the Secretary of State. I can't swear that that was not so, obviously, because we are talking about a negative here. But I didn't get the impression that such a channel was operating.

MR. BELIN: Were there some meetings that Allen Dulles might have had with President Kennedy that you did not know about?

MR. RUSK: Oh, I am sure he dropped in on him occasionally for some additional briefings on different situations, and I am sure, I know that J. Edgar Hoover used to go into see the President, or the two Presidents that I served, occasionally on his own to report on various things. So the answer to that is yes.

MR. BELIN: To follow up with J. Edgar Hoover, one comment you made concerning a maximum term of service, I believe in our discussions last night you said that one of the major concerns you had was the possibility that if an agency like the FBI or CIA would be able to terrorize others, including possibly members of Congress.

MR. RUSK: Well, again I am not sure I am right on this, but I have developed over the years a strong aversion to monopoly of sources of information on important matters. And I am a little concerned to have all information in the Federal government on internal security matters come through one agency and one head of that agency. I am just a little worried about the need for a little more diversity. I don't quite know how to work this out, but I would be reluctant to have one man play a decisive role in making judgments about internal security problems in this country.

Now, one answer to that might be, and I defer to a member of your Commission, might be closer and more effective supervision by the Attorney General of the FBI and closer and more effective supervision by the CIA by the statutory members of the National Security Council.

MR. BELIN: Secretary Rusk, last night we talked about your concern that the intelligence community must be urged to have priorities in its job to reflect the regional trends of American foreign policy so that they don't always develop an insatiable appetite for information on everything that might not be relevant to American foreign policy.

MR. RUSK: Well, I am aware of the fact that there has been discussion of priorities from time to time, and we do, in fact, use the concept of priorities in terms of the expenditures of resources both in people and money. But I think we might, we might press that further and be somewhat more restrictive in the types of activities that are conducted in particular countries. I mean, it doesn't make much difference to the United States, for example, as to what happens in Burundi. I do not know how much effort they are putting into Burundi, but they shouldn't be doing it because it's there and we need a book full of information on Burundi. We ought to do it as a direct instrument of foreign policy rather than some momentum of the intelligence community working on its own.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. RUSK: I think there is a need for supervision of intelligence activities by policy officers who themselves ought to make some policy judgments about the kinds of intelligence that are useful rather than leave this question to the insatiability of an intelligence community for whom no amount of information is superfluous.

So I think every year or so there ought to be careful thought to priorities and directions, and maybe types of activities.

MR. BELIN: Now, Secretary Rusk, one comment you made last night concerned your observations about the very fact that in our country people write books about the CIA.

MR. RUSK: Well, I would not wish to be pressed to name individual countries, but I think one of the tributes to the constitutionality of our system is that people can work in these agencies and then go out and write books about them and survive. In most countries I know if that happened they would be struck down by a truck, run over in the countryside, and that would be the end of it.

But they do that here, they write best sellers. Well, it is a very troublesome thing when you get into this kind of kiss and tell writing in this particular field, and it is a danger to which the intelligence community, I suppose, is inevitably exposed to.

MR. BELIN: Do you feel there should be greater restrictions on the contractual enforcement of Agency contracts with employees not to divulge such information?

MR. RUSK: Well, I have suggested that you get ahold of the departure statement which I signed with the Department of State. It is very far-reaching in terms of my pledge with respect to the kinds of information that I in the first place would not take away with me, and secondly would not reveal, and it cites about twenty sections of the U.S. Code which purport to provide the statutory back-up for the requirements that they cited in that statement. Whether they still use it after the Freedom of Information Act, I just don't know. But I do thihk there is a very important problem here about whose information it is when people come in and work in sensitive jobs in government. There is still confusion, as I understand it, about whose it is. I mean, what about people who squirrel away in their attics classified material, take them off with them, and I gather now when they die those papers become the properties of their families. I think my own feeling is that if it is not clear, if it is clear in the statutes they ought to be forced, and if it is not clear, then it ought to be clarified by statute as to whose information it is when one is working in a government department, particularly in sensitive departments, and obtain such material. This is one of the messy fringes on our situation which I think we haven't straightened out carefully enough.

MR. BELIN: Another comment you had from an overall basis about the CIA was that because of its origin with the OSS, that might have affected the type of activities to which the Agency addressed itself in peacetime. Do you have any comments on that?

MR. RUSK: Well, this has a bearing, I think, not only on what people thought at the time that the National Security Act of 1947, as enacted, was, but also a good many of the personnel in CIA were brought over from OSS, and it may well be that some of the activities that they conducted during war time appeared to be entirely appropriate in a Cold War situation. But I think also that they were even more influenced by the events of the immediate post-War period.

We had reduced our armed forces to a point where the Joint Chiefs of Staff told me in 1946 that we did not have a division in our Army, not a group in our Air Force, that could be rated ready for combat. Our ships were being put in mothballs as fast as we could find berths for them, and those that remained afloat were manned by skeleton crews. Our Defense Budget in '47, '48 was coming down, came down to almost $11 billion, $11.3 billion, on its way down to a target of $10 billion. During that period, Joseph Stalin, looking out across the West, and not seeing any divisions, tried to keep the northwest province of Iran, demanded the two eastern provinces of Turkey, he ignored the peace treaty with the countries of Eastern Europe with respect to free elections and their political future, and he gave support to the guerrilas going to Greece, he pulled the coup d'etat in Czechoslovakia, he barricaded Berlin, and he gave the principal go ahead light for the North Koreans to go after South Koreans.

Now, that was the origin of the Cold War, but all of the revisions of historians are to the contrary, but that's another story. But in that kind of an atmosphere it is understandable that the United States government and the CIA consider that we were in a pretty embattled situation. It was not until about 1950 under the leadership of the Secretary of State, and against the opposition of the then-Secretary of Defense that we began to build up our armed forces again.

Now, this still is a pretty rough world situation and if there are ways in which we can do things by covert means that would hold off the time when we might have to consider whether you use major military means, I think we ought to maintain that capability. And I can never generalize against CIA-type activities, because I was a student in Germany and watched the storm troopers take the public platforms and the streets away from the democratic parties of Germany. And I would have been delighted in those days if there had been CIA's in Britain and France and the United States that could have come in there and found ways to help the democratic parties of Germany, and the failure to do so resulted in 50 million people being killed.

So I feel very strongly that although we ought to, that a President, Secretary of State, and Secretary of Defense must keep this sort of thing very much under control and take responsibility for it, that we must have this capability.

MR. BELIN: Do you have any observations concerning the effectiveness or any possible changes in the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board as an oversight vehicle or a related vehicle to CIA?

MR. RUSK: Well, I don't want to do a disservice to people who have rendered dedicated service. I have had the impression over the years the Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board gets to be more gung-ho than anybody else, and that sometimes some of these things are urged by the Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board which operationally may not make much sense. So I think that it is all right to have then advise, but they should not be permitted to make the decisions or to influence the decisions unduly.

MR. BELIN: In your opinion, are they an effective oversight agency at the present time?

MR. RUSK: Oh, I don't think they are effective, at least in my experience they have not been effective in the kind of oversight that is really needed. And I think the oversight should be given by those who are in positions established by our Constitution and statutes, the President, and the Secretary of State, and the Secretary of Defense.

MR. BELIN: Secretary Rusk, there have been recent allegations that the CIA was in some way involved with Lee Harvey Oswald. There have been also allegations that perhaps the State Department did not send over to the Warren Commission all of its files concerning Oswald and particularly about his trips abroad.

Do you have any comments concerning either of these allegations?

MR. RUSK: Well I never heard of Lee Harvey Oswald until the assassination, and we went through what I thought was a very intensive and thorough examination of the question as to whether any foreign government might have been involved with Lee Harvey Oswald, because that could have been an issue of war and peace.

Now, I personally was convinced that there was no indication that any foreign government was involved, and so testified to the Warren Commission, and my testimony is available to you.

I have never had any, the slightest reason to believe, that Lee Harvey Oswald was working for or pursuant to anything that came out of CIA whatever, and I must say, I really believe that anyone who charges that anyone in the United States government was involved in the assassination of Kennedy without hard proof is guilty of just sheer evil.

MR. BELIN: Did you ever come across any information in any manner whatsoever that indicated that Oswald was in any way connected with the FBI?

MR. RUSK: No.

Let me say that we did know of his travels and things of that sort. I am a little shocked to hear that there were materials in the State Department that were not turned over to the Warren Commission, because the order was to turn them all over.

MR. BELIN: When you say you were shocked to hear, you mean shocked that the allegation is that?

MR. RUSK: Shocked by the allegations, yes.

MR. BELIN: To your knowledge, was there any materials that were ever in the State Department files or any other government files that you know of that were not turned over?

MR. RUSK: Not to my knowledge, but sometimes when you are desperately looking for a piece of paper, it is often very hard to find it, and it is entirely possible that whatever the instructions might have been that there might have been something lying around and somebody didn't transmit it. Whether this was simply through bureaucratic clumsiness or whether it was through indiscipline, I just can't say.

MR. GRAY: Mr. Secretary, one point that came up last night was the question of oversight of CIA collection efforts. Now, the covert action is supervised by what was then the 303 Committee, and you testified that some sensitive or potentially risky types of collections were presented to you and other members of the Administration.

What about the day to day overseas collection by clandestine techniques, is there any supervision outside of the CIA of that?

MR. RUSK: I don't believe that it is necessary for the President and Cabinet officers to get into the details of collection, unless they involve methods and techniques which could raise major issues of policy.

In other words, I don't think we need to know who are the agents and things of that sort. I do think that the Director of the CIA ought to be in charge of his own shop, and I ought to think that each one of our Ambassadors abroad ought to have complete access to whatever is being done in the country to which they are assigned by any representative of the United States government.

President Kennedy wrote a letter to all Ambassadors on that particular subject. Now, as I checked around among different Ambassadors, a good many of them exercised that right under that letter. There were others who simply didn't because they didn't think it was worthwhile or necessary, or things of that sort.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. GRAY: Now, when the CIA has agents or sources of information in this country, whether because they are, let us say foreign diplomats, or in situations such as you had in the Miami area with the Cuban emigre community, is there anyone in a position comparable to that of the Ambassador overseas who is outside of CIA and can monitor this day to day activity, to your knowledge?

MR. RUSK: I think not in detail.

MR. GRAY: Would you think that there should be?

MR. RUSK: No more than anyone outside of the Department monitored these thousands of cables a day that go out of the Department of State.

MR. GRAY: Would you think that there should be some need for supervision of that kind of activity?

MR. RUSK: Well, it would require -- one man couldn't do it. It would require substantial staff and, well, who is that staff? To whom is he going to report? I just don't think that is too much of a problem, actually.

MR. BELIN: With regards to the question of staff, do you think a Joint Committee of Congress might have too powerful a staff so far as the effective operation of the Agency is concerned if we were to adopt that approach of Congressional oversight?

MR. RUSK: Well, if they approach it on the same basis as they approached the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, I think that would not be all that much of a problem.

MR. BELIN: You mentioned the Miami area. To your knowledge, did Castro had any penetration of what went on in the Cuban exile community in Miami?

MR. RUSK: I forget the detailed evidence, but I always assumed that he did have them penetrated.

MR. BELIN: Are there any questions by any members of the Commission?

MR. GRISWOLD: One of the things that has come to us is the explanation for some of the things which the CIA did from 1966 to 1973 domestically which had caused concern with a result of pressures from the President.

Now, how can the CIA be guarded against pressures from the President? I recognize this is an extraordinarily difficult question.

MR. RUSK: It is a difficult question, and in trying to find the right answer to that question you don't want to create a situation where CIA is independent of the President.

MR. GRISWOLD: Right.

MR. RUSK: So you have to start with the kind of man you have as President. However, I think that --

MR. GRISWOLD: And I took the time period in to indicate both Presidents so that it is not a political question.

MR. RUSK: Right.

I would think that the key to that would be that such questions should be discussed by the statutory members of the National Security Council. It would be very difficult for a President to abuse his powers with people sitting there who have a sense of the tradition of their office and who can pull a President up by the coattails and say, now, wait a minute, now this is out of bounds, let's don't go down that trail.

MR. GRISWOLD: What about the Bay of Pigs operation?

MR. RUSK: Well, some of us did not serve President Kennedy did not serve President Kennedy very well on that, because of just that factor. For example -- well, we were all new in our relations with each other, but in retrospect I should have insisted that a crucial question be asked of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and that is, if you were going to do this operation with American forces, what would you consider your requirements to be? And that is, ask the Joint Chiefs to come up with a plan to do this same operation with American forces. And I can guarantee you that what they would say would have been necessary for the job would have been in such sharp contrast to the capabilities of this brigade that that itself might well have squashed the whole thing. Since this was a CIA operation, I think the Joint Chiefs were perhaps a little timid -- well, no, let's put it the other way. They were not asked for the kind of professional military judgment to which the President should have been exposed. They did comment on it but in a rather, I thought at the time a somewhat casual way, because it was not strictly their business, you see.

Now, I think we learn a lot of mistakes in a very hard way with the Bay of Pigs, and I think that some of those, some of the reasons for that mistake ought to be impressed upon people's minds just as the mistakes made under the general situation called Watergate.

MR. BELIN: Do you mean to imply that the military should have taken over the operation?

MR. RUSK: No, no. No, no. But a seasoned, professional military judgment on the point as to whether such a brigade had the chance of a snowflake in hell.

MR. KIRKLAND: Do you think there is a built-in tendency in the CIA, with the background of the way this was evolved, toward a degree of adventurism which needs fairly severe checking?

MR. RUSK: It is possible that at different periods there might have been those who were too much the eager beavers, but my concern now is that they have had the daylights scared out of them and they will crawl off under their shells and will be too timid.

MR. BELIN: Dr. Shannon, I believe you had a question?

DR. SHANNON: Yes.

I wondered, you said that this is on covert activities, and again, this is only partially a responsibility of this Committee, but it does affect our concerns, because the back-up for the covert activities very often has domestic implications. So I wonder, you say we should keep this capability, yet apparently originally it resided, right after the Second World War, in the State Department, and the suggestion has been made that perhaps a small, covert capability could be in the State Department, and that this would perhaps help the CIA if it were rid of covert business to concentrate on intelligence.

Do you have any views on this?

1b

MR. RUSK: Well, it is very hard for us to lose an organization in our governmental structure, to tuck it away where nobody hears about it and it doesn't come before parliamentary review and things of that sort. And maybe we should have tried that at the beginning, because so much of CIA's activities are for all practical purposes overt, and maybe we might have had something called a Central Information

Agency, and then tucked something away somewhere that would be as secret as some of those agencies in other governments that operate in this field. But I just don't know whether that would work in our particular, complicated, Constitutional system where the powers of Congress are always involved, and it is difficult for us to hide things away.

MR. SHANNON: I have a couple of more questions, if I may.

MR. BELIN: Go ahead, and then General Lemnitzer has some.

MR. SHANNON: Do you have any views as to the general, without going into specifics, the general aspect of domestic activities of the CIA? And clearly, one of the problems with this Commission is the clear and conflicting, well, clear, clear necessity of intelligence and secrecy on the one hand, but conflicting claims of constitutional rights and civil rights for individual citizens of the United States.

MR. RUSK: It seems to me, sir, that they are two different questions. One is the bureaucratic question as to whether one agency is intruding onto the proper responsibilities of another agency. To me, that is not all that much of a big deal, and that occurs all of the time all over government, and I am sure that the FBI has stepped outside of its assignment occasionally.

But the other question you have mentioned, the question of the Constitutional rights of American citizens, from whatever source, I think is very important. Last year I testified before Senator Muskie's Committee in which I expressed some doubt about subjecting all surveillance type activities of the unusual type to the supervision of the courts in this country on the ground that I was a little troubled about the idea of getting the judges into this kind of business, because it is a mean and dirty business.

Since then, I have rather changed my mind, and I am inclined to think that where the government feels that there must be the types of surveillance which could intrude on constitutional rights, that for whatever it might be, foreign policy, national security or otherwise for American citizens and resident aliens, that that should be done under the supervision of a court.

Now, it is going to be difficult to state that in such a way as to exclude the diplomatic community, and I do not think we want to extend constitutional rights to the diplomatic community, because they do not have the duties of citizenship to go along with it.

MR. SHANNON: One other quick one here. I don't want to pre-empt the General, who has something, but you mentioned the CIA sometimes, you believe, got into some activities that were questionable because they had the money. They are exempted, essentially, from a number of the accounting responsibilities of other Federal agencies.

Is this essential to their functions, or do you believe that some regular appropriation control over them similar to the State Department and other would be possible without destroying their role?

MR. RUSK: I am inclined to think that at least part of the CIA budget ought not to be on the public record. It may be that there is a part of it that can be, but I think there ought to be some covert money that is available to the CIA handled by people in the Congress who understand what is being done and the need for this for covert funds.

I personally would not like to see this handled in the normal budgetary processes of the government. And for example, we give away an enormous amount of information every year in these large budget presentations of the Department of Defense to the Congress, and I think certainly in the sensitive agencies we overdo public knowledge to some extent.

MR. LEMNITZER: We have had a suggestion that if the government continues to support covert operations that the covert operations should be removed from the CIA and put in a central intelligence group, which was the arrangement in the early days between the transition from OSS to CIA.

Do you think such an arrangement would solve any of the problems that are involved in carrying out effective covert operations?

MR. RUSK: I can imagine there could be some advantage to a reorganization that would change the names all around, because CIA has gotten to be a kind of a slogan for propoganda, both overseas and at home. And sometimes a fresh start might help in that regard.

But I don't believe that you would divert energetic and opposition Congressmen or investigative reporters or any people of that sort from trying to locate whatever it is we are talking about, and I am sure they would discover it. The simple fact is that we are a government that just doesn't know how to keep our mouths shut, and so I don't think you are going to succeed in hiding some such agency. But I can see that it might be desirable at some point to start over and change the names.

As you recall, in the foreign aid business we have changed the name about every four or five years, when it runs out of gas and needs a fresh start. And so I think we could do it again.

MR. BELIN: Secretary Connor, do you have any other question?

Do you have more, General?

MR. LEMNITZER: No.

MR. CONNOR: Mr. Secretary, we have received evidence about a feud that developed between the FBI and the CIA when J. Edgar Hoover was the FBI Director. And the testimony indicates that under his instructions there was a lack of effective cooperation between the FBI and the CIA, at least in certain respects during a period of time, and, therefore, there was pressure on the CIA to do some things in the domestic field that otherwise would have been done by the FBI or by joint action.

I wonder if in light of that experience, of which I am sure you are aware, you would have any recommendations for a clear delineation of responsibilities as between the FBI and the CIA, and particularly with respect to what is done in the United States?

MR. RUSK: Well, I can understand why some confusion might have arisen because the Director of Central Intelligence is also the Director of Central Intelligence for the community as a whole, and we used to get daily reports from the CIA which were all source reports. I mean, I could recognize a good many of these reports as coming out of State Department cables, for example, and I knew others probably came from the FBI.

Now, it may well be that that coordinating function of DCI led to some staff support in his own agency on some of these, what some people might call internal security questions. But I think a more important point is if you try to assign functions, it is very hard to do it in terms of geography, because espionage and counterespionage is a problem that exists in the United States as well as abroad. It is very hard to say that as soon as you hit the boundary of the United States you transfer the whole business from one operation to another, because I think you run into a good deal of trouble that way.

It is true that there was some lack of effective cooperation between the CIA and the FBI at times, and this is partly a matter of personality, and is one of the reasons that I feel that these people ought to be on terms not to exceed eight years. I testified to Senator Muskie's Subcommittee that talking to J. Edgar Hoover was about like talking to President DeGaulle, and, you know, there is only one DeGaulle and there is only one J. Edgar Hoover, so I anticipate this problem is not going to be repeated any time soon.

But, I do think that there ought to be a close working relationship.

Now bear in mind, gentlemen, that there is a very lively and active exchange of information between different elements of the intelligence community, and I have no doubt that other agencies have built up files which include a lot of raw data from the FBI, even though it was not in that agency's principal charter to have, or to collect, that kind of information. For example, in the State Department where 95 percent of our jobs, at least, are rated as sensitive, there is investigation of applicants, many of whom are not hired. There is investigation of officers on the job. That is renewed, I think, every five years to bring their security clearances up to date. Every time you move from one security clearance to another, you get another investigation. There must be tens of thousands of files on individuals in the State Department, but a lot of that material is from the FBI.

So I think, if we could -- I think we have an opportunity now to develop a more cooperative working relationship within the intelligence community, and make it clear that CIA is not responsible for what would normally be interpreted to be internal security, but I would not exclude CIA from a lively interest in the operations of foreign governments in this country, because you cannot separate those from their activities abroad.

MR. BELIN: Dean Griswold?

MR. GRISWOLD: Were you familiar with the fact that mail between the Soviet Union and the United States was being intercepted and opened during all of the time you were Secretary of State?

MR. RUSK: I think I was of the fact. I didn't know to what extent, and I think we did make some adjustments there to relax on a good many publications and things of that sort where there was no particular, seemed to be no particular, problem. I was curious the other day to read a manuscript that came the other day to the University of Georgia Press that at the beginning of the Republic there was a rigorous scrutiny of the mails for quite a long time before people began to move in to institute some privacy in the mails. I will try and get some citations on that for the staff to look at. But this is not new in our history.

MR. GRISWOLD: I was not thinking of publications, but of letters. Did copies of such letters ever come to you in intelligence reports?

MR. RUSK: No. It wouldn't come to me in that form, sir. Normally it would come to me as a piece of information, and it would normally have some introductory phrase, and this was for the purpose, I suppose, of protecting sources, some introductory phrase saying usually reliable sources, or somethin of that sort.

Then if I wanted to prick up my ears and ask about the source for a particular item, I could do so and I would be told. I don't recall any instance, any information that came out of this mail that ever caused me to ask for a source, and it turned out to be opening mail.

MR. BELIN: Mr. Kirkland, do you have any questions?

MR. KIRKLAND: I have a couple, Mr. Secretary.

Do you recall any constant, repeated concern by President Johnson to find out foreign sources of support for the domestic dissident groups, that this was an issue that he was continually concerned with?

MR. RUSK: Well, we were interested in that point. I think that we were inclined to assume that it was occurring, because it would be a perfectly normal and natural thing to occur under the circumstances of that period.

I didn't have any real doubt in my mind, although I don't have in my mind a list of citations I can give you for hard proof, but I am sure it occurred, and there were in terms of movement of money and movement of people and things of that sort.

Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. RUSK: There were black operations going on all of the time in this country.

MR. KIRKLAND: Do you see any apparent reason why the CIA should not properly attempt to try to find out what those sources were?

MR. RUSK: No, I think somebody has got to.

MR. KIRKLAND: Do you have any doubts about that being a proper operation of the CIA?

MR. RUSK: I don't think so. I think that in terms of action that it should not be CIA's action in the sense of breaking and entering and things of that sort. I think that the FBI ought to be the action responsive agency in this country, as I have said.

MR. KIRKLAND: Domestic in terms of working overseas?

MR. RUSK: Oh, overseas, I think it is essential for CIA to try to run down that kind of thing because we are the targets of a good many political systems.

MR. BELIN: Secretary Rusk, as a general overview, you might relate to the Commission the comment you had last night concerning the fact that there is no real substitute for the getting of people of character and quality on the job, and sometimes mistakes are made by the frailties of human nature.

MR. RUSK: Well, now that I am permanently a private citizen and think back on the years during and since World War II, I just don't believe that there is any way in which you can guarantee through organizational devices or arrangements that you escape the frailties of human nature. There are going to be mistakes, mistakes of judgment. Any of us who have served in government have had our share of them. I have had mine. And therefore, the greatest importance has to be assigned to the character of those who are carrying the responsibility as well as insistence upon adherence through all ranks of the policies established by the President and through his delegated deputies. I happen to believe that in the Executive Branch of the government that those in civilian clothes are as responsible to the President as are people in uniform, and that otherwise our system of democracy would break down, because nobody elected these people in civilian clothes to make policy or appeal to a higher law and defy the President.

They elected the President and the Congress to determine the policies of the government, and so I think we ought to look for people of the highest competence and the strongest characters to take these jobs of responsibility, and then we will have to rely upon them. I do not see any way in which you can guarantee that there would not be mistakes and failures and occasional stepping across the bounds.

MR. CONNOR: Mr. Secretary, would you comment on the obedience of a Cabinet official or highly placed Federal official who was ordered by the President to do something that violates the law clearly or is unconstitutional?

MR. RUSK: No, no. I was once instructed by President Kennedy to make an expenditure which my lawyers told me was unlawful, that the money was not for that kind of purpose, and I spoke to the Attorney General about it and said what do I do. And I think his reply was well, if you go to prison, your salary will continue while you are in prison.

Well, that was not very helpful. But anyhow, I refused to make the expenditure and told the President why, and he did not pursue it.

No, I think that there can come a time when if a President persisted then the Cabinet officer would have to resign, if that is what the President wanted to do.

MR. CONNOR: I agree with that interpretation.

MR. BELIN: I also think you commented that things sometimes don't go right anywhere else either, including the law as well as business and labor, and so we can't always expect to go right in government. Is that a fair summary?

MR. RUSK: Any institution is going to have its problems, because we are all people with feet of clay, and those feet of clay are going to show once in awhile.

MR. BELIN: Do you have any other comments you want to make to the Commission in closing?

MR. RUSK: I think my strongest concern, gentlemen, is that during this present period of nervousness and sensatinalism and investigation and reassessment that we not come out of this period with a serious crippling of our intelligence community and of our capability to engage in certain operations which are in lieu of war.

Now, at the present time there is a strong mood of withdrawal from world affairs among the American people. You can look at a lot of polls and investigations and get impressions around the country, and one gets the feeling at the present time that the American people would not support the use of American armed forces anywhere in the world unless there were a direct attack upon a territory of the United States itself.

Now, that could mean that there could be steady inroads on what we would think of was the Free World by those who were committed to impose something else on the Free World. And we can find ourselves in a situation where little by little a situation builds up where we are in such a desparate situation then that we have to face the agony of a nuclear decision, and then we are all dead.

And I would hope that we would maintain a capability of trying to deal with some of these situations at an early stage through careful and sophisticated political activity that would help us avoid the horrendous decisions that might lie at the end of the trail if the present trends continue too far into the future.

MR. BELIN: Are there any other questions by the members of the Commission?

MR. SCHWARZER: Dave, do you have a minute for a question?

MR. BELIN: Yes.

MR. SCHWARZER: I wanted to ask you, Secretary Rusk, whether you thought in line with your suggestion that we should attract the best possible men for the job of DCI, whether it would help to assign Cabinet level status to that position and whether that would perhaps make him a more effective person in the efforts to coordinate the activities of the intelligence community and how that would work?

MR. RUSK: I am not sure that that is very important, quite frankly, because the Cabinet is not that important as a corporate body. In our system, the Cabinet really is not a policymaking group. The chain of command goes from individual Cabinet officer to the President, and the Cabinet is usually an information exchanging body.

And secondly, I just don't believe we improve things very much by the continual inflation of titles. When I became Assistant Secretary of State, there were three. I think now there must be eighteen people in the State Department that either carry the title or have the equivalent rank.

I remember once one of our experienced former Ambassadors was cautioning on this and he said, bear in mind that the term Madam started as the address for a Queen. Now, so I really don't believe that changes in title make any difference, and I don't believe adding him to the Cabinet will. I think it is much more important that he be closely with and always present at the meetings of the National Security Council, because that is where the real decisions have to be made.

MR. KIRKLAND: Mr. Secretary, I have the impression that in the Foreign Service, the Office of the Inspector General is a fairly critical one and has a substantial amount of authority and an important role in the administration. Do you feel that a strengthening of that operation inside of the CIA would be desirable to help?

MR. RUSK: Of an Inspector General type operation inside of the CIA?

MR. KIRKLAND: Yes.

MR. RUSK: I think that would be very useful. I also think it might be well --

MR. KIRKLAND: It is true that it is a very important operation.

MR. RUSK: It is, and I tried to strengthen it in some respects when I was there. I think also the Inspector General of it or the Inspectors of the State Department ought to check when they make their visits to Embassies, check with the Ambassadors on the extent to which he is fully in charge of all activities by all officials of the American government, whatever their agency or department in his own Embassy in the country to which he is assigned, and that this letter of President Kennedy's, which is a matter of public record, should be emphasized so that if anything does go wrong, it is the Ambassador who is held responsible in the first instance.

MR. BELIN: That assumes the Ambassador will be tight-lipped on all occasions, I assume?

MR. RUSK: Would be what?

MR. BELIN: Tight-lipped at all times?

MR. RUSK: Yes, but I think on matters of this sort he is likely to be, because of the consequences of his not being, at least in the country where he is assigned.

MR. BELIN: Any other comments that you would like to make for the Commission, sir?

MR. RUSK: I don't think so.

MR. BELIN: Thank you very much for coming up here and bearing with us last night. Thank you, very much.

Now we have one more witness this morning.

If you would raise your right hand to be sworn, please, this is Mrs. Sammie Newman, a Notary Public for the District of Columbia.

MRS. NEWMAN: Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

MR. GRAY: I do.

MR. BELIN: Thank you very much.

TESTIMONY OF GORDON GRAY

MR. BELIN: I wonder if you would state your name for the record, sir.

MR. GRAY: My name is Gordon Gray, no middle initial.

MR. BELIN: Mr. Gray, you have had quite extensive service with the government of this country, and I wonder if you could briefly summarize that for the Commission?

MR. GRAY: It would be easier, sir, if I use a few notes. I think we can do it more quickly.

Well, I served in the United States Army from 1942 to 1945, first as a private, being released as a Captain. This was near the close of the War.

I came back, I came to Washington, I served overseas I might say in General Bradley's Advanced Headquarters while I was overseas as a juniormost officer in his Advanced Headquarters. I came back out of the Army in 1947 and became an Assistant Secretary of the Army in 1949, and became Under Secretary of the Army and then Secretary of the Army, which post I held until some time before the Korean War broke out.

I then became a Special Assistant for President Truman for the purpose of writing a report on foreign economic policy which was published in November, I guess, of that year. After the election, in 1951, I came back to Washington at President Truman's request to organize an organization which was somewhat abortive, known as the Psychological Strategy Board, but which put me in very close contact, in contact, with the intelligence matters, obviously.

MR. BELIN: Where physically did that Board meet?

MR. GRAY: That Board physically met in 712 Jackson Place. As a matter of fact, that is where it was organized and created.

MR. BELIN: Pardon me. Go ahead.

When you and I met this morning at 712 Jackson Place at our Headquarters, it was like going home to you in a sense, wasn't it?

MR. GRAY: It was, and that's not the end of it, as you will see in a moment.

In 1953 I was a member of the so-called Jackson Committee, and I think it was called the President's Committee on International Information Activities headed up by William Harding Jackson, and C.D. Jackson was a member of the Committee, and one of the principal staff members was Wayne Jackson, and so it got to be known as the Jackson Committee, but it was a Committee set up to study the Cold War, and what we should do about it by President Eisenhower.

In 1955 -- well, in the meantime, in 1950, I had gone to the University of North Carolina to preside there. I came back here in 1955 as Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs. In 1956, I became a Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization. In 1958, I became Special Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs.

And I may say that when this was done, this was my office.

MR. BELIN: This was in 1956 as Director of ODM or 1958-59?

MR. GRAY: In 1958, my office, I had to go down to the corner of the building, and I have forgotten which floor, and I have been into this building so many times.

MR. BELIN: So the Vice President's Conference Room is where you once sat?

MR. GRAY: That's right.

And then in 1961 I became a member of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, appointed by President Kennedy and reappointed by successive Presidents, although I think it is fair to say that the present President has taken no action with respect to this Board.

MR. BELIN: Basically you have been a member of the PFIA since 1961, is that correct?

MR. GRAY: Yes, since May. I looked it up this morning and I thought it was earlier, but it turns out to have been May 6, 1961.

MR. BELIN: And you were a member of the National Security --

MR. GRAY: 16 May, excuse me.

MR. BELIN: And you were a member of the National Security Council until the 1949 amendments to the Act, I believe. Is that accurate?

MR. GRAY: That is right, and the first act which created -- well, it was in the national military establishment, not the Defense Department and the Service Secretaries were all members of the National Security Council. And I briefly served when I became Secretary. Then in '49 the Act was changed, and the Defense Department was created, and various other changes were made, and the Service Secretaries were dropped, and I often say that Stuart Symington and I are the only two people who have ever been kicked off of the National Security Council and are still alive.

Later, of course, as Assistant Secretary of Defense, ISA, I was the backup to the Secretary of Defense, and attended the National Security Council meetings with him, briefed him on the meetings, and my next assignment, ODM, I was a member, statutory member of the Council, and then beginning in '58 until the end of the Administration, I helped the President run the Council.

MR. BELIN: Did you in your work, either on the National Security Council or as backup representative, did you ever feel the National Security Council undertook very much oversight of the CIA?

MR. GRAY: Well, I would know more clearly in the years from '58 to early '61, because I was really a part of the machinery of the Council. There was not much continuing oversight in the sense of the Council members examining what the various intelligence agencies were doing. There was an annual review of the activities of the Central Intelligence Agency, and of course, every meeting of the NSC began with a briefing by the DCI, which necessarily kept the members informed about certain or many aspects of intelligence. But I think it fair to say that the Council itself did not specifically spend much time reviewing intelligence activities. The Council did, of course, in a paper -- this is perhaps known to the members, and I don't want to cover a lot of ground which you have covered -- the Council had as the Chairman well remembers, adopted a paper called NSC 54/12, which really authorized the covert, the beginning of the covert activities of the Agency. That Committee, I think the Chairman of this Commission served as the President's representative on it for awhile, and of course, I did later when I was a special assistant.

But it underwent several changes in name. I changed it from 54/12 to the Special Committee, because the press by that time had gotten wind of it, and my own theory, and this is an aside, gentlemen, but in your recommendations, if you want to change some things that will get some things less visibility, one way to do it I believe is to change the name of things. It takes the press a little longer to catch on after you have given it a brand new name. Call it the Cavinaugh club or anything you like.

MR. BELIN: Now, you have served on the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board since 1961?

MR. GRAY: '61.

MR. BELIN: Do you have any opinion as to the viability of that board in general and also with specific reference to any oversight functions it might have performed with the CIA?

MR. GRAY: Yes, I do. My own strong feeling is that if the President does not have this board, he must have something like it. It is the only agency in government that I know of which on behalf of the President can oversee and interpret and understand the intelligence activities of all of the agencies of the government engaged in intelligence, which includes not only the CIA, but the DIA, and to some extent the AEC, to some extent the FBI, and other government agencies from time to time who find themselves involved purposefully or not in foreign intelligence activities. This board, I feel, should have the confidence of the President. He should be, feel comfortable with its membership. If any President inherits such a board and is not comfortable, then he ought to make his own board.

I am saying such a board is extremely important, especially if the recommendations of the Board get to the President, and there have been times in the past when they have not gotten to the President soon enough, and in some cases I am afraid not at all.

MR. BELIN: What particular types in the past are you referring to?

MR. GRAY: Well, I can speak very frankly. I think that it was more difficult at the beginning of the Nixon Administration than it had been in earlier days in having the reports, the written reports get to the Board, although I think it fair to say also that Mr. Nixon met fairly frequently with the Board.

MR. BELIN: Did Mr. Johnson meet fairly frequently with the Board?

MR. GRAY: Mr. Johnson, as I recall it, and I am going back some years now, and I have not checked the records, I think Mr. Johnson met twice with the Board, once for ceremonial purposes; that is, picture-taking, and once for substance. And General Eisenhower, for whom I was a liaison to the Board, met with the Board every three months for two or three hours. President Kennedy met almost every time the Board met, which was every other month. President Johnson practically not at all, and President Nixon quite a good deal. And we have had understandably only one with a President trying to get on top, a new President trying to get on top of his job. We did meet with him once or twice, I think, as Vice President.

Well, back to the Board. I think it is true, I think it is fair to say that either the Board or the members of the Board have been responsible for many of the innovations in the Intelligence field which have been vital to our national security. I have in mind the U-2, the reconnaissance satellite program, and at least the members of the Board had a good deal to do with that. The introduction of data processing in the intelligence community, for which the Board has fought for years with only I would say limited success so far, and the Board has very strong scientific expertise, and it has other expertise as we are now constituted, and as any board should have.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Economic activities, economic intelligence.

MR. GRAY: That's another thing. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Vice President.

Actually, when I say it has been innovative, the current activity in the United States Government, and interests in and reliance upon in the field of economic intelligence is larger than this board in the recommendations made to the President a couple of years ago, and I think the Board can be credited with that.

You asked me about oversight. We have tried to monitor the various agencies in the foreign intelligence field, the CIA, the DIA , and to some extent the others that I have mentioned, and I think we have been kept well informed. This Board has had all of the clearances that anybody in Government has. And I might say, Mr. Chairman, that to my knowledge in the years since 1956 when the first board was created, there has never been a leak from this board.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: That's right.

MR. GRAY: And that is a record that is hard to match in this town I must say, either in the Executive agencies, and especially on the Hill. That is one reason I think that this is a reliable mechanism, because the members are loyal, it is a small and lean staff, and it undertakes studies in addition to its general monitoring responsibilities. It undertook studies on its own initiative, or some at the request of the President or a representative of the President, and some of these have been very important. Again, sometimes nothing seems to happen to them. The Board made a very important study about our naval forces, now quite some time ago, and it has gone nowhere.

The Board made a rather important study I think about human intelligence,the most comprehensive study that has ever been made in the government, and the first one that has been made at all in many years. I have to credit the atmosphere for the failure of that report to go very far, because obviously when you are talking about human intelligence, you raise questions which are involved in Watergate and this kind of phobia that people have.

On the other hand, the Presidents have by and large accepted the very many recommendations of the Board over the years which I believe have tended to strengthen the intelligence community, and without which it would not be as mature and sophisticated as it is today.

MR. BELIN: Mr. Gray, you mentioned that you were the advisor for National Security Affairs for President Eisenhower.

During the Eisenhower Administration did you ever hear any discussion of what was known as an Executive Action Capability which might be defined as a capability to assassinate foreign political leaders?

Have you ever heard that expression?

MR. GRAY: I don't remember ever hearing that expression until we talked this morning. I mean, I don't remember while I was in government hearing this expression.

MR. BELIN: You never heard the phrase until I asked you the first question in our interview this morning, is that correct?

MR. GRAY: That is correct.

MR. BELIN: While you were working with President Eisenhower, did you ever hear any discussion of any operational plan to try and assassinate any foreign leaders, and specifically Castro or Trujillo?

MR. GRAY: I would like if I may, Mr. Chairman, to not answer that yes or no because it is a complicated question. I would suppose if one were serving in government, and he would put the national security interests ahead of most everything else, he would not fail to think about assassination if this were a vital necessity to the national security. I think you would consider anything, and I have no doubt that at various times and at all levels, without the knowledge of any President, people have talked about assassination. But I know of no plan, plot, operational organization that ever came to President Eisenhower with respect to any assassinations, and specifically including those that you have mentioned.

Now, it is my impression that there was -- I would be surprised if there was any American discussion even of the question of the assassination of Trujillo. But you asked about Castro. I don't know how much detail I should go into, but I can say I am willing to go into detail if the members are interested. There is a memorandum covering every discussion President Eisenhower had with respect to Cuba, beginning in the winter of 1960, which ultimately culminated in the Bay of Pigs operation in 1961, he having approved a four point program, sabotage, stepped up economic sanctions, propaganda, and the training of Cuban refugees.

I am reasonably sure that if Truman had ever -- I mean that if Castro had ever been a target of the President or the top people who were engaged in this program which he had authorized, certainly there would have been talk of assassination at that time, and I never heard it even hinted at. So specifically, I had a chance to see if the plans, or at least the training and other activities which would lead perhaps to a change in governments in other places, in another place, and I never heard the word assassination or anything of the equivalent mentioned once.

MR. BELIN: While you were serving on the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, did you ever hear that discussed?

MR. GRAY: Well, I never heard it discussed in the sense that the Board ever seriously discussed it. There was a member of the Board who is a well known individual. He is no longer on the Board, who practically every time the Agency people came before us and briefed us on Vietnam, he said have you considered trying to bump off some of the leaders in North Vietnam, and the CIA would shrug, and then the next time they would come back a couple of months later, and he would say have you thought of trying to bump off some of the leaders in North Vietnam, and I heard that kind of discussion. But you never had any taker from the CIA. And, indeed, that has been my understanding beginning with Allen Dulles, and with all DCI's since, that Agency policy was against assassination on the ground that it didn't accomplish anything when you get right down to it.

But I might volunteer one other thing, Mr. Belin. When I was a special assistant to the President and presided over the planning board, which in those days, in the Eisenhower days, prepared all of the papers which went to the National Security Council, we were doing a paper on the Near and Middle East. This was within -- was at the time when Colonel Nasser was riding very high in the saddle, and the big issue in this paper was what were going to be the relationships of this government to Colonel Nasser, and the opinions ranged everywhere from assassination on the one hand, suggested by somebody, to the other extreme, and that was that we get in bed with Nasser because he was considered to be the wave of the future.

Well, when the paper got written, there was no mention of assassination and no consideration even given to it. In fact, the paper came down about the middle of this thing, which was where it should have come. But I am saying that that is why I wanted to not say yes or no. I have heard the word assassination mentioned, but I know of no plan or operational capability that has ever been authorized at any high level of government.

MR. BELIN: You are saying you might have heard on occasion one person discuss it, but that was never in any way adopted as a policy, to the best of your knowledge, during the Eisenhower administration?

MR. GRAY: That is correct.

Now, how many other times it might have been discussed down in the bowels of some agency, I would have no way of knowing.

MR. BELIN: You mentioned to me early this morning that President Eisenhower talked to you about having the '54/12 Committee looking over activities of the Agency with regard to an oversight function.

Do you want to discuss that with the Commission?

MR. GRAY: Yes. Well, I really had forgotten what we discussed.

MR. BELIN: You talked about it particularly with reference to activities which might impinge upon governments.

MR. GRAY: Yes, indeed. When I became Special Assistant the President called me in with Allen Dulles, then DCI, and well, I think of Allen Dulles, but anyway, if it wasn't Allen Dulles, I then communicated this message to Allen Dulles. This I think was soon after the disclosure of the Berlin Tunnel, which some of you will remember as a very successful intelligence operation, and the President told me that he wanted the '54/12 group to pass upon all activities of this government which impinged upon the sovereignty or the people of some other nation. For example, the Berlin Tunnel, this was after the fact, would have been such, and overflights would have been such, and the '54/12 has always concerned itself in its successive incarnations with the overflight problem. President Eisenhower was very sensitive to the necessity of having the top people in government from the appropriate agencies pass upon the wisdom, and in some cases, feasibility of those kinds of operations. There were times when in the covert action field I would, in effect, appeal a decision of the 54/12 or the Special Group because I wondered whether it was in the national interest and when I took it back to the President from the Committee, I think at least on two occasions or on both occasions he overruled me in support of the Committee. But at least the matter got the attention of the President. There were not assassinations, I should say, but covert actions.

MR. BELIN: You also mentioned, though, that if there would have been discussion of assassinations with the President, that he was a staff man, and you feel that as a key person on the staff you would have been advised.

Is that a fair summary?

MR. GRAY: Let me say that in the time I served, Andrew Goodpasture, lately General Lemnitzer's eloquent successor as Commander of NATO, General Goodpasture was called Staff Secretary in the White House, and he was a good deal more than that. He was the President's right hand man for support matters in relationships with the Joint Chiefs, immediate relationships with all kinds of entities in Government, whereas my job was more in the long range field and the planning field.

Well, it is obvious that if we had not been men of good will and loyalty, this could have caused a lot of trouble, so we kept each other mutually informed. I told him about what was going on in the Special Group field, and he told me of all of the things that the President was asking him to do. And then when Eisenhower, General Eisenhower went out of office, these functions were sort of combined, first into McBundy, and then Walt Rostow, and what every other special assistant there had been. In other words, there was not Gray and Goodpasture, there was Bundy. This is clear? So now, in response to your question, I have recently been in communication with Andrew Goodpasture, and I am able to say to you that neither of us, now back to assassination, remembers anything coming to the White House, and I cannot believe that anything could get to the President without going through one of us.

MR. BELIN: Is it a fair summary that he did believe strongly in staff?

MR. GRAY: He was the most staff minded -- well, that is a big statement. He was a very staff minded president.

MR. BELIN: We also talked this morning about the question of Congressional oversight, and some people have suggested the possibility of having a Joint Committee of Congress akin to the Atomic Energy Committee, perhaps, performing Congressional oversight in lieu of the present Congressional structure.

Do you have any comments on that?

MR. GRAY: I do, yes.. In the first place, I think the present situation where, if I understand it correctly, if the Agency seeks to undertake or does undertake a covert action, must not only be reported to the appropriate Congressional Committees, whatever they are, but approved by the President, and someone told me this means that about 80 people up on the Hill would know about this. I personally happen to think that there are many agents that have influence on Capitol Hill, and I think that there is a greater need for a tighter rein on security information going just like a shotgun to the Congress. I would worry then, about a Joint Committee such as you suggest, not because of the Committee itself, but because Joint Committees tend to generate large staffs, and are frequently, not always, the Committee becomes the captor of the staff. But I would worry most about leaks out of such a large staff, and there is not any question that much of this stuff that is appearing in the press, which in my judgment should not appear in the press, is coming right from Capitol Hill. So I would think that oversight Committees are appropriate in the Congress, and obviously the Congress should have the authority and the power to oversee what they want to oversee, and perhaps their oversight Committees have not been as active as they might have been, or as aggressive. That is easily corrected.

I can visualize some situations when a Congressman would not want to know some of the things that the Agency is doing.

MR. BELIN: We also discussed this morning your concern about leaks from people who have worked within the Agency and then have left the Agency.

Do you have any comments about that?

MR. GRAY: Yes, I do. I feel very strongly that the Congress should be encouraged to enact legislation which would give the Agency at least the same protection that the IRS has or the Agricultural Department has.

Now, it does not even have the protection of its information that the Internal Revenue Service has, and this to me is just nonsense. I believe in the right of privacy. I am for keeping the Internal Revenue records private. But I am not for telling the whole world about what is going on in the intelligence community. And right now there seems to be no way to stop this process, and it is not that one worries about so much having people know what the Agency is doing, but people's lives are being put in jeopardy, and people's lives are going to be lost as a result of some of these disclosures. The DCI is by statute charged with the protection of sources and methods of intelligence gathering. This absolutely destroys his statutory authority. He cannot protect sources and methods if anybody, any disgruntled former employee can write a book.

So without being specifically familiar, I think there is legislation pending, or I know Director Colby has proposed specific legislation to help alleviate this situation. I don't hope for, although I would welcome, an official Secrets Act such as we have in Britain, but then that is breaking down the old system, it's not working so well anymore, but I do believe that we ought to have some way to deter and punish those who deal lightly with the national security.

MR. BELIN: On the subject of the DCI, do you have any opinion of the problems that the DCI has as the Chief intelligence officer?

MR. GRAY: Yes. We have wrestled with this problem of leadership in the community. When I say we, I am speaking now not as a former Special Assistant, but if it is all right for me to speak as a member of the President's Board, how the community could be organized, and one of the problems has always been what I would describe as a constitutional problem. If X Agency has 60 percent of the dollars, and the head of Z Agency wants to or is told to give guidance and leadership, he simply cannot under our system give orders to a constitutional officer in another branch of government, specifically the Secretary of Defense. And at the same time, I feel there should be a chief intelligence officer of the Government. I think he must have the confidence of the President and a rapport with the President, and if he has that, his job is easier, and if he has to only persuade and request, but if your Committee is going to make recommendations about this, it seems to me that you might want to recommend that there be someone who is considered a chief intelligence officer, and that if you wish, it can be the DCI, or a new thought that we did not discuss this morning, there might be a special assistant to the President for intelligence affairs, and he could then represent the President across the board, and perhaps have greater success and leadership.

But I urge that you bear in mind the realities of the situation where one Agency simply cannot instruct another Agency under certain circumstances.

MR. BELIN: Do you have any opinion as to whether or not it is important to have an intelligence agency under civilian control?

MR. GRAY: Yes. I think it vitally important that it be under civilian control, and as a matter of fact, I would almost, I would almost think that would be axiomatic, although I think under the statute a military officer could be, and indeed, the first DCI I think, Hillenkoetter, Admiral Hillenkoetter, was indeed military. But I feel it should be under civilian control, and the issue we did not discuss this morning is one which I think this Commission must address itself to, and that is whether it is to be a careerist, or should it be an appointment of a citizen from private life.

Let me make the distinction clear. Richard Helms was a careerist, and John McCone was appointed from public life.

MR. BELIN: Do you have any opinion on that?

MR. GRAY: Yes. My own preference would be I think for a careerist, but if pressed now to name or give you some names of people in the Agency whom I would, and I think I know most of the top people, I would find it difficult to say to a President in good conscience, that I would recommend that you stick to a careerist. So that I have come down on a waffle there.

I have to say generally speaking I prefer a careerist, but in some cases I can see a very good intelligence officer who is not. I know, I happen to personally think that Allen Dulles was a fine intelligence officer. It was not his career, but he had been in it during the war, and successfully in it. He was more intelligence officer than administrator, but all in all, he served his country well in that post. But this is an issue which I don't really think there is any question about whether it be a civilian. The real question is whether you are going to have a policy or sort of play it by ear when the time comes to make a change.

MR. BELIN: Do you have an opinion concerning whether or not there should be amendments to the statutory charter of the Agency?

MR. GRAY: The statutory charter, as I understand it, and that was written before I came to Washington so I was not involved, but as I understand it, it was purposely written in somewhat vague terms to take care of situations that necessarily would be vague in and of themselves. I would see no objection to making it crystal clear, if people find it necessary, that the responsibilities of the Central Intelligence Agency are not in the domestic field, and do not involve domestic institutions or American citizens except insofar as the question of foreign intelligence activities becomes involved.

The trouble with trying to spell out the precise functions of the CIA and FBI, for example, this problem gets to be a very complicated one because there are a lot of grey areas, and to say that the CIA cannot have any personnel, and cannot be involved in this country, of course, is sort of silly. I am speaking now of not the intelligence analysis and publications, but I am talking about the acquisition of intelligence and counterintelligence and counterespionage. If you are too precise, then some matters are going to get lost between abroad and at home.

Now, there's got to be some way for the flow and transfer back and forth from the CIA and the FBI, so I would myself find it very difficult to see how the Congress could precisely define the functions of the Agency.

begin 1b

But I would see no objection to making it clear that the American people need not fear that we are going to have a national police force under the name of the CIA, and this is what we are talking about, or the FBI, for that matter.

MR. BELIN: Did any members of the Commission have questions?

Yes, Mr. Connor.

MR. CONNOR: Mr. Gray, you were talking about the qualifications for the position of Director of Central Intelligence. Based on your experience, would you limit the term of the DCI to any fixed period of time?

MR. GRAY: I would not.

MR. CONNOR: You would leave it at the pleasure of the President who appoints the person and subsequent Presidents?

MR. GRAY: That's right.

MR. CONNOR: Going back to your earlier testimony about your experience as assistant to the President for security matters, do you think it is wise for the same person to occupy that position and Secretary of State?

MR. GRAY: No, sir.

MR. BELIN: Any particular reason why you feel that way?

MR. GRAY: Yes. I think that the Secretary of State, the responsibilities of the Secretary of State are very clear. I think the responsibilities of the Secretary of Defense are very clear. I think the responsibilities of other executive agency heads are very clear. And I have a strong feeling that the Special Assistant for National Security Affairs should not be tied to any other agencies. I think he should be not a Secretary of Defense and a special assistant either. I think the special assistant should have his loyalty only to the President and not to any one department, and my own feeling is that the present situation creates some bottlenecks, administrative bottlenecks that should not exist.

MR. BELIN: Does that relate to your earlier testimony of actions by the Advisory Board perhaps not getting through to the President?

MR. GRAY: It relates in good measure to that. My own feeling is we have made recommendations to the President which have gone to the Special Assistant to the President, and then been bucked down to more junior people in the NSC staff, and which get to the President later or perhaps not at all. And my observation to you this morning, Mr. Belin, was that this Board is composed of big boys, and so if the President does not consider them big boys, he ought to get some big boys, and their studied conclusions should not be staffed out by junior people in the NSC staff.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: May I make a comment there?

The procedure which Gordon has just described is not limited to papers coming through NSC. This is a White House procedure established by President Nixon which involved all papers coming to the President, all of the staff work in this way, all of it was bucked down and staffed out so-called, in quotes, with the alternative recommendations, and it makes its way across the board so very little gets through to him without this staffing process.

So I think just to put it in perspective, this is a procedure which was developed by the Nixon Administration for staffing that involves all material.

MR. GRAY: I think it is fair to say, Mr. Vice President, that the fact remains that it does frustrate, I guess across the board, but it does frustrate.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: That is right.

MR. GRAY: And we, the Board, or the staff on the Board, has had the unusual experience, at least on one occasion, of saying you sent this paper over to the President for his recommendations, and would you please write for us the response that the President ought to make to it. So it is somewhat discouraging.

Now, if I could volunteer a couple of things?

MR. BELIN: Please feel free to volunteer whatever you would like to for this Commission.

MR. GRAY: All right.

Let me say, Mr. Chairman, just a few observations. I wish we in this country, and I wish this Commission, perhaps, would worry more about the KGB and the GRU than the CIA. By God, I think that here they are operating in this country, we know they are operating freely here, and in New York there has been a recent incident when a Soviet agent was caught red-handed, and he was not declared personna non grata because of detente, and this worries the very -- this worries me very much. They are operating, and as far as they are concerned, the Cold War has not abated one bit, and the Cold War I describe is that war below the public, diplomatic talks.

Now, they have got hundreds of agents in this country, and I have indicated that my guess is that they have agents of influence, if not precise agents, up on Capitol Hill. I know this, almost know this to be the fact. They are operating freely in this country, and here our newspapers are trying to tear apart one basic, absolutely basic element of our national security and anything the Soviets do, it's fine. So that is from the heart.

I did want to say a couple of things, that I think if there is to be a Presidential Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, one of its principal functions has got to be for the President to seek to avoid subjective judgments in the intelligence community, and this is very difficult to do. I will give you three or four examples, if I may, or three examples. The Cuban missile crisis. You will recall that there was a Congressional election in progress. You will recall that we were getting all kinds of refugee reports. You will recall that Senator Keating was sounding, and was almost ridiculed by the Administration at the time, and then you will recall finally the U-2 flight which disclosed the existence of these missiles, and thereafter we had constant surveillance and knew about it.

Well, now, I have talked then, I have conducted a post mortem of that crisis, and in my judgment, the intelligence failure, or it almost was a failure, because another three or four days, and these missiles would have been camouflaged, and we might not have known about them, was the fact that nobody wanted to find those missiles there. They knew the President didn't want to find missiles. The last thing he wanted in this campaign -- this is no criticism of President Kennedy. No President would want to find Soviet Missiles in Cuba. So that the then DCI, the Director of Current Intelligence, whom later, he carried in his briefcase for three weeks a cable on an agent report from Cuba which turned out to be an accurate description of these missiles, and he was then personally briefing the President, and he said I was never sure enough. There were so many other reports, and we knew they were false, that the weight of my gut feeling fell on the side of new missiles. Well, this is a subjective judgment which was dictated in part by what people wanted to hear.

Now, the Chairman of this Commission will remember in recent years the Board had been able to get out of the national intelligence estimates of offensive military capabilities of the Soviet Union, language to the effect that by no stretch of the imagination, and I am paraphrasing, can the Soviet Union be a threat in this area for ten years, this type of statement. They used to have a statement that there is no way to conclude that the Soviets would ever take action against an American reconnaissance satellite. Well, we got that changed. These are subjective.

When the missiles, it was a question of MIRVing the missiles, the Agency was about the last place in the government to believe that the Soviets were MIRVing missiles, and for some reason they didn't want to find missiles being MIRVed. So somebody on behalf of the President has got to watch this business of subjective judgments, passed forward as unfinished intelligence.

I did want to say, and I am afraid I have not said it here, and if I have, I hope you will stop me, I talked twice this morning, and I can't remember about the innovative role that the PFIA has played in terms of its numbers or the board, and I guess I mentioned the U-2 reconnaissance and the satellites and etc., and the economic reports of the Government. That reminds me.

Now, finally, one thing that might be considered, and I have suggested this in the Board from time to time, but it has never gone very far, and I'm not sure about its wisdom myself, one solution, one action that might be taken in connection with the covert activities of the Agency would be to move them to a warehouse in Philadelphia, or a music store in Dallas or something and get them out of Washington so that they are not on the cocktail circuit, although in fairness, I think that the Agency personnel through the years have done very damn well in not leaking. But if there is to be a reorganization, one thing that might be considered would be to keep the completely overt activities, which comprise, as you know, the majority of the CIA functions, or involve a majority of their personnel, and move the covert stuff outside, and just get it out of the nation's capital. I would not eliminate it because I think it is necessary. But this is a consideration which perhaps may not have been presented.

MR. BELIN: Are there any other questions by members of the Commission?

MR. LEMNITZER: Under whose direction would this new function outside be?

MR. GRAY: I would leave it under the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Could I ask, Mr. Gray, whether when he analyzed some of the statements that the FIAB had corrected, that were misleading, that came from CIA to the President, whether he has ever given consideration of whether FIAB has ever investigated the possibility of double agents in CIA being responsible for misleading information?

MR. GRAY: You mean whether I feel that some of these things --

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Were intentionally done to mislead, or whether it was just caution?

MR. GRAY: I think the latter, Mr. Chairman. I think we would be very foolish to assume that the Agency has not been penetrated. I think it would be a foolish assumption. After all, they are the number one target for the Soviet Union. But my guess is that they have not penetrated at the top among the people who actually have been writing these estimates.

Are you asking for my opinion? That is my opinion. But I think you would be making a mistake to assume that the great preoccupation of Mr. Angleton, who left the Agency, about penetration of the Agency, his preoccupation I think was not misplaced. It is entirely possible that we are penetrated.

MR. BELIN: Mr. Gray.

MR. MARVIN GRAY: Mr. Gray, I have one or two questions on the Dominican Republic, and the U.S. relations there in 1960. I believe the government from during 1960, moved from a large degree a policy of non-intervention, to a more active role of trying to topple the Trujillo regime. And in May of 1960, Ambassador Farland returned to Washington for consultation and reported that among the dissidents with whom he had contacts, that they reportedly wanted support, and one of the things that they needed was high powered rifles with telescopic scopes. Subsequently he was given clearance, or subsequently, I'm sorry, the Director of Central Intelligence was authorized by the Assistant Secretary of State to provide that assistance.

Did you know anything about that, do you recall any discussions of providing rifles to internal dissidents?

MR. GRAY: Was this in '60 or '61?

MR. MARVIN GRAY: 1960, sir, May and June of 1960.

MR. GRAY: I recall there was concern in this government about developments in the Dominican Republic. To the best of my recollection, I did not know about the military equipment that you were speaking of.

MR. MARVIN GRAY: At the very end of the Eisenhower Administration, November 29th, January 12th, the matter of the Dominican Republic was taken up at the Special Group and discussions were had to work with the internal dissidents and exiles, and also to furnish arms to the internal dissidents?

Do you recall those meetings particularly?

MR. GRAY: I don't recall those meetings particularly, but if you say that the Special Group did indeed do this, I will not say it didn't. I just don't remember this specific instance.

MR. MARVIN GRAY: If you can recall, who would it have been, or if you can speculate any, would it have been your understanding that such arms which were furnished were for the purposes of an internal uprising and something of that nature and not specifically for doing away with the leadership?

MR. GRAY: Well, as far as I am concerned, I would be shocked to be reminded of anything that had to do with doing away with the leadership. No, I would think our concern was, if we had that kind of concern, was with being of assistance to the dissidents, and not assassination, or that kind of activity.

MR. MARVIN GRAY: Thank you.

MR. BELIN: Any other comments that you want to make to the Commission, sir?

MR. GRAY: No. You have been very patient, and I am afraid that I have been somewhat longwinded.

MR. BELIN: You were patient to wait, and we are sorry you had to wait so long.

Any other questions by the Commission?

Thank you, sir.

MR. GRAY: Right.

(Whereupon, at 1:12 o'clock p.m., the hearing was recessed to reconvene at 2:30 o'clock the same day.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

(3:50 p.m.)

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: If you will raise your right hand, do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

MR. BISSELL: I do.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: We appreciate your coming.

TESTIMONY OF RICHARD M. BISSELL, JR.

MR. BISSELL: I am glad to be of any help I can.

MR. BELIN: Do you want to state your name before the Commission?

MR. BISSELL: Richard M. Bissell, Jr.

MR. BELIN: And Mr. Bissell, what is your educational background?

MR. BISSELL: Yale undergraduate education, and later a Yale Ph.D. in economics, and a year at the London School of Economics.

MR. BELIN: And you got your Ph.D. in 1939?

MR. BISSELL: I think it was '39, yes.

MR. BELIN: And then during World War II were you here in Washington?

MR. BISSELL: I was. I was in the War Shipping Administration, and later at the end of the war, in the Office of War Mobilization and reconversion.

MR. BELIN: And after World War II, then what did you do?

MR. BISSELL: I returned to MIT where I was then a member of the faculty for about two years. Then I came to Washington as Chief of Staff of something called the Harriman Committee, which was one of the planning committees for the Marshall Plan, and I then was recruited by Paul Hoffman to serve in the ECA from almost the beginning of the Marshall Plan, and did serve for three years, and then became Deputy Director of the ECA, and finally Acting Director. After that, two years in the Ford Foundation organization, but I still had my office here, and then I think it was in 1954, but I am a little vague, a year plus or minus on dates, to the Central Intelligence Agency.

MR. BELIN: And who asked you to come to the Central Intelligence Agency?

MR. BISSELL: Allen Dulles.

MR. BELIN: When he asked you to come to the CIA, in what capacity did you come?

MR. BISSELL: I had the title of Assistant to the Director oh, for about five years, as a matter of fact.

MR. BELIN: And then what?

MR. BISSELL: Then I became the Deputy Director of Plans, in I think the fall of or toward the end of '58, or the very beginning of '59.

MR. BELIN: And how long did you stay with the Agency?

MR. BISSELL: Until February of 1962, if memory serves.

MR. BELIN: And after leaving the Agency, then what did you do?

MR. BISSELL: I joined the staff of United Aircraft Corporation in East Hartford, where I had a very unrevealing title of Director of Marketing and Economic Planning. It really was a corporate planning responsibility.

MR. BELIN: Wasn't that 1964?

MR. BISSELL: Yes.

MR. BELIN: Before that you worked for the Institute of --

MR. BISSELL: Yes. I'm sorry. I skipped over two years as President of the Institute for Defense Analysis. It is to that that I moved directly from the CIA.

MR. BELIN: And you retired from the United Aircraft in 1974?

MR. BISSELL: That's correct.

MR. BELIN: Mr. Bissell, during the time that you were with the Agency, did you ever have any discussions with anyone in the White House concerning the planning of what was called an Executive Action Capability, which was defined in substance as a capability of the Agency carrying out assassinations, if required?

MR. BISSELL: My recollection of this is far from clear. But I am satisfied that very early in the Kennedy Administration I did participate in such conversations.

MR. BELIN: And do you have any recollection of with whom you might have participated?

MR. BISSELL: I am almost certain it was either Walt Rostow or McGeorge Bundy, or probably the former, and possibly both.

MR. BELIN: Do you remember specifically what, if anything, was discussed in any of those conversations?

MR. BISSELL: My recollection, which isn't too specific, is that this was a discussion of the desirability of developing such a capability within the CIA that presumably would be a small, special unit, and highly compartmented from the rest of the organization.

MR. BELIN: Did you have any feeling as to whether or not this was done with or without the knowledge or consent of the President?

MR. BISSELL: I had no specific feeling on that point, but I had a great deal of confidence that the two gentlemen whose names I have mentioned, would not have discussed this, discussed with me or encouraged any course of action that they were not confident the President would approve.

MR. BELIN: Did you ever have any such discussions with any official in the Eisenhower Administration?

MR. BISSELL: Not to my recollection, and I think I am almost sure that I did not.

MR. BELIN: Now, apart from discussions of an executive action capability, did you ever or were you ever aware of any development of plans inside of the Agency with a specific plan or goal of the assassination of any particular foreign leader?

MR. BISSELL: Yes, I was aware of investigation and planning to that end.

MR. BELIN: Will you please enumerate before the Commission which foreign leader or leaders were involved?

MR. BISSELL: There were three cases I remember. One of them would have involved Sukarno, the second would have involved Lumumba, and the third did involve Castro. I am not giving that order chronologically, I don't remember what the chronology was, but those are the three cases I remember.

MR. BELIN: Could you please state for the Commission your entire knowledge with regard to the Sukarno matter?

MR. BISSELL: There was planning of such a possibility. I believe this was initiated in the Far Eastern Division of the CIA. The planning progressed as far as the identification of an asset whom it was felt might be recruited for this purpose. The plan was never reached, was never perfected to the point where it seemed feasible. The difficulty concerned the possibility of creating a situation in which the potential agent would have access to the target, and because the plan never reached that stage, it was never, so far as I am aware, discussed outside of the Agency with a view to obtaining approval or authorization.

MR. BELIN: So far as your concern with the Agency, this would have required such approval or authorization before they would have undertaken such a plan?

MR. BISSELL: They would.

MR. BELIN: Does that relate not just to Sukarno, but with any other target?

MR. BISSELL: That is correct.

MR. BELIN: Now, what about Lumumba?

MR. BISSELL: The Lumumba case planning began, was initiated within the Agency, and in that case, on my initiative, a case officer was directed to look into the possibilities. He reported back in a matter of weeks and convinced me that this was probably unfeasible, and probably an undesirable course of action, and he recommended instead that a quite different kind of operation, somewhat larger in scale, be attempted for the purpose of discrediting Lumumba and undermining his authority.

MR. BELIN: To the best of your knowledge, did the Agency in any manner whatsoever, have anything to do with the death of Sukarno?

MR. BISSELL: Absolutely nothing.

MR. BELIN: Did the Agency have anything whatsoever to do with the death of Lumumba?

MR. BISSELL: Nothing.

MR. BELIN: All right, now, you said there was a third.

MR. BISSELL: The Castro case.

MR. BELIN: All right.

Could you tell the Commission the background of the Castro case?

First, before you answer that, I will ask you the same question about Lumumba that I asked you with regard to Sukarno. Would there have been any operational plan put into effect without approval from the White House on that kind of a situation?

MR. BISSELL: No, there would not.

MR. BELIN: All right.

Now, let's turn to Castro.

Could you tell the Commission about the Castro situation?

MR. BISSELL: I became aware, and the timing of this I believe was the very beginning of 1961, of the possibility that an assassination attempt might be planned using Mafia resources, or syndicate resources. My very uncertain recollection is that I first heard of this possibility from Shef Edwards, who I think has testified here.

MR. BELIN: He has been interviewed by me.

MR. BISSELL: I see.

MR. BELIN: And for the record, he was the head of the Office of Security?

MR. BISSELL: That's correct.

MR. BELIN: During this period of time in the Agency, is that correct?

MR. BISSELL: That is correct. You should, the Commission should also understand that this would have been a very different kind of an operation than anything that the Agency normally undertook in that it would not have been carried out through DDP; that is, Agency operational channels, or through any case officer in the clandestine service. The possibility that seemed to exist was that through several intermediaries, the Office of Security or the Director of Security could be, and indeed, was in touch with individuals in Las Vegas, who claimed they could make such an attempt using their own personnel. This possibility was discussed by me, again I think probably with Walt Rostow. It may possibly have been discussed directly with McGeorge Bundy, but I suspect that it was through Rostow who was then Bundy's assistant and on his staff. My impression, but again I must emphasize that this is an uncertain impression, is that I was encouraged to go ahead with the investigation and planning of this operation, and by investigation I mean simply to find out what would be involved to make some assessment of the likelihood of success, and other aspects of the matter.

Under the circumstances, this had to be and was the responsibility of Shef Edwards.

MR. BELIN: Again, I will ask with regard to this aspect of your testimony the same question I asked you concerning the executive action capabilities. Did you have an opinion as to whether or not what you refer to as this encouragement had any authorization from the President or that the President in any manner knew about this?

MR. BISSELL: I had no direct reason to believe that he did, but I will make the same answer, that I had a high degree of confidence that the gentlemen I was talking to in the White House, whom I have identified, would not have given such encouragement unless they were confident that it would meet with the President's approval.

MR. BELIN: Did you ever have any discussions with anyone in the Eisenhower Administration concerning any possible plan to assassinate Castro?

MR. BISSELL: I have no clear recollection of such a discussion, but there could have been.

MR. BELIN: Do you have any recollection, if it could have been, with whom that discussion might have taken place?

MR. BISSELL: I would suppose that it would have been with Gordon Gray.

MR. BELIN: If it occurred?

MR. BISSELL: If it occurred, but the balance of my recollection is that it did not occur.

MR. BELIN: Do you know whether or not during the last few months of 1960, which would have been in the Eisenhower Administration, any plans were developed within the Technical Services Branch of the Agency to develop any kind of poison pills that might be used to assassinate Castro?

MR. BISSELL: I very much doubt if any such development was attempted with this or any other specific operation in view, but the Agency did have and does have an on-going R&D program, and I am quite certain that products of this sort were among those that it had available.

MR. BELIN: Do you have any other recollections concerning the Castro matter at this time?

MR. BISSELL: I am vague as to the final outcome of that attempt. I do not recollect, I have no recollection of a specific authorization that it should go forward. I believe, however, that we probably did move to be in a position to carry it out, or to authorize it if authorization were received. One of the reasons were, I believe that my own recollection of the final stages of that plan is vague is that, as I have already explained, what it contemplated was furnishing probably, furnishing probably some money and such items as pills or other devices through a number of cut-outs or intermediaries to a group which we ourselves, of course, did not in any direct sense control. This was not an operation of such a character that the communications would run through Agency channels, or that authorization on the spot would be by Agency personnel, or that the Agency could precisely and tightly control it.

MR. BELIN: Did you ever call Mr. William Harvey, who was a CIA man to eventually take over this operation within the latter part of '61 or early '62?

MR. BISSELL: Now, I did ask Mr. Harvey to take over a part of our reviving efforts against Castro and the Castro Administration. I probably urged him to look into this plan that was by that -- that had been active or that had been the subject of active attention nearly a year before. I have no recollection of authorizing him to revive it, except to look at it as a plan, or to proceed with any action along those lines.

MR. BELIN: Do you have any personal recollection as to whether or not the pills or pills of any kind, poison pills were ever delivered into Cuba?

MR. BISSELL: I do not have any recollection of that.

MR. BELIN: One way or the other?

MR. BISSELL: One way or the other.

MR. BELIN: Do you have any recollection on any other facts relating to this matter?

MR. BISSELL: I don't believe so.

MR. BELIN: Now, I want to turn to the question of Trujillo. Do you want to take over the questioning on Trujillo, Mr. Gray.

MR. GRAY: Yes, if it's all right.

MR. CONNOR: Well, will we be coming back to the Castro matter?

MR. BELIN: Before we go to Trujillo, let's stop with Castro right now and find out if the commissioners have any questions.

MR. CONNOR: Well, I would have a question. At the time you had these discussions with either Mr. Walt Rostow or McGeorge Bundy or both, as you recall them, to whom in the Agency did you report?

MR. BISSELL: Allen Dulles, and well, or Mr. Cabell his Deputy.

MR. BELIN: And did you ever have any discussions with them about this matter before you talked to the Director of Security?

MR. BISSELL: Well, as I have already testified my impression is that the first time I heard about this was in my first conversation at least with the Director of Security, so that would have preceded any conversation with the Director. And my own belief is that matters took that cause I believe the original approach was made to the Agency, that this was not a matter of the Agency seeking out the individuals with whom subsequently messages were exchanged.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: You mean approached by the White House?

MR. BISSELL: No, approached by the syndicate interests, that they had their own very strong motivations for carrying out this.

MR. KIRKLAND: What was their price if they would cooperate?

MR. BISSELL: Well, they had, as I say, very strong motivations on their own. You remember that Castro had fairly recently come to power. They had been powerful under Batista in Cuba, and they had a very lucrative set of interests for the syndicates, and they had been in effect been thrown out. There was still, of course, reasonably free travel, and so they had the strongest sort of reasons for anti-Castro sentiment on their own.

MR. KIRKLAND: But did they want any specific quid pro quo from the Agency?

MR. BISSELL: I'm sure they wanted some money as well as technical help, but I don't remember exactly what.

MR. CONNOR: Well, after you did learn about this from the CIA Director of Security, and then had some White House discussion, did you thereafter have any discussions about it with Mr. Dulles or his deputy?

MR. BISSELL: Yes, I am sure I did with Allen Dulles, simply that he should be aware that the planning was going forward. As a matter of fact, I believe the Director of Security had talked to Allen before I did on the matter.

MR. CONNOR: So that the subsequent activity and planning was with his, at least his tacet understanding?

MR. BISSELL: Correct.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Through previous testimony I got the impression that there were two attempts, one through this syndicate, and then another one directly through agents.

MR. BELIN: I think that the record basically is that in the first stage it was through the syndicate, and that in the second stage basically they used Cubian exiles but CIA agents, but the exiles who were being used were not necessarily CIA agents at the time so far as regular,full-time employees of the Agency.

MR. BISSELL: I don't have a recollection of that second one.

MR. GRAY: You left the Agency when, sir?

MR. BISSELL: In February of 1962.

MR. KIRKLAND: During this time that you were interested or this operation was under consideration, no one in a position of authority ever said flatly no, kill it?

MR. BISSELL: To the best of my knowledge, that is correct.

MR. CONNOR: Did you ever discuss with the Attorney General,Robert Kennedy?

MR. BISSELL: I have no recollection of discussing it with him.

MR. BELIN: But you do have a recollection of discussing it with Allen Dulles?

MR. BISSELL: Yes.

MR. BELIN: If the records were to show, or if Mr. Edwards were to say that rather than he contacting you that you contacted him concerning the Mafia, would you say that they are wrong, or would you say that perhaps your recollection is wrong?

BISSELL: Well, it is possible that my recollection is wrong, but I will -- I think I will stand on that as my recollection and it may be that Edwards and I simply have inconsistent recollections. But I seem to remember rather clearly that it was from him that I first learned of the possibility of this operation, and that he came to see me for this purpose rather than my sending for him. Now, could I just say that I had several conversations with Shef Edwards on this matter and it is very possible that I, that in a subsequent conversation I did take the initiative and send for and discuss it with him. But there may be an inconsistency here.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Was there ever any question raised as to whether this violated any of the domestic statutes limiting CIA's activities within the United States?

MR. BISSELL: That question was never raised to my knowledge.

MR. BELIN: Are there any other questions by members of the Commission?

Mr. CORBIN: May I ask a question? You said that you did not discuss it with Attorney General Kennedy. So far as you know, did you have any information or believe that he was ever aware of the proposed plans here?

MR. BISSELL: I don't remember any conversations or incident that would have constituted evidence to me that he was aware, but I would not have been in the least surprised if he were. He could have been aware from Bundy or Rostow and conceivably in other ways. If the President knew of this, then I think it highly likely that the Attorney General did, because the President was in the habit of talking over matters of concern to him with the Attorney General.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Do you remember any letter from the Attorney General saying that all activities of this character relating assassination of Castro should stop?

MR. BISSELL: No, I do not remember that, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: That was alleged by some of his associates in the press?

MR. BISSELL: No.

MR. WALLISON: Mr. Bissell, after the assassination of President Kennedy in November of '63 you were no longer with the Agency I understand?

MR. BISSELL: That is correct.

MR. WALLISON: But knowing what you do about the events here concerning Castro, at least the planning, did you relevant to the Warren Commission's inquiry?

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

MR. BISSELL: I really did not, no.

MR. WALLISON: And you had no discussions with anyone who is also involved in this matter about that?

MR. BISSELL: None.

MR. BELIN: Any other questions by members of the Commission concerning the Castro situation?

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Yes. Was there evidence to your knowledge that Castro was aware of this attempt or became aware of it?

MR. BISSELL: I don't remember any evidence to that effect. I don't think that the actual attempt was ever made, although it is physically possible that the devices to be used, the poison pills did reach Cuba and it is perfectly possible that with some time lag Castro would have come on some evidence of this operation. But I don't remember ever seeing any report to that effect.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: The operation wasn't under your direct management?

MR. BISSELL: Not really, indirectly, but not directly. Within the Agency the key individual was Shef Edwards, yes.

MR. KIRKLAND: Were there efforts during the period following the Bay of Pigs to land agents on the island?

MR. BISSELL: Excuse me, sir?

MR. KIRKLAND: Were there efforts post-Bay of Pigs to land agents on the island?

MR. BISSELL: Well, there were none for a while, and I don't know, I would assume that such efforts have been made since then. But I think for a good many months after that it was not, would not have been easy to recruit agents, and also there was absolutely no internal underground or resistance that could give any infiltrated agent support. So my guess is that no such efforts were made for at least a year or more.

MR. BELIN: Mr. Bissell, you were in charge in a sense of the Bay of Pigs operation with the Agency, were you not?

MR. BISSELL: I was.

MR. BELIN: Could this have been part of an overall Bay of Pigs operation as opposed from in any way being a direction from the White House? In other words, could this have been something that the Agency just developed internally as its overall Bay of Pigs operation?

MR. BISSELL: I don't think this -- well, in fact I am quite clear that this was not developed in that, this plan was not developed in that way. I don't think it was even known to many if any of the individuals within the Agency that were concerned with the planning and preparation for the Bay of Pigs.

MR. KIRKLAND: Mr. Edwards was not involved in the Bay of Pigs?

MR. BISSELL: No, he was not.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

MR. CORBIN: I believe you testified that you discussed the establishment of the executive action capability with either Mr. Bundy or Mr. Rostow. Did I understand that correctly?

MR. BISSELL: Correct.

MR. CORBIN: Who was it that first raised this subject, as you recall it?

MR. BISSELL: I can't -- I have no recollection of who first raised it. My belief is that this would have come up as a subject very probably in conversations between myself and Mr. Rostow, and the reason I give that as my belief is that I had on a number of occasions discussed with Mr. Rostow the various kinds, various kinds of capabilities, and especially unconventional ones that the Agency should or might develop. At a somewhat later stage, for instance, he asked me and I asked for a small interdepartmental group to examine the ways of improving our military capabilities, and his thinking ran along the lines of developing these tools of action. And I think, therefore, that it is very probable that this came up in conversations with him, but which one of us would have coined the phrase, for instance, I don't know.

MR. CORBIN: So far as you recall it, were there any plans for such a capability being developed at the Agency when you had your first conversation with him?

MR. BISSELL: Oh, I'm reasonably certain the answer is negative to that.

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

MR. KIRKLAND: There was no such capability in the Agency prior to that?

MR. BISSELL: There was no separated organization, identified capability of that sort.

MR. BELIN: Did you have any discussions with any people in the White House during either the Eisenhower Administration or the Kennedy Administration to the effect of why can't you do something about Castro?

MR. BISSELL: Well, it's possible. I don't remember a specific case, if there were any. When you asked earlier if there had been any discussions of this during the Eisenhower Administration, the reason I said that there could have been was just that sort of remark might easily have been made in a meeting. You know, couldn't you, is there any way that you could remove Castro and do something much simpler than the Bay of Pigs operation, that sort of remark could have been made in, for instance, a meeting of the Special Group. I don't happen to remember such remark having been made in the Eisenhower Administration.

MR. BELIN: Would President Eisenhower himself have made such a remark, or was he not a member of it?

MR. BISSELL: He did not attend the Special Groups.

MR. CONNOR: This small group that was formed by Mr. Edwards after your discussions, how many people were involved within the Agency?

MR. BISSELL: Well, I don't know that he formed a group. I think he conducted probably with the help of one other man in the Security Office such communications as there were.

MR. BELIN: Mr. Olsen I think has several additional questions in this area.

MR. OLSEN: Howard Hunt has stated in several of his writings that in connection with his work in preparation for the Bay of Pigs he recommended an assassination of Premier Castro be undertaken either to precede or to be contemporaneous with the Bay of Pigs operation. Now, Mr. Hunt was working under your direction?

MR. BISSELL: Right.

MR. OLSEN: At that time, was he not ?

MR. BISSELL: Yes, he was.

MR. OLSEN: Did such a recommendation from E. Howard Hunt ever come to your attention?

MR. BISSELL: I wouldn't be at all surprised. I don't have a specific recollection. It is the kind of thing he could have said in a meeting orally and I don't remember any written proposal to that effect originating from Headquarters.

MR. OLSEN: Is it your testimony that you have absolutely no recollection of an oral recommendation from Mr. Hunt to that effect?

MR. BISSELL: I don't have any specific recollection, but that doesn't mean that it couldn't have happened.

MR. OLSEN: Do you have a general impression that it happened?

MR. BISSELL: I would suspect that he is telling the truth when he said that he made this recommendation. Whether he would have made it in my presence or to me, or to Colonel King or others, I don't know.

MR. OLSEN: Mr. Bissell, there has also been testimony that has been taken by the staff of the Commission to the effect that a Bernard Barker, a contract agent of the CIA, or employee of the CIA, I believe it was at that time made contact with the person acting in the Cubian community down in the Miami area and asked him about this time whether he would be willing to undertake an assassination. Do you have any knowledge of that?

MR. BISSELL: I don't remember that.

MR. OLSEN: Were you aware, Mr. Bissell, in the period 1961 early 1962 of there being a great deal of talk among Cuban exiles in this country of desire to kill Fidel Castro?

MR. BISSELL: Again, I have to say I have no specific recollection of reading newspaper stories to this effect, or hearing reports through CIA channels but it seems to me highly likely, given the nature of the situation, that there would have been talk of that sort.

MR. OLSEN: A great many of the Cuban exiles in Florida in particular and elsewhere in the southern part of the United States at that time were being in effect utilized through front organizations that were being sponsored by the Agency, were they not?

MR. BISSELL: Uh-huh. I think that is true. Yes.

MR. KIRKLAND: Was there discussion of targets there confined to Fidel Castro, or would it include Guevara and others?

MR. BISSELL: Exclusively Castro.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Were not most of those Cuban organizations penetrated by Castro representatives?

MR. BISSELL: They were, indeed.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: So that it would be very easy for double agents to report back to Castro what was going on?

MR. BISSELL: That's right. Exactly. I think our judgment at the time, as a matter of intelligence, and I am now talking about after the Bay of Pigs operation in particular, but the same applies, by the way, to most of the preparation, I think our belief was that Castro was extremely well informed on what was going on. I don't think that he penetrated, so far as we knew, parts of that preparatory activity that were under the Agency's direct control, but all of the exile groups in Miami, including the political groups that we attempted to form and did form as front organizations, I'm quite sure he knew what was going on.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Did CIA know, have any information to the effect that Oswald was trying to penetrate some of those groups?

MR. BISSELL: I don't remember that, Mr. Chairman.

MR. CONNOR: Did it ever come to your attention in any way that Oswald have any interest in the Cubian situation or was associated with it in any way?

MR. BISSELL: Never. I don't ever remember hearing any association, in anything that associated him with that.

MR. KIRKLAND: You mean prior to the assassination?

MR. BISSELL: Prior to the assassination.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Did Bill Pauli work for you during that period?

MR. BISSELL: Well, yes, in a sense. I mean, he served as a messenger, but for the most part that was in the final days of the Batista regime and he was used in an effort to persuade Batista to leave the country.

MR. BELIN: Mr. Olsen?

MR. OLSEN: After the assassination of President Kennedy, when it became well known that Lee Harvey Oswald had been active in attempting to penetrate anti-Castro groups, and had engaged in kind of a one-man operation for the Fair Plan For Cuba Committee, did it not occur to you, Mr. Bissell, that there might have been some relationship between the assassination of President Kennedy, in attitude, at least, that Oswald might have developed in connection with his Cuban contacts in New Orleans?

MR. BISSELL: Well, I think I can honestly say it didn't particularly occur to me at that time. I read the usual newspaper accounts of the assassination, but it wasn't until a good deal later that these facts about Oswald surfaced and I will honestly say that really didn't occur to me, that there was a connection.

MR. BELIN: Any other questions by the Commissioners on this particular area?

Now let's turn to the question of Trujillo, and I am going to ask Mr.Gray to interrogate you in that area.

MR. GRAY: Mr. Bissell, we have gone over the circumstances surrounding the death of Trujillo just before you testified, is that correct?

MR. BISSELL: Correct.

MR. GRAY: Incidentally, in the 13 years or so since you left the Agency, have you had occasion to review the documents dealing with that?

MR. BISSELL: I have not, no.

MR. GRAY: Now, in early 1960 the records I reviewed indicate that the government was maintaining a policy of non-intervention toward the Trujillo regime, and that in the early months of that year Ambassador Farland, who was then our Ambassador in the Dominican Republic, suggested that that policy be changed. Do you recall Ambassador Farland?

MR. BISSELL: I don't remember whether I ever met him personally, but I do have some recollection of this recommendation of his.

MR. GRAY: And do you recall anything about his background?

MR. BISSELL: He had been I believe in the FBI at one time and he had an intense interest in intelligence matters and I think he had worked very closely with the CIA station, Chief of Station in the Dominican Republic.

MR. GRAY: Incidentally, was that station declared to the Dominican Government?

MR. BISSELL: I believe it was.

MR. GRAY: That would mean that the government, even though the people were under cover, would know who they were and what they were?

MR. BISSELL: At least who some of them were.

MR. GRAY: Now, the records reflect that when Mr. Farland returned to Washington for consultations in May of 1960 he stated that he had been in contact with some internal dissidents in the Dominican Republic, that they needed support from the United States, and in particular that they needed a number of high-powered rifles with telescopic scopes, and the Agency records reflect in conversations at the Agency he further went on to say that the Dominicans planned to remove Trujillo from the scene through use of some sort of explosive device. Do you recall conversations along these lines?

MR. BISSELL: My recollection is that on the occasion of this visit of his to Washingon he did urge that some military or equipment or guns or other devices be made available to the internal dissidents. I have a dim recollection that this was to include one or more rifles with telescopic sights. I wouldn't have remembered the number unless you had mentioned it from the records.

MR. GRAY: The records also reflect that at the end of June or the beginning of July you approved of the furnishing of such rifles to the Dominican dissidents on the basis of a memorandum from Colonel King, who was then Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division, stating he had received authorization from Mr. Rubottom, who was then Assistant Secretary of State. Do you recall such approval?

MR. BISSELL: This is all consistent with my recollection.

MR. GRAY: Would you yourself be involved in any negotiations with the Department of State as a normal matter?

MR. BISSELL: As a normal matter I would not have been involved with meetings at the Assistant Secretary of State level. I would have been involved if and when this matter was discussed in the Special Group.

MR. GRAY: And do you recall, do you have any recollectio of whether or not you were involved in any discussions involving the furnishing of these rifles?

MR. BISSELL: I don't remember that.

MR. GRAY: Now, the records pretty much petered out at this point. They don't show that either this plan was killed or that the rifles were actually sent. It could not be developed whether they were or not. Do you have any recollection why that change of course might have taken place?

MR. BISSELL: None whatsoever.

MR. GRAY: At the beginning of '60 and '61 you presented a proposal to the Special Group to work with the internal dissidents, and at the same time work with exile groups for paramilitary capability and things of that sort, am I correct?

MR. BISSELL: Correct.

MR. GRAY: At the January 12, 1961 meeting, at the instance of Department of State, the Special Group, which approved these covert operations, approved the provisions to the Dominican internal dissidents of limited supplies of small arms and some explosive devices, some explosives, I believe, do you have any recollection on that ?

MR. BISSELL: Such as it is, it would confirm what you state.

MR. GRAY: In your opinion, when they approved the provision of small arms, were they talking about assassination weapons, or were they talking about guerrilla supplies and things of that nature?

MR. BISSELL: I would have said definitely the latter. However, I think it was the understanding of everybody in Washington that if you provided weapons to internal dissidents, and especially in fairly small numbers, and were contemplating truly guerrilla-like activities as distinguished from something on the scale of the Bay of Pigs, that these might well include assassination attempts. But the concept that I seem to remember was that this was a plan for, in effect, the logistic support of the internal dissidents, and it did not contemplate that the Agency or the Station would be planning specific operations for them to carry out.

MR. GRAY: So, it would be their operations and the Agency furnishing of the equipment?

MR. BISSELL: Right.

MR. GRAY: And you draw a distinction there, do you?

MR. BISSELL: I do partly because in situations like that the Agency really has very little effective control over the group that is supported once the support has been granted.

MR. GRAY: And with respect to the explosives which were authorized, the Agency had been in contact with these internal dissidents and was aware that they did plan to use a bomb to kill Trujillo?

MR. BISSELL: I imagine that's the case, yes. I don't specifically remember.

MR. GRAY: And you then, if you don't recall of your own state of mind, do you have any recollection as to whether other members of the Special Group knew what the purpose of the explosives might be?

MR. BISSELL: I believe that they would have, yes.

MR. GRAY: You think they would have?

MR. BISSELL: I think they would have, yeah.

MR. GRAY: Now, the dissidents had difficulty coming up with a workable -- oh, very important, the Special Group attach the condition that these weapons and explosives be delivered to the representatives of the dissidents outside of the Dominican Republic, is that correct?

MR. BISSELL: Correct.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Did this get the approval of the White House?

MR. GRAY: The records that I have reviewed show it was approved by the Special Group. There was --

MR. BISSELL: There was also a White House Representative on the Speical Group.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: And you said earlier that any assassination or assassination attempt would have to have the highest approval?

MR. BISSELL: That's correct.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: From the President?

MR. BISSELL: That is correct.

MR. GRAY: Would include this sort of instance of furnishing material to people knowing what they are going to use it for, but where the Agency itself is not directing the operation?

MR. BISSELL: Well, let me answer that question this way: this clearly required and received the Special Group approval. The procedure always in the Special Group was that the White House Representative was presumed to inform the President of whatever was brought up in that Group that in his opinion should be brought to the President's attention. And furthermore, it was presumed to obtain presidential assent to action in those cases where he believed the presidential, personal assent of the President was called for.

MR.CONNOR: And who was the White House Representative sitting on the Special Group at that time?

MR. BISSELL: Gordon Gray. And frequently, given that procedure, it was frequently the case that a proposal would be made at one meeting of the Special Group, it would be discussed but no action taken until the next meeting, in part to provide this opportunity for the White House Representative to consult with the President to the extent he believed necessary.

MR. GRAY: Now, the dissidents were never able to develop a capability to receive these goods, nor did they ever provide any persons to be trained in the techniques of explosives and detonators and so forth?

MR. BISSELL: (Witness nodded in the affirmative.)

MR. GRAY: In March the station cabled the request of Mr. Dearborn, who was then Counsel General, that Trujillo's relations having been severed, cabled his request for three .38 police specials to be turned over to the dissidents as a show of good faith and materal support. Now, do you recall a discussion of the pistols and sending pistols by pouch and so forth?

MR. BISSELL: Yes. I think I do remember that discussion, and for that purpose you have identified.

MR. GRAY: The record also reflects that on the first couple of occasions such requests were made by the station the Agency refused them stating that it was inconsistent with the limitations imposed by the Special Group. The last request was not responded to for a period of some week, approximately a week, following which you approved it. It appears there was a meeting in the State Department between some State Department officials and Agency officials and the State Department memorandum of that meeting is not in their files. Based on that statement of documents, would you say whether or not you think there would have been State Department approval of pouching those pistols?

MR. BISSELL: I think there almost certainly would have been State Department approval, because there had been a specific prohibition imposed by the Special Group, and the Agency would not on its own authority have considered it possible to violate that prohibition unless and until there had been consultation with the State Department and concurrence by the State Department.

MR. GRAY: Would such consultation normally have been at your level or on Colonel Kings?

MR. BISSELL: I think probably Colonel Kings.

MR. GRAY: Assuming the State Department agreed to waive the Special Group restrictions,and the Agency felt this was appropriate, would you have felt it necessary to go back to the Special Group in any formal fashion?

MR. BISSELL: I think probably not, but I think the Special Group members would have been informed of this action at the next meeting.

MR. GRAY: As I stated, the record reflects that the pistols were sent to the Dominican Republic and were passed to the dissidents.

MR. BELIN: When, Mr. Gray, does the record reflect that?

MR. GRAY: I believe it was March 25th. I don't have my notes with me.

MR. BELIN: Of what year?

MR. GRAY: 1961.

MR. BELIN: When does the record reflect the rifles were shipped?

MR. GRAY: The Springfield rifles, the ones that Ambassador Farland talked about?

MR. BELIN: The first rifles that went down.

MR. GRAY: As near as I can tell on the rifles that I spoke about earlier, they never went to the Dominican Republic.

MR. BELIN: In other words, the early rifles that were talked about never were shipped, is that correct, according to the records?

MR. GRAY: The records no longer discuss the matter once approval to ship them was given. There is no transmission, no further reference to receipt of them, nothing of that sort.

MR. BELIN: All right, go ahead.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: I would like to ask Mr. Bissell whether there was any question of violations of statutes by sending these weapons to a group through the use of the pouch, diplomatic pouch in relation to either a direct assassination attempt, or implied or possible?

MR. BISSELL: Well, I am not aware of any. In any case, I think that consideration did not arise at the time, and it obviously didn't arise in the minds of the State Department or the Special Group members or the Agency.

MR. GRAY: Now, following the shipment of the pistols, the station cabled back that they had discovered in the Consulate three Carbines that had been left behind by departing

Naval personnel and requested authority to pass those. Again, Headquarters delayed, and again there was a meeting with the State Department. There is a memorandum of this meeting and it doesn't reflect this subject came up, but the same day your Deputy, Mr. Barnes, approved the passage of the Carbines. Would you say that this would --

MR. BISSELL: I think almost certainly that the State Department would have been consulted.

MR. GRAY: Now, following this the station and the Consul requested,the Consul requested some more or relayed the request to the dissidents for some so-called grease guns, M-3 submachines, and three or four such weapons were pouched to the Dominican Republic. But with the Bay of Pigs and unsettled conditions in the Caribbean area they were never passed. Do you have any further recollection of the events preceding the death of Generalissimo Trujillo?

MR. BISSELL: I really have none, no.

MR. GRAY: Do you recall discussing these matters with anyone, let say of your superiors or anyone outside of the CIA?

MR. BISSELL: No special discussions, nothing other than those that would routinely occur in reviewing projects with Allen Dulles internally and any special reports to the Speical Group.

MR. BELIN: Did the Special Group give or reaffirm its position to pouch the weapons that were actually shipped in the spring of 1961?

MR. BISSELL: I don't know whether they did or not. As you have just heard, there is the indication that this was cleared with the State Department, and I have said that the normal procedure would be that everything [illegible] cleared with the State Department and the Special Group at least would have been informed of this at its next meeting, and presumably, therefore, it accepted that, or at any rate did not reverse the agreed upon position between the Agency and the State Department.

MR. BELIN: Who were the members of the Special Group, in summary, if you remember?

MR. BISSELL: I will have to have the date again.

MR. BELIN: Into the spring of '61.

MR. BISSELL: Well, by this time the Special Group would normally have included Bundy or Rostow, and at the beginning, at some date about mid-'61 I believe that General Maxwell Taylor, as the President's Military Adviser, sat in on most of the meetings. It would have included probably the Undersecretary of State, and the Deputy Secretary of Defense and the Director of CIA.

MR. BELIN: And you mention the fact that in the fall of 1960 when this was first discussed, that at that time Mr. Gray was on the Special Group?

MR. BISSELL: Right. Correct.

MR. BELIN: And who was the Special Group at that time, who else?

MR. BISSELL: Well, it would have been, with the exception of the White House representation, it would have been the same individuals ex officio. It was suppose to be the Deputy Secretary of State, I mean the Undersecretary of State, the senior Undersecretary . Later, at certain stages in the organization of the Department it was the Undersecretary for Political Affairs in the State Department. The Deputy Secretary of Defense was a member, although there was sometimes a substitute for him. And the Director of Central Intelligence was the other person.

MR. KIRKLAND: Was that representative to the OAS involved in these discussions?

MR. BISSELL: I believe not, sir. I believe it is very unlikely.

MR. GRAY: Mr. Bissell, one other aspect of the cable traffic I should call to your attention is that shortly after the shipment of the pistols and the authorization to pass the Carbines, there is several cables between the station and the Agency Headquarters reflecting some concern whether Counsul Dearborn is going to mentioned these matters in his correspondence with the Department of State. Now, I suppose there could be two reasons for that, either nobody in the State Department knew it, or very few people in the State Department knew it. Would you have any opinion as to which of those situations existed?

MR. BISSELL: Yes. I am almost certain it would have been the latter. Operational information of this sort was suppose to be confined to the Assistant Secretary concerned and his Deputy. Quite often, for matters of somewhat lesser sensivity involve the station desk officer in the State Department, but it was suppose to be limited to two or three below the level of the Undersecretary and the Secretary.

MR. KIRKLAND: Was the Ambassador back in the country?

MR. BISSELL: I believe the Ambassador was back in the country, but in this particular case where Farland had been the Ambassador and was succeeded by Dearborn, they were both kept completely informed of what was going on at all times. The reason I say in this particular case is that these were two men who I mentioned earlier, were intensely interested in intelligence and covert activity or operations of this sort. It was Farland, as you have heard, who really initiated the policy of supporting the dissidents, and they were, to my recollection, very fully informed of what was done.

MR. BELIN: Again, you mentioned earlier that you felt that the Special Operations Group approved possibly a shipment of rifles in 1960 which evidently were not shipped. Do you have any specific recollection of that approval, or do you have any specific recollection that it was approved or not?

MR. BISSELL: I don't have a specific recollection, but I take it there is a record of that.

MR. BELIN: Are you assuming that if they were shipped they were approved, and if they were not shipped you don't know whether it was approved?

MR. BISSELL: I think that is what I am saying, yes, as you are stating, yes.

MR. BELIN: And if the record shows there were weapons shipped in the March or April of 1961. Then is it your specific recollection or just that you are assuming that the Special Operations Group approved that?

MR. BISSELL: No. I have some recollection of that one, the shipment involving the three revolvers, and I particularly remember the case that was made by Dearborn for doing it, which was to be able to give, to issue some weapons to the dissidents as evidence of our continued interest and good faith.

MR. BELIN: And would that approval of the Operations Group then have been in the spring of 1961 or the first part of 1961, or still going back?

MR. BISSELL: I'm quite certain it would have been the first part of 1961.

MR.KIRKLAND: Following the death of Trujillo, did the Agency give any help or aid to the surviving executioners?

MR. BISSELL: I don't remember that specifically. It was a confused period, of course, and the Agency was very active there in the next few months attempting to, in making contact with the various political groups and individuals that emerged, but I do not remember anything specific of the sort you speak of.

MR. BELIN: The records of the Agency show that Mr. McCone was not briefed about either the Castro plan or the so-called executive action capability until some period after he became DCI, which would have been in 1963 or so. Do you know any reason why he was not briefed about this?

MR. BISSELL: Well, I think by the time he took office which as I remember it it was late in 1961, I think it was about the first of December in 1961, any plan to develop an executive action capability internally was in abeyance. I don't know whether it ever was revived, certainly not while I was there, and I think that's the reason that he was not briefed on that. The possible plan of a possible Castro assassination had aborted and although an individual was designated by me just about that time to begin to look at the potential operations against the Castro regime, that designation would have occurred only a few weeks before I left, and I think, I don't think anything ever came of that. Bill Harvey, who was put into that position, was active in planning for a time, but I know that after a fairly short tour of duty he was removed, and so I am assuming the reason McCone was not briefed about these was that really nothing was happening that worth bringing to his attention.

MR. BELIN: Any other questions on the assassinations before we turn to one final area?

MR. GRAY: I do have one other question. Mr. Helms was your Deputy for a portion of this time?

MR. BISSELL: He was.

MR. GRAY: And ultimately your successor?

MR. BISSELL: Right.

MR. GRAY: Was he involved in any of these operations or planning that you have described?

MR. BISSELL: Well, he was generally informed about them because he saw copies of all of the cable traffic that came through, and sat in meetings with the Director and things of this kind. He was not actively involved in the Bay of Pigs preparations when that was going on. It was nearly a fulltime job for me, and I was handling much of the rest of the business of the CS. I believe that he would have been -- there's a chance that he would have been involved in the Dominican activities, but to just what extent I don't remember.

MR. KIRKLAND: I have one question. This group that carried out the assassination in the Dominican Republic were not initially sponsored by the CIA?

MR. BISSELL: That's correct, sir. They came into existence on their own, and as you have heard, it was Ambassador Farland's recommendation that they be supported, and I do want t emphasize, as I have said, that this was regarded by the Agency as a logistics support operation, in full knowledge that it was giving them the capability for violence. But nevertheless, there is quite a distinction, or at least there was in our minds between supporting an operation and either initiating it, organizing it, running it and controlling it.

MR. KIRKLAND: And this was not too long after the Trujillo assassination of a president of a friendly state?

MR. BISSELL: Exactly.

MR. GRISWOLD: Did anyone give consideration as to whether this was a wise thing to do or a legal thing to do?

MR. BISSELL: Well, I would presume, sir, that consideration was given in the State Department. And as you have heard, it was the Ambassador who first recommended that this support operation be undertaken. This was then approved by the Deputy Assistant Secretary of State. He is the approver of record, but this must have also included Tom Mann, who was the Assistant Secretary of State. It was discussed in the Special Group where it was approved at the undersecretary level, and by a White House Representative, and the general presumption in the way the Agency's covert action operations were run was that the policy considerations of the wisdom of the action was a matter for the State Department, the White House and in a sense the National Security Council and the Pentagon wherever its interests were relevant, which was in many of these.

MR. GRISWOLD: But the CIA didn't regard itself as having any responsibility for either wisdom or legality?

MR. BISSELL: I wouldn't say that. I would not say that it had no responsibility for wisdom. The CIA obviously was represented both at the Special Group and on occasion with the ad hoc meetings when operations of this kind were discussed, and CIA representatives were quite often not backward in giving their views about wisdom. But this was not the part of the Agency's charter. I think that was recognized at the time, and it was one of the Allen Dulles' repeated exertation, that the CIA does not make policy. It is there as an agency in this capacity, it is there to carry out policy decisions.

Now, as to legality, I think there was a real effort in the years that I was in the Agency to restrict the Agency's operation within what was believed to be its charter. And in that sense, at least there was a concern for a legality. I am not -- I have to say that I am unclear myself as to how the concept of legality can be applied to many covert activities.

MR. CONNOR: Who was the Undersecretary of State in the Special Group at that time?

MR. BISSELL: Well, back in '60 it was Mr. Murphy, and in '61 it was Chester Bowles who was the Undersecretary. He did not represent the Department very often on the Special Group, and I don't remember whom he used for that purpose.

MR. GRAY: Mr. Merchant was there at that time.

MR. BISSELL: Yes, I think he was.

MR. SHANNON: Staying on this matter of approval as to the wisdom, you assumed the State Department had covered this, and that would mean you assumed the Secretary of State was informed?

MR. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Was Goodwin involved in any of this stuff?

MR. BISSELL: Dick Goodwin became somewhat involved in the Bay of Pigs operation, but very late in the game. For the most part, only after it was over in the business of picking up the pieces. I suspect that he was involved a bit in the Dominican operation, and I believe that he would have been one of its supporters and very sympathetic to it.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: How about the Castro assassination attempt?

MR. BISSELL: No, I am almost certain that he knew nothing of that.

MR. BELIN: At least not during the time that you were with the Agency?

MR. BISSELL: That is correct, yes.

MR. KIRKLAND: Was John Hill, do you recall, was John Hill in the D.R. at the time ?

MR. BISSELL: I seem to remember him being there at some point, but I don't remember when it was. I think during the period we are talking about in the D.R. it was Farland followed by Dearborn.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

WARD & PAUL

MR. KIRKLAND: He was the charge d'affaires' I think afterwards?

MR. BISSELL: Yes.

MR. GRAY: Dearborn along with the members of the sation were removed very quickly after the death of Trujillo?

MR. BELIN: The final area of inquiry that I want to go into pertains to recommendations you might have concerning Agency operations or based upon your experience in the Agency and your experience both before in government and after in the business world. Do you have any specific recommendations as to how to improve the operations of the Agency?

MR. BISSELL: Well, as I have mentioned to you, Mr. Belin, I had a few that are rather scattered, and to which I do not attach any very great importance. I had occasion a few years ago to do a paper on this, and I am going to supply Mr. Belin a copy of this if it is of interest to him. The main thrust of that, I will put it this way, is that the Agency, most of the Agency's so-called failures, and especially its more massive ones have taken the form of a compromise of operations, or operations have been deemed to be failures largely because they were compromised. That is not true in all cases, by any manner of means, I mean the Bay of Pigs is a notable exception. But in general that is true, and that had lead me to argue, or really to remind any readers of this essay to which I have referred that the prime expertise the nation should seek in the clandestine service, in a foreign clandestine service is an ability to keep things secret, and to perform operations in secret and without compromise. And in part because of my own failings and shortcomings, by the late 60's the Agency already had I thought a rather lamentable record of not being able to do this.

Now, in reviewing the whole range of different kinds of covert operations, they involved progaganda operations, paramilitary operations, political action operations and the whole range. And with respect to each of these, the clandestine service is not the place where one would expect to, where one would look for professional competence, military competence. One would look to the Pentagon. Competence in political analysis and political science he would expect that the most competent people in the nation would be elsewhere, and he would not look there for competent economists as such. The professional competence that the clandestine service should have, is as I said, the ability to plan and organize and carryout operations, both intelligence collection and such covert action operations as are authorized with high security, and hopefully avoiding compromise.

Given that as its role, given its poor record, I suppose the thrust of this paper was that every effort should be made to improve this aspect of the Agency's operations. I made one organizational recommendation. It is just one way of doing it. It was to propose that there be a small internal staff in the Agency, in the clandestine service, but with the direct line to the DCI that should scrutinize every proposed new operation before it is initiated, and at least once a year should scrutinize every on-going operation from one standpoint soley that was the prospects of compromise, and their change from year to year. My feeling is that in the years that I was in the, it was the DDP in particular,that lacking this or any similar mechanism, a number of our mistakes occurred because there was not a strong enough voice raised internally in the councils of the Agency in favor or the precautions that would be required to maintain secrets.

begin t.5a

MR. KIRKLAND: Would that not be a function of the Counterintelligence Division?

MR. BISSELL: Well, it could be, but actually the CI staff or Division did not function in that way and did not really attempt to perform that role. It was attempting really to protect the Agency and other parts of the Government from penetration, and I really had in mind not the compromise by classic penetration, but if you stop to think of it, it hasn't produced the great, dramatic revelations of recent years. It is the compromise from letting too many people become knowledgeable of an operation and still letting the operation go on, of having inadequate cutouts, and having inadequate compartmentation both within the Agency and elsewhere in the Government.

MR. BELIN: Now, you contrasted that with the Inspector General's review, which was a review of operations that had already been completed as opposed to current operations?

MR. BISSELL: That is correct. I am talking about before the fact review, and for this, the sole purpose really of what I have identified as security.

MR. BELIN: You also had a recommendation --

MR. CONNOR: Excuse me. You made an exception for the Bay of Pigs in that. Now, why would you say that that operation failed?

MR. BISSELL: Well, that operation not only was dramatically compromised, and indeed, it is questionable whether that could have been avoided under any circumstances, but it was also a military failure, and it seems to me perfectly clearcut that that is the case.

My reference to that was to contrast this with, for instance, the by now much publicized support to the Student Association and support to labor groups overseas. These operations, in my opinion, were tested by what they accomplished up to the point of compromise, and could perhaps still have accomplished, were brilliant ly successful, and what destroyed those operations was purely and simply compromise.

I also happen to think that they became, that they are examples, although perhaps I have not looked into them enough to be confident of this opinion, but I am afraid I think they became examples of very sloppy procedures. I think that anyone who had looked by the early '60s at that set of operations, coldly, and somewhat at arm's length from the standpoint of security would have said that they are absolutely doomed to compromise, and quite soon if major changes were not made.

After all, the very fact that, for instance, in the Student Organization you had new officers every year, and most of the officers were knowledgeable of the source of funding, well, it was absolutely inevitable that that would be brought up before long, and indeed, a state of mind had developed, I think, that it really would not do much harm if it were blown. I think that state of mind was perhaps perfectly proper with regard to the radios because they really had been blown before, but there are instances in my view of operations that did achieve notable results, and which eventually failed and had to be ended for the reason of compromise.

MR. BELIN: You have also had some recommendations concerning the type of personnel that the Agency ought to recruit.

MR. BISSELL: I will mention before touching on that, I had one other specific one which is really the subject of longstanding discussion inside of the clandestine service. I felt the Agency had come to rely much too heavily on official cover and was using its official cover again somewhat carelessly, and it is a very difficult job to build up unofficial cover, either governmental or nongovernmental. But I felt that far too little was being done about that. Mr. Belin refers to a quite unrelated recommendation of mind. I was fearful that the course the Agency was on was placing more and more reliance on staffing, on men and women brought in fairly young, in many cases right out of college, or soon after college, trained in the Agency and then spending or planning to make life careers there, somewhat in the fashion of the military services, and of the Foreign Service. I think that that is a perfectly appropriate pattern for those other services, but my own belief is that one of the great strengths of the Agency as a corps of individuals in say the mid-50s under Allen Dulles was that it attracted men from all walks of life, and because it was such a new organization at that time, most of its officers and all of its senior people had had some other kind of professional experienc and accomplishment before they came into the organization.

It had quite a scattering of men who had had military experience, it had some professionals like myself, it had lawyers, and Helms himself, before his OSS period, had been a journalist, and it had a wide range of skills. I do not mean those skills were important to be used. I never used economics in the Agency , and Helms I don't think ever used journalism, but my point is I think when it is engaging in the kind of business it is, it is better to have a variety of backgrounds, and not to have more than perhaps half of its personnel men who were in there for lifelong careers.

This relates to my remarks about official cover and its overuse. The pattern that I think was developing by the end of, by the beginning of the '60s in the clandestine service was that people more and more, its members thought of their careers as a little different in kind, and a little removed from Foreign Service careers. They expected to spend a life doing tours of duty in every case under official cover, and usually identified to the host government. And in short, to follow much the same career pattern as the Foreign Service.

I believe that this is not consistent really with the maintenance of the state of mind that ought to animate the clandestine service.

MR. BELIN: Any other questions by members of the Commission?

Thank you for coming.

MR. OLSEN: I have one that I would like tw get kind of on the record.

Mr. Bissell, there have been people responsible or irresponsible who have suggested that because you and Allen Dulles and General Cabell were all terminated from the Agency in effect by President Kennedy within a fair period of time after the failure of the Bay of Pigs, that the three of you and other people in the Agency would have had a motive to retaliate against President Kennedy.

Could you describe for us what you know of your relationship and that of General Cabell and Allen Dulles with President Kennedy after the termination of your respective periods of service with the Agency?

MR. BISSELL: I can't say very much about the other two gentlemen. I am sure that Allen on occasion saw the President, and I have every reason to believe that it was a friendly relationship. I rather doubt whether General Cabell had any direct contact with him after that.

I did have contact with him on perhaps two or three occasions. He asked me quite soon after I left the Agency to lend a helping hand to the then head of the rather new Alliance for Progress, and he also asked me to do a paper for him, that is, for the President, which I did do, on the question of what lessons from the Marshall Plan might have been applicable to the Alliance for Progress.

On another more lighthearted occasion, he got me to come over to the White House to give him some advice on cruising on the Maine coast. And the final time, I think, I suppose the final time I saw him, which couldn't have been but very shortly before his death, was the award of a medal. I think I can honestly say that the relationship was an extremely friendly one in my case, and as far as I could judge, mutually so. I had quite a number of contacts with him in the roughly eight months that I was still in the Agency after the Bay of Pigs, and I can say the same of that period.

And finally, for the record, I perhaps should say that shortly before I did finally leave the Agency, John McCone, with the President's knowledge and concurrence, and also that of the then Attorney General, asked me to stay on in the Agency, but in a somewhat different position than that of the DDP. I thought it was wiser for me to leave.

MR. LEMNITZER: I have a question. Don't you believe that in carrying on the covert operation of the magnitude of the Bay of Pigs, that compartmentation was one of the weaknesses, compartmentation in a clandestine operation to maintain cover and security was absolutely essential, but on the other hand, on an operation of that size with military aspects involved, it seemed to me that compartmentation was a weakness in the preparation of carrying out of the operation, not to mention the changing decisions that took place along the line as the operation unfolded?

MR. BISSELL: Well, I certainly agree with you, General Lemnitzer, in the change in decisions, and I agree with you, I probably would agree with you if you and I discuss specific examples of the compartmentation. I will say, however, that some of the compartmentation I think to this day was absolutely essential, and I will give you an example. We really could not allow the Cuban politicals in Miami, the exile members of the political parties, to visit the brigades in training in Guatemala, and the reason for that was that the brigade was shaping into a disciplined and unified force, and the politicians were totally insecure, and at odds with one another on almost everything. There was a great deal of intriguing in Miami, because if one politician could become identified in the eyes of the brigade, and if the operation was then successful, he would have been the leader.

So there is an example of where I think we were right to enforce compartmentation. But I don't think that is the kind of thing you have in mind, and I think I would agree with what you have in mind.

MR. LEMNITZER: Well, specifically I have in mind that within the Joint Chiefs of Staff at the time we could not find out what the diplomatic estimate of the situation was, that if this force did get ashore, and up in an accessible place, that the Cuban people would rally to it, and as a matter of fact, I have not found out yet what the diplomatic estimate of the situation was.

MR. BISSELL: Yes, I agree with you. That is an unfortunate example .

MR. GRISWOLD: Let me ask you, did the Bay of Pigs operation have anything to do with the gathering of intelligence?

MR. BISSELL: No, sir. It was somewhat dependent on it, but it didn't have anything to do with it.

MR. GRISWOLD: Then what business is it of the CIA to engage in operations which have nothing to do with the gathering of intelligence?

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Covert.

MR. BISSELL: Well, the category that came to be called covert action operations are justified under a much quoted clause in the CIA's charter which refers to such other activities as the National Security Council directs.

MR. GRISWOLD: Is there any evidence that the National Security Council directed this operation?

MR.BISSELL: Well, there is a question of definition of exactly what constituted the National Security Council at the time of that operation, but I will say that the plans for the operation were repeatedly reviewed by a group that included the President of the United States, the Secretaries of State and Defense, and the Assistant Secretary of State who was involved, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, or the Acting Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, and then Army Colonel, now General I believe, who had been designated the Chairman of a group of three officers by the JCS to review plans and preparations.

So I would say that rarely has what started out as a clandestine operation been more intimately directed by a group, by those individuals who are, I believe, the members of the NSC.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Was that both President Eisenhower and President Kennedy?

MR. BISSELL: No, this was President Kennedy, and this began with the new administration.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: And did the brigades have reason to expect that if they were successful, they would get support from the U.S. military forces?

MR. BISSELL: No, it had no reason to believe that.

MR. LEMNITZER: Isn't a part of the answer to this question the comment made by President Kennedy after the operation failed that he was responsible, that it was at his direction that this operation was carried out?

MR. BISSELL: Yes, I think that's true, General Lemnitzer, but you remember I am sure just as I do, the degree to which the group I have identified was repeatedly involved in review of plans and whatnot.

MR. BELIN: Any other questions from the Commission?

Thank you very much, sir, for coming.

MR. BISSELL: You are welcome.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: We are very grateful to you, Mr. Bissell.

Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

MR. DONOHUE: I do.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Paul, do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

MR. O'NEILL: I do indeed.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Okay.

MR. BELIN: Mr. Donohue, we have generally had just one witness at a time in the room, so perhaps you had better leave the room while your boss testifies, and then we will call you back here.

MR. DONOHUE: Okay.

MR. CARGILL: Mr. Chairman, we thought we would begin the session on OMB with Mr. O'Neill giving a short background of OMB's role in Government, and then we will proceed to some more specific questions in dealing with the CIA with Mr. Donohue.

RELEASE OF THIS DOCUMENT
the testimony of Paul
O'Neill, Director of OMB, before the Rockefeller
Commission, 21 APR 75
(pp 2351-2385)

TESTIMONY OF PAUL O'NEILL

MR. O'NEILL: Very quickly, Mr. Vice President and members, I think it would be useful if I would try to give you some perspective about how OMB does its work with other agencies of government; that is to say, with agencies outside of the intelligence area, and specifically outside of the CIA area, so that as you come to the direct testimony from my staff member, Mr. Donohue, you will have a background in mind.

I know many of you have had lots of business dealings with the government, and you have some appreciation of how OMB works, so I will indeed be brief. I think I was just looking at some testimony that I am going to be giving in the next couple of days on OMB's budget, and I was looking at the historical members that show how many staff people are in OMB. And I think maybe that is a useful way to come to the subject.

In 1947 OMB had about 550 total staff people. Today we have 580 total staff people, including 380 professional staff people who examine the budgets and the programs and activities of everything in the Federal Government. And that means this year, as you know, over $350 billion worth of expenditures.

I think the budget function is a familiar one. We look at the amount of dollars that we are spending and compare it to what we have spent in the past. We look at equity considerations between groups that are served by Federal programs. We try to look at efficiencies, we try to look at geographic distribution questions and all of the other prospects that you might expect in a budget operation.

Now, in addition to that budget examination function, of course, we put together each year the President's budget for the approval of the Congress, and those same people who do the review and the analysis do that preparation function. That is not to say that we print it, but we do everything short of printing the President's budget.

In addition to those budget functions which are ongoing through the year, we also perform a legislative clearance function or a legislative review function for the President. Every piece of legislation that is introduced by the President goes through the Office of OMB so that it can be coordinated with the program of the President, and so that every department and agency of government that has any kind of an interest in that legislative proposal from the President has the advantage of a crosscutting analysis from any interested party within the Executive Branch. In addition to doing that kind of process with Presidential legislation, all legislation that is introduced in the Congress by either House, by a member of either House, comes to OMB when a member makes an appropriate request for that same kind of a review, and a report on the Administration's position on the provisions of that legislation just as though it were a piece of Presidential legislation.

There are two times during the year when the Director get deeply involved in the program activities and budget of all of the Departments and agencies of government, once in the spring and secondly in the fall as we are doing the final preparation of the President's budget, and the Director and Deputy sit down with examiners who have the responsibility, and their straw bosses and foremen, and go through with them their examination of the programs, the recommendations that are made by the Department and agency heads, the insights that our own staff have about how resources can best be distributed in preparation for a series of meetings that we have with the President to in turn discuss with him at somewhat higher levels of abstraction the alternatives that we see he has in making the judgments for the upcoming year.

In addition, we have, of course, some responsibility for efficiency as indicated earlier, and we do spend some time trying to ferret out programs that are not working well, proposing legislative changes, management changes, on occasion personnel changes to try to accomplish and accommodate better public performance.

I think maybe just by way of an example, to give you a more detailed feeling as to how the resources that are invested in the CIA area, or in the intelligence area, or the Defense area as compared to other areas, I might take an example in another area that we examine, and let me say Social Security as an example.

This year, Social Security spending will be $70 billion. We have one full time individual who examines the program of the Social Security Administration. Now, we do have on call some people who are not directly responsible for examining the budget in our management divisions to help out with examination of important management questions. We do call upon financial system experts in our budget review divisions to help support that one individual.

But what I am saying to you is we have one individual that examines on a full time basis the activities of the Social Security Administration. At the same time, we have one individual who examines the activities of the CIA, which in budgetary terms is a much, much smaller agency.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: One individual?

MR. O'NEILL: Yes, sir. We have one full time examiner looking at the Central Intelligence Agency. He is backed up by a so-called branch chief who in turn reports to a division chief that is responsible for all of the international affairs programs of the government, who in turn reports to myself and Jim Lynn. So we are not performing an audit function for the programs and activities of the government, not by the furtherest stretch of the imagination are we performing an audit function. If you think back over what has happened with the explosion of government programs in the last 20 years, it is apparent on the face of it that as that explosion has taken place, OMB's role has changed in a fairly marked way. In looking at the historical files of OMB, it is interesting to note that back in the 1950s there were some 45 people examining the programs of the Veteran's Administration, and they were examining them then in a way that was more like an audit function, because it was possible to do that because we did not have the great number of programs we have now.

But that was all changed, and we are not examining programs in anything approaching an audit fashion in any activity of Government, not a single one.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Paul, would it be fair to ask, since you gave the figures on the comparison between '47 and '75, as to whether you are not grossly understaffed in relation to the responsibilities that were then carried out in terms of the size of the budget, or that is now carried out in terms of the size of the budget? It must be what, about ten times as big?

MR. O'NEILL: I think it is probably a lot more than ten times as big. It has really grown by leaps and bounds. I guess I do not think so, but it depends very much on one's philosophical view as to what can be done at the center when you have an explosion of governmental function.

My own feeling is that an audit function, and inspector general function that could hope to deliver real results would be so big that if it were in the Executive Office, that it would overwhelm the Executive office. That is what happened in the OMB as the character of what Federal Government is doing has changed, which is that we have moved away from 45 people looking at 170 VA hospitals and trying to know ourselves whether what they were doing in each of those hospitals was right or not. We have moved back into a position where we are really testing, we are testing the general concept of a Veterans health care program against the general concept of health insurance, or we are looking at what is going on in the private sector, and we are dealing at a much more abstract level than we were 25 or 30 years ago, by necessity.

Our office would have to be, I would say 2000, if we were to begin to approach a more detailed audit kind of an approach to our work.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: And is GAO moving into that vacuum?

MR. O'NEILL: Somewhat, yes, although the character of their operation from my point of view has changed quite a bit in the last ten or fifteen years. Ten or fifteen years ago they were very much of an accounting mind. They made sure that the numbers all added up, and that people had not defrauded the Federal Government. I do not think they ever told anybody very much interesting about what was going on, about whether it was useful or not, but over the last especially five years, I think they have changed their focus so that they have become less accounting focused, and less, spending less of their time making sure that the numbers add up, and more of their time in trying to inform both the Executive branch and the government as to the value of those things that are being done with public monies.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000
WARD & PAUL
410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

So that they have changed their focus some also, in part by necessity.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Have we not got a former head of the Bureau of the Budget there?

MR. O'NEILL: Yes, sir. They did, the former deputy director, as a matter of fact, two former deputy directors, Mr. Hughes and Mr. Staats.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: That is very interesting.

MR. GRAY: How big is GAO, how big a staff do they have?

MR. O'NEILL: I don't have a number in my head, but I could give it to you if you had a budget here. It is much larger than our operation, and my guess would be off the top of my head about 4000.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: GAO?

MR. O'NEILL: Yes, sir.

MR. KIRKLAND: In these areas where there has been some episodes of misuse of funds, as in some of the poverty programs, and in the housing area, where do they get uncovered? Do they get uncovered in the internal audits of the agency, or at the OMB level, or how do these things come to light?

MR. O'NEILL: Let us take housing as an example. I think the uncovering of fraud problems in those programs has taken place at the local level, and it has taken place with GAO identifying a program, and the Inspector General of HUD has identified problems in those programs. And I think a similar finding on the OEO programs came out of those sorts of things.-- OMB's problem with the housing programs really recognized what had been found in the way of fraud, but our focus was more on the equity considerations, what was wrong with the program from an equity point of view. That is, the Federal Government was providing huge subsidies to a very small set of theoretically eligible population, and as we talked to the President as to what we saw wrong with those programs, that is the point we stressed, that there was no way in the world that we could ever equitably provide the same level of housing benefits to the set that was eligible under the current terms and conditions of the programs, and that combined with the cases of fraud that were identified by GAO and the HUD inspector general led us to a recommendation to the President that we stop those 235 and 236 subsidized housing programs.

MR. KIRKLAND: But the rural line of defense was actually in the control of the Agency, that is, your surveillance?

MR. O'NEILL: That is exactly right. Prevention of fraud really begins and ends, or almost ends, with the assigned responsible officials in those departments and agencies, and I guess my own feeling is that Government has gotten so big that if we can't depend on good surveillance and prevention of fraud by the Cabinet secretary and his officials, that we are going -- we have to depend on public oversight, and I guess I don't think that that works as well as it should. And therefore, indeed, we do have to depend on those cabinet and agency officials to see that we don't use the public's money in an unauthorized way.

MR. LEMNITZER: With the fiscal '76 budget being defended before the Congress, I presume you are now starting on the '77 year's budget.

MR. O'NEILL: Yes, sir, we are.

MR. LEMNITZER: Within your agency. How will CIA approach the problem and present it to you, to your office for 1977? Just what are the mechanics of it?

MR. O'NEILL: Well, they will receive the so-called budget calling, all of the departments and agencies in about June.

MR. LEMNITZER: Do they get any guidelines?

MR. O'NEILL: Yes, they will. Right now we are beginning to tune up for the '77 process, and over the month of May the Director and I will sit down with all of our examiners and our division heads and go through the prospects for fiscal year 1977 that our intelligence tells us will be coming in as requests to the President, and we will be looking at that against the backdrop of expected revenues based on anticipation of performance of the economy for fiscal year 1977. We will take all of that assessment of what the agencies are likely to be asking for, separating it out between those things that are new things, and those things that are driven by current authorizations and appropriations, and taking that whole package to the President along with his other economic advisors, Allen Greenspan, and Bill Siedman, and giving a judgment, getting a judgment from him as to how many dollars in broad blocks he wants to tell the Cabinet secretaries and the Agency heads they should use as a planning figure for their work over the next several months.

In June, those numbers from the President will go out as guidance to the Departments and agencies, and over the months, July, August, September, they will be within the limits provided by the President, deciding what kind of a specific program, detailed recommendation they want to make to him, and then in September these requests will begin to come in, and in September, October,and November, we will go through our regular budget process, evaluating what it is that is in the base that we must do, that we think it is desirable to keep doing, those things which we think should be taken out, evaluation of new things that are being proposed, and then through a series of sessions with the President, going through and getting his judgments on all of the numbers for fiscal year 1977.

MR. WALLISON: Do you in the course of your activities evaluate the activities of the various agencies in relation to their statutory charters or restrictions?

MR. O'NEILL: Well, yes, within the limitations of our staff reach.

MR. WALLISON: In the case we have here, assuming there were no Commission and there were no Congressional inquiries, would you consider it your responsibility to review what the Agency has done to determine whether it complied with the statutory charter?

MR. O'NEILL: Well, I don't think so, Peter. I guess because I think it is beyond our reach to assure ourselves or the President that everything that is done in the Federal Government is within the statutory authority provided by the Congress. It is just a human impossibility that 380 professional staff people could ensure that everything that is done by a public, government official, a Federal official, is within the limits of the statute.

MR. GRAY: I think Mr. Donohue, who was the CIA examiner for five years, can probably answer some of the detailed questions.

MR. O'NEILL: Right. Right.

MR. BELIN: Any more questions of this Witness?

MR. KIRKLAND: I take it from what you said earlier that say if it were possible and useful to put another ten people on to protect against any real misapplication of funds by an Agency like the CIA, that you feel that they would be more usefully put in the auditing section under the comptroller of the agency rather than the OMB?

MR. O'NEILL: Well, I think it would depend in part on whether or not you look at that kind of a change in OMB vis-a-vis CIA only, or whether there was a broad precedent for OMB's role and function. I suppose such a function could be lodged in the OMB, although I must say to you, with the number of people you are talking about, ten people, I would be highly skeptical that you can ensure that things you do not want to happen will not happen. Bureaucracy is so big, even in the case of CIA, that I am skeptical that ten good people can ensure that there would not be any examples or cases of operations outside of the law. I think that has to start at the top with a tone, and direction, and a sense of responsibility that the key officials bring to their job. So I guess I am not saying that you can cut off problems by having ten more people. You might make some difference because it would be a signal that somebody is going to pay closer attention than they have in the past.

MR. KIRKLAND: I just took the figure out of the air. You are saying that if that were commensurately multiplied through all of the oversight functions, it would create an agency the size of which you do not want in OMB to be useful.

MR. O'NEILL: I think that is right.

MR. KIRKLAND: An element of strengthening would be more in terms of pure misapplication of funds, it would be better done by strengthening the audit arrangements in the Agency?

MR. O'NEILL: Yes, and perhaps protecting that inspector general or auditing function from too close an association with the Agency that it is involved in so that it has a separate, clearly defined function, and a supporting relationship that makes it clear that it is expected to be independent of the agency that it is looking at .

MR. KIRKLAND: Do you and Jim Lynn, let us say, have a direct relationship with the Comptrollers of the different agencies independent of the director?

MR. O'NEILL: You mean with the inspectors general or with the comptrollers?

MR. KIRKLAND: Yes, whatever.

MR. O'NEILL: It is uneven. It depends on, I think, in both Jim's case and mine, on our previous association with individuals in the government. I am sure he knows the inspectors general.

MR. KIRKLAND: Well, where does an inspector general go beyond his boss if he has a problem?

MR. O'NEILL: I frankly cannot think of a case and time that I have been in OMB when an inspector general came to me and said here's a problem you should know about, no. But there have been occasions when a Secretary or a comptroller would come to me and say we think we have got a problem here that you should know about. I cannot think of fraud problems, but undesirable practices problems, for example, yes.

MR. BELIN: Any other questions of this witness before we go to Mr. Donohue?

Thank you very much, sir.

MR. O'NEILL: Okay.

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Thanks a lot, Paul.

TESTIMONY OF ARNOLD E. DONOHUE

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: Are you the one gentleman who is responsible for CIA in OMB?

MR. DONOHUE: No, Mr. Vice President. I head a staff of five professionals who review the budgets of the intelligence community, one of which --

CHAIRMAN ROCKEFELLER: The whole community?

MR. DONOHUE: Right, one of which individuals is assigned to the Central Intelligence Agency, and that has been practiced for I believe the last 13 years.

MR. GRISWOLD: Can you speak up, please?

MR. DONOHUE: Sure. Excuse me.

MR. BELIN: Could you please state your name for the record?

MR. DONOHUE: Arnold E. Donohue.

MR. BELIN: You are with OMB?

~~CIA HAS NO OBJECTION TO DECLASSIFICATION AND/OR RELEASE OF THIS DOCUMENT AS SANITIZED~~ 16-8-94

(1)(B)

the testimony of Arnold Donohue, OMB official in charge of the CIA budget, before the Rockefeller Commission, 21 APR 75

MR. DONOHUE: That's right, the international affairs division, the intelligence branch, I am the Chief thereof.

MR. BELIN: And what is your educational background?

MR. DONOHUE: I graduated from Georgetown University in 1960, and from Princeton, the Woodrow Wilson School, in 1962, and worked five years in the Central Intelligence Agency, primarily as an analyst, political, economic, and joined the Office of Management and Budget in 1967, and have been in the Intelligence Unit of the Office of Management and Budget since that time. I became chief of that branch in 1973.

MR. BELIN: Could you describe OMB's activities with the CIA in preparation of its program budget?

MR. DONOHUE: Let me give you a very broad answer to that because it probably is the primary work that the unit is involved in during the first nine months of any calendar year, generally from January through the October budget submission of the Agency. The examiner will be involved directly with the Agency, CIA or any other intelligence agency in preparation, looking forward to developing a budget recommendation for the director of the Office of Management and Budget, and ultimately to the President as far as the budget of those agencies goes.

So generally the first nine months would be a period where the examiner would undertake a work program looking at various aspects which for one reason or another would be important for making budgetary recommendations. This would be done

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

sometimes in conjunction with the Agency, attempting to have the Agency analyze a particular aspect of its program or activity, or done independently by the budget examiner as something he felt he had to take the lead in and develop an analysis of his own on, in which context he would then review the official budget submission coming in October 1st, coming in on October 1st.

That is a very important phase of the work because it really involves the nine month preparation whereby the examiner puts himself in line to review the rather detailed dollars and numbers, personnel data that will come in to him during the course of a budget examination beginning in October.

MR. BELIN: Do you have any more specific examples of the level of detail and the type of justification material?

MR. DONOHUE: Well, this preliminary phase would be something that would be interactive with the Agency. On October 1st, the Central Intelligence Agency, and that's the one I will illustrate with, will come in with a fairly detailed budget submission.

MR. BELIN: And you are holding --

MR. DONOHUE: And I am holding that in my hand right now for you to see the amount of material in it. It is a very detailed submission in traditional terms of the Office of Management and Budget.

MR. BELIN: About how many pages there?

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

MR. DONOHUE: 250 approximately, 250 pages, with detai really on every office of the Central Intelligence Agency down to division levels, and the examiner would use this as a base of information.

MR. LEMNITZER: Would it include proposed covert operations specifically?

MR. DONOHUE: It would include in most cases a covert action operation that would be continuing during the coming fiscal year.

MR. LEMNITZER: New ones?

MR. DONOHUE: Generally it would not include new ones, because it would be nine months in advance at least of the beginning of the fiscal year, and it would be doubtful that new ones would be known that much in advance. In most cases the covert action projects would begin in a shorter time frame than that, and they would not be budgeted for in advance.

MR. CONNOR: Is that document classified?

MR. DONOHUE: Yes, that document is classified top secret, and I can give a brief rundown of the sort of informatio it contains.

MR. GRISWOLD: Does it include a category for prospective covert operations?

MR. DONOHUE: No, it does not. It would include funding of continuing covert action projects.

MR. GRISWOLD: I understand. But how is the Agency

WARD & PAUL
410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

going to carry out when it suddenly gets some situation where it seems to the Agency wise to move immediately into a covert operation?

MR. KIRKLAND: The contingency or discretionary funds?

MR. DONOHUE: Let's move into that area, and I think that probably will help.

MR. GRISWOLD: That's what I meant.

MR. DONOHUE: I will answer it. CIA does have a unique contingency reserve which is provided for the purposes of meeting basically extraordinary expenses that the Administration, that the Executive branch would not want to propose a supplemental to the Congress for. This contingency would then be used for purposes that came up during the course of the year, any supplemental purpose, whether that be covert action, whether it be the increased pay costs for employees, and it has been used for that in the past, or for emergency intelligence needs. Some new project would begin, and supplemental needs would be identified, and the contingency reserve would be used for that purpose.

MR. GRISWOLD: And there is a figure for that in the budget?

MR. DONOHUE: Yes, there is.

MR. GRISWOLD: How is that figure determined?

MR. DONOHUE: The figure is determined, as with any budget figure, with a recommendation or a request by the Agency for a level of what it anticipates, or some level of funding that it would anticipate being available for the supplemental purposes during the coming fiscal year. It would be reviewed by the Office of Management and Budget, and it would be referred to the Congress through the Chairman of the Appropriations Committees, and they would be informed of the amount of that reserve that we anticipated would be available during the coming fiscal year, and that program and financing schedule, which is included in the budget, and they would have the opportunity to write back and to identify, if the Chairmen of the Committees, the Appropriations Committees, would have the opportunity to write back and indicate whether that was reasonable, basically through their appropriations action, and whether there was a reduction involved.

In some cases the Congress, for example, has made reductions in the amount of that contingency reserve, and in other cases they have not.

MR. KIRKLAND: Is it not maintained on a historical basis and just replenished up to a certain level?

MR. DONOHUE: It is generally replenished up to the level of approximately 24 $50 million a year. That has historically been, and I do not have the exact numbers in front of me, but historically it has been somewhere around 24 $50 million a year which has been judged adequate in recent years. There were occasions in the past when I think it was over that, and there are occasions when it has gone below that for any period of time.

MR. BELIN: Whose approval is necessary to allow the CIA to use this contingency fund?

MR. DONOHUE: As I stated, the basic function of the contingency fund is in lieu of supplemental appropriations requests identified for CIA because of the hidden nature of its budget. Therefore, depending upon the type of activity involved, the approval for the contingency has to come from the office, the use of the contingency funds comes from the Office of Management and Budget, but we would rely on a number of checks on that system. If it was pay supplement or something, that could be easily calculated based on past experience, and our office would take action by itself. If it was a supplemental request for some special intelligence project, we might review that, determine that, in fact, it was a priority need, meeting the needs that the Office of Management and Budget and the President has established for supplementals during that year, or particularly if it was a covert action project, we would attempt to determine, and usually have been successful in determining that 40 committee approval had been given for that project, and hopefully Presidential approval had been given for that project.

MR. KIRKLAND: You would not make an independent judgment on its merits, you would look to the authorization?

MR. DONOHUE: As far as the merits of the project itself, we would look in terms of covert action projects to the 40 Committee, with an indication of Presidential approval and since I have been head of the unit in 1973, I think we have had indications in every covert action project of Presidential approval of that covert action project. We would make an independent financial assessment as to whether the dollar amount requested by the Agency to carry out that covert action project was reasonable, and that would amount to a fair amount of detailed review of each request to use the contingency reserve for covert action projects. We would hold a hearing, based at the time of the request on the facts and information as to the financial cost of that particular project, and do that in a fair amount of detail.

That does not mean getting down to every last dollar or person involved, but it does amount to looking on an aggregate basis as to whether this is a reasonable amount, and can they provide, just can the Agency provide justification for that need?

MR. KIRKLAND: Well, in point of fact, since future contingency or future covert operations by their nature cannot be budgeted in advance, and usually must be initiated out of the contingency fund, in the OMB, you would get a look at each of these projects for all practical purposes at their inception, wouldn't you?

MR. DONOHUE: Yes, sir. We would.

MR. LEMNITZER: I had in mind particularly the recovery of the Russian submarine and the large expenditure that was involved. How was that handled, for example?

MR. DONOHUE: Do you want me to answer, David?

MR. BELIN: I will ask you this question because the Witness is concerned about secrecy agreements that he has signed pertaining to certain projects.

Is there any large project that involved an expenditure of more than $10 million by the Agency in any one year that was not audited or reviewed by OMB?

MR. DONOHUE: It would not be audited.

MR. BELIN: I used the word audit incorrectly because you do not audit. That was not carefully reviewed by the OMB?

MR. DONOHUE: I do not know of any large project of that magnitude that we would not be aware of. I will be glad to go off the record and answer the question.

MR. GRISWOLD: You couldn't get that out of a $50 24 million contingency fund.

MR. DONOHUE: That is correct.

MR. BELIN: Why don't we go off the record because of your concern with regard to the secrecy agreements that you yourself are signing, Mr. Donohue.

Can we go off the record for a minute?

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. BELIN: Let me get back on the record here.

Can I return to the review aspects of your work at OMB?

MR. SHANNON: Before we get to that, could I just follow on right here where he was talking about approval by the 40 Committee? This is nothing to do with his immediately preceding comments, but just in general I take it if the 40 Committee, if you thought you had approval from the 40 Committee or from the President, then you would not look into the question of whether it was, whether it seemed to you to comply with statutory provisions or the Act as far as the Agency was concerned?

MR. DONOHUE: I am not sure of that. I have not found an instance where I would challenge it on a legal basis. I have found one project for example, a covert action project, that I would challenge on maybe a roles and missions, proper emphasis, priorities basis, and I would review that and send it up the chain of command in OMB to determine if in fact they feel strongly enough about it to reopen the issue with the President. I think we would do it in that context and have to inform my superiors that, in fact, the President had indicated approval or the 40 Committee had indicated approval, and if he wished to reopen it with the President, that would be his decision.

MR. SHANNON: I just thought that came in under where we were discussing more appropriately, and if you were starting a new line --

MR. BELIN: I am going now to the question of review by OMB.

Would you care to discuss that as to the number of examiners, the choice of portions of the budget that are reviewed, and any pertinent questions or hearings or recommendations?

MR. DONOHUE: Certainly. I have already explained the nine month preparatory. Here on October 1, and almost, usually always on that date, this column will come in and the examiner will usually, the examiner, and there is one examiner for CIA, will usually review this document in detail, going through, marking it up, seeing what areas he does not feel are adequately addressed, or in which he wants more information to address them in terms of a budget recommendation.

The things he would look for there are the criteria he would use, which would be for one thing incremental change from year to year, what it was in 1974 versus what they are proposing for 1976. He would look at the magnitude of resources involved here, and if it is a $50,000 project, he obviously would not have time to look over every $50,000 project, but if it is a $500 million project, he might very well look into it. He would look into critical areas, critical areas where we felt, or the Administration felt, or somebody had expressed a view that this was a critical area that needed to be addressed, and he might look at that area very closely. A new project coming along in the satellite field where the CIA had a responsibility, for example, might be looked at very closely, and he might look at something just to refamiliarize himself with the activities of a particular office.

He would, the present examiner at least, and there is no uniform guide here that an examiner would use, but the present examiner for example then prepared a list of written questions for the comptroller of the CIA for him to respond to based on his review of this document. In this case it was six pages worth of questions, 33 questions in all, asking specifically about a number of items, and I can give you some illustrations if you like of the type of detail that he would go into.

MR. GRAY: Why don't you read one or two and give us an idea?

MR. DONOHUE: All right.

Hearing to discuss the totality of 01 (KENNEN) related costs to the Agency covering as a minimum 1974, '75, and '76. The discussion should include by component the costs of R&D, computer and personnel distributions made by the Agency, and how this distribution is integrated into the United States overall classified photo interpretation effort. That may not mean much to you.

MR. BELIN: I wonder if we could include a copy of this as an exhibit to your testimony here?

Is there any particular reason that this cannot be included as an exhibit? This is all theoretically secret? Or do you feel you might not be able to?

MR. DONOHUE: Well, the code word I just mentioned, OI KENNEN, as a working paper, was not fully classified, so if I could check that out.

MR. BELIN: All right.

MR. DONOHUE: Let me give you one other example because it relates to one other aspect OMB has with respect to CIA, which is somewhat unique. Hearings with Office of Personnel to cover a justification of the 1976 request, and in general personnel management for the Agency supergrades and average grade requirements, and the status of the CIA retirement and disability system.

Prior to this meeting the examiner would like the following information: supergrade positions by name of position as of the end of FY '74 and anticipated for the end of FY '75. Lists should include whether occupied on June 30, 1974, and planned occupancy rate for the end of fiscal year '75. Overall accession, termination, trends and plans, 1970 through 1976, and average grade and average salary for these years. A paper indicating the Agency's long range plans for the financing of the CIA retirement and disability system fund in the light of the declining balance budget hearings in 1976.

Those are very detailed questions in terms of a budget examiner, and it is part of what I might say is a very intensive review on the part of OMB of the budget of CIA and in this particular case, fulfilling of a function somewhat beyond the scope of the normal budget examiner while looking at the personnel structure of the Agency, the rates of promotion, the average grade structure, the number of supergrades, the number of executive pay levels involved, the financing of the retirement system primarily here, because the Central Intelligence Agency system is not part of the Civil Service Commission and is now not reviewed by the Civil Service Commission as a government personnel system, so OMB does perform somewhat an additional role there.

Let me mention one other question here just to show you the amount of detail. Breakdown of personnel, full-time permanent, temporary part-time, and indigenous or local by station overseas for 1974 and 1975 and 1976.

MR. BELIN: What number of examiners or analysts do you have in connection with your review?

MR. DONOHUE: One examiner, full time, plus my own staff time that I would use in supervision of that exam.

MR. KIRKLAND: He works exclusively on CIA?

MR. DONOHUE: That's correct.

MR. BELIN: What choice of portions of the budget or offices is made for the closest scrutiny apart from the size?

MR. DONOHUE: Well, I gave you some criteria earlier for what his choice might be motivated by. He in this particular case I think looked at approximately 20 of the offices in some more detail out of approximately 50 offices, and that means that 30 were not looked at in closer detail other than what was in the written material. But he would give in to a fair amount of detail to a lot of the offices which would be relatively uncontroversial in terms of the resource requirements.

MR. BELIN: Are the hearings held on these areas, or are the written questions relied on exclusively?

MR. DONOHUE: No, the written questions would serve as a base for then holding a hearing, and I think in the case last year, the examiner indicated he spent approximately 75 to 80 hours in oral hearings, using the response he got in the written questions, plus the budget material, to elicit further information to serve as a basis for his recommendation to me, and ultimately to the Director on the level of resources that the CIA would require for 1976.

MR. SHANNON: Of the people participating in these hearings, they would be representatives from the administrative part of the CIA and perhaps the Deputy Director or one of the top level officials?

MR. DONOHUE: Particularly in the case of 1976, in fact, I accompanied the examiner for an initial session with three of the four major directorates in the CIA, and I think each of those sessions ran about two hours with Mr. Procter, Mr. Nelson, and Mr. Duckett. There was an additional session held wi

Mr. Blake, who is in charge of the administrative side, but these were really introductory to provide a total scope of each directorate's activities, followed by the 80 hours of hearings that he had, with usually representatives from the individual offices, whatever side they be in, operations side, or the intelligence production side or support side, and would request, or those people would be present for testimony, or not testimony, hearings on justifications for the budget.

MR. [illegible]: Now, may the CIA appeal? Pardon me.

MR. SHANNON: I'm still not clear on to what extent the Director of the Agency participates in this kind of a review. Is he involved in this at all? He knows this is going on?

MR. DONOHUE: The Director of Central Intelligence?

MR. SHANNON: Yes.

MR. DONOHUE: The Director, of course, would have blessed this budget submission to OMB. His internal cycle calls for development of a program in the June-July timeframe. Prior to the October 1 submission, the time between June-July where he, as I understand it, would personally review it in the June-July timeframe would then be put into a budget document for October 1st, and generally we would be acquainted with what was going on, the magnitude of the resources, the major items that might influence the size of the budget in the June-July timeframe.

MR. SHANNON: But when you go back --

MR. DONOHUE: When we go back --

MR. SHANNON: To check on this, he is not sitting in on these things, you are doing it further down the line?

MR. DONOHUE: That's correct. It would be staff offices throughout CIA not the Director himself. If there was a need for a case to, in fact, have a session with the Director, if we felt it was important, I suppose we could request that, but in most cases the Agency attitude I think is very cooperative here, and if the information can be provided at whatever level, it is not a question of the individual director being present.

MR. GRAY: Mr. Donohue --

MR. DONOHUE: Appeals?

MR. GRAY: Appeals, that's right.

MR. DONOHUE: The process at that point would be CIA, the examiner of the CIA budget making a recommendation to me with my review to a division chief and the Office of Management and Budget, preparing a formal written preparation, submission on our recommendation, our staff recommendation to the Director of OMB in providing that in a session to the Associate Director, and the Director and the Deputy Director, a review of that budget with a recommendation as far as the total amounts to be involved, and the specific items that we would recommend for deletion. At that point the budget process provides for an appeal by the Agency head based on the Director of OMB's decision. He can appeal or he cannot. In the last five years he has appealed the last two years. He did not appeal the previous three years. He would appeal to the President and the decision would be made by the President.

MR. GRAY: In the last five years, how much are you cutting his request approximately? I don't need specific figures.

MR. DONOHUE: Are you talking in terms of the OBM staff recommendation, the staff of OMB's recommendations or the Director decision?

ch

MR. GRAY: Let's talk about the Director's decision.

MR. DONOHUE: It is three to five percent.

MR. BELIN: How was the CIA's budget submitted to Congress?

MR. DONOHUE: By the provisions of 50 USC-403 which is the basic CIA statute. The Director of OMB is authorized to transfer funds to the Agency from other accounts, and by tradition the method of identifying the accounts in which the CIA budget is carried to the Congress is by a letter from the Director of OMB to the Chairman of the Appropriations Committees in the House and the Senate identifying the appropriation amount, its location in the budget, and the financing schedule including the amount of contingents or reserve of which the Agency would have available during the coming year. Those letters would go in, in the last year to Mr. McClellan and Mr. Mahon, and they would be responded to at the completion of the appropriations process by Mr. Mahon and Mr. McClellan, Senator McClellan, and Congressman Mahon to the Director of OMB identifying the amount they had appropriated.

MR. BELIN: And that is in the Department of Defense budget generally, is that right?

MR. DONOHUE: Yes. It has been.

MR. BELIN: And after the appropriations bill is passed, how are the funds made available to the CIA?

MR. DONOHUE: Upon completion of the appropriations bill, well, they would be operating under a continuing resolution prior to the completion of the appropriations action, but they would be transferred first from the DOD account to a separate account in the Treasury, and secondly an apportionment of those funds to the CIA for actual expenditures. Those numbers might differ primarily on the basis of if funds were identified for contingency reserve the appropriation amount, that amount transferred, and apportioned, the amount appropriated would always be transferred into this special Treasury account, and the amount apportioned might vary depending upon the amount identified for holding within a contingency and subsequently released.

MR. BELIN: Is there any other way in which funds are made available to the Agency?

MR. DONOHUE: Yes. The major other additional way, of course, is transfers under the Economy Act provisions. Well, I am not an expert on the Economy Act, but it essentially provides the funds to be transferred to an agency where it can perform a service with economy to another government agency, and has a unique capability, or a unique ability or can provide common service to a number of government agencies, and those transfers would be made in this case to CIA. One of the largest as cited here would be those from the National Reconnaissa Office in charge of satellite development where CIA acts as a developer, and procurer of some of that equipment, and fairly large sums have annually been provided to the CIA through that mechanism. I would point out that those funds are reviewed by the intelligence unit of OMB in the context of the National Reconnissance Office and the total satellite programs.

MR. BELIN: What is the largest amount transferred in such manner?

MR. DONOHUE: I can't give you a detailed answer there, but I think the transfer by NRO has historically run in the last few years at about 24 $300 million a year.

MR. BELIN: Are most funds eventually transferred to the Agency under the Economy Act identified as such in the budget submissions of the transferring agencies?

MR. DONOHUE: No, I don't believe they would be identified as transfer items in the budget submissions by the agencies. Of course, in most cases large items here would be the satellite activities, and also the other problem we discussed earlier, the other area that we discussed earlier, those would not be identified, but would be known generally as those programs in which CIA had an interest, and had the responsibility for carrying out the research, development, procurement, engineering and the project.

MR. BELIN: Is OMB approval required for the CIA to shift funds from one program to another?

MR. DONOHUE: Internally within CIA, CIA does have a flexibility to reprogram within the total budget amount approved by the President. Of course, that is something that would generally not be the wisest thing for an agency to do, especially if it was a program that had not been approved for some reason, or had been deleted in the previous budget submission, because it would entail, therefore, a further look at it by the OMB examiner, and an additional justification, but they technically could reprogram their funds within their total availability to cover their needs as they saw them. Obviously working nine months ahead of the fiscal year in terms of preparation of the budget there would be items that would increase, and they would have to cover these, and they would not require our approval for the reprogramming as such.

(Jpw

MR. GRISWOLD: What is NRO?

MR. DONOHUE: National Reconnaissance Office. That office which is responsible for the development, procurement, launch and operation of satellite reconnaissance vehicles.

MR. BELIN. Now, OMB does not have any responsibility for any audit or inspector general duties over at the CIA, does it?

MR. DONOHUE: No, it does not. Obviously our interest in prior year funding is primarily an interest in which to develop a base of information on historical expenditures for the purpose of evaluating future year requirements, the budgets, fiscal year budget year requirements that have been identified. It is not for purposes of going back to see that funds were actually spent for the intended purpose, although it is conceivable that we might run across a question along that line. It is not a function that we would normally perform. The inspector general role, of course, is one that we also do not perform and CIA has their own inspector general function as part of the Agency.

I would like to comment additionally on that, that those two functions of auditor and inspector general would basically be in conflict with the primary, the basic budget function of OMB in terms of attempting to assess future year requirements. The honesty with which an agency would project his future year requirements based on an indepth audit approach to prior year funding would probably create more difficulties for us in terms of attempting to examine these future needs.

MR. BELIN: Would OBM generally detect an improper activity if it involved a small number of people and a small amount of money?

MR. DONOHUE: As a general rule, I think it would probably not have the capability to get down to small numbers of people engaged in improper activities or a small number of dollars improperly used. Obviously we cannot follow red wigs bought on an individual basis.

MR. BELIN: At what level --

MR. DONOHUE: We do not attempt to do that and have not succeeded in doing that.

MR. BELIN: At what level of either people or money would such an activity be detected if it were improper?

MR. DONOHUE: That is very hard to answer. It would depend on a lot of factors, some of which I enumerated earlier. But for example if there was express presidential interest in questions of illegal activities conducted by the Foreign Resources Division of CIA's Directorate of Operations, the budget examiner might look at that very intently during the coming year, and maybe the coming two or three years, and might notice some illegal activities at a fairly small size. But as a rule, I think we can say that unless you are approaching something on the order of $1 million or something on the order of 100 people involved, that the large number of CIA people that there are, we probably could not notice it.

MR. BELIN: Then did OMB become aware of a CIA transfer of $34,000 to the White House in 1970 to fund responses to letterson Nixson's Cambodia speech?

MR. DONOHUE: No, we were not aware and it was not requested, it was not transferred under the authority of the CIA Act of 1949.

MR. BELIN: Did the OMB become aware of Richard Ober's Special Operations Group which was monitoring American dissidents?

MR. DONOHUE: We did not.

MR. BELIN: Did OMB become aware of mail opening or main intercept programs of the CIA?

MR. DONOHUE: We were not familiar with any mail opening operation in the U.S.

MR. BELIN: Were you aware of any assistance to police departments given by the Office of Security of CIA?

MR. DONOHUE: I have checked the files on that particular question, and as of the moment I cannot locate any information indicating our knowledge. As I say, I was not the examiner on CIA during that period, but I found no information in the files indicating our knowledge thereof. My own recollection is that CIA did not attempt to hide, and it was known that they were involved in some training of police on a reimbursable basis from the departments. I do not think that was hidden, but I do not have any records to prove it, and it is a very vague recollection for me.

MR. BELIN: Were OMB people aware of investigations by the Office of Security of CIA which might have involved wire tapes and surreptitious entries?

MR. DONOHUE: Other than things that I have read in the newspaper, no, we were not familiar with any such activities in the United States.

MR. BELIN: Would you please describe for us cases in which the OBM has questioned the propriety of CIA activities?

MR. DONOHUE: Propriety is a difficult term to deal with. If the question becomes one of illegality, I think there probably are only two instances, if it is broadly interpreted in terms of whether the Agency should, in fact, do that for whatever reason. It would cover a large number of things. Obviously we make a number, a large number of specific recommendations in their budget each year. Let me touch on a couple of those. One was the liquidation by CIA of some airlines it was running as proprietary operations in which CIA originally proposed to its congressional committee that the proceeds from these liquidations be used to off-set their budget request for fiscal '74. As it turned out, they were, in fact, used partially with the approval of the Congress to off-set $\overset{24}{$4}$ million of CIA budgetary requirements for fiscal year '74. In fiscal year '75, CIA did not make a proposal to include such liquidating assest as an off-set to its regular budget, and the Office of Management and Budget proposed that it do so and, in fact, reduced CIA's appropriations by $\overset{24}{$20}$ million because of anticipated receipts from these, from the sale of these proprietaries during fiscal year '75.

Subsequently the CIA General Counsel, Mr. Warner, indicated that he felt there was some legal question involved in terms of the propriety of use of proprietary receipts here to off-set the obligation requirements of CIA. We reviewed it with him. Based on the legal opinion that he gave, which Mr. Colby concurred in, we reviewed it with our legal counsel, and our legal counsel indicated that this was probably a reasonable position on the part of the CIA, and so those funds are now not being used to off-set CIA appropriations. It was not one we originated. In fact, the CIA General Counsel originated it. It is probably a debatable legal question, as a matter of fact, but as it turned out we decided those funds would not be utilized to off-set regular appropriations.

MR. GRISWOLD: But they are recovered into the Treasury receipts?

MR. DONOHUE: At this point they will be used as regular receipts in the Treasury.

MR. GRISWOLD: They are not additional funds for the CIA to spend?

MR. DONOHUE: That is correct, and we were attempting to ensure that they were used to off-set regular CIA appropriations at the time of the appropriations and of the President's budget as opposed to the subsequent Congressional reduction, using the same funds.

A couple of other items which I would just like to cite in areas where OBM has been involved in the past where CIA activities might relevant is the Equal Employment Opportunity, which again because of CIA's unique statutory exemption, not unique, but exemption from the Civil Service Commission review, OMB has initiated action to insure that CIA made a conscientious effort to achieve equal employment opportunity goals. I have mentioned the covert action project previously which there was a question of roles and mission. I think there is one other episode like that where it is partly roles and missions, but it is certainly where I as the unit chief in OBM could use the guidance of this commission, and that is the use of some CIA equipment and some CIA involvement jointly with the FBI in conducting surveillance of foreign embassies, foreign residences, and which the commission, or which I think it is unclear at the present time the extent to which these operations are involved in positive foreign intelligence collection, which obviously is an appropriate mission for CIA versus counterintelligence activities more appropriately seems a mission for the FBI.

MR. BELIN: Basically what --

MR. DONOHUE: Can I add a couple of items to this?

MR. BELIN: Go right ahead.

MR. DONOHUE: I do recall very heavy involvement by our office in it, and again I was not personally involved in the implementation of the Katzenbach Report in '67 when it was decided that CIA involvement in private volunteer organizations seemed at that point to be inappropriate. And while I am not sure there was a distinct question of legality involved, it was decided that some of these activities should not be continued and OMB was instrumental in insuring that the Agency did not fund these activities which by presidential decision had been cited to be beyond the realm of CIA at that particular point.

MR. BELIN: What impact, if any, has OMB had on the management of the CIA?

MR. DONOHUE: You get into a much broader question there, and I would like to spend a few minutes just elaborating on the larger role that OMB has with respect to management, some of which I think may be Mr. O'Neill covered. But, there would be smaller instances of management activities that we would become involved in on an almost routine basis. I had mentioned personnel management as an area that we look into heavily, but there are other programmatic areas where we would feel that CIA's relationship with another agency of government might need to be straightened out, and we would initiate steps to try and straighten that out. I can think here of transferring of funding for certain third-party SIGINT operations to the National Security Agency where we were heavily involved. On a broader scale we were very intimately involved as a staff in OMB in support of Dr. Schlesinger in his 1971 re-organization study of the intelligence community, and that had very broad recommendations with respect to the organization of the Foreign Intelligence activities of the U.S., such as the President signed off I guess a 10 page directive in November '71 which provided for a greater role for the Director of Central Intelligence in the management and coordination of the overall U.S. Foreign Intelligence effort.

I could go into that in more detail, Mr. Belin, but this is up to you. This is a very long and exhaustive study amounting to about a year of staff time and essentially six members of the intelligence community.

MR. BELIN: Because of the time limitations, I am going to turn to another area, and that is whether or not since the CIA is not subject to the General Accounting Office, and it is not subject to thorough Congressional review, do you believe that OMB's oversight role should be expanded either in concept or in staff so that there might be a better opportunity to reduce any improper activity?

MR. DONOHUE: I think that the chance there of an enlarged OMB staff, in fact, discovering illegal or improper activities with an agency that is extremely adept at hiding things if it wishes would really be impossible. I don't think, with one examiner presently on the budget, and review of that agency that two, three, five would essentially make a difference, and it would essentially require a large number of people to, in fact, do the type of audit function that GAO does for the question of improper activities to really arise in order to get into that in such detail, at least as a guarantee, an expanded OMB staff could not provide that guarantee unless it essentially changed its function to one of audit, and even in that case it would be a post-audit function. It would be one that would discover illegal activities committed perhaps two or three years ago, and not activities currently under commission. I do not believe OMB could easily accept any additional responsibility in the area of audit. It is just beyond its charter. It is out of tune with its scope as an agency, and would basically be counterproductive in terms of our basic function.

MR. BELIN: Well, do you have any other recommendations involving OMB's relationship with the CIA?

MR. DONOHUE: In terms of OMB's role I see a number of things that probably we could do to, in fact, strengthen it in relatively minor ways. I offer them not in any hope of guaranteeing in any sense that improper or illegal activities would not occur, but certainly we could take a closer review of CIA's proprietary operations which now, when once established as an element, we would not require any continuing government funding, and would not generally be reviewed by OMB, except in so far as they required annual transfers to these proprietaries for maintenance. There probably could be some increase in OMB review of transfers to and from CIA under all provisions of the law. They probably have to be restricted to major transfers because there are a large number of minor transfers that reimburse personnel on detail that would be very difficult if not impossible to track.

OMB could undertake some stricter apportionment of CIA by project or by office, or by program which we do not now do. We essentially apportion to CIA as an agency, and they have the liberty to reprogram within those funds. We could tighten that to a certain extent.

We could probably not get down to each individual project or each individual office, but we could provide some limitations within four, five, possibly as many as ten categories where they would then have to seek our approval for reprogramming actions. That would help us in giving a closer review of CIA on its reprogramming actions at the same time.

These are things that could involve some additional paperwork. I don't think they have, would have much prospect for really providing a guarantee against illegal or improper activities.

MR. BELIN: Any questions by any members of the Commission?

MR. CONNOR: No.

MR. BELIN: Any other comments that you want to make, Mr. Donohue, for the record?

MR. DONOHUE: No. I think I've probably covered it as well as I can, in fact.

MR. BELIN: Well thank you very much for coming here.

MR. DONOHUE: Thank you.

Oswald Calls to Embassies Reported Taped by C.I.A.

By NICHOLAS M. HORROCK

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20—The Central Intelligence Agency secretly tape-recorded two telephone conversations between Lee Harvey Oswald and the Cuban and Soviet Embassies in Mexico City some eight weeks before President Kennedy was shot to death on Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas, Government sources familiar with the events said today.

The call to the Soviet Embassy, according to the sources, alerted the C.I.A. to the presence of Oswald in Mexico City, and on Oct. 10 the agency warned the Federal Bureau of Investigation. There is no indication that the F.B.I., which was investigating Oswald for his pro-Castro activities, ever followed up on the information.

The call to the Cuban Embassy, the sources said, was not associated with Oswald until after the death of Mr. Kennedy. A Federal commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren found that Oswald, acting alone, had slain the President.

To Avoid Publicity

The calls were reportedly placed by Oswald on a trip to Mexico City in late September and early October, 1963. The events of this trip have never been fully made public and have been the subject of speculation for more than a decade.

The reports of the calls are the latest developments in the increasing speculation about the Warren Commission's conclusions. Evidence that the C.I.A. and the F.B.I. may have been less than candid with the commission has added to the questions surrounding the as-

Chilean Junta Resisting

By JONATHAN KANDELL

Special to The New York Times

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 16—Two years after the bloody coup that toppled the Marxist coalition government of President Salvador Allende Gossens, the military junta that governs Chile has developed a siege mentality against critics of its harsh economic recovery program and of its continuing violations of human rights.

Unemployment is at its highest in at least four decades and industrial production has dropped sharply this year.

But the junta has vowed to continue an austerity program aimed almost exclusively at dampening the perennial rise in inflation and diminishing the state's role in the economy.

June Graduates Find More Jobs Than Expected

By SETH S. KING

Special to The New York Times

EVANSTON, Ill., Sept. 20—The graduating seniors in the class of '75, who in June were thought to have the poorest chances for employment since the Great Depression, are faring better than the forecasters had expected.

Few of them were courted by the employers this time. Most of them had to try longer and harder to find a job and had to settle for something less than they had hoped for.

The job offers came later in the summer than usual. And many of 1975's graduates are now working in places that they had not even considered living in before.

But many have been delighted to find that inflation has pushed starting salaries, especially for engineers and particularly for women engineers, far above last year's.

90% Find Jobs

Placement directors at universities and colleges in many parts of the country said this week that the majority of those seniors who made the effort were now employed in the fields they had trained for, or in something related to them.

"We've found that more than 90 per cent of Northwestern's June graduates who really sought jobs have now found them," said Victor R. Lindquist, director of placement at this large private university's Evanston campus.

"Of course, that's below the 95 per cent or higher rate we've had for the past three years," he said. "But when you consider how poor the prospects were this spring, it's not as bad as you'd expect."

The College Placement Council of Bethlehem, Pa., in a survey of 156 colleges and universities, found that by August job offers to the class of 1975 had dropped 27 per cent below last year. Of the 6,984 seniors sassination and has led to more calls for a reopening of the inquiry.

The Mexico City trip was given scant treatment in the Warren Commission report because publication of information about it might have exposed "sources and methods" of the C.I.A. and impaired national security, intelligence officers and commission staff sources have said.

In response to inquiries about the matter from The New York Times, the C.I.A. issued an unusual public statement on the matter. It would not confirm that there were any tape-recorded conversations but said:

"On October 9, 1963 Central Intelligence Agency headquarters received information that a person named Lee Oswald contacted the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City in late September or early October, 1963. In transmitting the information on 10 October 1963 Central Intelligence Agency headquarters said Lee Oswald was probably identical to Lee Henry (sic) Oswald, a former radar operator in the United States Marine Corps, born 18 October 1939 in New Orleans, who defected to the Soviet Union in 1959 and who, subsequently made arrangements to return to tho United States with a Russian wife.

From F.B.I. Reports

"This biographical data was based upon Federal Bureau of Investigation reports provided to Central Intelligence Agency following Oswld's defection to the Soviet Union.

"This information was also provided to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Department of the Navy, the United States Ambassador and his staff in Mexico and to the Representative of the F.B.I. in Mexico.

"Following the assassination of President Kennedy, Central Intelligence Agency records revealed that a person believed to be Oswald was in contact with the Cuban Embassy on 27 September 1963 for the purpose of receiving a transit visa for use enroute to the U.S.S.R.

"In addition a number of photographs of individuals believed to be in contact with the Cuban and Soviet Embassies in Mexico City were received from the Central Intelligence Agency station in Mexico and were compared with pictures of Lee Harvey Oswald by C.I.A. officers in Mexico City and C.I.A. headquarters and by United States authorities in Dallas, Texas.

United Press International

Lee Harvey Oswald

"It was determined that none of these photographs was the photograph of Lee Harvey Oswald. Their determinations, and the raw data upon which they were based, along with the reports of his visit to the Soviet Embassy, were made to the Warren and Rockefeller Commissions as were all other materials relevant to the investigation of President Kennedy's death."

Three staff members of the Warren Commission were assigned to investigate the Mexico City trip and other matters involving the C.I.A.—William T. Coleman, now Secretary of Transportation; Howard P. Willens, a formerJustice Department official now in private law practice, and W. David Slawson, a law professor in California.

Mr. Coleman said in a telephone interview that he was "disturbed" about the possibility that United State security might be harmed by recent disclosures of F.B.I. and C.I.A. activities. But he acknowledged that he and other staff members had received information from the C.I.A. on Oswald's activities in Mexico, and they did not run counter to the commission's conclusion that Oswald, acting alone, killed President Kennedy and a Dallas police officer, J. J. Tippitt.

Sure Others Learned

Mr. Coleman said he was sure that J. Lee Rankin, the Warren Commission's chief counsel, had been informed of the C.I.A., Mexico City data and that "at least two or three commission members" knew. He could not remember if the commission had ever discussed the matter in executive session. Mr. Willens and Mr. Slawson declined to make public comment.

Sources familiar with the contents of the tapes said that Oswald had been seeking a transit visa from Cuban officials and that he had been "rebuffed." One source said that the call to the Soviet Embassy had been an effort to get help in furthering his application at the Cuban Embassy.

These sources said there had been no "conspiratorial" tone to the conversations and one source called them "benign." Moreover, the sources said, the C.I.A. had information that the Cubans were suspicious of and unsympathetic to Oswald. One source said the Cubans regarded Oswald's behavior in returning to the United States from the Soviet Union and then asking to go back as "strange."

Asked if anything said might have "triggered" Oswald, a Castro supporter, to take "retaliation" against President Kennedy, one source said he thought not but said that he thought Oswald had been "frustrated" by the Cubans.

Known by F.B.I.

The F.B.I. acknowledged at the Warren Commission hearings that it had received information from the C.I.A. about Oswald's Mexican contact with the Soviet Embassy on Oct. 10, 1963. Former F.B.I. agents involved in the investigation said the bureau knew that Oswald had been trying to return to the Soviet Union.

Under bureau operating procedures at that time, the F.B.I. followed up on any unexplained visit by an American citizen to Communist embassies and consulates. It would have been particularly watchful in the case of Oswald, who had defected once.

The bureau jargon for such unexplained visits was "bogies" and agents were sent to interview the person on why he or she had been in contact with the Communists. The only reason this was not done in Oswald's case, these sources said, may have been because he was already under an F.B.I. security investigation in connection with pro-Castro activities.

The bureau's formal response to these questions was to refer to the Warren Commission report. In the report it was noted that James P. Hosty Jr., special agent of the Dallas field office, attempted to interview Oswald about his Cuban activities on Nov. 1.

was no promiscuous [illegible] of trash then. That happens a lot now, though."

Personnel Cuts

Sanitation personnel there have been cut from 1,450 to 935. They collect about 2,800 tons a day, compared with the 24,000 tons generated daily in New York City.

Mayor Beame's ultimatum to clean up the streets within 10 days expires tomorrow at midnight. Some progress has been reported.

Sanitation Commissioner Robert T. Groh, who resigned today amid mounting public criticism of his department's performance, attributed the unsightly dirty streets and overflowing rubbish barrels to manpower reductions. An average of 3,100 men is on duty daily now, compared with 4,000 in former years.

If more men are not hired, Mr. Groh said, "we'll just have to get accustomed to living like this; our standards will have to be lowered."

Solutions suggested in other cities included new laws and taxes governing packaging, use of an all-purpose returnable bottle and the painting of workers' names on sanitation trucks to enable citizens to hold them responsible for sloppy work.

But others believe a real solution rests only in changing people's behavior. City streets, said the Chicago columnist, Mike Royko, "are as clean as people in that neighborhood want them to be."

Mr. Powers of Keep America Beautiful professes optimism. The fiscal crises of the nation's cities, he said, are making more people aware that they can not rely on government to solve all their problems.

"This is a very, very slow process," he said. "I'm not suggesting there is a big movement across the country and we will have the situation cleaned up in five years. But there is a new attitude, and I am encouraged."

[illegible]

Mr. Mark Allen
P. O. Box 9032
Washington, DC 20003

Dear Mr. Allen:

This responds to your letter of 12 January 1981 in which you request all correspondence or records of any communication between this Agency and the U. S. House Select Committee on Assassinations concerning the Committee's investigation into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Your request has been processed under the provisions of 5 U.S.C. 552, the Freedom of Information Act. Information which is releasable is enclosed.

National Security Agency/Central Security Service (NSA/CSS) functions, activities, and internal organizational designators, as well as titles and names of NSA/CSS employees, have been deleted from the enclosures. These deletions have been made pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(3), in conjunction with 50 U.S.C. 402 note (Public Law 86-36). Section 6 of Public Law 86-36 provides that no law shall be construed to require the disclosure of the organization. or any function of the NSA, of any information with respect to the activities thereof, or of the names, titles, salaries, or number of persons employed by the Agency.

Other items have been deleted from the enclosures pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(6), as their disclosure would cause an unwarranted invasion of the personal privacy of the individuals concerned.

The remaining items have been deleted because they are classified and therefore exempt from access or release pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(1), which provides that the Freedom of Information Act does not apply to matters that are specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy and are in fact properly classified pursuant to such Executive order. The information is currently and properly classified in accordance with the criteria for classification in Section 1-3 of Executive Order 12065, and paragraph 2-202 of Department of Defense Regulation 5200.1-R. The information has been reviewed for possible declassification or downgrading according to the provisions of Sections 3-3, 3-4, and 3-6 of Executive Order 12065 and Chapter III of DoD Regulation 5200.1-R and found to be properly excluded from declassification or downgrading.

Kennedy [illegible]

Serial: N9022

In addition, this Agency is authorized by law to protect certain information concerning its activities. Title 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(3), exempts matters that are specifically exempted from disclosure by statute. The applicable statutes in this case are 18 U.S.C. 798, 50 U.S.C. 402 note (Public Law 86-36), and 50 U.S.C. 403(d)(3). DoD Directive 5400.7, Sections III and VI.C.3, specifically recognizes this exemption.

As the deleted items constitute a partial denial of your request, you are hereby advised of this Agency's appeal procedures.

Any person denied access to records, or parts thereof, may, within 30 days after notification of the denial, file an appeal to the NSA/CSS Freedom of Information Act Appeal Authority. The appeal shall be in writing addressed to the NSA/CSS FOIA Appeal Authority, National Security Agency, Fort George G. Meade, MD 20755. The appeal shall reference the initial denial of access and shall contain, in sufficient detail and particularity, the grounds upon which the requester believes release of the information is required. The NSA/CSS Appeal Authority shall respond to the appeal within 20 working days after receipt.

Please be advised that records originated by the Congress of the United States are not subject to the Freedom of Information Act.

Sincerely,

In fact, I never recall having been told by anybody do not do this, do not do that, do not do the other thing." (26) (The above statements refer to Mongoose.) Helms testified that "the pressure was very intense and I remember vividly it was very intense." The pressure led to several "very nutty schemes." (26) Helms testified the pressure built up to the Bay of Pig and then lay dormant for awhile and intensified again toward the end of 1961 and 1962. The Cuban Missile Crisis itself was the period of greatest intensity. Afterwards interest tapered off, although Helms recalled efforts in 1963 involving "economic warfare" such as turning off oil deliveries and stopping bus deliveries including an attempt to stop the sale [redacted] of buses to Cuba. III. Operations and Policy

Clandestine activities should be assessed not only in the context of their relationship to an open society but also in the context of their relationship to United States foreign policy.

CIA operations have not been held effectively subordinate to U.S. foreign policy.

1. Clandestine intelligence collection is, by charter, free from State Department control. This fact exposes American foreign policy to a multitude of embarrassments when CIA is discovered recruiting agents or developing sources in a friendly country. The recent Singapore case, when CIA, without notice to the Consul General, tried to subvert a member of the Special Branch of the Singapore Police provides an instructive example. After complications of ludicrous complexity, including an attempt to subject the recruit to a lie-detector test, it turned out that the recruit had long since informed his superiors of the CIA approach and was leading CIA into a trap which, when sprung, produced considerable embarrassment to relations between the US and the Singapore government. There have been troubles of a comparable sort [redacted]

CIA has said that, in such cases, neither the Embassy nor the Department in Washington is normally informed of this type of operation. In short, no one knows how many potential problems for US foreign policy -- and how much potential friction with friendly states -- are being created at this moment by CIA clandestine intelligence operation. Surely there is an argument for permitting State to decide whether the advantage to be gained by the operation (e.g., the information derivable from an agent within the Special Branch of the Singapore Police) outweighs the risk (e.g., exasperating the local government and shaking its confidence both in our purposes and in our sense). Clandestine intelligence operations should plainly be cleared both with the Department of State and (save for exceptional instances and on agreement of the Secretary of State) with the local U.S. Ambassador.

It has meant too that the State Department, often apprised of an operation only in its later stages, is under great pressure to endorse the operation as already mounted because of the alleged evil consequences of exercising a veto. I well remember Tom Mann's remark the day the decision was made to go ahead on Cuba: "I would never have favored initiating this operation; but, since it has gone as far as it has, I do not think we can risk calling it off." Moreover, at a time when there is increasing premium on activism, State, when it questions CIA operations or initiatives, casts itself in a prissy, sissy, negative role. The advocate of clandestine activities seems 'tough' and realistic; the opponent has to invoke such intangibles as the reputation of the United States, world public opinion, "What do we say in the United Nations?", etc., and seems hopelessly idealistic, legalistic and 'soft.'

The result of CIA's initiative in covert political operations has been to create situations which have forced policy on the State Department. This was not the original idea behind CIA. As Allen Dulles wrote in his 1947 memorandum to the Senate Armed Services Committee, "The Central Intelligence Agency should have nothing to do with policy." Yet, in the years since, CIA has, in effect, 'made' policy in many parts of the world. A number of governments still in power know that they have even been targets of CIA attempts at overthrow -- not a state of mind calculated to stimulate friendly feelings toward the United States. Indonesia, of course, is a prime example.

This experience suggests that the present system by which CIA notifies State of a projected covert operation is inadequate to protect US interests. There must be some means by which State can be informed of such operations at an early enough stage to affect the conception and preliminary planning of the operation. Otherwise CIA will continue to confront State with propositions having potential impact on foreign policy but at too late a point to subject that impact to reasonable control.

~~9. The Controlled American Source (CAS) represents a particular aspect of CIA's encroachment on policy-making functions. [CIA today has nearly as many people under official cover overseas as State -- 3900 to 3700. About 1500 of these are under State Department cover]~~

(the other 2200 are presumably under military or other non-State official cover). Originally the use of State Department cover for CIA personnel was supposed to be strictly limited and temporary. The Dulles-Correa-Jackson report stated in 1948, "The CIA should not use State Department cover as a simple answer to all its problems, but should proceed to develop its own outside cover and eventually in this way and through increased efficiency of its overseas personnel, find a way to temper its demands upon the State Department." None-theless CIA has steadily increased its requisitions for official cover.

There are several reasons why CIA has abandoned its original intention of developing systems of private cover. It is easier to arrange cover through State; it is less expensive; it is quicker; it facilitates the security of operations as well as of communications; it insures a pleasanter life for the CIA people. But the effect is to further the CIA encroachment on the traditional functions of State.

In some missions, I understand, CAS personnel outnumbers regular State Department personnel. [redacted] On the day of President Kennedy's Inauguration [redacted] officers serving in United States Embassies were CAS. Sometimes the CIA mission chief has been in the country longer, has more money at his disposal, wields more influence (and is abler) than the Ambassador. Often he has direct access to the local Prime Minister. Sometimes (as during a critical period [redacted]) he pursues a different policy from that of the Ambassador. Also he is generally well known locally as the CIA representative.

In the Paris Embassy today, there are 123 CIA people. CIA in Paris has long since begun to move into areas of political reporting normally occupied by State. The CIA men doing overt internal political reporting outnumber those in the Embassy's political section [redacted]. CIA has even sought to monopolize contact with certain French political personalities, among them the President of the National Assembly. CIA occupies the top floor of [redacted] Embassy, a fact well known locally; and in the night of the Generals' revolt in Algeria, passers-by noted with amusement that the top floor was ablaze with lights. (I am informed that Ambassador Gavin was able to secure entrance that night to the CIA offices only with difficulty.)

CIA is apparently now firmly committed to the CAS approach as a permanent solution for its problems. It is pressing to have CIA people given the rank of Counselor. Before State loses control of more and more of its presumed overseas personnel, and before CAS becomes permanently integrated into the Foreign Service, it would seem important (a) to assure every ambassador the firm control over the local CAS station nominally promised in the NSC Directive of January 19, 1961, and (b) to review the current CAS situation with an eye to a steady reduction of CAS personnel.

4. Paramilitary warfare, I gather, is regarded in some quarters as a purely technical matter, easily detachable from policy and therefore a proper function of the Department of Defense. Yet there is almost no CIA function more peculiarly dependent on the political context than paramilitary warfare.

There are several reasons for this. For one thing, a paramilitary operation is in its nature a large and attributable operation and thereby, as suggested above, clashes with the presuppositions of our open society. (These considerations need not apply, however, to the training of, say, the South Vietnamese in guerrilla tactics or to the support of already existing guerrilla activities.) For another, the moral and political price of direct paramilitary failure is acute for us. Communists, when they stimulate paramilitary activity, are doing what the world expects from them: when we do it, we appear to betray our own professed principles and therefore cannot afford to compound delinquency by defeat. Moreover, as the recent Algerian episode showed, once we convince the world that we are committed to a paramilitary endeavor, we will be blamed for all sorts of things. And, as the recent tractors-for-prisoners episode showed, when we do send men to possible death, we cannot lightly write them off and close the books. The Communists, on the other hand, have no scruples about liquidating a losing show.

The Chairman. The hearing will come to order.

I would like to ask Mr. Schwarz if he would give us a brief synopsis of what we intend to question our witness about this morning.

Mr. Schwarz. The witness this morning will only be a single witness. He is Mr. Samuel Halpern. He was in the Far East, and I have now found out he was involved in [redacted] some alleged killing of an agent in Tailand, which are collateral matters that we may want to take up with him at the end.

But he came back here in the fall of 1961 and was instructed as assistant to get into the Cuban matter. And he will testify that he was told that they would proceed to overthrow the Castro government, and that there were no holds barred.

He will then describe the way in whch they worked with the Special Group.

The Chairman. What was Halpern's position?

Mr. Schwarz. Halpern's position was as Executive Assistant to Harvey. And Harvey, you will remember, was the man that was actually in charge of the Cuban position.

The Chairman. When are we going to get Harvey?

Mr. Schwarz. He is coming next Wednesday morning.

We are going to get some of this same conflict between the no-holds-barred testimony, which in his mind I guess he

Mr. Halpern. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schwarz. Who else was present at that meeting?

Mr. Halpern. A Mr. Ghose Zogbey. He was my branch chief.

Mr. Schwarz. Is he alive today, or is he dead?

Mr. Halpern. He died last year.

Mr. Schwarz. Approximately when in the fall of 1961 did that meeting take place?

Mr. Halpern. About the middle of October 1961.

Mr. Schwarz. What instructions were you given by Mr. Bissell at tht meeting?

Mr. Halpern. Mr. Bissell said he had recently -- and he didn't specificy the date or the time -- he had recently been chewed out in the Cabinet Room of the White House by borh the President and the Attorney General for, as he put it, sitting on his ass and not doing anything about getting rid of Castro and the Castro regime. His orders to both Mr. Zogbey and to me were to plan for an operation to accomplish that end.

Mr. Schwarz. Was any content put into the term "get rid of", or was that the term that was used, and only that term?

Mr. Halpern. To the best of my recollection, that was it. There was no limitation of any kind. Nothing was forbidden, and nothing was withheld. And the objective was to remove Castro and his regime.

Mr. Schwarz. And did you talk about tactics at all in that meeting, or was it just a general discussion about getting organized.

Mr. Halpern. Just a general discussion as to what we would do, how we would proceed, and what we would need. And at that point I had no idea how many people were left on the staff in the branch only having been on the job a day or a day and a half.

Mr. Schwarz. Shorly after that time did you get put in contact with a general?

Mr. Halpern. Yes, sir. General Lansdale.

Mr. Schwarz. And what was his function when you were introduced to him?

Mr. Halpern. Both Mr. Zogbey and I were introduced to him as the new chief of Operations for a government-wide effort to accomplish the removal of Castro and the Castro regime. This effort was to include not only CIA but the Department of State and the Department of Defense. And General Lansdale was to be the Chief of Operations for that outfit.

Mr. Schwarz. And did you brief him about Cuba or did he brief you about the operation, or what was the nature of that?

Mr. Halpern. No, we briefed him first in the old Situation Room, what used to called the Ibell Building, which

Mr. Halpern. It wasn't a matter of General Lansdale's being in charge, or the Attorney General being in charge, nobody objected to General Lansdale reporting to the Attorney General.

It was a matter of whether this would be done through the normal chain of command, or whether we would actually be under the General's direct command.

Mr. Schwarz. But it still is a chracterization, you were dealing with organization and bureaucracy?

Mr. Halpern. That is right. And drafting papers.

Mr. Schwarz. Drafting papers to do what?

Mr. Halpern. To try to get organized in terms of how we would accomplish the objective.

Mr. Schwarz.Did any of those papers that you drafted in those early stages include any reference to assassination as a device to accomplish the objective?

Mr. Halpern. No, sir.

Mr. Schwarz. Now, did Mr. Helms enter the picture in the latter part of December 1961?

Mr. Halpern. That is correct.

Mr. Schwarz. Describe how he came into the picture.

Mr. Halpern. To my knowledge, Mr. Zogbey described to me a meeting he had been at at the Director's morning staff meeting -- this is Mr. McCone's morning staff meeting -- in which Mr. McCone, almost in terms of a bombshell for the group at the meeting, stated that Mr. Helms would henceforth be -- the words were, his man on Cuba. This was something that nobody in the room apparently had any inkling of, and particularly Mr.Helms, nor Mr. Zogbey.

The Chairman. May I ask you to repeat that?

I am sorry, I just didn't catch it.

Mr. Halpern. At a meeting sometime in December 1961, which was the morning staff meeting that the Director held, and Mr. Zogbey was present --

Mr. Schwarz. But you were not?

Mr. Halprrn I was not, I got this from Mr. Zogby -- the Director, Mr. McCone, announced that Mr. Helms would be his man on Cuba, Mr. Helms would then be the Chief of Operations for the Deputy Director of Plans, and Mr. Bissell was in the room as the DDP.

Mr. Helms had no inkling of this before the meeting, and so stated to Mr. Zogbey, and even asked Mr. Zogby if he had had any inkling before the meeting.

Mr. Zogbey told me that he had none whatsoever.

Mr. Schwarz. Did Mr. Helms then come and visit your new organization and tell you to make some changes?

Mr. Halpern. Yes. He came to Mr. Zogbey's office and looked at the list of officers, male and female, who were still working in the branch. Most of them were the remnants of the people from the old Bay of Pigs operation who had not yet been reassigned.

involved in this operation? That was the first reference I recall to a female operative.

Mr. Schwarz. There was no such previous evidence.

Mr. Halpern. We had a number of female officers, and still do, in our branches. And there were some in the Cuban branch and the Cuban task force.

Senator Huddleston. What types of activities did they participate in?

Mr. Halpern. Oh, recruting of agents, the handling of agents, disseminating reports, preparing propaganda guidances, preparing papers for a special group as appropriate, doing the work of any other officer.

Senator Huddleston. Can you name one or suggest one that was heavily involved in the assassination attempt?

Mr. Halpern. Oh, I don't know of any in the assassination attempt per se.

Senator Huddleston. You don't know of any?

Mr. Halpern. No, sir.

Senator Huddleston. Thank you.

The Chairman. Senator Mondale?

Senator Mondale. I am sorry I came in late, Mr. Halpern, and missed some of your testimony. As I came in you were saying that orders came from somewhere to get off your ass.

Mr. Halpern. Yes, sir. Mr.Bissell told Mr. Zogbey cers whose objective would be to plan for the overthrow of the Castro regime.

Mr. Smothers. Was it your understanding that these plans were to extend to assassination?

Mr. Halpern. That word was not used, sir. But no holds were barred, and we had no limitation.

Mr. Smothers.Let me ask you it another way. What was your understanding of what Mr. Bissell had been told to do by the President and the Attorney General?

Mr. Halpern. To get rid of Castro and the Castro regime on the Island of Cuba.

Mr. Smothers. Did Mr. Bissell convey to you the idea that that included killing Castro?

Mr. Halpern. The subject never came up per se.

Mr. Smothers. What did you come away from that meeting expecting to do?

Mr. Halpern. We were very hard put to come upwwith any real ideas. We didn't know what to do, frankly. And we went back -- one thing we both agreed on, both Zogbey and I, is that we were not going to come up with a piece of paper which said this was going to be easy or could be done overnight, or could be done with mirrors.

The Chairman. Did you come away after your conversation with Mr. Bissell with the idea that he had instructed you to come up with a plan of some kind designed to overthrow, later.

The Chairman. I would like to take this and several other questions up with the committee, one of which deals with the question of the August recess. And I want to confer with you on that, too.

How many more questions do you have?

Mr. Schwarz. Instead of asking the other questions I will ask whether he knows anything about them, and we could bring him back later if he does.

Do you know anything about [redacted]?

Mr. Halpern. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schwarz. We will bring you back on that.

The Chairman. Can we get that done now?

Mr. Schwarz. Such [redacted] was made [redacted], was it?

Mr. Halpern. I don't know where it was made, sir, but I know it was made.

Mr. Schwarz. It was made in the U.S.?

Mr. Halpern. As far as I know it was.

Mr. Schwarz. And was that done under your direction?

Mr. Halpern. Well, it was done at the Far East Division request, and I was the one who did the negotiating with the Office of Security.

Mr. Schwarz. And was the plan that [redacted] a model who looked like Mr. Sukarno purporting to have sexual activity with some female, and that then the film would be released in Indonesia, and it would be attributed to the Russians in some fashion?

Mr. Halpern. No, sir, that was not the plan at all.

Mr. Schwarz. What was the plan?

Mr. Halpern. The plan was to have such a film from which we could make film which we could use in the propaganda activity against Sukarno in terms of him being close to the Russians, because the woman was supposed to be the Russian blonde woman that was assigned to Mr. Sukarno as escort officer when he visited the Soviet Union, and then went back and stayed with him for some time in Indonesia.

Mr. Schwarz. In short, it was a fake movie which was designed to put Mr. Sukarno in an undesirable light, by showing that he was having relations with some Russian female?

Mr. Halpern. And, therefore, in Russian control.

Senator Mondale. How was that film supposed to get to Indonesia?

Mr. Halpern. It wasn't a film. The original plan was to use clips from it in propaganda leaflets, and pamphlets, and things like that, just pictures from the film.

Mr. Schwarz. Who authorized that?

Mr. Halpern. Mr. Ulmer, who was then Division Chief.

Mr. Schwarz. Do you know if any higher authority authorized it?

Mr. Halpern. Not offhand, no, sir, personally I don't know.

Mr. Schwarz. And was it done, or was it turned off? I mean, the pictures were taken?

Mr. Halpern. The picture was taken, and that was the end of it.

Mr. Schwarz. And Mr. Maheu was used to accomplish it?

Mr. Halpern. I have no idea whatsoever.

Mr. Schwarz. And were the clips used in Indonesia?

Mr. Halpern. No, they were not.

Mr. Schwarz. Why not?

Mr. Halpern. We didn't have any proper outlets to get it done.

Mr. Schwarz. You had the film, but you had no way to distribute it in Indonesia?

Mr. Halpern. Not the film, but the clips.

Mr. Schwarz. What do you know about the killing of a person called Killum?

Mr. Halpern. The name is brand new to me, sir.

Mr. Schwarz. Do you know anything about the killing of a CIA employee or associate in Thailand in the 1950's?

Mr. Halpern. No, sir.

Mr. Schwarz. Do you know anything about the burial of such a person, in which you participated along with a man called Dennis Fleming and one called Peter Joast?

Mr. Halpern. That I participated? No, sir.

Mr. Schwarz. Do you know anything about the killing of a CIA operative in Bangkok?

Mr. Halpern. No, sir. I was only in Bangkok, I think, once in my life.

Mr. Schwarz. That doesn't ring a bell at all?

Mr. Halpern. No, sir.

Mr. Schwarz. Do you know about any other killings?

Mr. Halpern. No, sir.

The Chairman. Any other questions?

Senator Schweiker. I just want to say, Mr.Chairman, that I would like to compliment the witness for some very clear and impartial answers, instead of the partial amnesia that we have run into lately.

And I think your kind of candor is very helpful to us in this committee to do the job. And I think it was very refreshing to hear some clear-cut specific recommendations of what did or did not happen. I just want to thank you.

The Chairman. I agree.

Thank you very much.

If there are no further questions,I think that completes the interrogation.

counterespionage for a brief period against the Japanese and the Italians and the Russians in '41. Then during most of the War, against the Germans, and then beginning in early '45 until the middle of '47 against the Soviet service again.

Mr. Schwarz. And then in 1947, did you join the CIA as head of the Soviet Intelligence Branch?

Mr. Harvey. That is correct.

Mr. Schwarz. Is that also counterespionage?

Mr. Harvey. Yes, it was.

Mr. Schwarz. And then between 1947 and 1952, you worked on Soviet counterespionage and certain special operations in the Department for Plans, is that right?

Mr. Harvey. Well, that is correct. It was a particular command and staff responsibility on communications intelligence and for a period of, I would think probably eight to ten months, I headed a planning staff, along with that.

Mr. Schwarz. In 1952, did you go to Berlin as Chief of Station for the CIA?

Mr. Harvey. I did.

Mr. Schwarz. And were you there until 1959?

Mr. Harvey. Until the end of 1959.

Mr. Schwarz. I understand, Mr. Harvey, that you had some rather substantial accomplishments there, such as the Berlin Tunnel.

Could you just very succinctly describe the Berlin Tunnel operation and then move on?

Mr. Harvey. Well, very briefly, that is an operation that (W) Frank Rollett and I conceived some time before I went to Berlin.

Senator Tower. You and who?

Mr. Harvey. Frank Rollett (W), who for many years was one of the, if not the most, knowledgeable senior officer in the cryptologic group.

And one of the reasons I went to Berlin was to attempt to mount this operation.

In substance, what it amounted to was setting up a fairly complex cover within a cover installation in West Berlin and driving a tunnel approximately 500 meters, well underground, across the sector boundary, and tapping into three main telephone, telegraph and teleprinter cables.

I think we had a total of around 900 circuits of these, which were, among other things, the main circuits between the command headquarters of the Soviet Group in Bunsdorf, and the outlying commands in Germany and the headquarters in Moscow.

Zossen-Wunsdorf

We also tapped into a number of Soviet Embassy circuits in ~~Unter den Frund~~ and Unter den Linden in East Berlin, including a number of intelligence circuits which unfortunately were not really readable.

Senator Tower. Were not what?

Mr. Harvey. Were not readable.

Mr. Schwarz. I have been told, Mr. Harvey -- is this not correct -- that you not only conceived the program but [redacted]

Mr. Harvey. I did.

Mr. Schwarz. In 1959, did you become Chief of the Foreign Intelligence Staff Division D?

Mr. Harvey. That is correct.

Mr. Schwarz. Now is Division D a division of the CIA which is responsible for [redacted]?

Mr. Harvey. That is also correct.

Mr. Schwarz. But part --

Mr. Harvey. But I would like to clarify it, if I may, Mr. Schwarz. It was the division of the clandestine services, which was the focal point and was responsible for primarily two things: [redacted].

We had nothing to do beyond that with the general sort of research and analysis use which was handled in [redacted] what I believe was the DDI, Deputy Director Intelligence.

Mr. Schwarz. Did Staff D include within its responsibilities [redacted]?

Mr. Harvey. Yes, in two ways: complete control and coordination of any such efforts, approval and assessment of the security risk, and also in the direct procurement through operational means abroad, but not in this country.

Mr. Schwarz. And by operational, you mean [redacted]?

Mr. Harvey. [redacted] that type of thing. [redacted] would be covered as well.

Mr. Schwarz. Now, did a man call [redacted] work for you in Staff D?

Mr. Harvey. Yes, he did.

Mr. Schwarz. At some point, did [redacted] recount to you a conversation concerning Patrice Lumumba?

He Plans in Fall 1960?

Mr. Harvey. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Would you state what he said to you?

Mr. Harvey. Briefly, [redacted] came to me and said that he had been approached by Richard Bissell, who was then Deputy Director for Plans, to undertake an operation in the Congo, one of the objectives of which was the elimination of Patrice Lumumba. He also told me that he had declined to undertake this assignment.

Mr. Schwarz. Did Mr Bissell subsequently have a conversation with you in which he also recounted the fact that he had requested [redacted] to undertake such an operation?

of assassination is obviously a two-pronged subject, ours and theirs. We spent countless hours over the years trying to determine the parameters of how far the Soviet service was willing to go. This was partly a question of assessment, this was partly a question, to put it just as bluntly, of self-protection.

I will try to summarize what I think are fair conclusions. In the field of political assassination, although I cannot document this by evidence, I have no question but what the Soviet service has, does, and will continue to use the tool of assassination to accomplish political gains inside and outside of the USSR. In the intelligence field, I think you have to make a distinction, the distinction roughly -- and I'm over-simplifying this slightly -- but a distinction into perhaps three classes.

One, their own ethnics or nationals. Secondly, indigenous agents of third countries. And thirdly, the recognized official staff officers of other intelligence services.

During the seven years that I spent [redacted], which was the longest continuous period that I was exposed in depth to Soviet Executive Action, we lost a great many Russians, a great many Germans, a certain number of Czechs, Poles and other nationalities.

Mr. Schwarz. When you say you lost Russians, you mean Russians who were working with the United States?

Mr. Schwarz. Anyway, it exists, as a combination.

Mr. Harvey. In other words, if you want to put it in just these blunt terms, it would have been a lot easier for the KGB to assassinate me in West Berlin than it would have been for me to assassinate my opposite number in East Berlin, in the Soviet Embassy across the border.

Mr. Schwarz. In describing the Soviets, you distinguish between political assassination, direct agents of the United States, and finally the emigres and foreign nationals.

Mr. Harvey. And also -- well, not foreign nationals, but emigres and Soviet nationals.

Mr. Schwarz. That's what I meant. Soviet nationals.

Mr. Harvey. The most merciless, the field where they are the most merciless are their own defected agents, of course.

Mr. Schwarz. Now, to your knowledge, has the United States ever assassinated a defected agent or a third country?

Mr. Harvey. You mean an American agent who has defected or doubled?

Mr. Schwarz. Yes.

Mr. Harvey. To my personal knowledge, no.

Mr. Schwarz. What about persons who are third country enemies of the United States?

Mr. Harvey. No.

Mr. Schwarz. You don't know any instance of the United States assassinating any person who is in the non-political Eyes Only basis, and the first part of this was the necessary documentation for the authority which was later signed off on by Dick Helms as Deputy Director.

Beginning on my page 4, your middle of page 3 --

Mr. Schwarz. Well, just a moment. Page 1 is a cover story, not the real story, the objectives --

Mr. Harvey. It is both.

Mr. Schwarz. But it does not recite as an objective, [illegible] assassination or assassination capability.

Mr. Harvey. No, it does not.

Mr. Schwarz. Instead, it cites the obtaining of code and cypher materials.

Mr. Harvey. Which, I would like to point out, was a perfectly legitimate objective and was not in a sense, a cover story except that if this project had gone so far as to the actual recruitment of any agent for assassination or the targeting of any target or the mounting of any operation, it would have been under this as a cover. But, those assets that were spotted by QJWINN, for instance, under ZRRIFLE were also honestly considered for possible clandestine procurement of communications intelligence outside the U.S.

So it's -- maybe I'm not making this clear, it's a cover in a sense, but it's not a phony cover, in other words.

Mr. Schwarz. Dual purpose.

Mr. Harvey. It was a dual purpose.

Mr. Schwarz. You mentioned QJWINN. Was QJWIN an agent who you did hold in reserve for possible use in connection with the Executive Action program?

Mr. Harvey. No, QJWIN is an agent that I considered for possible use and used for a limited period through Arnold Silver for the spotting of individuals with criminal and underworld connections in Europe for possible multi-purpose use, none of whom were ever advised of the use, none of whom, as far as I personally know, were ever used.

Mr. Schwarz. But the multi-purpose use included as one purpose the possible use in assassination?

Mr. Harvey. Only in the sense that had we ever been saddled with a flat, if you will, command performance on assassination. I might have considered the people spotted by WIN as possibilities.

But, you see, before anybody that is ever spotted is approached for any operation and particularly -- and please, I don't mean to sound pedantic on this, ~~I don't mean to --~~ is actually approached, there should be ~~is a~~ long period of assessment, crosschecks, so on and so forth. This particular spotting mechanism never actually went that far, as far as I know.

I only know of one use made by QJWIN until we terminated him some months later, I don't remember the exact date. It was before I went to Rome. I know it was in connection with an operation in the Congo that was not an assassination operation.

Follow

and had, as far as I know, personally, at least, nothing to do with assassination.

I have checked pages 1 and 2 and 3 and my page 4.

Mr. Schwarz. Are pages 4 through 7, in your judgment, pages that were written by [redacted]?

Mr. Harvey. As a guess, I'd say they appear to be in the same writing as these first three pages.

Mr. Schwarz. Are pages 8 and 9 pages that are written by you?

Mr. Harvey. Well, just a moment, let me get to those.

I would also like to point out that from page 4 that -- that is page 4, as long as it continues in the same handwriting was not a part of this so-called Project Outline, these I would guess were probably [redacted]'s notes and probably based, at least to an extent, on discussions he had with me, and certain sort of problems and questions and principles that I tossed out to be considered and cares to be exercised.

Mr. Schwarz. Then pages 8 and 9 are in your handwriting, is that right?

Mr. Harvey. Pages 8 and 9 are in my handwriting.

Mr. Schwarz. And at the bottom of page 8, does that indicate that you had a conversation with [redacted] on January 26th?

Mr. Harvey. Yes, it does.

Mr. Schwarz. And is it your judgment that that is January 26, 1961 and is about the subject of Executive Action?

Mr. Harvey. Yes, it is.

Mr. Schwarz. And it followed your conversation with Mr. Bissell that you have recounted?

Mr. Harvey. I think probably that might be -- well, when I first looked at this, I thought this, well, this has got to be '62, but I am almost certain now that it is not. If this is true, this might place the first discussion that I had with Dick Bissell in early January and this is difficult to pinpoint because there were several such discussions in varying degrees of detail during the period in the spring, and very early in '61 to the fall of '61 period, but I did find out fairly early on that Silver had -- or that Bissell had discussed the question of assassination with Arnold Silver, and this discussion at the very least, had to take place after I know Bissell already had discussed the matter with Silver.

Now, these two pieces of paper, well, I say two pieces of paper, what they are from -- they are in my handwriting. It's from a yellow pad, probably the duplicate of this that I used to keep on my desk and just make rough notes of conversations that I had, telephone and otherwise, with various people.

Once a week I would go through them and either destroy them, classified trash, dictate from them, or occasionally save them. There is no relationship between the material that appears after the line two-thirds of the way down the page, just before the 26/1-AS, , and the material which appears above it which is tabbed SID G, tab 21.

Mr. Schwarz. That would be Sid Gottlieb?

Mr. Harvey. Sid Gottlieb.

Mr. Schwarz. Doesn't the conversation with Sid Gottlieb on the 25th of January indicate you had discussion which included the word bankruptcy and you felt assassination was --

Mr. Harvey. There was a general philosophic discussion of assassination and assassination techniques. There was also a discussion on a number of other things that were of particular and specific interest to the communications intelligence field and the clandestine service's responsibilities aspects, if you will, and as best I can recall this conversation, this was a sort of an exchange of ideas and briefing session, probably held at the request of Sid Gottlieb in my office shortly after he either took over a new job in TSD or took over as actual Chief of TSD, which was the Technical Services Division of the clandestine services.

Mr. Schwarz. Now the reference in the middle of that conversation with Mr. Gottlieb to "Last resort beyond last resort and a confession of weakness." That's referring to assassination?

Mr. Harvey. That's obviously referring to assassination. That's probably what I told Sid Gottlieb my opinion on the use and propriety of assassination as a technique was.

of operational philosophy which I expressed to Gottlieb, that the question then came in pure theory as to -- as in such cases as, now assumptions, the example of 3 wrong, I am not really sure. But the closest that I can come is that the assumptions -- it might be desirable in a purely theoretical discussion and in my opinion we were wrong. Whether I said that to Gottlieb in the words that are here, I just don't know.

Mr. Schwarz. Who were the two besides Mr. Trujillo that make up the examples of 3?

Mr. Harvey. I presume -- I have no idea, but I presume that the logical candidates at that point would have been Lumumba and Castro. By logical candidates, I mean not that we were considering them in this discussion as logical targets for assassination, but that these were sort of the three people that would come to mind; if you are going to go into this, these are three to be considered.

tape 2b

But you will notice, if I may, Mr. Schwarz, "Framework of Sid's job. [redacted] - Memo." [redacted] is the name of ~~the~~ a staff officer who worked for me in Division D at that time.

This "translating machine" was an experimental device, done under -- hoped for development [redacted] that I was most interested in, because of the serious translation problem that we had [redacted].

So you see this was not a discussion strictly within the framework of either assassination as a specific, or assassination as a general problem.

Mr. Schwarz. Now, the material commencing on handwritten page 4 and commencing in the middle of page 3 of the Senator's notes, reflects in your judgment the conversation that you had with [redacted] and it is his notes about that conversation, is that right?

Mr. Harvey. That is my best guess.

It may also, however, include his own thinking and so forth. I doubt if it includes -- it certainly would not include any specific discussions, I don't think, with other officers, because [redacted] was under specific instructions not to discuss this as such with anybody else, at least without clearing it with me first.

Mr. Schwarz. And he starts, for example, by talking about "Legal, ethical, morale, operational problems" and so forth, and that reflects the conversation you had with [redacted]?

Mr. Harvey. Yes, it does.

Mr. Schwarz. Down toward the end of entry 3b -- and 3 has the heading "Maximum security" -- do you see that on page 4?

Mr. Harvey. Yes, I see it.

Mr. Schwarz. There is a sentence which reads as follows -- two sentences, which I should read into the record, three sentences.

"Within Kubark" -- now, is that the CIA?

crossed in this document.

Mr. Schwarz. One way or the other?

Mr. Harvey. That's right. One way or the other.

Mr. Schwarz. Your note has a report to the DCI, the January 26th reference, which reads in the first line AS. That is Arnold Silver, I take it?

Mr. Harvey. Yes, I'm sure that's Arnold Silver.

Mr. Schwarz. Then it appears to say f-a-n-f-o-r-n DCI matter. What does that mean?

Mr. Harvey. I am not sure. The closest I could come to that is a fairly illogical Fanfani, and Fanfani was never even dreamed of, as far as I know, in any such context. Fanforn -- Burton Wides raised that with me, and I just had to throw up my hands. I just don't know.

Mr. Schwarz. And you don't know what the reference to DCI in the notes means?

Mr. Harvey. No, I am sorry, I do not, at this point, Mr. Schwarz.

Mr. Schwarz. Okay.

Mr. Harvey. Are you asking me to try to interpret the portion of this that is in my handwriting, or are you satisified at this point?

Mr. Schwarz. Well, the other items, it seems to me, are either not important or are understandable. Maybe some of the members have questions.

Project ZRRIFLE

1. Identification: The purpose of Project ZRRIFLE is to spot, develop, and use ~~foreign~~ agent assets for Division D ~~[illegible]~~ operations. Agents will be spotted in several areas, including the United States, but ~~with~~ ~~[illegible]~~ for operational security reasons will probably not be used in their countries of residence. Present developmental activity is being conducted in the WE and EE areas, but it is anticipated that this will be extended to other division areas. The project will be operated against third-country installations and personnel.

2. Objective: The objective of this project is [redacted] in accordance with requirements levied on the Clandestine Services, [redacted]. Since these requirements are subject to frequent revision, no listing of targets would be valid for the duration of the project. Specific operations will be mounted on the basis of need and opportunity. The project will be conducted by Division D with assistance from area divisions and stations as ~~3. Background:~~ needed.

3. Background: In response to the increasing requirements [redacted], Division D in 1960 began the spotting of agent assets as a developmental activity. During the same period requirements [redacted] became more refined and in many respects more sensitive. Because most stations are not equipped to conduct this type of operation and because of the desirability of completely centralized control over this entire effort, it was determined that Division D, [redacted], could best conduct the activity. The ~~first~~ spotting activity has now advanced far enough to justify removing from the OOA category.

4. Operational assets:

(1) Personnel: ~~#~~ QJWIN is under written contract as a principal agent, with the primary task of spotting agent candidates. QJwin was first contacted in 1958 [redacted] in connection with an illegal narcotics operation into the United States. For a period of a year and a half he was contacted ~~in~~ sporadically [redacted], in behalf of the Bureau of Narcotics. Files of this Bureau reflect an excellent performance by QJwin. Chairman Church. Would you please take the oath?

Do you swear that everything you will testify to in these proceedings shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. O'Connell. I do.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES P. O'CONNELL

Mr. Schwarz. Would you state your name?

Mr. O'Connell. My name is James P. O'Connell.

Mr. Schwarz. And what is your address?

Mr. O'Connell. [redacted]

Mr. Schwarz. Before we proceed substantively let me just put on the record some matters.

First, you understand that you have a right to counsel?

Mr. O'Connell. I understand that. I just read it.

Mr. Schwarz. And you should also be advised that you have your rights under the Constitution, including your rights under the Fifth Amendment, if at any point you wish to assert whatever rights that you do have that are under those Constitutional provisions.

Do you understand that?

Mr.O'Connell. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And if at any time you feel that you need an attorney you have the right to ask for an attorney, do you understand that?

pills?

Mr. O'Connell. The man that created them is Dr. Raymond Trichler.

Mr. Schwarz. Did he hand the pills to you?

Mr. O'Connell. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Did he know what the pills were for?

Mr. O'Connell. I don't think so.

Mr. Schwarz. But he knew they were illegal?

Mr. O'Connell. He knew they were illegal.

Mr. Schwarz. And were the pills not tried out on some experimental subjects in the U.S.?

Mr. O'Connell. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And proven to be lethal?

Mr. O'Connell. Well, to the extent -- I will tell you that, we used them on hamsters.

Mr. Schwarz. And also monkeys?

Mr. O'Connell. No, as far as I know, just the hamsters.

Mr. Schwarz. But anyway, you knew they were lethal.

Mr. O'Connell. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And you handed them over to Rosselli?

Mr. O'Connell. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And had the Technical Services made poison pills before as far as you know?

Mr. O'Connell. As far as I know. I have no idea. This was my first experience with that sort of thing.

your possession, that might give you a more accurate timing than I am giving to you now.

Mr. Madigan. We don't have it presently.

Mr. O'Connell. I am sure it is over there.

Mr. Wides. With regard to the discussion of authorization, would it have been following on Mr. Madigan's point, that this was a fairly serious and unusual operation that you were given, and that you would have asked, is this authorized? Or how did the question of Mr. Dulles authorizing it come up, as best you recall?

Mr. O'Connell. I told you, I knew that Mr. Dulles -- I was told that Mr. Dulles had authorized it, I can't say quite when it happened, but I know I was told.

Mr. Wides. You testified this morning -- I don't want to put words in your mouth -- I thought you testified that you were sure that Mr. Edwards told you at this meeting when he first gave you the assignment that you were not sure that Mr. Bissell's also mentioned that when you later met in your office.

Mr. O'Connell. I would stick with that, yes. I think it probably was when I -- when Colonel Edwards called me he said, this probably has the blessing of the DCI.

Mr. Wides. Do you know if Dr. V. S. Roosevelt, who was head of the Technical Services Division at the time, was witnessing about this?

Mr. O'Connell. I wouldn't want to bet my life that he wasn't. But he was at a meeting when the bills were delivered, and [redacted] came over to Colonel Edwards'office.

Mr. Wides. But you don't recall whether you ever knew that [redacted] knew what it was in connection with as distinct from merely knowing it was a lethal pill, is that right?

Mr. O'Connell. I can't say -- to my personal knowledge, the discussion never came up when I was there. I don't think he is a dummy, and I don't think [redacted] is any dummy, and I think they had a general idea.

But as far as I know they were never officially told.

Mr. Wides. To your knowledge, before you went overseas no one else in the office of Security, Mr. Bannerman, Mr. White or Mr. Hall, none of those men or anyone else knew about the project, only yourself and Mr. Edwards?

Mr. O'Connell. Well, I would say this, to my knowledge they were never briefed. However, I think I brought up an incident this morning where Colonel Edwards was on leave and Colonel King called Mr. Bannerman, who was his deputy, and assumed that Bannerman knew all about it and started talking about it, what are we going to do about this -- I don't know what the conversation was about. And Bannerman called in and said, what was this all about?

Mr. Wides. This was in 1962 before you left?

Mr. O'Connell. Yes. It was while I was up in the office.

And I said, I don't have the authority to brief you on it.

Mr. Wides. Were you ever aware, whether you were formally notified or just got a rumble or heard through the grapevine, that the CIA was getting some information about these threats, or some information about groups who might pose a threat in the Washington area, not from Bureau sources or military sources, but from CIA sources, did you ever hear any rumble of that kind?

Mr. O'Connell. Yes.

Mr. Wides. What did you hear?

Mr. O'Connell. The only way I got involved in it was that Howard Osborn would have a nine o'clock meeting every morning with his deputies.

And they had a proprietary organization in the Office of Security which I think had informants.

Now, I don't know their identities, but it would come out in the meeting, and they would have some names for them. I couldn't tell you what they were.

Mr. Madigan. What was the proprietary called?

Mr. O'Connell. The name that strikes me -- and I know part of it, but I couldn't tell you exactly -- I think it was [redacted] --

(1)(B) 9 Nov 93

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]?

Mr. O'Connell. [redacted], something like that.

Mr. Wides. You say you think they had informants?

Mr. O'Connell. They obviously did, I guess, because the way this would come out, so-and-so advised at a meeting last night.

Mr. Wides. If you associate that with Anderson you must have been told more than just, we have an informant. How would it be discussed at the meeting, through this proprietary we have access to information?

Mr. O'Connell. No, it usually would be the Deputy Director that that was under. And that was under OIS.

Mr. Wides. Victor White?

Mr. O'Connell. Victor White.

Mr. Wides. And what would he say about how Anderson fitted into the picture?

Mr. O'Connell. That never came up. I just drew that conclusion, that they had potential.

Mr. Wides. Why would you assume that they used a proprietary as opposed to just having some agents penetrate a group? Why would you think in terms of their using the Anderson --

Mr. O'Connell. I can tell you what I think.

First of all, I wouldn't want to use government employees.

Mr. Wides. Why couldn't the CIA personnel just run agents who would be --

Mr. O'Connell. That is in fact what they were doing. These people that were proprietary were not CIA employees. They were contract teams.

Mr. Wides. Why would you have thought that they would have gone the route of using the proprietary people as opposed to

Did you have any knowledge during the 1970-1971 time frame of any effort outside of Florida with regard to Cubans to fire on the Keys or on the Florida area there with a boat that would be disguised as a Russian boat, which was really a group of people, some of whom were assets of the Agency?

Mr. O'Connell. No.

Mr. Madigan. You never heard of anything like that?

Mr. O'Connell. Nothing of that, no.

Mr. Madigan. Did you ever run across a fellow by the name of Jerry Henning in your dealing with Roselli and Maheu?

Mr.O'Connell. No.

Mr. Madigan. You never heard of the name?

Mr. O'Connell. I never heard of the name.

Mr. Madigan. Did you handle the Agency contact with Mr. Maheu about having him coordinate or set up or be involved in [redacted]

Mr. O'Connelll. A couple of them, as a matter of fact.

Mr. Madigan. A couple [redacted]

Mr. O'Connell. Yes.

Mr. Madigan. What was your involvement in that? Am I right about 1959?

Mr. O'Connell. It could be. There were two different occasions.

Mr. Madigan. What is your recollection as to the dates?

Mr.O'Connell. Well, the first one was __________ about 1959.

Mr. Madigan. And how did that come about? Why did it go to you in the Office of Security as opposed to --

Mr. O'Connell. Just like this other one came down from the DDP, it came from the __________ __________ Division, as I recall it. And __________ was coming into the --

Mr. Wides. Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Madigan. What did your first contact with Maheu with regard to this project involve?

Mr. O'Connell. Well, the request came to the Security.

Mr. Madigan. It came down to you?

Mr. O'Connell. It came through Colonel Edwards.

Mr. Madigan. To you?

Mr. O'Connell. Yes. And the requirement was a certain type female who would attract this foreign leader. He wanted female companionship.

Mr. Madigan. The leader?

Mr. O'Connell. The leader did.

Mr. Madigan. So did you contact Maheu directly?

Mr. O'Connell. Yes.

Mr. Wides. In this instance you were talking about a leader sho would be in America, or to supply companionship wherever the leader was abroad?

Mr.O'Connell. ~~He was visiting New York, and it was proposed to be a state visit, and so forth. And he really wanted some female companionship. And his case officer, the Agency's case officer that was handling the leader, said, let's stick to business while you are in New York. And we will take you out to the West Coast, and that is going to be a pleasure trip, and we will see that you meet the right people.~~

~~So Maheu lined up this young lady, who was a starlet, a little cutie, and they knew the type he liked, size and everything.~~

~~So, they threw a cocktail party for him, very informal cocktail party --~~

Mr. Madigan. Maheu did?

Mr. O'Connell. ~~It was a fellow named Gregg Bautzer. He used to be married to some very famous actress, and he knows just about anything and everything that walks in skirts in L.A. and Hollywood.~~

~~So Maheu called Gregg and asked him if he could come up with something according to certain specs. And he did. And she was placed in the right atmosphere, at the right time and the leader went head over heels in love with her, to the extent that it was beyond what we planned. He really fell in love with her.~~

Mr. Madigan. Was a fellow named Norman Paul involved in this?

Mr. O'Connell. No. Normal Paul at one time was the ~~head of the Division that I mentioned a little while ago. But he wasn't involved in it~~

~~So what we thought was going to be a passing fancy, he decided he had to go back to New York, and he insisted that she go back with him.~~

~~Well, this was getting a little embarrassing, because here he is the head of his country, and he has got this gal on the strings.~~

~~So, we agreed to it and she agreed to it, but we had to keep her in one hotel -- she was staying at the Waldorf-Astoria and he was staying in another place. And we got a house out in Long Island so they could have their rendevouz, and they would spend some time together.~~

Mr. Madigan. Was that an Agency house?

Mr. O'Connell. No, we rented the house from a private individual who was a friend of somebody who was with the Agency.

Mr. Madigan. Did you handle that?

Mr. O'Connell. The field office handled that, the New York field office.

Mr. Madigan. Of the Office of Security?

Mr. O'Connell. They handled procuring the house out in Long Island. And then they also supplied people to stay with the young lady while she was in New York, because they didn't

[redacted]

Mr. Madigan. And was that the end of that particular project that you recall?

Mr. O'Connell. That was the end of it, [redacted] ~~and was lovesick, and he was going to give up the throne, which would have caused all sorts of consternation in the Agency, because that was the last guy that the Agency wanted to leave.~~

~~But he was communicating with her for a while, and then eventually we got her a job in a local musical -- that is~~ [redacted]

Mr. Wides. [redacted]

Mr. O'Connell. [redacted]

Mr. Wides. [redacted]

Mr.O'Connell. [redacted]

Mr. Wides. [redacted]

Mr. O'Connell. [redacted]

Mr. Wides. Did the Agency?

Mr. O'Connell. The agency.

Mr. Wides. Did the leader know that?

Mr. O'Connell. No.

Mr. Wides. And how did the letters go back and forth?

Mr. O'Connell. I don't know. We would just turn it over to the Division.

Mr. Wides. Did she understand that the Agency was somehow involved in the passage of return mail from the lady to the world leader, that she just didn't drop it on the mailbox on the corner?

Mr. O'Connell. She delivered it to somebody up in the field office, as I recall -- don't hold me to that, but I think that was it -- and then it was sent down to headquarters.

Mr. Wides. Was it your impression that the Agency read that mail, too, on its way back?

Mr. O'Connell. I would imagine so, because it got out of our control.

Mr. Wides. Let me go back.

With regard to the mail coming in, is it your imagination, or do you have information that the Agency was looking at the letters?

Mr. O'Connell. I knew that was being done.

Mr. Wides. You know from personal knowledge, or you were told by people involved?

Mr.O'Connell. [redacted]

Mr. Wides. [redacted]

Mr. O'Connell. [redacted]

Mr. Wides. [redacted]

[redacted]

Mr. Madigan. Did Maheu set that up?

Mr. O'Connelll. Yes.

Mr. Mdigan. Both the original contact and the later party in San Francisco?

Mr. O'Connell. Yes.

Mr. Madigan. And were those the only two times now that he was involved in the operations field?

Mr. O'Connelll. Oh, no. He did a lot of other things.

Mr. Madigan. Let me ask you this question.

When Maheu was having his problems with the authorities, was there any reference back to his involvement in those kind of activities, or was the only discussion about his role in the so-called assassination plot?

Mr. O'Connell. Well, I am not even so sure that they got into that aspect of it. It was just that he was involved to the extent that he had set up the operation against Rowan, or he was the one that got in touch with DuBois to do it.

Mr. Wides. When did you come back from overseas?

Mr. O'Connell. July of 1965.

Mr. Wides. After you came back did you learn of a time, either after you came back or very shortly before you came veillance?

Mr. O'Connell. Never, to my knowledge he never got involved in that, officially or otherwise.

Mr. Wides. Or surreptitious entry?

Mr. O'Connell. He did one surreptitious entry for us once.

Mr. Wides. What were the specifics of that?

Mr. O'Connell. There were a group of Iranian students. The Agency was sponsoring them, and they were going to the Georgetown School of Linguistics. And they were staying in a rooming house up there right outside of Georgetown somehere. And one of the students came to the case officer, and said that one of the group was acting very suspiciously, taking a lot of notes where they were not supposed to be taking notes,or certainly after operational briefings, and he would go back to his room and he would write voluminous notes. And he thought that was very strange that this guy was not acting as he should.

And that aroused the suspicion of the case officer. And they wanted to know whether we would get in and photograph what he was writing to see whether he was really violating his agreement.

So I called Maheu and he went up to the rooming house, and he went to the people who owned the house and asked if they had a room to rent and she had one. And he did know where the students were staying. And she showed him one room. And he said, anything up on thenext floor? And as luck would have it, she had the adjacent room.

So he brought what would appear to be a suitcase up there, which was his photographic equipment. And we knew the students were in school, and [redacted] was going to alert us if they came back, so he wouldn't get caught in the act.

And he went in, it was a very simple matter. It was a tin box that he could open with a paper clip and he took it out and photographed it, and put the case back in the drawer and locked up and left.

But [redacted] was a gal, a woman. And she was looking at one part of the school over there. And this guy comes out the back door. And as Maheu was coming down the stairs the students were coming up, with amatter of maybe a split second timing.

Mr. Madigan. This wasn't Mendoz?

Mr. O'Connell. No. [redacted]

Mr. Wides. What period was this that we are talking about?

Mr. O'Connell. This would have been about 1955.

Mr. Wides. And other than that, and the two incidents involving female companioship, what other kinds of sensitive things would he undertake? Was that in the period that you were paying him 500 a month?

Mr. O'Connell. We stopped paying the 500 way back when he nature as opposed to routine?

Mr. O'Connell. We had word that they wanted to -- apparently this foreign leader had visited the Kremlin, and we were reasonably certain -- he was quite a lady's man, and he liked just about any time to be accommodated.

So, we knew that he went to the Kremlin and stayed at the Kremlin. And the Division wanted us to come up with a simulated photograph or a film that showed him going through the act of taking on a female. And they simulated a back drop that looked like it was in a room in the Kremlin, and outside you could see the towers and everything, and the furniture was according to what they had.

And this was all done by people that knew generally what they looked like.

Now, we got Bob to make that film.

Mr. Wides. Is it correct that the Agency knew that the Soviets had made a film of the foreign leader when he was in Russia and was hoping to have a counterfeit film which they would circulate in the country, thereby making the foreign leader angry at the Soviets, was that the purpose?

Mr.O'Connell. I don't know whether they knew that the Soviets had made the film. But the purpose of the exercise was to have a film circulated in his own country, or neighboring countries, that would make him quite upset with the Soviets.

Mr. Wides. You mean they thought that the Russians had made a film?

Mr. O'Connell. Yes, to embarrass him.

Mr. Madigan. And that was accomplished as far as you know?

Mr. O'Connell. The film was made, but they never did release it, because things started to get better with the leader, and they felt that they wouldn't use it.

Mr. Madigan. Were Agency facilities used by Maheu for the production of this thing?

Mr. O'Connell . No. I hired a small independent studio in Los Angeles.

Mr. Madigan. And did Agency officials fly out there, the ones that knew about the backdrop and all that? How was that done?

Mr. O'Connell. It seems to me that they were just -- at this point I am not too sure whether they superimposed it, I guess is the word, with that background. I am not so sure at this point, it has been so long ago. That was away in the mid-fifties.

Mr. Wides. Could we get back to the question that we had started on, which was the files and where they would exist? You said that the operational files from all of your dealing with him would be in the Family Jewels, because they were all sensitive admissions.

Mr. O'Connell. Yes.

Mr. O'Connell. No.

Mr. Wides. Or Max Gonzales.

Mr. O'Connell. No.

Mr. Wides. While you were down there -- and this may overlap the question that Mr. Madigan asked before, but I think it is a little more -- did you have any awareness of any other efforts apart from Mr. Verona by Cubans in connection with the Agency to try and assassinate Castro?

Mr. O'Connell. No, none whatsoever.

Mr. Wides. I don't have any other questions.

Mr. Madigan. In your operational activities with Mr. Maheu, particularly in the New York area, did you ever have contact with a private investigator by the name of A. J. Woolston-Smith?

Mr. O'Connell. No, I never heard of him.

Mr. Wides. Do you know why there were two field offices in New York, two iffices in Manhatten?

What was the difference?

Mr. O'Connell. The cover. One was under Treasury cover and the other under Defense.

Mr. Wides. Were there two offices?

Mr. O'Connell. Why, they had them, it just grew like Topsy. They had two offices in Washington, and they had two offices in New York. And really the basis -- it was that that was the way they started, they figured they needed two different type covers because of the type of work they were doing.

Mr. Wides. What would the New York offices do as distinct from the Manhattan offices, or vice versa?

Mr. O'Connell. Nothing. They were basically investigative offices.

Mr. Wides. They just happened to have two?

Mr.O'Connell. They had two. [redacted]. The Manhattan field office. And then they eventually merged. Now they are over on [redacted] I think.

Mr. Wides. Thank you very much. That concludes the session. And we appreciate your staying so long.

(Whereupon, at 1:25 p.m., the hearing was concluded.)

TESTIMONY OF HOWARD J. OSBORN, ACCOMPANIED BY JOHN W. DEBELIUS, COUNSEL

Mr. Osborn. My name is Howard J. Osborn, [redacted]

Mr. Wallach. And Counsel, would you just state your name.

Mr. Debelius. The name is John W. Debelius, 570 North Frederick Avenue, Gaithersburg, Maryland.

Mr. Wallac h. Once again, Mr. Osborn, as the Senator told you, and as you have been told before, you do have the full spectrum of rights available to you here that you have under the Constitution, and in particular you do have the right to remain silent if you choose to as to any particular question. And in addition, you have the right to request that a Senator be present if you desire that one be here.

Mr. Osborn. Yes.

Mr. Wallach. Very briefly, before Mr. Rhea begins his questions, I would like to ask if Mr. Debelius is here as your personal counsel today?

Mr. Osborn. That is right.

Mr. Osborn. I take it, then that the CIA in no way secured Mr. Debelius' representation for you?

Mr. Osborn. I wish they were paying him, but they are not. I am.

Mr. Wallach. I will ask Mr. Rhea to begin his segment of the examination.

Mr. Osborn. Not to the best of my recollection.

Mr. Rhea. That is all I have. Thank you very much.

(Off the record discussion.)

Mr. Wallach. Mr. Osborn, if you would, just very briefly, on the subject matter that I am going to be directing your attention to, the mail programs, the various mail programs that you may have had knowledge of while you were with the CIA, I would like to have you very briefly trace your career for us in briefest terms with the Agency.

Mr. Osborn. All right.

I jointed the Agency on 10 October 1974 47.

I worked in what was then known as the Office of Collection and Dissemination, which concerned itself largely with the collection of any information that had any foreign intelligence import from other Government departments and agencies such as the Department of Commerce, the Department of Interior, the Department of the Treasury, and so forth. It was essentially a liaison job.

I served there about a year and a half, and I then jointed the Contact Division of the Office of Operations, which was concerned with the selection of foreign intelligence information from American businessmen and private organizations who had business abroad.

I served there until roughly 1950, when I jointed the Office of Special Operations, [redacted]

JC 15 NOV 93

This division, as I recall, was the Plans Staff of the Foreign Intelligence Division of the Clandestine Services which is known as the Deputy Director of Plans, DDP.

I was promoted from that position to be Chief of the Plans Staff. I served there until 1955, roughly 1955, when I became Assistant to the Inspector General of the Agency.

I served there until 19 -- correction. I think I joined the Inspector General's staff in 1954, and I left there in late 1955 to go abroad in the position of [redacted]

After three years in that position I served brifely for six months as [redacted].

And then 11 months as [redacted].

I left there in September 1960 to take the position of Deputy Chief of the Soviet Russian Division in the Clandestine Services of the Agency in Washington. I served in that position for about a year and a half, and then became Chief of the Soviet Russian Division. And I held that position until Septemb er of 1963, when I accepted the position of Deputy Director of the Office of Security of the Agency.

Mr. Osborn. To the best of my recollection, I believe they were.

Mr. Wallach. Going back just a step, I take it that you had no knowledge of any mail opening projects while you were with the Inspector General's Office in 1954?

Mr. Osborn. To the best of my recollection, I don't believe I was briefed on what was then HT LINGUAL [redacted]

(1)(B)

Mr. Wallach. I think those just may have been different names for the same operation, different divisions.

Mr. Osborn. I think they were, yes, different code names. They changed them frequently.

Mr. Wallach. While you were in [redacted]

Mr. Osborn. [redacted]

Mr. Wallach. Did you have knowledge of the military's mail operation over there, mail intercept operation?

Mr. Osborn. I may have had, but I can't recall it specifically.

Mr. Wallach. Did you subsequently gain knowledge of that mail intercept operation?

Mr. Osborn. I have heard of it somewhere.

Mr. Wallach. What is the nature of the operation that you have heard of?

Mr. Osborn. That the military was intercepting mail. I don't know the details.

Mr. Wallach. Have you heard of any arrangements whereby the German authorities actually provide the mail?

Mr. Osborn. I can't recall that, honestly. I may have, but I can't recall it specifically.

Mr. Wallach. In other words, would it be fair to say that you are not familiar with that operation?

Mr. Osborn. I am not familiar at all with it.

Mr. Wallach. As I stated before, we have some documents here, and there are a couple that I think are relevant. And I would like you to review them later, but I want to get your state of recollection now. I realize that it is based on memory of events years ago, and things you read in the paper. And in no way am I questioning the truth of your memory.

Mr. Osborn. I understand.

Mr. Wallach. Could you just give us an overview of your understanding as to how the -- we will call it the New York intercept, [redacted] HT LINGUAL, whichever name you want to use, developed in the fifties?

(1)(B)
15 Nov 93
JC

Mr. Osborn. I have no specific knowledge of this. It is a little unusual, but even considering that this is one of the things, of course, that we reported to Director Schlesinger, I don't believe we reported this in any detail as to how it started, because I am not really sure that any of us knew. I don't recall exactly how it did start. But it was alsways which time I was briefed on this particular operation.

Mr. Wallach. Did you know whether or not the Postmaster General, the then Postmaster General, I am not sure who it was in 1964, July, whoever it was in that position, had knowledge of the fact that mail was opened in New York City?

Mr. Osborn. To the best of my recollection, I never heard that he was.

Mr. Wallach. Had you ever heard either way about the Attorney General, be it Robert Kennedy or any of his predecessors?

Mr. Osborn. Not to the best of my recollection.

Mr. Wallach. When you visited New York on this inspection trip that you described being possibly with Mr. White, do you recall whether or not Mr. ~~Fabrini~~ FAVORINI accompanied you out to the facility?

Mr. Osborn. I can't recall specifically, but I am sure that he did.

Mr. Wallach. Did you actually go out to [redacted] if it was changed?

Mr. Osborn. They had changed it. It was then [redacted] it was only changed [redacted] during the last three or four years of my tenure as Director of Security. Prior to that it was right in the office.

Mr. Dick. Were you told that it was illegal?

Mr. Osborn. No. I assumed it was. You don't open mail in peacetime.

Mr. Wallach. Did the Office of Security also run the project in Washington [redacted]

Mr. Osborn. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Wallach. Do you have any knowledge of the project?

Mr. Osborn. We had some arrangement [redacted] [redacted] And it may have been [redacted] [redacted] I am not sure that it was, but we did have some arrangements [redacted] But I can't recall the details of it. But I feel sure that we did.

Mr. Wallach. [redacted]?

Mr. Osborn. The one I specifically remember was [redacted]. And I am pretty sure it was [redacted]. But I can't recall the details, I really can't. But I have a recollection of this. Ang again, we were doing it just as a mechanism again. It was the Clendestine Services that had to be calling the shot of that.

Mr. Wallach. I am just asking for the extent of your knowledge.

Mr. Osborn. And if we did it [redacted] we must have done it some other places.

Mr. Wallach. What cooperative arrangement [redacted] areyou aware of?

Mr. Osborn. We had totally cooperative arrangement [redacted]

Mr. Wallach. With respect to mail?

Mr. Osborn. Anything.

Mr. Wallach. Could you go into that?

Mr. Osborn. I can't recall the details, but I can recall that we used to [redacted]

Mr. Wallach. I am really just asking, not for techniques or narcotics or training or things like that we are aware of, but really with respect to [redacted] could not provide in certain situations.

Mr. Osborn. I have a recollection that they did cooperate with us in this respect. And I am sorry that I can't be more clear on the details.

Mr. Wallach. Was there a particular point of contact [redacted]?

Mr. Osborn. Yes.

Mr. Wallach. Who was that?

Mr. Osborn. The point of contact that we remember the best was [redacted], that I remember.

Mr. Wallach. And how late was [redacted] there [redacted]

Mr. Osborn. He retired about two and a half years ago.

Mr. Dick. What was his position [redacted]?

Mr. Osborn. He was a Deputy [redacted] He had a very high position [redacted] was his name.

Mr. Wallach. I note your attorney is taking notes. May I ask if those will be provided to the CIA?

Mr. Debelius. If they will be provided to the CIA it wouldn't be by me, Mr. Wallach. Really, I am doing it here to organize my own thoughts. And I would be happy to destroy them in your presence.

Mr. Wallach. I have absolutely no problem. I was just wondering if you were going under instructions.

Mr. Debelius. Could we go off the record just a moment?

Mr. Wallach. Surely.

(Off the record discussion.)

Mr. Wallach. Do you recall anybody else [redacted] that the Agency had contact with on a regular basis?

(1)(B)
15 Nov 93

Mr. Osborn. I can't recall any other, but I am sure there were others.

Mr. Wallach. Do you recall any generic types of operations that [redacted] cooperated with?

Mr. Osborn. No. But to the best of my recollection, there was very little that we would ask [redacted] The same is true of [redacted] and many other departments.

Mr. Dick. Are you familiar with [redacted] operations that terminated in the mid-sixties that involved interceptions [redacted] from other countries to the US?

Mr. Osborn. I seem to have heard of this, but I can't recall it specifically. It sounds familiar to me.

Mr. Dick. Do you recall whether in any of those [redacted] programs the CIA might have received [redacted]

Mr. Osborn. Not specifically. And I can clarify one thing for you now. On this Dulles thing, I am sorry. It was not [redacted] It was [redacted] from the Soviet Union [redacted] And I seem to recall also in the same context of my discussion with you -- if you ask me specifically if I knew, I would say no, but I seem to recall that they did cooperate with us in the matter of [redacted]. I can't remember a specific instance, but I recall this.

(1)(B)
(1)(C)
15 NOV 93

Mr. Dick. Is that the extent of your recollection?

Mr. Osborn. Yes, really. But this [redacted] thing rings a loud bell in my mind.

Mr. Wallach. Aside from the mail opening projects which have publically come to light in recent months -- and I will go through them very briefly now -- there were the San Francisco project, which was repeated two or three times, the project in New Orleans which you have mentioned before in the Communist China from San Francisco.

I said, does Mr. Karamessines approve this?

They said,yes.

I said, does Mr. Helms approve it -- and they said, we can assume that Mr. Karamessines has got Mr. Helms' approval.

And I said, I can't assume it. I will have to get it from him directly.

And I did. I sent one of my fellows, a senior fellow named Jack Turton. I made arrangements through Mr. Cotter, I believe, to send him out to San Francisco to talk to the Chief Postal Inspector in San Francisco, and I believe they set it up so that representatives of the Far East Division and the Technical Services Division, not the security people -- I can't recall, but I believe that they were to pose as Postal Inspectors, with access of certain categories of mail from Communist China to this country, for the purpose of photographing exteriors, examining it for possible eviddnce of censorship, but I did not know that they were going to open it, I had no idea they opened the mail. And I found out socially and personally from one of the people involved about a year ago that they opened the mail.

Mr. Wallach. Who was that from?

Mr. Osborn. A friend ofmine whowas involved, who is retired from the Agency, a fellow by the name of [redacted]

(1)(A)
15 Nov 73

[redacted]

Mr. Wallach. Was Mr. [redacted] actually involved in the operation?

Mr. Osborn. Yes, he was a part of it.

Mr. Wallach. Do you know Mr. [redacted]?

Mr. Osborn. I am sure there was one, but I never met anybody named [redacted].

Mr. Wallach. Are you saying, Mr. Osborn, that the operation you received approval from Mr. Helms for was not a mail opening operation?

Mr. Osborn. That is right. It was a mail cover operation.

Mr. Wallach. Would it be fair to say, then, that in gaining that approval from you you were actually misled?

Mr. Osborn. Yes, indeed -- I wasn't misled, but perhaps it seemed when I got out there and found out how easy it was to get it -- but I don't know, I wasn't told that they were to open mail. That isn't the circumstances under which I briefed Mr. Helms.

Mr. Wallach. Did you discuss this project with Mr. Cotter?

Mr. Osborn. Yes, I discussed it with him, I think, in arranging the original meeting with Mr. Turton. I don't know whether Mr. Turton went over and talked to Mr. Cotter directly, or whether Mr. Cotter just made the entre with the San Francisco

15 Nov 93

In other words, I am sure they didn't go to Mr. Cotter every time they wanted something on a day-to-day relationship.

Mr. Wallach. I have just given Mr. Osborn a copy of a memorandum dated December 24, 1974, which is in fact after the time he left on sick leave, and there is no reason to believe that he was seen it. I would just like him to review it and possibly refresh his recollection.

Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. WAllach. Back on the record.

I think I misspoke when I gave Mr. Osborn a memo. It is a three-page undated memo captioned "Project West Pointer." I believe it was recently prepared.

But in any event I would like to call your attention to the last paragraph on the third page which states:

"The main difference between [redacted] and West Pointer is that the file shows specific reference to a statement by the Postal authorities that mail not to go out of Post Office control. While mail was opened and photographed by Agency personnel in New York City under [redacted], and not specific post office approval was given, neither is there written order not to do so. In West Pointer the opening of mail was contrary to specific orders that mail was not to out of post office control."

Mr. Osborn. There you are.

Mr. Wallach. Is that also your understanding, really?

Mr. Osborn. Yes, very definitely.. This fellow who is a close friend of mine -- and I don't want to necessarily put him on the spot, but he is retired and is in Florida -- came back and spent time with me at my home. And at one juncture, discussing such things as now, the Senate and the House, and what is going to happen, he said, well, you know, you remember that West Coast operation.

And I said, yes.

And he said, you didn't know we opened the mail, did you?

And I said, no, I didn't know you opened the mail. That was the first time I ever heard they opened it.

Mr. Dick. Are you referring to Mr. [redacted]?

Mr. Osborn. Yes.

Mr. Dick. What division was Mr. [redacted] in?

Mr. Osborn. He was with [redacted] at that time.

Mr. Wallach. I take it by your actions -- this might be speculation, and if you don't want to answer, feel free not to.

Mr. Osborn. If I do, I will establish that it is speculation.

Mr. Wallach. You would not have approved the West Coast operation if you knew it involved mail opening?

Mr. Osborn. I would not have approved it -- the

(1)(A)
15 NOV 93
JC

Director might have approved it, but it wasn't the way I briefed it, and it wasn't my understanding with Mr. Cotter.

Mr. Wallach. In other words, you did give Mr. Cotter assurance that this was only a mail cover type of operation?

Mr. Osborn. That was the understanding I had with Mr. Cotter, to the best of my recollection.

Mr. Wallach. Have you subsequently discussed the West Coast operation with Mr. Cotter?

Mr. Osborn. Yes, I have. Since I am under oath, I had lunch with Bill Cotter and Marv Gentile on Tuesday of this week, and we naturally discussed this stuff. We went over the fact that he recalled me, and that both of us were instrumental in terminating the New York project. And I have forgotten the exact context, but the San Francisco thing came up. And I told him, I didn't even know the mail was being opened until I talked to [redacted].

He said, you didn't?

And I said, no.

He said, well, it was. He said, I just found out about it. I presume through testimony or something.

But that was the essence of my discussion.

Mr. Wallach. Did Mr. Cotter talk to you about any FBI mail opening projects?

Mr. Osborn. No, he did not. We were in a public restaurant. We doubletalked.

you have any knowledge of it?

Mr. Osborn. The first time I ever saw the Huston Plan was in the newspapers.

Mr. Wallach. Didn't Mr. Helms know that mail was being opened in New York in 1971?

Mr. Osborn. Of course he did.

Mr. Wallach. Did you know why Mr. Helms would have asked the President for authority to open mail in 1971, then?

Mr. Osborn. I have no idea.

Mr. Wallach. Calling your attention to a memorandum dated February 16, 1973, captioned "Visit to Headquarters re [redacted]," I will ask you to quickly read that over.

Mr. Osborn. I must have been Iden 18.

Mr. Wallach. The first question would be, do you recall a meeting in your office at which you notified Mr. Issaeff that the project would be terminated?

Mr. Osborn. I don't think I dealt with Issaeff. I think I would have dealt with one of my people. But it could have been Issaeff. I don't know. I remember suspending it.

Mr. Wallach. And do you remember telling Mr. Issaeff in words or substance that he should not tell anyone on the CI Staff that you wanted to tell the Director of the CIA Staff yourself?

Mr. Osborn. I very probably would have. I had very close relationships with Jim Angleton professionally.

memorandum from Chief, CI."

Mr. Wallach. Calling your attention to the first page, you stated this is Mr. Angleton's handwriting?

Mr. Osborn. Yes.

Mr. Wallach. I realize that most of it is illegible but I ask if you can read the line that begins with Osborn.

Mr. Osborn. "Osborn said he was under instructions from Colby to the effect that no pressure should be put on Cotter."

Mr. Wallach. Do you recall discussing that with Mr. Colby or Mr. Angleton?

Mr. Osborn. No. But I do remember talking to Bill Colby about the position that Cotter was in, and he was always extremely sympathetic. And I don't know what pressure anybody could put on Cotter.

Mr. Wallach. I believe you briefly touched on this before. How was the operation actually terminated?

Mr. Osborn. I called in Stan Ense, I believe, who was then Deputy Director of Security for Investigations and Operational Support, and I said [redacted] is terminated as of now. I think it was in the early afternoon. And that was the end of it.

Mr. Wallach. In other words, it was then Mr. Colby under Schlesinger who terminated it?

Mr. Osborn. Yes.

Mr. Wallach. And I take it --

Papich began with a brief summary of his experience in the FBI. During World War II and thereafter he ran certain operations in Latin America. In 1945-47, he ran counterintelligence operations in Brazil against the Communist Party of Brazil and bloc intelligence agents. In 1952 he became FBI liaison with CIA charged with coordinating and planning, including the development of sources. He also had special assignments overseas for Hoover.

Papich presented the following overview of the issues. He has a high respect and regard for the Soviet intelligence service, its efficiency, and effectiveness. He must be shown that their philosophy has changed since 1970. The pro[illegible] of the U. S. intelligence community regarding the KGB and GRU is very limited. In 1958, for example, the U. S. intelligence community had [illegible] believed was good information on the KGB structure. This had to be readily revised when new defectors and new operations succeeded showing that the premises were false. Papich stated "they've taken us to the cleaners in the last few years". There is no estimate of how many Soviet illegals are in the United States. The old view was that illegals would aim at middle-class government and business positions. It has been discovered that they take jobs like dishwasher to develop an employment background. There is no knowledge of Soviet objectives. Illegals may do nothing for years so they can be tapped for the future. There may be 100, 500, or 5,000 of them. Some were sent in as early as the 20's and 30's. They are the Rudolph Abel-type. His network was never identified. Therefore, Papich is clearly unhappy with U. S. results in identifying Soviet operations in the United States.

~~TOP SECRET~~

Papich stated that he played a controversial "devil's advocate" role between the FBI and the CIA. He did not confer with Attorney General Mitchell after Helms called his name to Mitchell's attention. Papich assumes Helms wanted Mitchell to get a review of the history of FBI-CIA relations. Papich would not have gone to Mitchell without checking with other FBI officials.

To understand decisions in 1966 or 1970 it is necessary to go back to World War II, according to Papich. President Roosevelt got the FBI into the foreign intelligence field in World War II. Overnight the FBI had to generate the capability to move into Latin America against the German espionage operation which included business covers, radio networks, and influence in Latin American governments. The FBI had no precedent or guidance. Assistant FBI Director Hugh Klegg conferred with the British in London for assistance. FBI agents went into Latin America first under business covers, then in the embassies, which was thin cover. The legal attaches established official liaison with local authorities. The FBI's role was primarily counterintelligence but some positive intelligence was gathered about the stability of governments. FBI agents learned on the job. Most guidance from headquarters was ridiculous until [illegible] experiences were reported back.

~~TOP SECRET~~

The OSS ran operations in Europe and Asia as well as Latin America. Donovan also ran undercover operations in the United States. See the book by Donald Downs. OSS had a very close relationship with MI 5 and MI 6. The British also ran operations in the United States in 1939-41. No one knows how many. They saw the FBI as neophytes knowing little about the business. The British developed closer relations to OSS than to FBI.

At first, Donovan and Hoover were friendly but Hoover received complaints of OSS operations in the United States, for example, the OSS bugging of the Spanish Embassy. Other complaints came from Latin America. The friction between Hoover and Donovan is important background for Hoover's view of the CIA. Donovan would recruit persons regardless of their background if he thought they had the capability to penetrate the access. The OSS use of Communists "shook the hell" out of Hoover, as did OSS discussions in Moscow of cooperation with the NKVD. Hoover would never work with Communists. Hoover saw CIA roots in OSS. Papich stressed that OSS had some great people, extremely capable and dedicated, but OSS had an element that Hoover would never buy.

(S) 1B (FBI)

FILE SECRET

In 1943-45, the government began looking toward a worldwide intelligence system. The alternatives were the military, OSS, State, and FBI. FDR allegedly assured Hoover that he would be responsible for setting up the post-war system. Papich never saw any documents showing that Hoover wanted this job. The Latin American operation was successful but Hoover never understood or had a feel for the problems. He felt insecure. He never traveled outside the U. S., and only saw things from Washington, D. C.

Under President Truman, Hoover did not have a "warm" relationship with the President. When the Central Intelligence group was formed and the 1947 Act drafted, Hoover's attitute was mistrust and lack of confidence in the group creating CIA. They were a different type of people, not law-enforcement oriented. Ivy League students of foreign [illegible] did not speak Hoover's language.

~~TOP SECRET~~

Papich states it was a "blessing that Hoover did not get the job. Hoover was uncomfortable" when confronted with worldwide issues. He did not understand relationships and operations abroad. In the U. S., for instance, if Hoover had a problem with a police chief, he just cut off relations. He couldn't do that with foreign police. A foreign intelligence service cannot operate like a domestic intelligence agency.

In 1952, when Papich became FBI-CIA liaison, relationships between the agencies were a mess. Beedle Smith was CIA director. There were many flaps between FBI and CIA over CIA political and psychological warfare, especially regarding the funding of labor groups, student groups, and political parties. At the time of the 1947 Act, these techniques of "covert action" were the subject of tremendously heated battles between CIA and State. There were fewer flaps in the counterintelligence field.

In the field of political and psychological warfare operations, the CIA didn't want stereotyped people. The CIA was not disciplined and ignored jurisdictional agreements. It would contact a U. S. newsman about a possible assignment, the newsman would contact the FBI to ask what was going on, this would go to Hoover, who would raise hell with the CIA director. But Beedle Smith was tough. Communication between the FBI and CIA was almost nonexistent by 1952.

Papich had no CIA counterpart since the CIA is so compartmented. He had contacts at all levels, exchanging ideas for operations. He would push CIA ideas in the FBI. Flaps would come up. He would stamp them out and say "get on with the job". The FBI was easier to control since it was centralized. Papich's relations with Hoover would go up and down. He frequently asked to go to the field -- and sometimes Hoover considered keeping him there. But by the 1950's, most of the FBI's foreign intelligence talent had disappeared.

~~TOP SECRET~~

No formal consideration was [illegible] within the FBI to limiting its role to law enforcement. Tolson probably thought it should, but Hoover never expressed a desire to give up his intelligence job. Nobody, including Tolson, knew Hoover's reasons for doing what he did. He had his own conversations and contacts in the White House, Congress, and his personal sources. He knew what he was doing and had "a nose and ear for the political climate in Washington". This was true for "risky" operations.

Papich believes it would be disastrous to give both foreign and domestic intelligence duties to a CIA. While there would be advantages in coordinating fragmented sources, it is a risk to liberty, like a national police.

Papich did not recall any significant plan to improve coordination in 1958 when FBI joined USIB. FBI was part of the USIB predecessor group.

The CIA would suggest joint field operations but Hoover would rarely buy it. This was like his reluctance to join any operation with any other agencies. He thought the FBI should always have control, a commanding role. For example, Allan Dulles discussed the United Nations with Hoover. (S)

Friction would develop in "the gray area" of positive intelligence. For example, a top foreign official came to the United States for medical treatment. The CIA knew he was coming to the U. S. and wanted to know his relationship with Communists and wanted intelligence on the instability in the country. The CIA wants him surveilled to find out his contacts, what he's saying, and a wiretap or bug. The FBI would not do this since he was not an intelligence agent and not within FBI jurisdiction. The CIA would be upset. There were several cases like this, one involving a Bolivian official. Over the years, Papich sold Hoover on [illegible] this, but it was always a gray area. The N[illegible] coordination never worked with the FBI

In summary, the sources of F[illegible] friction were (1) the OSS experience, (2) political and psychological warfare by CIA, and (3) the CIA desire for positive intelligence gathering in the U. S.

There was no major issue regarding CIA's desire to develop ~~"friends"~~ in the U.S. Papich recalls no more than three to six instances of disagreement. The FBI never helped the CIA create an organization for deep cover. It never needed FBI help because it moved on its own. The CIA Office of Security advised Papich that they had a relationship with the National Student Association. This never gave the FBI a problem.

The Katzenbach report would not give the FBI problems but many good CIA contacts overseas went down the drain when contacts through student groups were curtailed. Papich believes that if these contacts had not been eliminated in 1967 the intelligence community could have dealt with the New Left later. The CIA would have had assets to assess the issues. Such questions involved New Left travels overseas and relationships with foreign agents.

The FBI and CIA did discuss developing a cover in the U. S. to get into [redacted] Travelers gained (S) very little. The immediate problem was the proposal for a joint approach. When Papich was there, it got no further than discussion. If the CIA did set up cover in the U. S., the FBI provided no support. However, if the CIA desired to use a company it would ask for a check of FBI files. Papich is not aware of any political organization created by the CIA, although it may have been done in the 50's or 60's. There was discussion in the FBI about creating its own group aimed at [redacted] (S) and discussion of whether or not to let the CIA know about it. There had to be coordination with CIA. Papich does not know if plans to create organizations were implemented. The decision would have been at Hoover's level.

FBI informant travel overseas was limited mainly to CPUSA members. The FBI would not tell CIA about informant trips to Moscow or Paris beforehand. The reason was that the CIA would have notified its field agencies that the informant's life should be protected. Instead, the FBI informed the CIA of the results upon the informant's return.

The FBI liaison section was made up of six or seven agents. Papich and Bill Creager handled the CIA. Creager dealt specifically with USIB, the Security Committee, the Interagency Defector Committee, and the Office of Security. Papich and Creager backed each other up in their respective areas. There were several liaison agents at the Pentagon. The liaison at State was Oren Bartlett. The other liaison agents were not so deeply involved in intelligence operations as was Papich. FBI liaison at NSA was Bill McDonnell, although Papich was also involved with [redacted] (S)

Regarding FBI service and support to other agencies, Hoover was "goddamned careful". He was sensitive to any "risks" and thus any request for FBI support had to be established firmly. Hoover never responded "let them do it" within the United States. Hoover did not give other agencies any blessing or approval for questionable domestic activities such as the case of the Bolivian official mentioned above. (S)

(1)(c) JS, 10 Nov 73 (per CIA)

In both the FBI and the CIA, Papich stimulated interest in covering and recruiting people in the United States, for example embassy officials. (~~S~~)(u) The CIA wanted to use its sources to recruit foreign officials in the United States before the officials went home. These officials were not spies, therefore, when the CIA asked the FBI to recruit them, Hoover said no. This issue had its ups and downs, depending on the situation. Sometimes Papich did convince Hoover to let the CIA recruit a foreign official in the U. S.

Hoover treated State Department requests differently than CIA requests since he considered them to be requests from the Secretary of State rather than the DCI. [illegible], on bugs or taps, (~~S~~)(u) Hoover was back-stopped because the issue went to the Attorney General. If NSA asked for help in getting codes, Hoover sometimes refused. (S) He based his evaluation on the feasibility of the operation. Neither NSA nor State had their own capabilities (S) and there was no formal discussion of their developing it. Papich stressed that Hoover treated State, CIA, and NSA each differently. (S)

There were flaps in the 1950's when the CIA recruited without clearing with the FBI. The CIA asked for FBI wiretaps no more than five or six times. (~~S~~)(u) Papich was asked by FBI officials whether the CIA ever went to the Attorney General directly for wiretap authority. (~~S~~)(u) Papich says this may have happened, but not to his knowledge. Few Attorneys General would have stuck their neck out. It was a possibility with McCone and Robert Kennedy, where the relationship was unusually close. Office of Security, although that office had an excellent relationship with FBI. Allan Dulles would not have condoned it since he had great respect for the FBI. Papich believes the same is true of McCone and Helms. Papich also concedes the possibility of entries by the CIA, citing the independent operation conducted regarding the Bolivian official. (S) Hoover opposed going to CIA or NSA for technical support in a joint (S) surveillance operation. The FBI would only ask (S) for equipment for its own operation. (S)

Regarding the memorandum of understanding between (S) CIA and FBI, the general problem was developing sources in the United States among foreign officials; as many as 12,000 of them a year assigned to the United States. CIA tried to [illegible] this source in the 50's. FBI involvement was "off and on" and some thought a new FBI division would be needed for it. The FBI as constituted did not have trained personnel or capability to develop foreign targets. The CIA had this capability. Papich proposed that FBI permit CIA to recruit in the United States. CIA would advise FBI of its interest in a target, the purposes of the contact, and any results. If the FBI had no interest in the target, that is, an interest in a KGB contact for example, it would OK the CIA contact. FBI required that CIA furnish it any information relevant to its needs, that is regarding KGB contacts (the New Left was handled separately from the memorandum of understanding procedures).

Alan Belmont headed the FBI Intelligence Division before Sullivan. A capable administrator, he operated behind the scene, stayed out of politics, had good rapport with agents, and was able to handle Hoover. When Belmont retired, the FBI "lost a rudder". This was a crucial point in FBI history, with Hoover getting old. Belmont stressed to his subordinates the need to develop a strong case for any proposal going to Hoover. Once that case was ready, Belmont would push it hard, but Papich and Belmont did disagree on such matters as counterintelligence operations against the KGB.

Regarding the CIA and domestic dissidents, in the 50's the CIA's general attitude was not to investigate or surveil Americans overseas. FBI-CIA communications rarely involved U. S. citizen targets unless they clearly involved a KGB agent. In the 1960's, Papich recalls two early incidents of FBI requests for CIA coverage overseas. One was the Republic of New Africa, a black group with contacts with Communists and foreign radicals (note by Elliff -- the individual was Robert Williams?). The second was Stokely Carmichael, who traveled around the world. The FBI asked the CIA for coverage of Carmichael's contacts overseas but there were no results since the CIA had no capability. In retrospect, Papich thinks his importance was exaggerated.

Papich does not recall any case or interest of the CIA regarding Dr. King. The FBI levied no requests on the CIA regarding Dr. King. Papich recalls that the FBI thought a black Communist Party member had contacts with King. The assumption was that the CPUSA was supported and financed by the Soviet Union. This influenced the FBI's view of the problem. There was no way the CIA would help abroad since the CIA had no penetration of the Communist Party in Russia. The CIA had little on the CPUSA links to the Soviet Union. CIA put little or no effort abroad into developing information on this. It was not a CIA priority. CIA was satisfied with FBI coverage of the Communist Party. If the KGB was using it for espionage or influence, the FBI would uncover it. The FBI would inform CIA of CPUSA activities. Regarding CPUSA, FBI determined that there was Soviet financial support into the 1960's. The FBI attitude as early as the 50's was that the CIA did not have the capability to discover CPUSA links to the Soviet Union. There were no leads for the CIA to explore in France, Czechoslovakia, etc. If a Communist Party member went to Rome or London, then FBI would ask CIA coverage, but the CIA gave it low priority and produced little. This led to FBI dissatisfaction with CIA, so FBI went through its legal attaches, who would contact foreign security services. Normally, the CIA was informed but sometimes the CIA was not notified if the FBI called it "an internal security" matter. Papich

stresses that this is a problem. What is the difference between "internal security" and "counterintelligence" and "positive intelligence"? FBI would use these distinctions as an excuse not to notify CIA.

Regarding the legal attaches, Papich was in Rio de Janerio after World War II. The FBI had moved out when the CIA moved in, but Hoover wanted to have someone there anyway. Papich stayed a year but wanted out since he disliked doing only liaison work with local police and CIA. The legal attaches were never operations and dealt with foreign security police and criminal police. A major exception was Mexico City where, with CIA acquiescence, the FBI was operational. Its coverage was through sources going back to [illegible] II and may still exist. The targets [illegible] iminals and CPUSA officials and [illegible] was apprehending fugitives. The [illegible] not cover the Soviets.

~~TOP SECRET~~

(S) 1B (FBI)

There were six or seven legal attache offices from the 1950's until Papich left in 1970. Papich feels that if the FBI has legal attaches they should be closely coordinated with the CIA so that their assets and sources do not duplicate the CIA. A FBI man abroad can be useful to the intelligence community through his liaison with local police. Coverage in the counterintelligence field of a Soviet officer should be by the CIA. Coverage of a CPUSA member should be joint FBI-CIA. There never has been such coordination. The legal attache should be involved in operations through his liaison contacts.

(S) 1B (FBI)

Papich gave the following example: the CIA and the French DST have good liaison for counterintelligence coverage. If a joint CIA-French coverage target is coming to the U. S., the FBI legal attache should be involved in France to prepare for the transfer of coverage to FBI in the U.S. Papich sees the implications of this for the need to have a single counterintelligence agency. There would be advantages of centralization, communication, and security.

(CIA)

When the legal attache asks a foreign intelligence service for coverage of an FBI target, it asks for any information rather than specifying the data. This is because foreign services may be penetrated by the KGB.

Papich knew nothing about the tap on Joseph Krafft in France or the "17 wiretaps".

Regarding "leak" cases, over the years back to Eisenhower and Kennedy, the White House would go through the roof. Hoover wanted to stay out of these investigations since he suspected a source would be a top official and nothing would be done. For example, under President Kennedy the FBI did identify a top source of leaks, gave the information to Kennedy, and nothing was done. The security committee was created to deal with leaks. Each agency would handle its own, although the President could still order the FBI to enter the case.

~~TOP~~

Papich did not recall anything about Anna Chennault, but he did recall that during the Korean War there was a request of a top American citizen regarding those negotiations. Papich says he talked them out of it.

Regarding the CIA investigations of U.S. citizens, Papich recalls beginning to request CIA coverage of New Left travel abroad about 1967. He does not recall an FBI interest as early as 1965, at the time of the Hoover meeting at the White House on antiwar protests.

Papich did not know of the 1967 White House request to CIA nor did he know when Ober's unit was set up. He had no discussion with Ober on setting up his unit but he did know of its existence after it was established. The FBI was asking CIA about particular group leaders. The Bureau wanted to know if there was foreign money or guidance to antiwar leaders. These requests were directed to Ober (Papich did not know CIA project codewords). There was no CIA capability to cover antiwar contacts in Hanoi or Moscow. The CIA's attitude toward this new issue was similar to the old assumptions about the CPUSA. (S)(u) 1B (FBI)

FILE: SECRET

The accepted view at CIA was that it was important to determine if there was foreign support or sabotage training. After 1967, FBI-CIA contacts on this topic developed rapidly. There were few really valuable CIA results nor was much obtained through the FBI, the legal attaches, or informants going abroad.

Papich referred to the climate of press commentary, assassinations, allegations of sabotage plans, and bombings. There was "a potential for panic within the intelligence community" since no one had the coverage they thought they needed. Travel of U.S. antiwar leaders to Communist nations seemed important, although sometimes after inquiry the individuals were found not to be important. Therefore, time was spent on targets who should not have been targets but this was a new task.

Hoover did not understand the issue. He thought New Left CPUSA links were most important. Papich never thought the CPUSA responsible for development of the New Left or SDS. CPUSA did try to use the New Left. Hoover assumed the Soviets controlled CPUSA day to day. Some of his assumptions had been proved wrong. In World War II days, yes, the Soviets used CPUSA for recruitment. In the late 40's and 50's, the Soviets changed their policy, no longer using CPUSA for this purpose. Hoover was never convinced of this change. Papich recognized the possibility that there might be a reversal of Soviet policy regarding CPUSA but Papich's top concern has always been KGB penetration of CIA, FBI, NSA, etc., as well as the question of how good the double agents are.

Regarding the theory of KGB aims) for using U.S. dissidents, the main problem was lack of knowledge. In the 40's and 50's, the FBI was confident of its knowledge of CPUSA and could assess its use to influence U. S. politics, but in the late 50's the Bureau's coverage of new groups was tremendously weak. The FBI recognized this. The CIA stressed it also for three reasons: (1) the increase in FBI requests for CIA information, (2) the White House requests, and (3) CIA officials own concern about inadequate coverage. The conclusion was that intelligence regarding people who went abroad was inadequate.

Papich had no personal involvement with White House requests. There was discussion both in the FBI and between CIA and FBI on expanding coverage and development of sources. For example, does CIA have anybody who can have an entree into SDS? The Katzenbach report had limited the CIA to foreign sources or to U. S. students recruited abroad. Papich dealt mainly with Ober on this, but also with Angleton and Tom Karamenses (DDP). Papich believes anything Ober said and did reflected CIA policy from the top. The operation grew like Topsy. CIA compartmented it very tightly and Ober was very security consc[illegible]n the FBI, W. C. Regarding assassination[illegible]ivan was ultimately convinced and Belmont wa[illegible]inced that Oswald acted alone. No one has answered the question of what Oswald did in the Soviet Union. Did he get any guidance? Why did they permit him to leave? Papich had frequent discussions with Dulles and the CIA regarding the Warren Commission although he thinks the formal FBI liaison was Jim Malloy. The question as to whether Oswald was a U. S. intelligence asset never arose. Critics at the time said the FBI should have surveilled Oswald. Papich recalls discussions of a plan to have a CIA or FBI man defect to Moscow but no such plan was ever implemented to his knowledge. It was not worth the risk. He does not know whether the CIA did it. He stresses that the FBI was not likely to use "nuts".

Regarding the Riha incident, Papich says this was not the reason for his retirement. Instead, there were problems with Hoover on operations and policy decisions. Papich was taking an aggressive stand on coverage of [redacted] (S)

1B (FBI)

Regarding McCone's proposal on expanded FBI coverage of [redacted] Papich stated that others in the CIA influenced McCone to press for more coverage. McCone was aggressive. Papich pushed it too. This was the time of the Cuban missile crisis. (S)

SECRET

Hoover would agree to expand on certain issues but proposals for major new operations went to PFIAB for support. Clifford was chairman. Papich doesn't know what Hoover said to Clifford, but the answer on the proposal was negative. The proposal involved more extensive and sophisticated electronic surveillance. This was at the time of discovery of microphones in the U. S. Embassy in Moscow, as well as an increase in the number of KGB attempts to recruit U. S. citizens abroad. He does not think COINTELPRO was developed as an alternative to this.

TOP SECRET

Hoover's rejection of McCone's plan did influence CIA attitudes toward the FBI. CIA saw the FBI as not being "a clandestine agency". CIA's view was that FBI had to reject CIA proposals as illegal. When Papich lectured to CIA recruits he attempted to orient CIA to the FBI's limits. On the other hand, FBI did not understand CIA functions abroad.

Returning to the Riha incident, Papich stressed that he clashed with Hoover every year and that their relationship had declined steadily after 1966. By fall of '69, he saw his value as nil. In December '69, he decided to retire the following spring. In February 1970, while winding up his normal business, the Riha incident arose. Professor Riha disappeared from the university. There was faculty and press interest in Boulder, Colorado, and a Congressional inquiry came to FBI. But FBI opened no case or investigation. In March of 1970 the president of the University of Colorado came to a CIA man in domestic contact service in Boulder to inquire about the disappearance. The CIA man called two friends in the Denver FBI office. FBI agent agreed to contact Denver police and discovered that marital problems had led to the disappearance. CIA man told the university president what he learned from "reliable government sources". The president told the press. The local district attorney called the president and asked his source. The president went back to his CIA source. The CIA source then promptly contacted the CIA officer in Denver, who contacted the Denver FBI SAC. The CIA officer suggested that he and the SAC go to the district attorney to say that the original source was local police, but the SAC rejected the idea and wanted to know the identity of the FBI agent who gave the information. The CIA officer refused and there was a bitter clash. (Things like this had happened in the past. FBI field agents had contacted Papich and Papich had always told them to get on with the job.) The SAC sent a teletype to Hoover. Hoover said to Papich, go to Helms and get the identity of the FBI source. Helms called in the CIA man, who refused to identify him. Helms sent Hoover a letter [illegible]ng this and said he was "taking the nece[illegible]inis-trative action". Hoover noted on [illegible] "dis-continue liaison with CIA".

Papich then wrote a long [illegible] of resignation to Hoover instead of his p[illegible]brief resignation note. He strongly appealed to Hoover to reconsider and keep communications open. He also raised serious questions concerning Hoover's past decisions. Hoover was not happy. Papich says there had been dozens of incidents like this before. He did not confer with anyone in the FBI about his letter. W. C. Sullivan was angry with Papich for stirring things up. (Papich says if it is OK with the FBI it's OK with him for the Committee to get the letter, although he considers it personal to Hoover. The letter reviews FBI-CIA relations.)

Regarding the 1966 cutbacks, Papich thinks it started with the Long Committee hearings on the Internal Revenue Service. After the Kennedy Administration, and especially under Attorney General Clark, there were cutbacks in [redacted] (S)

W. C. Sullivan saw Angleton and CIA directors at USIB meetings. Papich would discuss FBI-CIA problems with Sullivan. Papich stressed the need for [redacted] (S)

Regarding the CIA and local police, the only thing Papich recalls is discussion of the CIA's relationship with New York City police. The purpose was not operations, but protection of CIA New York facilities. He was also aware of relationships between Washington, D. C., and suburban police for protection of CIA facilities and personnel. He knew that some CIA employees joined questionable groups and that the CIA was concerned about its personnel associating with radicals and protesters. The CIA Office of Security informed the FBI in 1967-1970 that it had developed from two to six sources to assess involvement of CIA personnel in protest groups. The information provided to the FBI from these sources about such groups was "crap". Papich was not involved in any meetings with CIA sources. He is not aware of any CIA activity regarding Women's Strike for Peace, nor was he aware of any CIA intelligence operations for the purpose of protecting CIA from violent demonstrations. CIA should have relied on FBI.

Bill Creager was succeeded as liaison with Office of Security by Fred Cassidy. They provided memoranda to the FBI Intelligence Division on all transactions with CIA. Creager kept Papich advised, especially of the potential for flaps and for successful operations. Papich believes Office of Security was restricted both in number of personnel and by CIA rules. It could claim a need to protect its own facilities and personnel but it didn't have significant capability. If it did, it would have been detected by the FBI.

Regarding the Dominican Republic in 1965, Papich recalls the fear of another Cuba by the President and the National Security Council. Johnson may have asked the FBI for help. An FBI agent from the office in San Juan, Puerto Rico, and possibly from Mexico City, were sent to the Dominican Republic. This was done with CIA approval and the joint effort was successful. There were no flaps. The FBI agent had sources all over Central America going back to World War II. Other FBI activities in the Caribbean grew out of the FBI's role in Havana before Castro, Jamaica, Miami, and San Juan. In all these areas the FBI's capability was based on personal relationships going back to World War II. In the late 1960's, the FBI went into El Salvador and Papich thought this was a waste of FBI manpower.

Regarding Cubans in Miami, there were many flaps with CIA. For example, CIA would attempt to recruit an exile for an operation in Cuba, the exile would ask the FBI about it, and Hoover would get mad. The FBI would not be informed about CIA cover companies screening exiles. The FBI investigated one cover company until it discovered the CIA cover. CIA tried to recruit FBI sources without checking out FBI. Papich is sure CIA "must have" used agents to cover local Miami Cubans. But FBI had excellent coverage and would protest when CIA took an interest in somebody FBI was investigating. There would be general protests to CIA to stay out of counterintelligence. Some problems were resolved locally with the FBI agent in charge. There was minimum FBI contact with CIA operations. Some names involved here are Freddy Frohbose, deceased; Bill Harvey; and a Fitzgerald. (S)

Regarding CIA counterintelligence against Cubans in New York, Papich said the policy was no counterintelligence by CIA. He has no recollection of CIA implication in anti-Castro Cuban illegal activities, but Papich admits he would have learned only if there was a flap.

Regarding CIA Domestic Operations Division, Papich formulated the 1966 agreement to ease FBI relationships. The problem, as noted earlier, was CIA desire to interview foreign officials in the U. S. or at the U. N. Hoover finally, reluctantly, agreed to the 1966 understanding. Papich warned CIA that if there were continuing flaps, Hoover would withdraw his agreement and "it would be my butt". There were flaps from 1966 to 1970 where Domestic Operations Division attempted to recruit and failed to advise FBI. If CIA was interested in a Soviet bloc intelligence service recruitment, FBI said no. If either Domestic Operations Division or the counterintelligence staff was interested in any Soviet in the U. S., they touched base with FBI. But they felt that if FBI had allowed them to recruit they could have succeeded. (S)

Regarding postal intercept, CIA came up with the proposition, said they had entree, and desired it for positive intelligence. CIA did all the work. The focus was air mail to and from Russia. (S) CIA gave FBI the products where FBI had "stops" on persons of interest and also where other information might be of interest to FBI. It provided some leads to intelligence agents. Papich recalls a brief mail intercept in the early 1950's on the West Coast regarding China. (S) It was stopped after a new postmaster arrived. Papich stated that the New York operation was of greater benefit to the CIA for positive intelligence regarding the Soviet Union. (S)

Regarding CIA Domestic Contact Service, FBI would get positive intelligence reports, for example, on an alien coming to the United States. The FBI was interested in his training in Russia as a possible source regarding Soviet intelligence activities. The CIA Domestic Contact Service would provide reports to FBI headquarters or the field on antiwar, Black Power, and protest groups. They got the information from faculty and students regarding future riots.

The Domestic Contact Service programs and priorities were set by the intelligence community, for example, gather whatever they can about missiles. The FBI would not task DCS. If DCS went into operations, FBI itself was upset. But DCS had good officers who would note potential for counterintelligence use. There was no increase in DCS traffic regarding dissidents in 1967 to 1969.

The creation of DCS in 1947 worried Hoover, who feared an internal security role. It was set up by NSCID. Until the 1960's, there was no contact between FBI and the DCS at the field level. The procedure developed that if DCS wanted to interview an alien, a form was submitted by FBI. CIA then got FBI data on the alien and FBI had notice so it could protect any operation.

Regarding possible spies in foreign intelligence agencies, if the FBI discovers any it evaluates the potential for a double agent or the possibility of recruitment. FBI usually goes to the agency and tells them the situation to prevent access to sensitive information. Also, the agency can give FBI assistance. The CIA Office of Security is "paranoid" on this subject. It is very concerned if there is a report on a CIA employee associating with bloc nationals. Before telling the FBI, it would do as much as it could on its own so there would be something to discuss. In one case the CIA was absolutely convinced an employee was a spy, predicated on its analysts' conclusions from a photograph. FBI refused to move on the basis of this alone. There were other cases where FBI and CIA had different evaluations of evidence. It depended on what CIA gave FBI. CIA was "jumpier" than FBI.

If CIA did any electronic surveillance of its own employees, it never checked with FBI. The same was true for physical surveillance of its own employees. If the FBI had known, it would have raised hell, but it never came to FBI attention and there was no policy discussion of the subject. If the CIA wanted to do something with its own assets with Attorney General or White House approval, it would not check with FBI. But it would coordinate with FBI if it saw a risk that FBI would discover.

Papich recalls no CIA surveillance of newsmen. Papich adds his view that every newsman assigned to Moscow is useful to the KGB. A newman who may have been recruited by KGB in Moscow may become a target in the U. S.

Papich did not recall any problem of CIA activity "tainting" a criminal case. CIA would make sources available for criminal prosecutions.

SECRET

Regarding CIA Far East Division, Papich recalls proposals for developing cover in the U. S. for going overseas. Ober advised Papich of the development of sources in the U. S. to cover overseas targets. Papich would write a memo on the situation and provide any relevant FBI information. He also discussed with Ober giving FBI assets to CIA if they travel overseas. Papich stresses that FBI sources are sent overseas. He encouraged working through CIA but never got very far. Papich gives the example of an FBI source who went to Italy and reported back through CIA.

Ober asked FBI to use its sources to gather information on policy guidance, funding, and training of U. S. dissidents overseas. There was a large volume of communication covering names like Carmichael and leaders in domestic groups.

FBI told CIA that if there was ever an investigation regarding a possible U. S. crime, CIA must recognize the evidentiary rules. If there were prosecutions (very few), it was never necessary to disclose CIA data. CIA sources were not in a position to testify. Papich does not recall asking CIA if information sent to FBI from CIA might have originated with electronic surveillance overseas.

If Ober gave FBI information regarding domestic matters, FBI would ask for everything CIA knew about the sources. CIA memos would be very brief. Papich would insist on identification of the sources, since the FBI might want to use it. FBI did get access to sources, sometimes working through a CIA intermediary if source would not talk to FBI.

Papich recalls discussing creation of "notional" groups targeted at [redacted] The program was not implemented before he left in 1970. It could have been explored in the FBI Intelligence Division but they would have come to Papich if CIA was needed. Papich discussed with Far East Division in CIA. (S) 1B (FBI)

Regarding the several million dollar fund transfer to FBI, Papich recalls this was an effort of the entire intelligence community, including the White House, to acquire [redacted] The money was for [redacted] The FBI would run the operation to provide [redacted] Papich was not directly involved, but he heard of it. (S)

Papich recalls discussion with [redacted] but he recalls no instance where TSD provided documents to FBI and he has no knowledge of any COINTELPRO-type use of CIA alias documentation or other document forging. If this had been done, it would have had to go through Papich. (S)

1B (FBI)

Papich knew nothing about Vesco.

On Ober memos to FBI, Papich recalls a code designation [redacted] The purpose was so that when information came back to CIA from FBI it could be sent directly to Ober. The counter-intelligence staff had an office to log communications. The determination as to what FBI information would go to Ober was first based on Ober's request for specifics and second based on FBI criteria which considered whether there would be any possible CIA results. FBI would alert Ober regarding an individual and ask for any information generally about his overseas activity. (S)

1B (FBI)

Papich does not recall any CIA breaking and entering operations in the 1960's.

Regarding CIA security research staff, Papich recalled that it concentrated on developing counter-intelligence equipment. It also was "an Angleton-type" operation, doing research on penetration of the CIA. It also analyzed and evaluated the exposure to the agency of OSS personnel who might have been Communists or have had World War II Communist contacts. For example, in Germany until the mid-50's, CIA was vulnerable to recruitment by Communist intelligence. CIA brought in brilliant minds who might still have strong identification with their home countries in eastern and middle Europe.

Finally, Papich and Creager felt that "the guts of liaison" was with DDP on counterintelligence, not on their internal security problems. With Office of Security there was a small number of investigations overlapping FBI.

Mr. Phillips. I did not.

Mr. Schwarz. Did you know Jack Ruby?

Mr. Phillips. No, I did not.

Mr. Schwarz. Do youknow him under the name of Rubenstein?

Mr. Phillips. I did not.

Mr. Schwarz. What did you do between your work in Cuba and the Chile matter which you were going to spend most of your time on?

Mr. Phillips. After the Bay of Pigs business I went to Mexico in late in 1961, and remained in Mexico until the very early part of 1965, when I was assigned to the Dominican Republic as Chief of Station.

Mr. Schwarz. And then --

Mr. Phillips. I stayed in the Dominican Republic until the summer of 1967.

And after that I returned to Washington and became the Chief of Cuban Operations through 1969.

In 1970 I went to Rio de Janiero as Station Chief. And in 1971, I suffered the traumatic shock of being moved to Brasilia from Rio de Janiero.

In 1972 I went to Venezuela as the Chief of Station. And in the summer of 1973 I was asked to return as Chief of the then Western Hemisphere Division.

Mr. Schwarz. And is that the position you held until or the other which would enable you to form a judgment as to his attitude toward either the subject of assassination or the question as to what kind of an explicit order would be necessary in order to justify Agency actions to actually assassinate some one.

Mr. Phillips. No, because I never heard Mr. Helms even get that close to the edge of such talk about such and such an option or possibility, I never heard him talk that way.

Mr. Schwarz. Did you ever hear anybody in the Agency talk that way?

Mr. Phillips. Under traumatic conditions I have heard human beings maybe with a few drinks or something like that saying, my God, we would be better off if so and so were bumped off or something.

But I have never heard two officers sit down and seriously talk about such an option. And if anyone has ever said that, it is the same way some people might get out of line and say almost anything.

Mr. Schwarz. Did you ever hear, in connection with the Chile operation, that certain Chilean officers, specifically a Major Marshall, [redacted] that they intended to assassinate Allende?

Mr. Phillips. It was five years ago. But as I recall, Major Marshall said a number of things. He was what I think of as a wild man. I seem to recall something about, yes, a

Mr. Schwarz. And you offered through Colonel Wimert, whom we will come to in a moment, $50,000 if they could accomplish it, didn't you?

Mr. Phillips. I think that was the correct sum, yes.

mr. Schwarz. And you gave them prior to their attempt on the 19th of October some tear gas and some gas masks to help accomplish the kidnapping?

Mr. Phillips. That is true.

Mr. Schwarz. And subsequently you provided to the Valenzuela group some machine guns, didn't you?

Mr. Phillips. That is ture.

Mr. Schwarz. And those were going to be used in a kidnapping effort by the Valenzuela group, and you knew that, didn't you?

Mr. Phillips. I recall that they were going to be used by the group, and that kidnapping was a part of their plans. I can't recall that they said they needed them specifically for the kidnapping. I do recall that the reason was -- the automatic reaction from Latin America is, why do people need arms when they have got arms everywhere all over Latin America.

And they said something about, their own arms could be identified, and they needed some that couldn't be identified. I don't recall if it was specifically mentioned that it was just for that. It was certainly understood that they might

Consequently, I personally made this proposal, that we establish what I called a false flag base of people that would go from outside, and should there be any sort of flap, the chances of linking it to the U.S. Government would be much less, because they would appear to be from another nationality.

Mr. Schwarz. I would like to read to you a cable -- is this cable of 27 September in the Senator's book? I know that he asked for it after I came over.

Mr. Treverton. It is not.

Mr. Schwarz. I am going to read from a cable which unfortunately is not in your book, but the key part is relatively simple.

This is a cable, Mr. Phillips, dated September 27, 1970, and it is signed by yourself and Mr. Broe. And it is sent to the Station in Chile, and it contains the following about the purposes of setting up the false flag office --

Mr. Phillips. We call it a base.

Mr. Schwarz. False flag bases: "Each member of base will enter and leave Chile with falst documents and operate as a representative of his country rather than as anAmerican".

That is right, isn't it?

Mr. Phillips. That is true.

Mr. Schwarz. Continue:

"Having at least one key Brazilian and one key Argentinian would be vital, and we have candidates."

And you did that.

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And then it goes on as follows: "These officers will perform the delicate shows with great flap potential which cannot be done by Station personnel or any Chilean."

That is right, isn't it?

Mr. Phillips. That is true.

Mr.Schwarz. And by flap potential you meant exposure?

Mr. Phillips. Contacting screwballs such as Marshall, that sort of thing.

Mr. Schwarz. But generally pursuing the Track II activities?

Mr. Phillips. That is right.

Mr. Schwarz. Continuing: "An example. We have candidates who can successfully pose as Brazilian intelligence officers." You did that, didn't you?

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And this goes on: "If he approached, funded and ran a Chilean General, any flap would be a Brazilian one".

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. So the scheme was that not only would the U.S. not be blamed, but other countries like Brazil would be blamed if something went wrong.

Mr. Phillips. Yes, this is particularly sensitive to me, because my daughter happens to be married to a Brazilian foreign service officer. However, that was it. It was a devious move. It was the final result -- the idea being that if such a flap did occur, someone would think it was someone other than the U.S. The idea of false flag operations is not a new one. The idea I had of going to someone and saying, why don't you be a spy for us, I don't work for the Soviets, is not true.

But this is sort of new, the fact that action agents should pose as others. And yes, it is devious, but that was the idea.

Senator Hart of Colorado. Mr. Phillips, what were their instructions if they were to be caught? Were they to go to their death swearing they were [redacted] or whatever?

Mr. Phillips. I don't think it was quite that dramatic, Senator. They came to Washington before they went down. And I briefed them, and I think what I said to them was, this is going to be a tough and sensitive one, and you don't have to go if you don't want to, because you culd get in real trouble.

And if you get in trouble, I am not sure we can help you.

So, they shrugged their shoulders and went.

Mr. Schwarz. Did you tell the [redacted] that you were sending someone down to pose as a [redacted], and his instructions were that if he were caught he was to continue to pose as a Brazilian and the Brazilians were approached?

Mr. Phillips. It never occurred to us in our wildest dreams to do that.

Mr. Schwarz. I suppose the relationships between continuing intelligence services were things that were very important to preserve, and that we had very close and delicate relationships with the other intelligence services.

Mr. Phillips. We do. And if there had been such a man the Brazilians would be quite unhappy with us. But I thought that was better than letting the world know that was a U.S. Citizen down there.

Mr. Schwarz. You go on in the cable of September 27 to say this:

"Headquarters believes this false flag was manned by officers who have repeatedly proved their ability to operate and recruit under false colors, will give Station great flexibility in handling delicate and fast-moving situations securely."

So, the use of false flag persons, at least judging from this cable, is something repeatedly done by the CIA?

Mr. Phillips. Yes, and by all intelligence services -- not all, but all major intelligence services. If you are living overseas and a man comes up to you and says, hey, I see you are a Marxist, and a man comes up and says, I am from Havana and we would like you to work with the Cuban intelligence service, he might not be from Havana, he might be from the Soviets, from us, or [redacted]

So, it is not an unusual practice.

Mr. Schwarz. Incidentally, you just let drop one thing in your testimony a moment ago. You said that in your 25-year involvement with intelligence matters you had been bothered by your activities on only two occasions, one of which was Chile.

And then you said what the other one was. What was that?

Mr. Phillips. I was in Washington attending the Chiefs of Station course, which is a training course for people who are going out on their first assignment as Chief of Station.

When President Johnson decided to send 22,000 Marines to the Dominican Republic, it occurred to me that in order to protect and evacuate American citizens, that that job might have been done with 400 Marines. I was scheduled to go there [redacted] And I just wasn't sure that I wanted to be associated with something like that. But I decided, well, I suppose President Johnson knows what he is doing, I will go -- I am going to go along. So, I did go along.

Senator Schweiker. One question on your differentiation between where you drew a personal commitment line on assassinations, but not overthrow. I have trouble quite understanding it, because as I understand Chile, the plot was to overthrow

Mr. Phillips. There is no question that I could understand why anyone concerned with world affairs, looking at Chile and what was happening there, would be concerned.

Salvadore Allende made his first statement saying that he was a Socialist and wanted to change the order some 32 years beforehe was elected.

Over the years he made it quite clear that he was an ardent socialist. Before this decision was made I believe that we had a visit from a man who had the code name of [redacted] he was a Cuban intelligence officer. The Cubans were moving in rapidly. The influence was great. I think that they saw a lot at stake, another Cuba in Latin America type of thing, the same thing perhaps that motivated President Johnson to send 22,000 rather than 400.

So, I can understand why they thought this was going, in the long strategic sense, in the long range against our interests. But that is an assumption.

It is true that Allende very definitely made it clear that he wanted to turn Chile into a Marxist state. The difference was that Allende refused to take Fidel Castro's advice and use violence. As I understand it, Fidel Castro went to Chile and said, if you want your revolution to last you are going to have to use violence.

I found it interesting to read in this morning's paper where someone from Portugal came back from Cuba and said, activities?

Mr. Phillips. No, sir. I was the Station Chief in Rio de Janiero in Brazil, and was called back in 1970 for six or seven weeks for what we are referring to as Track II.

Senator MOndale. Now, in that position you familiarized yourself with the Chilean government, Allende and so on, and tried to become as expert as you could in the political forces and so on?

Mr. Phillips. Yes. And in addition to that, Senator, one of the reasons I was called back was that I had lived for many years in Chile, so I knew something about it.

Senator Mondale. And it is your judgment as I think I just heard, that although Allende was a Marxist, and espoused Marxism, he also said he wanted to achieve this through the democratic process, and although there was some rough stuff on the press, and so on, essentially that was the course he was pursuing, is that correct?

Mr. Phillips. I don't recall that he said it, but he indeed acted that way.

Senator Mondale. But in fact the course he was pursuing was an attempt to achieve the Marxist philosophy with the population support under constitutional system?

Mr. Phillips. Yes, essentially that is true, sir.

Senator Mondale. Thank you.

Mr. Schwarz. I would like to read to you in connection assignment by the President and by the White House?

Mr. Phillips. Senator, it doesn't make any difference today. On the contrary, since Watergate the people say, why should we? Before Watergate it was another ball game. The President was the Commander in Chief in every sense of the word.

And you said, who am I, a GS-15 bureaucrat, to say that we shouldn't do this? But that has changed since Watergate.

Senator Hart of Colorado. One other question.

I call your attention in our briefing books to what is Tab C, a cable which has your name at the end of it dated 21 September 1970, page 3 of 7. Are you an author or co-author of that cable?

Mr. Phillips. I believe I was the authenticating officer, yes.

Senator Hart of Colorado. What does that mean?

Mr. Phillips. That meant that the signature on the right of those cables is someone that is the authenticating officer in a sense, here is a fellow that is supposed to know the situation.

Senator Hart of Colorado. But who wrote it, I guess is what I am after.

Mr. Phillips. I would guess that this cable was probably written by Mr. Poinzio, and perhaps myself, perhaps it was joint. But Mr. Poinzio wrote an awful lot of them. But by putting my signature on the authenticating part I said I was a part of it. And then, of course, the releasing officer is the one that accepts the responsibility.

Senator Hart of Colorado. Page 3 of 7 which has the paragraph identified as the paragraph F contains the following sentence or part of a sentence: You suggest sending us cables outlining objectives and course of events, et cetera, and he said, always conditioned by the fact that we have to keep our feet in the mud of practicality, and our eyes on the stars.

What does that mean in Agency talk?

Mr. Phillips. Senator, I want to assure you with real seriousness that I am not the author of that phrase.

Senator Hart of Colorado. It must have caught your eye, however.

Mr. Phillips. It did catch my eye. If this was indeed a joint venture, I can promise that that was [redacted] contribution, and if you ever meet him you will understand why. He was addicted to picturesque speech. And looking back, all I can say is that it probably went out at four o'clock in the morning, and we were very tired, and I just didn't want to argue about that phrase, and I let it go. I am not sure what it means even now.

SEnator Hart of Colorado. Neither am I. But it seems to describe a lot of what we have heard around here for the

Now, I read that as Helms' position being that the assassination of Schneider was something which presented the opportunity for the very thing that the U.S. wished to have done.

Do you agree with me?

Mr. Phillips. No, I can't agree with you on that. I am not sure about the suggestion from the language. But I will tell you the immediate reaction in our little task force when the word came that Schneider was dead, that is it, it is finishe Knowing Chileans, the moment that that violence occurred, Chileans, with the possible exception of a nut such as Marshall, immediately said,this is it, that is enough. There was still that tradition over the years. And I think that the moment we heard of it and we discussed it we said, that is it, there will be no more. In many countries in Latin America that would have been the signal for further action, weakness, and so forth. But in this case it was the end of the business.

Mr. Schwarz. I want to run through with you the activities which were being undertaken with the Valenzuela group and with the Viaux group. In the case of Viaux, was that one of the assignments that the false flag officers had?

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And in the case of Valenzuela, was that one of the assignments that Colonel Wimert had?

Mr. Phillips. [redacted] Yes, I believe it was [redacted] that was in touch with that group.

Mr. Schwarz. And the two teams worked in tandem, didn't they?

Mr. Phillips. Are you referring to Chilean teams?

Mr. Schwarz. No, the false flag team [redacted]

Mr. Phillips. Only in the sense that there might have been some central direction from the office or from headquarters. I don't believe that anyone of the false flaggers had the slightest idea that [redacted] was working with us. And I don't believe that [redacted] -- I don't know that [redacted] knew about them.

So, no, they didn't work in tandem, except in sense of direction from the Station.

Mr. Schwarz. Headquarters down there, and you in Washington, were working with both the Valenzuela groupand the Viaux group?

Mr. Phillips. Yes, sir.

Senator Hart of Colorado. Are you in a chain here, counsel?

Mr. Schwarz. I am in a chain, but it is easily interruptible.

Senator Hart of Colorado. Mr. Phillips, did we chronologically -- maybe the staff can answer that, I am just Viaux group was really acting in order to carry out step one of the Valenzuela group's plan?

Mr. Phillips. Yes, to address this point specifically. Obviously when the guns were passed [redacted] and the death occurred so soon after, immediately we thought they probably used those guns. It was then when we read the press reports that General Schneider died from handgun wounds. And that was the first time we thought we could really be sure in our own mind that it wasn't directly the Valenzuela group using those guns.

Mr. Schwarz. What about the gas masks that had been furnished earlier? WAsn't there evidence that there were gas masks in the care of the persons who attempted to abduct General Schneider?

Mr. PHillips. I don't recall. There may very well have been, but I am not real sure about that.

Mr. Schwarz. I am going to go to another area, which is the relationship [redacted]. If there are any questions on the relationship between the two groups.

Senator Hart of Colorado. Concerning the October 19 attempts, under Tab 4 on page 7 of the longer memorandum by Dianne LaVoy under October 18 there is reference to a cable A66 dated October 19. And concerning the connection of these various conspirators, it says: "Valenzuela meets with [redacted] and gives him a 15 point plan for coup to be carried out on October 19. [redacted] witting of the above plan, has promised to keep the Carabineros away from the Schneier houseto assure that the abduction will not be interferred with. General Viaux is knowledgeable of the above operation, but is not directly involved."

What do you think "not directly involved" refers to? Why not just not involved?

Mr. Phillips. I think that probably referred to what I was saying before, that in these situations it is not very unusual that there is not some talk that everybody has a cousin that works with some group type of thing.

And I believe that it must refer to that.

Mr. Schwarz. Taking the actual cable, is the actual cable in the Senator's books?

Mr. Inderfurther. No.

Mr. Schwarz. Let me read the full text of that paragraph from the cable. It is a cable apparently dated 19 October on the subject of General Viaux:

"General Viaux, knowledgeable of above operation, but not directly involved. He has been sent to Vina to stay with prominent physician. Will be seen in public places during 19 and 20 October to demonstrate fact that above operation is not his doing. Will be allowed to return to Santiago at end of week."

Now, I can't read that language any way other than meaning that the Valenzuela group and the Viaux group were in close cooperation, that was part of the abduction plan, it was agreed between the two that Viaux would appear -- would be out of town so that he would not appear to be involved. And you have to read that, do you not, as meaning that there was a close cooperation on this effort between the two groups.

Mr. Phillips. Yes, I think you do have to read it that way.

Miss Culbreth. Would you identify that paper more than just the statement?

Mr. Phillips. Cable sent to headquarters A66.

Mr. Schwarz. No. A66, eyes only to --

Mr. Inderfurth. DCOS, which was [redacted]

Mr. Treverton. It is Tab M, it is in the book.

Mr. Schwarz. I think we ought to mark that as an exhibit.

(The document referred to was marked Phillips Exhibit No. 2 for identification.)

As for the narrow part of your question, by all means it is a bad way to do business.

Senator Schweiker. Go ahead.

Mr. Schwarz. Picking up on Senator Schweiker's line of quesioning, would you show the witness Tab A, the document Tab A.

It is a memorandum for the record by Mr. Broe dated 17 September, and then that is crossed out and it says 16 September, "Subject, Genesis of Project".

Incidentally, what was the code name for this project? Was it FU Belt?

Mr. Phillips. Beltway or FU Belt, one of the two.

Mr. Schwarz. Does FU stnd for anything in particular?

Mr. Phillips. Chile. So it would be FU. The first two letters there indicate a geographical araa. So it would be a lot of different ones, but that would mean Chile. FU Belt means Chile. Belt means nothing.

Mr. Schwarz. Everybody keeps saying that so many of these things mean nothing. Who is responsible for these names?

Mr. Phillips. There is somebody who is supposed to have a big liest to make sure that they were not duplicated. And I think sometimes there is a pixie-like quality that comes out in those things.

Senator Schweiker. That is an understatement, to call it pixie-like.

Mr. Phillips. But many times the cryptonums mean absolutely nothing, they have no meaning at all.

Senator Schweiker. SRRIFLE, ROGUE ELEPHANT --

Mr. Phillips. I am sorry, sir.

Senator Schweiker. We have come across a few other good ones.

Mr. Schwarz. I don't know if you have ever seen that document, and it doesn't matter. But the end of paragraph 2 indicates that the instructions from the President concluded:

"The Agency is to carry out this mission without coordination with the Department of State or Defense".

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And that was your instruction?

Mr. Phillips. That is correct.

Mr. Schwarz. Now, in fact, of course, you did use in Chile a man called Colonel Wimert.

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And he was in the Defense Department?

Mr. Phillips. That is correct.

Mr. Schwarz. And he was assigned -- he was instructed to take his instructions only from the CIA inChile, is that right?

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And he was instructed indeed not to tell his superior in Chile, the man who was in charge of the defense attache system down there?

Mr. Phillips. That is true, sir.

Mr. Schwarz. Wimert was the man from the Army and then there was someone else in the Air Force, the Navy, and there was a boss?

Mr. Phillips. That is right.

Mr. Schwarz. And Wimert was told not to tell that boss?

Mr. Phillips. I believe that is true, yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Now, how did it happen that Colonel Wimert came to work for and under the direction of the CIA?

Mr. Phillips. I believe the explanation for that was the fact that Colonel Wimert had been around Latin America, spoke perfect Spanish, his hobby was riding horses, and he developed really marvelous relationships with the military of officers that he had contact with. And I think it was just that someone recognized the fact that if we had been given the task of getting a coup going using the military, why not take advantage of the one man in Chile that they liked the most, trusted the most, and saw the most? It was perfectly natural for him to spend his weekends with these people.

Mr. Schwarz. And so he was a natural and helpful asset. But how was it arranged that he would work for the CIA, and lay that question against the instruction from President Nixon that the Defense Department was not to know, how did you accomplish it?

Mr. Phillips. I don't know. I have had my memory refreshed by looking at some documents now, and I know that someone came and gave me the piece of paper in this book that has been signed by General Philpott which was a message to [redacted] saying, cooperate with the CIA. What the process was for getting that approval, or who went to see Philpott, I wasn't involved with that, I just don't recall.

Mr. Schwarz. Did you ever see Philpott ?

Mr. Phillips. I never did.

Mr. Schwarz. Did you ever see --

Mr. Phillips. I may have seen Philpott in some large meeting or something like that, but I don't recall any meeting with any of the generals. I was relatively too junior to have attended these meetings. This would have been Mr. Broe, Mr. Karamessines, and so forth. And I would have been left back in the shop, sort of, I think.

Mr. Schwarz. And did you ever see or talk to Bennett?

Mr. Phillips. Not to my recollection. I think not.

Mr. Schwarz. I asked you if you ever saw General Philpott, or did you ever talk to General Philpott?

Mr. Phillips. I don't recall such a talk. During this entire period, for instance, I never went outside of our building.I was there sort of in the shop. And other people would do that sort of thing.

Mr. Schwarz. Is that the form in which you sent the message which is contained in Exhibit 3 to Chile?

Mr. Phillips. It is.

Mr. Schwarz. Now, apparently Exhibit 4, which you drafted initially, said that it was from General Bennett, and then it was changed to say it was from General Philpott.

Did you make that change?

Mr. Phillips. That is my handwriting above that said Philpott, and someone else's handwriting below that said Bennett. I think the signature on the original document was from Philpott. But that is my change there.

Mr. Schwarz. And is the change on the second page -- the sentence reads:

"Do not allow Colonel Wimert to retain copy of this message", and then in handwriting it is asserted "Note that General Bennett is out of the country".

Mr. Phillips. Yes, that is my handwriting.

Mr. Schwarz. Having seen that, and these changes, what do you recall about the circumstances that led you to make those changes?

Mr. Phillips. It is possible that this message is one of the rare messages that sometimes occur, that you are handed something that is written out, and there is no secretary, and it is two o'clock in the morning or something like that. On some occasions you will take a very rough draft and ask the communicators to send that, and youwill then later write for the record, and have typed for the record the formal cable. I am not sure about that.

Mr. Schwarz. You think what you sent used General Bennett's name and not General Philpott's name?

Mr. Phillips. I don't recall. But I believe if that had been the case that not only would the change have been made, but there would have been some sort of note on the side or something. So, I believe that the original must have said Philpott. But I can't be absolutely positive.

Mr. Schwarz. But the original typed version on the first page used Bennett's name, right?

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Now, I am puzzled, because if you had previously obtained the document which is Exhibit 3, the "suggested message to be sent to Army attache from General Bennett", and which is in fact signed with a name that purports to be General Philpott's, if you had obtained that before drafting the typed message, I take it you would have used Philpott's name in the typed message and not Bennetts'.

Mr. PHillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. So that suggests that you typed the typed message before you obtained the document which is Exhibit 3 that has Mr. Philpott's signature?

Mr. Phillips. No, I would not have done that. I would wasn't aware of this.

Mr. Schwarz. After that initial occasion involving the use of Philpott's name in order to instruct [redacted] to work for the CIA, was anybody from the Defense Intelligence Agency further brought into the operation which we have been calling Track II?

Mr. PHillips. My answer to that until a few minutes ago would have been, I don't recall that. I have seen a document since then that indicates that someone else was talked to later. If I knew that I had forgotten it, or perhaps never knew it -- I must have known it if I saw the message.But until I saw this thing, to refresh my memory I would have said, I think that Philpott was the man.

Mr. Schwarz. Was the man, and was only contacted on that one occasion?

Mr. Phillips. As far as I know, that one occasion. But I didn't necessarily know what was outside of my little room with windows, and so there were other people doing other things.

Mr. Schwarz. Let's then look at the other documents.

Would you mark Tab G as Exhibit 5.

(The document referred to was marked Phillips Exhibit No. 5 for identification.)

Mr. Schwarz. And this is a cable releasing officer Willia Broe, authenticating officer David A Phillips, dated October 14, 1970, from CIA headquarters to Santiago, CIA. And it says:

"Please deliver the following message ('destroy immediately') to Colonel Wimert eyes only from Lieutenant General Bennett. "

Now, on what basis did you authenticate that message which purports to be to Colonel Wimert from Lieutenant General Bennett?

Mr. Phillips. Obviously -- not obviously, but because I presume in this case -- I am sure in this case once again there was a document that was handed to me and I was told, send this down. In order to make this point, I was in there, and it was sort of a direct operational thing, and when I authenticated them I did it because I knew what was going on. If Bill Broe, my boss, came in and said, here is a document that we want to send, or if Tom Karamessines said, I worked on the assumption that they were passing on to me the authority to authenticate, and I didn't necesarily turn to them and say, hey --

Mr Schwarz. Prove that --

Mr. Phillips. Prove that you have been talking with General Bennett -- I obviously didn't do that.

Mr. Schwarz. Then mark as Exhibit 6 an undated document headed "Destroy immediately" from LTG Bennett to Colonel Wilmert "Eyes only".

(The document referred to was Marked Phillips Exhibit No. 6 for identification.)

Mr. Schwarz. Now, that purports to be from LTG Bennett to Colonel Wimert, and has the text in it which you sent on to Colonel Wimert.

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. And what is your best recollection as to who handed you that document?

Mr. Phillips. I cannot say definitely who did that. There were many occasions when Bill Broe would walk into the office and say, here is something to send. There were others which would come in a manila envelope with a yellow forwarding slip on it. There are times,I am sure, when I would go into Bill Broe's office, and he would say, by the way, send this.

I simply cannot recall the circumstances in which someone handed me that and said, send it to Chile. And I was paying less attention to those things, because I was in effect the postman for people doing other things.

Mr. Schwarz. Do you have any recollection at all about this document?

Mr. Phillips. No, I am afraid I don't.

Mr. Schwarz. What is your reading of the signature on that document?

Mr. PHillips. Well, it certainly looks like the signature which was on the other document which was said to be Philpott's. But I am not an authority on these things.

military attache. And those instructions went down. Apparently it would appear that theremight be something here where they are going to bring in more people, as is known to several persons, it says down here.

And itmay have been because there was an attempt there not to say to these new people, by the way, we want to talk to you about something we are doing that we have kind of already done. That is theonly thing I can come up with. I can't give you a better explanation than that.

Mr. Schwarz. This you characterize also as a puzzling and strange document?

Mr. Phillips. Yes. And I am sorry that I can't be more helpful on this. But I was treating these -- these things were coming through my mail shoot, and I was putting headings on them. Even though I signed them and so forth, I wasn't paying the attention to things that I did to my own job.

Mr. Schwarz. That is an explanation that deals with some of the earlier documents. But here in the first place you were both the releasing officer and the authenticating officer.

And second, this is not simply taking some other message and putting a heading on it, is it? This is a substantive document purporting to explain a problem to your CIA Station Chief in Santiago, right, do you agree with that?

Mr. Phillips. I do. And I agree that it is puzzling, and there are some holes here. Perhaps I can be helpful when you have further testimony on this to help me job my memory. I can't remember the rationale for this.

Mr. Schwarz. Let's take some of the statements that are in the telegram and deal with them specifically.

Paragraph 2: "There seems little doubt this will confuse Colonel Wimert".

It has confused all of us here, so I suppose it would have confused him.

"Background for his information: both Generals Bennett and Philpott have been briefed by Broe".

Who told you that?

Mr. PHillips. I don't know for sure, but I presume this must have been Bill Broe.

Mr. Schwarz. Do you have any recollection of his telling you that?

Mr. Phillips. I do not. But I don't think that I -- I don't see myself releasing that cable without being sure that Broe knew what was going out in that cable. In other words, that is hthe kind of cable that I wouldn't have released just because someone else came in and said that sort of thing. This cable I think must have originated either with a discussion with Broe that said, look, send the following word, write up something like this, or perhaps some notes, and say, do a cable from it, or just as possible -- and I can't read it here -- is the fact that it was actually drafted by someone else that was working in my shop, Mr. Pionzio, or someone else, that went in and talked to Broe. Maybe I was doing something else, and they came to me with a typed thing and said, here, I cleared this with Broe, and so he signed both things. So I really can't remember.

Mr. Schwarz. Under either assumption, either that Broe spoke to you directly or that someone on your staff spoke to Broe, you had Broe around at the time this cable goes out?

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Then why wouldn't he sign it?

Mr. Phillips. Here is one thing. At the time the cable went out -- I can't remember well enough if it was late at night.

Mr. Schwarz. Does the time up above indicate 11:59?

Mr. Phillips. Where do you see that?

Mr. Schwarz. In the upper lefthand corner. It has a date 14 October 17, and right above that is 11:59 --

Mr. Phillips. Right.

Mr. Schwarz. -- in the customary place for the time.

Mr. Phillips. I don't see that on this copy.

The point I am trying to make is, if Mr. Broe were leaving the office and we had gone through this exchange, and he had done it with someone else in my office, he might well and saying, look, we want you to go along with this and use Colonel Wimert down there, he is really important to us, and that sort of thing, and was perhaps slightly embarrassed by the fact that they had been doing that before. That is the only explanation I can give.

Mr. Schwarz. So you would assume that these new interested parties and the several persons referred to in the two sentences are persons who were in higher authority than Bennett and Philpott?

Mr. Phillips. I assume that, but do not know. I just -- this thing was being so closely held, it just doesn't seem logical to me that they would start going outside and down, I thought that they would go outside and up. But I say, I only assume that.

Mr.Schwarz. You have characterized Exhibit 7 as itself being sort of puzzling. And the situation it deals with, as you now describe it, is one that is kind of ticklish, isn't it?

Mr. Phillips. I understand.

Mr. Schwarz. The CIA had been using Wimert, and knew some people in higher authority than General Bennett, which would mean very senior in the Defense Department, right?

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Or outside the Defense Department, but very senior persons. They apparently are expressing an interest, and according to this telegram, or your reconstruction of it, General Bennett and General Philpott feel that they are embarrassed to refute the fact that they had already been doing the work for the CIA [redacted]

Now, all those things were not ordinary garden variety daily events, were they?

Mr. Phillips. They were not.

Mr. Schwarz. You don't remember this at all?

Mr. Phillips. No, and I didn't want to imply that it was necessarily because General Philpott would have been embarrassed, it could have been within CIA as well.

But this rather unusual step was made because of the talents of the military men, to bring him into a program that you weren't even talking with the State Department about. And so that indeed was unusual to a great degree. And I am really very sorry to appear to be so vague about these things that I obviously had something to do with.

But my explanation is that I was doing a certain job, and that other people were outside, and Mr. Karamessines would be talking with Mr. Helms about something, and this, that and the other, and I was on the day-by-day operation side, and when someone would come in and say, we want something to go down to Wimert, and it has something to do with General Philpott, I didn't pay the kind of attention I would to it if it had been one of our operations.

Mr. Schwarz. Go back up to the beginning at paragraph 2 there were it says, "There is no doubt that this will confuse Colonel Wimert. Background for his information".

Now, there are two ways in which those words "for his information" can be read. One is that it is the genuine background.

The other is that it is a story to be given Wimert for his information, which is the fact, if you know, and which way doyou read it if you do not know what the facts are?

Mr. Phillips. I assume that it is the true story, because nowhere during this period did I encounter anything, nor do I remember anything that I thought was devious to the extent of falsehood in putting something down like that.

So, I assume that it is really for his background of what happened.

Mr. Schwarz. And you don't remember from where you got the information which you provided in this cable?

Mr. Phillips. I do not. Perhaps I can be more helpful after you talk to others. But I simply do not.

Mr. Schwarz. The last paragraphs make the notation "that we must advise GEneral Bennett time when Wimert shown" the telegram which is Exhibit 3.

Did you advise General Bennett?

Mr. Phillips. I did not. If it was done -- and I presume it was -- I was not involved, and wouldn't have been involved. And they would not have sent me over to see General

Bennett, who was the head of DIA at the time. So, I don't know that it was.

Mr. Schwarz. Which is the tab at which the reply from Wimert is located? Is it K?

Mr. Treverton. K, yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Would you mark as the next exhibit, Exhibit 8, another cable to headquarters, "Eyes only for Lieutenant General Bennett from Colonel Wimert".

(The document referred to was marked Phillips Exhibit No. 8 for identification.)

Mr. Schwarz. Can you tell from the face of it, are we correct that this is a document that was sent from the CIA station in Santiago to CIA headquarters purporting to come from [redacted] and purporting to be directed to Lieutenant General Bennett?

Mr. Phillips. That is true.

Mr. Schwarz. In the ordinary course to whom would such a cable go? And the second question, who would have the responsibility of passing information on to General Bennett?

Mr. Phillips. In the ordinary course of events this cable would have come to me where I was working in the sense of an info copy and this, that and the other.

The action on this cable would have certainly have gone at least to Mr.Broe, and possibly higher, because it says, this is his message to the head of another government service. And so it would have gone to that level.

Mr. Schwarz. And in the ordinary course it would have come to you first, and then it would have been passed on to either Mr. Broe or someone higher to take action?

Mr. Phillips. For action -- not always. Sometimes a cable will come in and there will be more than one copy. And right away the action copy will go to the other fellow, and then you get the information copy, and so forth.

Mr. Schwarz. Can you tell from the face of this cable whether there would have been more than one copy?

Mr. Phillips. There is no indicator to say who it went to.

Mr. Schwarz. Does the"eyes only"have any significance to you in the third line?

Mr. Phillips. Only in the sense that what Colonel Wimert was saying was, this may go over to the Defense Department, but not through regular channels, and not to anyone else other than General Bennett.

Mr. Schwarz. Did it go to General Bennett?

Mr. Phillips. I do not know.

Mr. Schwarz. And did you pass it to someone?

Mr. Phillips. If it did not go it would have been highly unusual for a message to come in from overseas saying, give this to the head of another Agency, and for it not to be delivered it would have been extremely unusual.

Mr. Schwarz. What would be the normal form of its delivery? Would there be a cover note put on it?

Mr. Phillips. It would have probably been folded into an envelope and delivered by hand. Because if it is really an "eyes only" message of such import, if it goes through a communications channel, it means that they are going to be operators of machinery to see it, and so forth. If an American Ambassador overseas wants to get a very sensitive message up he has the option of sending it to us and saying, will you please hand carry this over to the Secretary of State?

No DoD objection to public disclosure pursuant to P.L. 102-526, except for 1/12/94

Mr. Schwarz. This message states:

"Please deliver the following message, ('destroy immediately') to Colonel Wimert eyes only from Lieutenant General Bennett." And the message was: "For your information suspension temporarily imposed on MAP and FMS has been rescinded".

What are MAP and FMS.

Mr. Phillips. Military Assistance of some kind or another, Military Arms Procurement, or something like that.

Mr. Schwarz. Military Assistance Program?

Mr. Phillips. That is probably it.

Mr. Schwarz. And what is FMS?

Mr. Inderfurther. Foreign Military Sales.

Mr. Schwarz. Continuing: "This action does not, repeat not, imply change in our estimated situation. On the contrary, it is intended to place us in a posture in which we can formally cut off assistance if Allende elected and situation develops as we anticipate. Request up date of situation".

Now, Bennett's job at that time was what?

Mr. Phillips. I believe he was the Chief of DIA.

Mr. Schwarz. Defense Intelligence Agency?

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Is the Defense Intelligence Agency responsible for decisions to military assistance programs?

Mr. Phillips. My opinion is that they are not.

Mr. Schwarz. And they don't really have anything to do with that, do they?

Mr. Phillips. I would gather from this message that it is simply an explanation from -- it says General Bennett to Wimert, to explain something. As a part of Track I, and the whole business, all of these different options were being looked at and people were saying, let's don't help them with military things because it looks like Allende is going to get in. And the decision was made, well, let's go ahead and do it. And this was apparently sort of a request for Colonel Wimert to give him some rationale behind it when he was down there running away trying to foment the coup, saying, why is the U.S. Government still helping this government?

I am speculating. But this was another one of those messages quote unquote which went in our channels.

Mr. Schwarz. Who gave you this message?

Mr. Phillips. I do not remember.

Mr. Schwarz. You have no recollection whatsoever?

Mr. Phillips. Sir, it is five years ago, and there are a lot of messages, and as I said, these were the ones that I was the least interested in in the sense of being involved, and so forth, and I just can't remember who handed it to me or how it arrived.

Mr. Schwarz. Would you expect that there should be another document which contains the purported message from

Mr. Fenn. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Talking about telephones, incidentally, was there a secure telephone between Washington and Santiago which was used for messages, or did you use the cable always?

Mr. Phillips. We never used the telephone, unless it is a personal message like your aunt died and you have to get on the next plane for the funeral. Otherwise you use those absolutely marvelous communications facilities that get it down there --a flash cable will get there in 20 minutes.

In the recess I have been thinking about this, and I realize that I have not been very helpful in what obviously is a contradictory situation here. As I read it, either General Bennett does not recall this, or else there was some sort of endeavor within CIA headquarters to use his name. Is that the approach we are making to this?

Mr. Schwarz. I don't think we are trying any approach. He has denied any knowledge of this.

Senator Schweiker. We are just confused.

Mr. Phillips. Maybe I am confused, too.

Senator Schweiker. Can you enlighten us at all?

Mr. PHillips. If it were someone in CIA headquarters saying, we are going to use Bennett's name without his knowledge because it has a lot of clout, I don't understand why. Because the messages went from Philpott [redacted] And [redacted] said, I am with you 100 percent, and from that moment began cooperating with the Chief of Station. I don't recall any instance where there was any indication of hesitancy on his part about doing what he was doing.

And I certainly can't comment about General Bennett's side, not having been involved with him.

From the CIA side I suppose it is conceivable that someone is using that business that I referred to in dispatches, General Bennett says, when they are really talking about what a subordinate of General Bennett says, and they figure he is acting for them, or something like that. I guess that is conceivable.

But I would find it very unusual to see some sort of little plot hatched here, because there was no need to.

Mr. Schwarz. What you are saying is that you can't see a motive?

Mr. Phillips. Precisely.

I can't see the motive for fooling [redacted], because [redacted] had already started working when he received the instructions from the number two man in his Agency, which is indeed pretty high up.

So, I am afraid the reasons that I am not being helpful is that I, too, am confused.

Mr. Schwarz. I just received a note indicating that Mr. Bolten of the Agency has told us that both of the October 14 cables were authored by you. I don't know if that adds

Senator Schweiker. Let me ask counsel this.

Can we establish that Philpott did communicate --

Mr. Schwarz. Philpott is going to testify on Tuesday. We have talked to him.He accepts at least one message. There are two which purport to be signed by him, and he is not sure if he accepted two.

Senator Schweiker. So, he has accepted one message?

Mr. Schwarz. He accepted one message, yes.

Mr. Phillips. You wanted to ask about a meeting.

Mr. Schwarz. It was a final meeting you had with Helms?

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

The death of General Schneider had occurred. And while, as we said previously, things had fallen into place according to "plan", an egregious plan, it was absolutely my conviction that those orders that I had been predicting, which were very, very slim, were now completely unacceptable, one reason being that the inauguration was going to be in 48 hours -- not the inauguration, but the confirmation, and so forth.

And so as I recall, there was a meeting of quite a few of us, probably myself and Mr. Pionzio and Mr. Broe and Mr. Karamessines, and maybe Mr. Flannery, -- no, I guess not, but I do remember thatmeeting going up there and saying, if there ever was a chance, it is now finished, and somebody has got to say that it is finished. And so that is what I meant by that meeting.

what happens, it is all right with me. There was an inlet inside of Domingo which was dubbed, the Pasino, the swimming pool, and that is where Trujillo threw his friends and enemies to the sharks. And he used to hang people on meat hooks in refrigerated vaults. And it sometimes took them several days to die.

Miss Culbreth. You had served [redacted] in the Dominican Republic prior to the time that you served in this position on the Track II party?

Mr. Phillips. I have, after the assassination of Trujillo. But as a student of Latin America, I was very much aware of this. So, there is another aspect of involvement. U.S. policy has been to retreat from Trujillo. We cut off our arms aid, we brought our Ambassador out of there. So, while those plans were going on we weren't "dealing with a friendly nation", relations were very bad.

Miss Culbreth. Let me ask you this. After General Schneider's death was his death characterized by you or by your colleagues in the CIA as having been an assassination?

Mr. Phillips. It certainly was not. And I do not do that now.

Miss Culbreth. You would not this day characterize his death as having been an assassination?

Mr. Phillips. No. I think it was an accident that occurred because he turned out to be such a brave man that when he looked up and he saw a bunch of people standing around his car he drew his gun.

Miss Culbreth. Thank you.

I would like to direct your attention to this cable that you were questioned about. It is the one that is dated September27, 1970. And Mr. Schwarz read from that cable in talking with you earlier. This was the cable which said "A false flag base of staff would be established in Santiago by 10 October".

And you were questioned about this part: "These officers will perform the delicate chores with great flap potential which cannot be done by station personnel or any Chilean. An example: We have a [redacted] who can pose as [redacted] intelligence officer. If he approached, funded and ran a Chilean general, any flap would be a [redacted]".

In the second paragraph which was not read earlier, I would like to read this and then put a question to you:

"Headquarters believes this false flag base, manned by officers who have repeatedly proved their ability to operate and recruit under false colors, will give station great flexibility in handling delicate and fast-moving situations securely".

To me this second paragraph indicates that these false flag officers were people that had experience in this very kind of intelligence operations, is that correct?

Mr. Phillips. Every one of them was known to me personally and had worked for me.

Miss Culbreth. And had been in this kind of capacity as a false flag officer?

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Miss Culbreth. So, this was not some unique and unusual, devious approach or mechanism that was being employed in this instance?

Mr. Phillips. The purpose of that explanation, especially the second paragraph that you read, was -- the immediate reaction, as I recall, from the station when they first heard that we were given their assignment, was, come on, that flap potential is great, it is not going to work, what are you talking about, this, that and the other.

As a matter of fact, as I recall, [redacted] was terribly upset, because he is a sort of an old pro, and he wanted to get into position, in other words, to plan for the future, and all of a sudden this new thing came in. The purpose of that cable was to explain to the station that we had been given this job to do and that we at headquarters saw that as the safest way for them to accomplish the job that they had been given with the least possibility of embarrassing the American Ambassador, and that sort of thing.

Senator Schweiker. You said earlier, Mr. Phillips, I think in contact, but we didn't see it as such a sure thing; even though this says, probably by General Viaux and so forth.

Miss Culbreth. Was there any question in your mind as principal operating officer here in the states that there was a delineation or a demarcation of function between the Viaux group and the Valenzuela group, or did you regard them as one big group down there accomplishing this, or did you really regard them as separate groups?

Mr. Phillips. I very definitely regarded them as two separate groups, always with the caveat that in Latin America some one always has a cousin who talks to someone else. But I very definitely regarded them as two separate groups, and when General Viaux was called off earlier in October, I thought that General Viaux was out of the thing, and I thought that without support that he wasn't going to try anything.

And then we had the other group which seemed to be more serious people, and with more capabilities. And I very definitely regarded them as two separate groups.

Miss Culbreth. Let me ask just a few questions that might sort of help us a little bit in our housekeeping operations when we get to the point of trying to tie everything up on these.

With regard to the information that was given to you, the specific instructions on these cables that were sent to the Chief of Station and were directed to [redacted], who can Senator Hart of Michigan. Anyone else?

Mr. Johnston. Mr. Phillips, just one last question. How large was the room you were operating out of? You described it as a small windowless room.

Mr. Phillips. About from here to your wall back there -- no, not that big.

Mr. Johnston. This was the entire control area for the Task Force?

Mr. Phillips. That is right.

Mr. Johnston. How many people were on the Task Force besides you?

Mr. Phillips. Of course we had two shifts of secretaries, there was someone there all night, and that sort of thing. There were two or three secretaries, myself, Mr. [redacted] six, eight, something like that.

Mr. Johnston. And that included the secretaries?

Mr. Phillips. Yes.

Mr. Johnston. How many action officers were in the room?

Mr. Phillips. It was pretty much [redacted] and myself, as the real action officers. And then there were two junior officers that were assisting at the time. I think I have given Mr. O'Flaherty their names previously. So that was four. And there was someone from the CIA shop, the Counterintelligence ship, whose name I can't remember today. So that is five officers that I recall. And I think that there was a 6th that

ALLEGED CUBAN PLAN TO ASSASSINATE PRESIDENT OF PANAMA

At 4:55 PM, March 17, 1964, Orlando Piedra, formerly connected with Federal Police in Cuba and presently residing New Orleans, Louisiana, advised that about one week ago he received information from a source in Cuba whom he considers reliable that Castro is not satisfied with the way things are going in Panama and for that reason plans to have the President of Panama assassinated to create additional uprisings in that country. Piedra advised that he furnished the above information by letter to Colonel Bolivar Vallarino, Chief of the National Guard of Panama whom he has known for years. Piedra declines to identify the source and has no additional information to report.

This document contains neither recommendations nor conclusions of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It is the property of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and is loaned to your agency; it and its contents are not to be distributed outside your agency.

This will confirm information orally furnished Mr. J. J. Kelly, State Department, and [redacted] Central Intelligence Agency on March 17, 1964, by A. J. Decker of this Bureau. This will also confirm data furnished orally to Colonel Graham E. Schmid, Department of the Army; Major William Boyd, Department of the Air Force; and Mr. Don Gorhan, Department of the Navy, on March 19, 1964, by G. A. Day of this Bureau.

daily movements while in Mexico City nor could they confirm the date of his departure or his mode of travel. The original assumption that he had returned by bus could not be proven. Several possibilities were discussed whereby the Commission could fill in the gaps of its investigation of the Mexican phase. The suggestion was made that the most effective way of resolving the questions they had would be to have a member of the Commission visit Mexico City and discuss the issues on the spot with those American and Mexican officials directly concerned. Mr. Helms noted that it would be possible for a member of the Commission to visit our Chief of Station who would then be able to work out with the Warren Commission staff member the best way to handle interviews with Mexican police officials, particularly if it is desired that these interviews be informal in nature. Our Chief of Station would also be able to put the Warren Commission staff member in contact with the FBI officials and Immigration and Naturalization Service officers stationed in Mexico City. Mr. Helms cautioned that our Chief of Station would be under State Department cover and that it would be proper to advise the Department of the planned visit and upon arrival to meet briefly with the Ambassador or Minister Counselor before proceeding to work out details with the CIA Chief of Station.

8. In connection with the Mexican phase of the investigation, members of Mr. Rankin's staff questioned Mr. Helms and Mr. Rocca regarding the extent of the CIA file on Oswald for the period 8 October to 22 November 1963. They questioned the sanitized extracts which they had been shown and wondered if there were not more. Mr. Rocca summarized the materials that had come to the attention of the Secret Service, or had been disseminated to the Secret Service, immediately after the assassination. Mr. Rocca said there was not additional substantive information and that the sanitized version seen by the Commission constituted the sum of our holdings. Mr. Helms then explained that as a matter of practice we did not release actual copies of our messages because they contained codewords and digraphs which would be unintelligible to a person not familiar with them. He added, however, that he would be happy to show the file with the original messages to any staff member of the Warren Commission who might come to visit him at Langley.

9. The question of why no action was taken by other agencies of the government after their receipt of CIA information that Oswald was in contact with the Soviet and Cuban Embassies in Mexico City was next discussed. Mr. Rankin and members of his staff clearly felt that this was a crucial question which needed careful review. They appeared to believe that the information on Oswald was unusual enough to have caused recipients to take special measures which might conceivably have led to a closer scrutiny of Lee Harvey Oswald and his movements. Mr. Helms pointed out that the information on Oswald's visit to the Cuban and Soviet embassies in Mexico City came from telephone intercepts which were placed on both embassies. These intercepts were recorded on tape and reviewed by persons at our Station for any information affecting U. S. security. Such information is routinely passed to other agencies and entered in CIA files. Given the enormous bulk which is involved, the tapes are not kept on file but erased after a brief period of time. Thus the information on Oswald was similar to that provided on other American citizens who might have made contacts of this type. In Oswald's case, it was the combination of visits to both Cuban and Soviet Embassies which caused the Mexico City Station to report this to Headquarters and Oswald's record of defection to the Soviet Union which prompted the Headquarters dissemination. At the conclusion of his remarks on this subject, Mr. Helms specified that the information he had given Mr. Rankin was extremely sensitive and that the very existence of these telephone intercepts had to be very carefully protected.

10. The Commission, Mr. Rankin said, would be interested in any information held by CIA on Jack Ruby. Mr. Rankin said the Commission staff had prepared a roundup on Ruby, a copy of which he handed Mr. Helms. He said he would appreciate any file reflections or comments that CIA analysts might make on this material. Mr. Rankin and members of his staff then discussed Ruby's confirmed trip to Havana in 1959. The Commission has received information from an unspecified source that Ruby was in Havana again in 1963 under a Czech passport. Mr. Rankin asked whether CIA could provide any assistance in verifying this story. Mr. Helms replied that CIA would be limited in its possibility of assisting, to air manifest checks in Mexico. These would be carried out he said.

11. Mr. Helms was then asked if CIA had done any follow up to its original telegraphic dissemination of the information on Oswald's visits to the Cuban and Soviet embassies in Mexico City. Mr. Helms replied that there had been no CIA action following our initial dissemination. Mr. Willems then asked if there were any liaison problems faced by CIA in its efforts to deal with other agencies in matters affecting internal security. Mr. Helms replied that there were always understandable human problems in conducting any liaison on any subject but

SUBJECT: Robert Maheu - Foreign Head of State

1. In connection with the official State visit of a foreign Head of State in 1959, the Office of Security was requested to render special support during the Los Angeles and New York phases of the tour. According to ICA personnel, the foreign official was especially desirous of female companionship during his Los Angeles visit and it was requested that appropriate arrangements be made through a controlled source of the Office in order to assure a satisfied visit.

2. On 3 April 1959 Mr. Robert Maheu, a cleared Office of Security contact, was asked to arrange a party for the foreign official at Los Angeles, California. This was done by Mr. Maheu through Mr. Gregson Bautzer. Mr. Bautzer is a prominent Los Angeles attorney and Hollywood figure previously granted a covert security approval for use by FE Division. By pre-arrangement, during the course of this party the foreign official was introduced to a part-time screen and stage actress. For the duration of the foreign official's stay in Los Angeles, 3 through 7 April 1959, he and the actress became intimate friends. It was indicated by a CIA employee who was integrated into the State party, that the foreign official desired to continue his friendship with the actress and that he wished to meet with her during his stay in New York City from 14 through 18 April 1959.

3. On 13 April 1959 arrangements were made to rent the home of an Office of Security source, at Long Beach, Long Island, for the period 14 through 18 April 1959. The home was to be used as a confidential meeting place for the actress and the foreign official. At the same time the actress was registered at the Hotel Barclay, 111 East 48th Street, New York City, under an assumed name. The publicity touching on the relationship had become more pointed since some publicity mention had been made of the Jewish background of the actress. On 14 April 1959 a CIA employee and the actress were transported to the home on Long Island which was taken over as the meeting place for the foreign official and the actress. Later the same day, by pre-arrangement, two Department of State Security Agents, a New York City police lieutenant and a hired chauffeur arrived with the foreign official. The actress remained at the site through 18 April 1959, and the foreign official and his party visited each evening and remained for about four to five hours.

4. During the stay at the Long Beach site, the actress discussed the publicity in the case at some length with the Security representatives. She speculated about the possible sources of certain personal information that she felt had been leaked to the press. Additionally she spoke of her deep feeling for the foreign official & commented on how Gregson Bautzer initially sought her out to serve as a party companion for the foreign official. At the time she said she was unclear as to just what part Mr. Bautzer wanted her to play. In attempting to clarify his case Mr. Bautzer said, "I am employed by the CIA. We want you to go to bed with him." The actress said she rejected the proposal but finally went to the party. She became quite taken with the foreign official and found him to be most charming.

5. All personal contacts by Security representatives in this case were under alias and implied State Department affiliation. There is no record or indication in any of the files in this case that involves Robert Maheu by name or reference. It is believed that Mr. Maheu was never introduced to the actress, and as far as can be determined Bautzer "fronted" for all arrangements. Office of Security investigation conducted variously from 25 May through 17 September 1959 of the actress reflected no substantive derogatory information regarding her.

trouble come see you?

Mr. Houston. Oh, no, there's a number of times. For instance, I think it was back in the '50's, there's a lot of them, but a couple might illustrate -- in those days we were doing a good deal of political action abroad in the sense of giving guidance to factions in foreign countries that U.S. policy favored in organizing elections. I don't mean in rigging them, but how to get down to the grass roots, the old-fashioned political advice on how to run a political campaign.

We didn't have many trained officers on this. We had one or two who were excellent and they wanted more, and they came to me with the proposition that -- this was an election year, which one I have forgotten -- that we put officers in both the Republican and Democratic campaign parties to get the practical experience, and I advised -- actually, I went over and talked with Malcolm Wilkie, who was then the legal counsel in the Department of Justice, and this was most ill-advisable, and I went back and they dropped the project.

More recently, our [communication] fellows down in Virginia found they could easily monitor [long distance telephone conversations] from Latin American to Canada, and in some cases to New York, and these frequently carried [conversations] involving [narcotics] in great detail. They had no [telephone] discipline at all, security discipline on [the telephone]. And they would even give the name of the person who's going to receive the narcotics and where.

However, this immediately got us into an internal security and a police function. I told them they had to drop it, and they did. And it's too bad, because nobody else has found a way of doing it, and this information is floating over our heads right now and we cannot use it.

Mr. Schwarz. Have there been any instances where you or your office advised the Agency that it should not do something when nevertheless the Agency went ahead and did it?

Mr. Houston. I should think I would remember an occasion like that, but I don't.

Senator Mondale. Thank you.

(Senator Mondale left the hearing room.)

Mr. Schwarz. Mr. Houston, with the Senator absent, you don't have to go ahead.

Mr. Houston. Fine, fine.

Mr. Schwarz. I'm going to go on to another subject. Does anyone else have anything else about the Robert Kennedy meeting?

Mr. Kirbow. I have only one other question, and perhaps more about the leadership of the Agency.

Mr. Houston, your reputation over the some twenty-six twenty-eight years you were General Counsel was one of intense loyalty to the Director and the Deputy Director of the Agency.

Mr. Houston. That is correct.

WARD & PAUL

chest operator, but so far as I know he always operated in the line of command, and something like this I think I should have been consulted, but I can understand the operator's viewpoint. They might have felt there were reasons why I should not be consulted.

But just what went on in the line of command between Harvey and the Director I just cannot fathom this.

Mr. Schwarz. Harvey worked for Helms at the time, did he not?

Mr. Houston. That's right.

Mr. Schwarz. And what was the nature of their relationship as you understood it?

Mr. Houston. They were not too compatible as people, but I have never known that there was any difficulty in complying with the chain of command. I wouldn't necessarily have known if there had been, but I didn't know it.

Mr. Wides. And Harvey had worked for Mr. Helms in Berlin?

Mr. Houston. He had been Chief of Station in Berlin, he had been Chief of Station in Rome, and I think it was after the Rome assignment he came back and took over the staff.

Mr. Wides. But in connection with some of the operations like the Berlin Tunnel and other intelligence operations he had a pretty close-working relationship with Mr. Helms?

Mr. Houston. They were all in the DDP and certainly anything of the importance of the Berlin Tunnel, they would be could you think of anything which would be of benefit to this Committee that we have not inquired into?

Mr. Houston. The only thing I thought you might ask that -- I thought you were going to mention it -- somewhere, and this is very vague in my mind, both where I heard it, in what context, and what the timing of the event was, but I have heard and I am sure you must have heard of the delivery of a sniper's rifle to the Embassy in Havanna, which may have been intended for some sort of assassination attempt.

Mr. Schwarz. The Embassy when we still had an Embassy there?

Mr. Houston. It was apparently when we still had the Embassy.

Mr. Kirbow. Was this a couched delivery, covert delivery, much like the later deliveries into the Dominican Republic?

Mr. Houston. I think so.

I don't know much about it. I just, through a vague recollection, I don't know any details or any specifics, it's one of the things you pick up.

Mr. Kirbow. When would that have been? I am trying to date when we no longer had an Embassy there.

Mr. Wides. Mr. Noll, I think Mr. Noll was the Station Chief, Jim Noll, and I believe he left in late 1959.

Mr. Kirbow. Was that about the correct time?

Niarchos' ship captains named Katopodes brought a libel action I believe it was, against Onassis for some letter he had written about some activities of Katapodes, I can't remember the details now.

We didn't know where this was leading. So this was in the Supreme Court of New York State, and so I went to a fellow I knew in the U.S. Attorney's office and asked him if he could keep track of how this suite was developing to see if it was leading into some of the connections we had, particularly with Niarchos.

And he got some of the pleadings and some of the pre-trial evidence --

Mr. Wides. But you don't recall any contacts between the Agency and the Justice Department resulting in Mr. Yeagley going up to try and halt some aspects of the grand jury proceedings in New York growing out --

Mr. Houston. It strikes no valve.

Mr. Wides. Let me ask just one more question in this area and then we will move on to the document I asked you to look at before we started.

Mr. Maxwell. I have just one other question.

Mr. Wides. [redacted]

~~employee. And at the time Mr. Joost and the other fellows were CIA employees of the station at Thailand in 1951 they were alleged to have been involved in disposing of Mr. Kilham's body, and there was a serious question as to whether one or both of them had been involved in his death. And then I believe in 1955 this was brought to the attention of the Agency through the efforts, among others, of Mr. O'Donnell, who was then the station chief, Justin O'Donnell, who came back and raised it with Mr. Wiesner, and then I believe it was raised with Mr. Kirkpatrick and with yourself.~~

~~Do you recall that incident and the eventual denouement of the affair?~~

~~Mr. Houston. I cannot remember the exact chronology. I had thought they had gotten the report on the problem a little earlier than you suggested. But I can't argue it.~~

~~Mr. Wides. Do youknow if any action was taken earlier than the time in 1955 when Mr. O'Donnell first raised it with Mr. Wiesner?~~

~~Mr. Houston. I didn't know that Justin O'Donnell was the one -- at least I don't recall it, so I don't know exactly how it first came to my attention. But when it did, to the best of my recollection, Lyman Kirkpatrick and I, and I think Frank Wiesner was probably involved, tried to assemble all the facts to find out insofar as possible what had gone on. It was a confused picture. All sorts of interpersonal feelings~~

~~that I recall were going on out there. And Ithink one of the Thai police might have been involved.~~

~~Mr. Wides. I don't know if it refreshes your recollection, but I believe a Colonel Rack was a local official who had some knowledge of it.~~

~~Mr. Houston. To the best of my recollection I put this together and talked to Allen Dulles who was much concerned about it. He said, I think we ought to report that to Justice.~~

~~And I said, there is no particular problem, because there is nothing we can do about it because there is no crime against the U.S. that I can find in this situation, it is a crime against the Thai sovereignty.~~

~~And Allen said, that well may be. But I still think that I want to report this to Justice.~~

~~And he asked me to prepare a detailed report on a classified basis. I hve forgotten the nature of the classification. I suppose the relations with CAT at that time were still basically top secret.~~

~~So, I did prepare a report and delivered it to -- I can't remember-- probably to the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, who ever it was.~~

~~They said to the effect, thank you, that is it. There is nothing we can do.~~

~~Mr. Wides. Was there any discussion of the possibility~~

~~of giving information to the Thai authorities so that they could decide whether to exert jurisdication?~~

~~Mr. Houston. My recollection is that the indications were that the Thai authorities had as much information as we did. I don't remember to the contrary, but a lot of the information we got came from the Thais.~~

~~Mr. Wides. Did Mr. Kirkpatrick go over to Thailand to talk to some of the people there to find out what they knew about the situation?~~

~~Mr. Houston. I don't recall.~~

~~Mr. Maxwell. Was any action taken against either of the CAT employees?~~

~~Mr. Wides. Dennis Fleming was the other one. And he was recalled.~~

~~Mr. Houston. And Kilham?~~

~~Mr. Wides. Joost and Fleming were the two persons against whom the charges or allegations were raised. Kilham was the victim.~~

~~Mr. Houston. I remember Joost being a problem, but I can't remember what the outcome was. And Dennis Fleming just strikes a very faint bell. I can't remember at this time.~~

Mr. Wides. Did you have another question in this area?

Mr. Maxwell. I just wanted to say, if you wanted to continue, you said there were three cases that eliminated the kind of cases which CIA had with Justice, and the referrals, and you had gone through one. And I wondered if you wanted to go through the other two.

Mr. Houston. All right.

The second one was quite an interesting one. If I give it in too much detail, excuse me.

Mr. Maxwell. Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Maxwell. Back on therecord.

Mr. Houston. The staff officer in Italy all of a sudden disappeared from his post, and there was indication that he had with him a considerable sum of money, something in the nature of $30,000, I can't remember the exact amount. This was promptly reported, and he disappeared into the blue.

The [redacted] started looking into it. And I believe we sent people over to try and look into it, and found that there had been a serious family problem between himself and his wife.

Finally, through some sort of source in Mexico we got word that this fellow was near Mexico City, and he passed word to the [redacted] through a lawyer that he had written all the operational details of what he had been engaged in in Italy, which again were very sensitive, sealed them, and put them in a vault which only thelawyers could get at, with instructions to his lawyers that if anything happened to him, no

The SEC, as a result has raised some questions with Justice between our justice and our statutory problems. This is before Justice now.

Mr. Wides. Is there a file in the OGC office generally regarding, not necessarily every one, but many of your -- which would contain many or most of OGC contacts with Administrative agencies over the years?

Mr.Houston. No, because they weren't -- there probably is a substantial file on relations with Internal Revenue. But those were to a large part either working out our own tax equations on our own personnel with cover problems which you probably know about, or the CAT situation, or Southern Air Transport, and not interferring with IRS prosecutions, although several times we were involved -- here is the type of case I guess you are talking about.

What is the fellow out in the Philippines -- I think his name is [redacted] -- who had one of the biggest tax assessments made against an individual made against him, I think, $2 million? And [redacted] very definitely tried to involve us in his defense. There was some connection with [redacted] in the Philippines, you couldn't be in the Philippines without some connection with them. And yet gave IRS the full information, and said, don't bother with us, we are not concerned.

Mr. Wides. What about such things as the contacts with

Mr. Houston. It was a memo of DITEL's that I saw. I think it was dated after I left. I saw it in draft afterward. It had to do, I recall, with operations in the Trust Territories.

Mr. Wides. In other words, the first category of issue that I mentioned?

Mr. Houston. Yes.

~~Mr. Wides. With regard to MH MUTUAL, which is a topic that we obviously don't have time to discuss fully today, and we have not yet seen the files, I wonder -- and Mr. Maxwell was going to pursue this, and I may be back -- if you could give me a rough idea during the period when it was under your stewardship of the organizational chart, as it were, for the policy committee, the investment committee, and so forth, how were the questions of what investments could be made with the pension fund and the insurance fund and the like, how was that policy developed, and whowas involved, and so forth?~~

~~Mr. Houston. The lawyer running the actual operation reported directly to me.~~

~~Mr. Wides. WAs he in the OGC office? Or part of ANVIL?~~

~~Mr.Houston. He was ANVIL, a staff official but under unofficial cover.~~

~~Mr. Wides. Meaning that he was in a law firm that was essentially a proprietary.~~

Mr. Houston. Not entirely a proprietary. We supported part of it, and part of it was a legitimate law firm, they worked together and shared the firm.

Mr. Wides. Is it possible for you to indicate who that is, or is that someone whom you would not like to disclose.

Mr. Houston. I can't do that.

Mr. Wides. How would we refer to him in terms of his position if we were trying to ascertain his identity, or if we were negotiating with the Agency, as it were? What was his title vis-a-vis the mutual management? Was he the project officer?

Mr. Houston. He was certainly -- let's call him the project officer for MM ANVIL.

Mr. Wides. And that was for a good many years, one particular person?

Mr. Houston. Yes. He was there from pretty near the start until he retired by,about two years ago, three years ago. So, he was there all through the sixties, I would say, or the seventies.

Mr. Wides. This is not John Keaney, is it?

Mr. Houston. No.

Mr. Wides. Was John Keaney's role more in terms of setting up proprietaries and incorporating them?

Mr. Houston. John Keaney?

Mr. Wides. Yes, a Washington attorney -- or Kenney.

Mr. Houston. Kenney. He must have been one of the central cover projects. He was not an OGC project that I recalled.

Mr. Wides. He was not prominently involved in establishing proprietaries or their incorporation?

Mr. Houston. He might have worked in some of the central cover situations, but I don't recall him being involved in any of the proprietaries I worked on.

Mr. Wides. With regard to MH MUTUAL, as you can readily understand, we are interested in exploring its dimensions in nature, and are really beginning to get access to materials on it. Without taking you through all of its multi-faceted aspects, which would take some time, let me ask you one or two questions with regard to concerns that have been raised by the committee.

Do you recall at any time questions arising about the conflict of interest or any questionable aspects of the investment decisions of the MH MUTUAL program or any part of it? And by that I do not mean an individual who obtained intelligence information and was trading on his own, or an investment club within the agency, or that kind of thing, but questions involving either the Agency using insider information, if you will, obtained through its intelligence activities or otherwise in making investment decisions or buying stock or debentures, or making other investments to assist the person or the corporation or country whose securities were being invested in?

Mr. Houston. There were about two or maybe three recommendations from the Investment Counsel we had at the time we were turned down --

Mr. Wides. Excuse me. Was the Investment Counsel the person you were referring to?

Mr. Houston. No, this was an outside investment counsel we retained for advice for a period of time.

Mr. Wides. Was it a firm or an individual?

Mr. Houston. It is a well-known firm. And they made at least two or three recommendations to invest in stock of companies which we questioned rather extensive oontractual arrangements, and in view of those contractual arrangements, I recommended that we reject the recommendations.

And we did.

Mr. Wides. Do you recall any instances where investments were made and it was then learned or there was adversion to the fact that there were contractual relationships, or whether they were known in advance and it was weighed and the decision was made to go ahead with the investment?

Mr. Houston. No. The only ones I recall were turned down. Since there was ample room to investigate, there was no need to get in a position of possible implication of conflict of interest. So, we erred on the side of turning down

~~rather than going ahead.~~

~~And incidentally, the outside investment counsel would not know why we turned it down.~~

~~Mr. Wides. Were all of the investment decisions for the assets of MH MUTUAL -- and you use that in the broad sense, I don't fully understand the relationships among all the aspects of the complex -- but were all of the investment decisions, the Eurodollars and the small amount of stock and the like made by outside counsel or were there some investment initiatives which originated within the Agency?~~

~~Mr. Houston. For a while almost all of them were made by this outside counsel. It was not too happy a relationship, not because of his fault. I think he was doing his honest best. But we took too long processing his recommendations and often lost a market by taking too long through our own internal controls.~~

~~So, finally, we decided that while we had gone to him for a good reason, that is, so we could show that we had relied on outside counsel of known stature, that it was not fair either to him or to us to be in circumstances where we were really secondguessing him through our own internal procedures and our own invetment sort of Board of Directors. So we left, I hope, on friendly terms.~~

~~Mr. Wides. About when was that?~~

~~Mr. Houston. Let me guess at around 1969, something~~ like that.

Mr. Wides. Up until then as far as you know there was no investment of Agency funds that were made as a result of any decisions or implications within the CIA which might then have been run by him for his independent advice but might have originated or prompted within the Agency?

Mr. Houston. There may have been those. You see, on our Board of Directors to which we referred all basic investment decisions we had three of our top economists, and at least one of them was a member of a couple of college investment boards, so that they had the benefit of the advice to those university investment counsel.

Mr. Wides. Was he a consulting economist or a member--

Mr. Houston. A member of the staff.

Mr. Maxwell. Mrs. Thunberg?

Mr. Houston. Yes.

Mr. Wides. And her relationship with the university board was what, as an alumni?

Mr. Houston. As an alumni. She was called as a consultant on their investment program.

We also had the advice of a couple of friendly banks, and at least a couple of insurance companies would freely give us the benefit of their investment policies.

Mr. Wides. What was the relationship between yourself and the banks and the insurance companies, the CIA?

~~(Discussion off the record.)~~

~~Mr. Houston. To go back to the start -- it may have already been told -- back in the last fifties we found in the OGC office that the hardest thing to cope with were benefits for death or disability insured under covert circumstances, particularly when, as so often happened, no prior planning had been made for this. Even the prior planning is difficult, because if you are going to put an agent into certain circumstances, and say you will get him insurance through Mutual of Omaha, if the circumstances of the Department are later known to Mutual of Omaha, they might say, well, that is not a risky cover, and continually you wouldn't have your insurance.~~

~~So, we came to the conclusion that we needed our own insurance business, and we started by buying two very small off-shore insurance companies, and started writing death and health policies. Now, the business grew quite rapidly to cover all sorts of covert operations. And we went to two large outside insurance companies and asked if they would cooperate and take some of the policies either on a fully protected basis from us, or if they saw fit, for their own account. And both of them did both. They would take some risks for their own account, and the only thing we would ask is that they protect the investigation in case it got into sensitive fields.~~

In others they would ostensibly take the risk and we would stand behind them.

Mr. Wikes. So that was indemnification?

Mr. Houston. Complete indemnification. And by and large this arrangement worked extremely well.

Mr. Wikes. So those were the kinds of insurance companies were were talking about that would give us the benefit of their investment?

Mr. Houston. Both of them had large investment portfolios of their own, and feel I gave us access to their investment manager, who were most cooperative in what they were investing.

Mr. Wikes. And what was the point of contact in the Agency during that period for the insurance companies?

Mr. Houston. I went in both cases to set up the original contact, and then this project officer was the primary.

Mr. Wikes. And he would have been the point of contact for receiving their investment views?

Mr. Houston. He or his office.

Mr. Wides. And you mentioned also a bank as an outside source.

Mr. Houston. There were a couple of banks, but one particularly. We kept some of the money on deposit with this bank. And we had some offshore assets that were ostensibly held by an offshore subsidiary of the bank. The bank at our request gave us a flat guarantee of repayment no matter what on these assets. So, we felt well protected on this. And also, when we deposited with them the certificates of deposit we got the normal prime rate on our deposits. And here again they particularly in the field of Eurobonds had some good advice, and we also went to another brokerage house in New York who had investment advisory staff that specialized in Eurobonds. So far as I know, they did not know the Agency was involved, but they gave advice on the best interest rates in Eurobonds and certificates. It was a highly specialized field.

Mr. Maxwell. Who was going to the investment house, the project officer?

Mr. Houston. The project officer.

Mr. Wides. Do you recall any dealings with Suydam and Company?

Mr. Houston.No. I have been asked time and time again about Suydam Company, and the only thing I knew was from personal knowledge going back to a trust my sister has an interest in in the Guaranty Trust. They had one of these holding companies which I think was called Suydam and Company. But you never heard -- who was it? I know. One of our directors of Southern Air Transport told me that he was continually being asked by contact with Suydam and Company. And he said that is the only one he knows, was the Guaranty Trust. There was someone else,I don't know about it.

Mr. Wides. GEtting back to the question I alluded to while we were off the record, did any questions arise about whether the people on the board, the investment board, or managing board of Mutual, who were from within the Agency, would have access to economic intelligence or political intelligence relevant to their own thinking on investments, and where there was any question of a proprietary involved?

Mr. Houston. The members of the board were always free to bring up their ideas for investments, particularly in the stock field, until more recent years. But mainly we were consulting the economic experts for their general economic knowledge on trends and any input they could give on basic investment policies.

Mr. Wides. That would include, I assume, economic intelligence regarding, for example, the trend of whether there was likely to be a copper shortage, or the trend of whether there was likely to be more nationalization of rubber plantations or oil?

How would you differentiate that from economic intelligence except that it would be --

Mr. Houston. Because our investments, except for the Eurobonds, were almost entirely in U.S.investments. And while these were trained economists, their main professional ~~interest was in the foreign field. And I don't remember them staying, for instance, let's get into copper, it is going to be in very short supply in Peru or whatever. I don't remember any discussion of that sort.~~

~~Mr. Wides. Do you recall any policy papers or reviews generally as to the use of Agency knowledge in the broadest sense of its intelligence fund in regard to the investment decisions as distinct from decisions that were generated wholly by outside?~~

~~Mr. Houston. There were various basic general policy papers -- usually I would prepare them and put them before the board -- in which this may have been touched on. I don't recall it specifically.~~

~~Mr. Maxwell. The source of funds invested under the auspices of the board were what?~~

~~Mr.Houston. The initial source of funds was usually reprogrammed at the year's end available for operational use. And this was regarded as an operational use necessary to support operations because of the need for the basic insurance function.~~

~~In other words, all these companies that we had in this insurance complex appeared to have the substance an insraance company would be expected to have. Actually, the whole fund for all of them was managed as a central fund under this one project officer. On the design and organizational~~ chart it looked very complicated. In operation it was quite simple. It was handled really as one entity with various faces appearing. And the complications of those whereby maintaining your directors, who took no part in the operation, your companies directors, and things, and keeping your letterhead straight for your writing for the different companies.

Mr. Maxwell. Were there other sources of funds, profits made by proprietaries in stock or bond transactions that went back into the investment fund?

Mr. Houston. They would all go into the central investment fund, and in the initial stages, particularly where there was income from funds and dividends -- until the stock market broke there were some capital gains registered. Then the investment policy went more and more, particularly as the interest rate went up, in the Eurobonds and certificates of deposit, where for a while you were getting -- I think we got a weighted average of over 11 percent. And then those would go back into the fund against the insurance loss accountability. The most difficult thing we had was trying to decide what was enough, because there was no actuarial experience such as in a nominal insurance company.

Mr. Wides. You mean the capitalization of particular companies against insurance?

Mr. Houston. Exactly.

Mr. Wides. What about proprietary profit, was that one source of funds that went into the total capital fund?

Mr. Houston. No. If you reorgnized a proprietary or disposed of it, the proceeds identified as the proceeds of that might go into this fund until their eventual disposition back into the Treasury, or whatever was decided.

Mr. Wides. What about prior to dissolution, just the annual operating profit, were any not left in the proprietary but taken out in part and put into the fund?

Mr. Houston. In the first place, this wasn't a frequent occurence in propriataries. In fact MH MUTUAL and Air America were the only substantially profitable operations. There were minor profits in others, but by and large as far as I know they were left in the companies until they were dissolved. And toward the end of Air America I believe we let off some of the profits before the final dissolution and then took the rest of them over, and they eventually turned them into the Treasury.

Mr. Wides. With regard to the investment, in the case of certificates of deposit abroad I take it that is what you are referring to as the weighted average, when you weighted Eurodollars, Eurobonds and certificates of deposit. Whatever the form, were some of the investments in foreign countries made in any way in consultation with the operating divisions in regard to the non-investment aspects of the loan, if you will, the possible use of them for covert assistance in the broadest sense of that term?

Mr. Houston. No.

Let us get one thing straight. The certificate of deposit were domestic.

Mr. Wides. Were there any foreign loans?

Mr. Houston. There were no foreign loans that I recall. The Eurodollar bonds were in the case those which were guaranteed by a U.S. company.

Mr. Wides. You don't recall any investment in obligations of a foreign country?

Mr. Houston. Not of a foreign country as such. I believe there were a couple in foreign companies. I can't even be sure of that, but my recollection is by and large of subsidiaries of U.S. companies which do not guarantee their subsidiary bonds.

Mr. Wides. Thank you.

Mr. Maxwell. I wouldlike to go through some of the material in the Olsen case. And I have marked as Houston Exhibit 5 the excerpts from the IG's diary which I showed you before.

AFFIDAVIT

E. HOWARD HUNT, JR., being duly sworn, deposes and says:

1. On January 10, 1976, I was examined by Frederick D. Baron, a counsel for the Senate Select Committee to Study Governmental Operations With Respect to Intelligence Activities. On January 11, 1976, I was examined by both Mr. Baron and Howard Liebengood, another counsel for the Senate Select Committee. At both of these examinations I was accompanied by my counsel, Randall C. Coleman, and advised of my Constitutional rights.

2. I have read the transcripts of both of the above-mentioned examinations, and I hereby affirm that my testimony therein is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

might have directed me to this particular unit.

I was told that somewhere within the overall political and psychological staff there was located a man with a small office. This man's name was Pash, Colonel Boris Pash, and my understanding was that Colonel Pash had been doing business, let us say, with the Agency in West Germany for quite a while.

I sought out Colonel Pash. I was directed to his office and found sitting with him another Agency officer named [redacted] [redacted] I'm not sure whether it is [redacted].

Mr. Baron. It's a Greek name. [redacted] is his correct first name, but he goes by [redacted].

Mr. Hunt. Very good. But in any case, he was known throughout my career as [redacted]. And I was at that point on, let's say, a search mission to determine whether the alleged capability of Colonel Pash in "wet affairs," which is how it was referred to, that is liquidations, would have any relevance to our particular problem of the Albanian disappointments.

Mr. Baron. By liquidations, you mean assassinations?

Mr. Hunt. Assassinations. Assassinations, kidnappings, removals, let's say.

This had been alleged to me. So I spoke to Colonel Pash in Mr. [redacted]s presence. I explained the problem to him, although at that juncture I'm quite sure that we had not identified the Albanian suspect. So we were talking hypothetically earlier, that when I first inquired around for the location of Colonel Pash and his assistant, the reaction I encountered was a rather jesting one, and the impression I gained was here were a couple of men who were drawing salaries and doing very little.

And so when Colonel Pash seemed reluctant to become involved in responding affirmatively to my questions, my inference was that Colonel Pash and Lazarus could well not have such a capability but for purposes of employment and status, this was the job they had. But they didn't want anyone to call upon them to activate their particular abilities.

Now that was my impression, and I was a little disgusted by it. I think I talked to the Chief of the PP staff later, who was of course well aware of the Albanian problem and I said I didn't get any satisfaction from Pash, but it doesn't really make any difference because we don't have the name of the suspected individual.

Mr. Baron. Just to stop here for a second and clear up some of these details, were you under the impression that what you called wet affairs, assassinations, kidnappings, or other removals from the scene of troublesome individuals was the primary function of this unit that Pash and Lazarus were running?

Mr. Hunt. Yes. In fact the only. As far as I knew, they had no other function. If they had another function, I was never made aware of what it was.

Do you know anything about Colonel Pash's background?

Mr. Baron. I know a bit, but if you think that there are relevant details to put on the background, go ahead.

Mr. Hunt. Well, I had not thought of Colonel Pash for years until I began reading a book called "Lawrence and Oppenheimer," and I saw quite a few references to Colonel Pash. I had known previously that he had been associated during the war with the Manhattan Project and that he had a security background. And as I believe I touched on briefly before, it was my impression that Pash had been active a couple of years at least before I knew him in West Germany with the sort of thing that we had been discussing so far today.

Mr. Baron. What kinds of stories had you heard about Pash's previous activities?

Mr. Hunt. Kidnappings mostly.

Mr. Baron. And where were those?

Mr. Hunt. West Germany and West Berlin.

Mr. Baron. Do you know the names of any of the victims of the kidnapping or any of the people involved other than Pash and [redacted]?

Mr. Hunt. I do not.

Mr. Baron. And are you aware from whatever source of any assassination planning or attempts that Pash was involved in?

Mr. Hunt. I am not.

Mr. Baron. Does your answer include not only the period of time before you talked with Colonel Pash but after you talked with Colonel Pash?

Mr. Hunt. Yes, sir.

I might add that I was rather briefly at CIA headquarters at that time and within a very short period of time after I had had my interview with Colonel Pash, I was transferred to the Guatemala project, the overthrow of Guatemala.

Mr. Baron. Is that the reason why you did not follow up on the problem with this particular suspected double agent after not receiving satisfaction from Colonel Pash?

Mr. Hunt. That certainly could have been one reason. On the other hand, I was chief of, I can see I'm really going to have to get into a lot more here. This is going to be dry and dull stuff for you.

[redacted] King Zog who was very upset about the disappearance and loss of all of his partisans in the operations that the Agency was conducting.

[redacted] -- the the counter-intelligence or espionage aspect, which is not my function, but [redacted] Why were they being parachuted to their deaths in Albania? And that was my introduction to the whole scene in West Germany, where the balance of his retainers were being held by the CIA. Well, not being held, but where they were being housed and trained for Albanian operations.

Mr. Baron. Can you explain the term "retainer"?

Mr. Hunt. Well, I understood that when he finally got out of Albania, that he brought with him what I can best describe as retainers. That is bodyguards, members of his personal staff, probably some relatives. I think he had four or five sisters with him. But the able-bodied portion of those loyalists who came out with him we had largely taken over [redacted] And then he never saw them again. He naturally became apprehensive.

So that was my interest in what was happening to the Albanians that we parachuted in [redacted] I had no functional counter-espionage interest in the affair. This would have been handled and this was handled by the Chief of Counter-espionage for the Division.

Mr. Baron. Who would that have been at the time?

Mr. Hunt. I can't remember at this point.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

Mr. Baron. But that would be the person primarily responsible for taking care of this double agent problem?

Mr. Hunt. That's correct.

Mr. Baron. Are you aware of what happened with that suspected double agent?

Mr. Hunt. I have no idea because, as I may have indicated previously off the record, it became apparent some years later that the unfortunate fate of our Albanian agents was linked far more closely to the revelations of Kim Philby, the Soviet agent who was in direct liaison with us in Washington and in Great Britain, rather than any penetration, although the possibility of a penetration was of course always there. But I don't think that anybody was ever focused.

Again, I left for Latin American affairs. I left the Division about that time and I really never heard about it again. [redacted] the Albanian chief, departed for Southeast Asia, and the whole sort of complex of knowledgeable people was broken up through normal transfers and special activities like the Guatemala project.

Mr. Baron. Was [redacted] knowledeable about your approach to Colonel Pash?

Mr. Hunt. Very likely he was, yes. I don't think I would have discussed anything with Colonel Pash about the matter without talking to [redacted] about it.

Mr. Baron. Who else would have known that you approached

Colonel Pash with the idea in mind of seeing if an assassination or a kidnapping couldn't be arranged?

Mr. Hunt. The then Chief of Foreign Intelligence and Counter-Intelligence for the Division. And I think now that that was [redacted]. I think he wore both hats. He had both foreign intelligence responsibility and the counter-intelligence responsibility. And I might have told the division chief about it, although it was not, it had not achieved such stature at that point that I would have necessarily talked to the Division Chief, who I believe at that time was John Richardson of later Vietnam fame.

It's also possible that the Division Chief in that era was John Baker, now deceased, who left that division to become Chief of the PP staff, and that would have been a normal follow through for me if I had discussed it with John Baker, my direct Chief, and then to have discussed it with him when he was my staff chief in the overall political and psychological staff.

Mr. Baron. Anyone else who would have known about your approach to Colonel Pash or about --

Mr. Hunt. Or his function.

Mr. Baron. Yes, that Colonel Pash was considered to have assassinations as one of his functions.

Mr. Hunt. We had a Colonel Buffington who at that time was a member of the PP staff, the overall PP staff, and I think that he would hav e been knowledgeable about it.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000
WARD & PAUL
410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

Mr. Baron. Was that Milton Buffington?

Mr. Hunt. Yes. I think he later went on and had a career in the Office of Security. Milton Buffington, yes.

Mr. Baron. Anyone else?

Mr. Hunt. Yes, I have the names of three men who unfortunately are dead. I could give those names, though. Mr. C. Tracy Barnes, Mr. John Baker, who I've already mentioned, and Mr [redacted] These men were all at one time or another chiefs of the Agency's PP staff.

Another man now living to the best of my knowledge who might well have had knowledge of Pash's function was the then-chief of the Economic Warfare staff of the PP staff and his name was Gates Lloyd. He later became the Deputy Director for Support of the Agency.

There's a man named [redacted] who was in the Psychological Warfare Branch of the PP staff. I believe at that time there was an International Organizations Branch which later became the International Organizations Division, then headed by Cord Myer, Jr., and his Deputy at that time was Tom Braden, the now-columnist whose wife has just ascended to the Executive Office Building. There were members of the Labor Branch, and I'm trying to think of that branch of office that was down the hall.

There was a labor branch. The people in there might know. There was a lady lawyer named Carol somebody who was very knowledgeable about what was going on in that area.

Mr. Baron. Knowledeable about Pash's activities?

Mr. Hunt. Well, in the sense that when you have an adjoining office, you usually pretty much know what the other fellow is doing. Just in that sense, because her function in the labor branch had nothing to do with Pash, to my knowledge.

What I'm trying to do here is to give you sort of a congeries of people alive and dead who would have had contact knowledge, at the very least, of what Pash's function was.

Mr. Baron. Were each of these units referred to as PB with a number following it?

Operations and OPC, the staff structure emerged as follows:

Reporting to the Deputy Director for Plans, i.e. Frank Wisner, whose Chief of Operations then was Richard Helms, this is the Clandestine Services Organization. There was our support staff, the PP staff, the Foreign Intelligence staff, the Counter-Intelligence, Counter-Espionage staff, and of course the famous staff "D".

Also reporting to the Deputy Director for Plans were all of the geographical divisions, such as Western Europe, Southeast Europe, Asia, Near East, and so forth.

Mr. Baron. Now at this point Frank Wisner was DDP, Richard Helms was his deputy.

Mr. Hunt. Richard Helms was his Chief of Operations.

Mr. Baron. All right. The Chief of the PP staff was --

Mr. Hunt. Either Tracy Barnes or John Baker or [redacted]

Mr. Baron. And you were located on the South European --

Mr. Hunt. Southern Europe Division.

Mr. Baron. Who headed that division at that point?

Mr. Hunt. Either John Baker or John Richardson.

So as you see, I had a line responsibility to the Chief of the Southeast Europe Division, as indicated in Exhibit 3. At the same time I had a functional responsibility to the Chief of the PP staff, who was Mr. Barnes or Mr. Baker or [redacted] just as the Chief of FI for the Southeast Europe

Mr. Hunt. Does this satisfy your request?

Mr. Baron. It does, indeed.

Of all of the individuals that you have just mentioned, which ones do you know to your own certainty were clearly knowledgeable of Boris Pash's activities?

Mr. Hunt. [redacted] would be the first one, and after that I can only speculate. I would have to assume that [redacted] acquired knowledge of it, but perhaps he acquired knowledge through me. I'm not sure. I have made a list of other people whom I have not mentioned who conceivably, by virtue of personal contact or functional responsibility, might well have been aware of Pash's true functional responsibility within the Agency.

Mr. Baron. Before I ask you to tick off that list, let's make it clear that all of the names, in addition to [redacted], are names that you have given as people who are likely to have been knowledgeable of Pash's activities because of their place in the organization structure at that time.

Mr. Hunt. That's correct, or as I have indicated in some cases, as with the PP labor branch by virtue of physical proximity to that office.

Mr. Baron. Okay. Why don't you now just run very briefly through the names of other people who you think could conceivably have been knowledgeable of Pash's function?

Mr. Hunt. In some cases I'm going to have to give you their title designation rather than the name of the individual because, so much time has passed, I have simply forgotten who it was in that particular era.

[redacted], who at that time was a member of the German branch of the Western Europe Division, he has since retired and is running his family's [redacted]usiness in New York. Certainly the then Chief of Western Europe Division, of which Germany was a functional part and the Chief of Operations of Western Europe should know.

I would think that Jim Angleton, who would have had direct knowledge and always was the Chief of the CI/CE staff. The Chief of base in [redacted] if in fact Pash conducted any activities in that area, certainly the Chief of base in [redacted] would have been knowledgeable about it.

Also, the Chief of base at [redacted] which was where we had the [redacted]peration going on. I don't know whether Bill Harvy, that is William Harvy, at that time was Chief of Operations [redacted] or whether he was simply running the tunnel, but Harvy might well have some knowledge of Pash.

I would certainly assume that when we're talking about liquidations and that sort of thing that the Agency's overall Office of Security somewhere within it must have been involved, such German Division personnel as might be available today, West German, and I would also suggest that General Cushman might be knowledgeable for this reason.

End 1A, b. 1B

It was about that time that General Cushman was still assigned to the CIA. I could be wrong about that but I seem to have a memory of Cushman being around in those days. He was then a Colonel. I had associated with him. In fact, we had shared an office at one time, but that was several years earlier. I would place it about early 1949. But I'm quite sure that Cushman was around in that period of time and involved with the PP staff, though what his function was I don't know.

Now there are alive two close friends of mine who were then members of the PP staff, [redacted] and [redacted] These are men who in effect established the PP staff for Frank Wisner and then left to go on to other things. They are both well known writers.

Mr. Baron. Let me just return to one name that you mentioned and that is William Harvey.

Did you -- first, generally, what was the nature of your operational relationships to William Harvey after this period? Did you have any?

Mr. Hunt. I never had any, no. In fact, I've only seen him once in my life, to the best of my recollection.

Mr. Baron. As you may know, William Harvey was tasked in 1961 with setting up an executive action capability at the CIA, tasked originally by Richard Bissell to carry out assassinations if required.

because we're going to slop over into this other matter that Mr. Liebengood wants to talk about tomorrow.

Mr. Baron. Well, why don't we hold off then, except that for this one question, which is are you aware of any involvement that Dr. Gunn had in assassination planning?

Mr. Hunt. No, I'm not because I'm just not familiar with assassination planning. And specifically, for that reason, I'm not aware of any involvement that Dr. Gunn might have had.

Mr. Baron. Let's return now to the point of departure, which was your conversation with Colonel Pash and the events that led up to it.

Who were your supervisors that gave you the impression that Colonel Pash was prepared to carry out assassinations?

Mr. Hunt. I wish I could give you a distinct name. I think I covered that in an impressionistic way by saying that Tracy Barnes and John Baker, who were at different times sequentially chiefs of the PP staff, it seems to me that Barnes was probably the one who indicated that Pash had such a capability.

I know that I did not get it from [redacted] and I'm quite sure that my information did not come from within the Southeast Europe Division. It must have come accordingly from the Political and Psychological staff, the contacts there, and I would have to say Tracy Barnes or John Baker are the most likely.

Mr. Baron. And neither of those two men are alive today?

Mr. Hunt. That's right.

Mr. Baron. Did whoever gave you the information about Boris Pash indicate to you that there were any other units in the CIA that could take care of such problems by means of assassination?

Mr. Hunt. No. My distinct impression and recollection is the function, if indeed it existed, and I believed it then to have existed as I do today, was centralized or focused in Colonel Pash and [redacted].

Mr. Baron. Now what would have been the formal title of the unit that Colonel Pash and [redacted] were running?

Mr. Hunt. If it had one, I never knew it.

Mr. Baron. Can you add any other detail to the record on your talk with Colonel Pash and his reaction to your request that he consider on a general level the planning of an assassination of a suspected double agent?

Mr. Hunt. Well, as I recall it, my conversation with him was a relatively brief one. I stepped in the door, met him, saw [redacted], who I knew briefly, or at least knew him by sight, and I sat down and I said, we have this problem in the Albanian branch. We may need somebody liquidated in Western Germany. Can you handle it if that day comes, or if it comes to that?

And he seemed a little startled. I have already indicated that. What I'm trying to do now is to refine my thoughts more than I did previously when we were taking sort of a wide swipe at the canvas.

Colonel Pash indicated or said to me that it was a matter that would have to be approved by higher authority and as a relatively low ranking officer in those days, I thought he was probably referring to Frank Wisner. And indeed, he may have. It never got pushed up to Frank Wisner's level because there no direct approach or a request for such approval was ever made.

I left with the impression that Colonel Pash was glad that he wasn't going to have any business for me or that he had successfully deflected whatever approach I might be making to him because it would give him and [redacted] an opportunity to drink more coffee and to draw their salaries from the Agency while affecting to do a job that they were perhaps not equipped to do.

Now again, that impression I had when I left him was at variance with what I had heard before I came in, where I heard he and [redacted] or he at least had been active in West Germany in wet affairs, particularly kidnappings and that sort of thing.

Mr. Baron. And you carried into his office the impression that Colonel Pash was a man who could carry off an assassination

Mr. Hunt. No.

Mr. Baron. Did you ever discuss this matter with anyone other than Colonel Pash?

Mr. Hunt. In that context?

Mr. Baron. In the context of assassinations or kidnapping.

Mr. Hunt. Well, I wasn't involved in plotting or planning any kidnappings. Again, I would suggest that I might very well have gone back to [redacted] who was the most interested individual, because he was responsible at the branch level [redacted] as an operational tool, whereas, I had an overall political responsibility [redacted] And I have described the background of that, the rubric under which I became interested in the Albanian problem in the first place, and then having talked to Pash, it would have been only natural for me to have said to [redacted] look, I've talked with Pash and he says it will have to be approved by higher authority. Now have you gotten, we don't have a body yet, but when you get a name to put on the target, at that point you will have to carry the ball and take it on up the line.

Mr. Baron. And you never heard anything further about it?

Mr. Hunt. No, probably because I went within, I think, a comparatively few weeks off to the Guatemala operation.

Mr. Baron. Did anyone ever mention it to you, say did [redacted] ever mention it to you again?

Mr. Hunt. No. I next saw [redacted] in [redacted] in it would be about '57 or '58, and I had dinner in his home in Taipei, and I'm quite sure I said at that time, whatever happened to Boris Pash, or what do you hear from Boris?

End 13, b. 2A

Now he was a rather unusual individual to say the least, and I don't think [redacted] told me that he was dead. I don't know who told me that Boris, that Pash died, but whatever he said, it was, well, he was okay the last time I saw him and that was the last time we ever discussed it.

Mr. Baron. And you didn't discuss this request?

Mr. Hunt. No.

Mr. Baron. Where did you receive the impression that Colonel Pash was dead?

Mr. Hunt. I guess when, either from reading the Lawrence and Oppenheimer book or from the newspapers, from the Crewdson story. I don't think at the first level when I began recalling the story, I don't think I was aware that Boris Pash was dead.

Mr. Baron. In the Crewdson story there is an allusion to the fact that Colonel Pash is probably dead.

Are you saying that that came from Crewdson's research and not from yourself?

Mr. Hunt. Oh, yes, that came from Crewdson's research, not mine.

Mr. Baron. This is more than a minor note on the record, Colonel Bash is not dead.

Mr. Hunt. Oh, good, I thought he was dead.

my assumption at that time was that authorization by Frank Wisner would have been all that would have been required to proceed with the project had it ever materialized. That is the Chief of the Clandestine Services.

Now whether Frank would have been required to go to Allen Dulles, I rather doubt it. I think it is something that he would have been able to authorize himself.

Mr. Baron. All right. Let me ask you now before we get into Colonel Pash's version of the story, which we will, whether it is possible that you are confusing the time periods here?

So as not to hold anything back from you, Colonel Pash has said that the time period has to be off because he retired from the Agency, or left the Agency in probably late '51. It's possible that it went into 1952. But he wasn't with the Agency in any capacity after '52. And in fact, his status was that of a military officer who had been detailed to the Agency from approximately 1948 to '52.

Now does that affect your recollection in any way of the period '54 to '55 as the period when your conversation with Boris Pash took place?

Mr. Hunt. Well, from 1950 to 1953, I was in Mexico [redacted]

Mr. Baron. And where were you from the time that you joined the Agency until you went to Mexico?

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

Mr. Hunt. I was a member of the PP staff.

Mr. Baron. Is it possible that your conversation with Boris Pash about the assassination of a suspected double agent took place in that time period?

Mr. Hunt. I would have to say it's possible, yes.

Mr. Baron. Would you have been dealing with East European problems or --

Mr. Hunt. No, I was dealing with West European problems.

Mr. Baron. I'm sorry. Would you have been dealing with a problem like this one, a problem with a suspected Albanian double agent in West Germany during that time period?

Mr. Hunt. I can't recall having done so. The West European Division had its own PP staff officer and he would have been the one to take it up, whereas my recollection is that this was generated at a later time when I was in the Southeast European Division and had a direct reason to become interested in the matter.

I have to say that it is possible, but I would say maybe 5 percent possible.

Mr. Baron. And you accord so small a possibility to the hypothesis that you actually talked to Pash about this problem in '49 or '50 because you were not involved in operations in West Germany at that point.

Mr. Hunt. No, I was not.

Mr. Baron. And [redacted] at that

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

point?

Mr. Hunt. No, no. He was not.

Mr. Baron. Where were you in '49 and '50 physically?

Mr. Hunt. Physically I was in the JRK building with the PP staff and my direct supervisor at that time was [redacted] who I have mentioned earlier.

Mr. Baron. Did you travel to West Germany during that period of time?

Mr. Hunt. No, I did not.

Mr. Baron. In the later period, '50, '54, and '55, that you were discussing, did you travel often to West Germany?

Mr. Hunt. No.

Mr. Baron. You were stationed in Washington?

Mr. Hunt. I was stationed in Washington and from the period after I left Mexico, which was in, I think, March of '54 for about the ensuing year when I left for the Guatemala project, I was in Washington or the SE Europe Division. So I had that continuous almost year there.

Mr. Baron. Is there anything else that adds to your sense of the probabilities that this conversation took place in '54 and '55?

Mr. Hunt. No. My restructuring is as I have given it to you, my recollections.

Mr. Baron. Okay. Let me ask you the same question in maybe a straightforward manner.

political affairs, and his was the 7th, which had less well defined functions. And [redacted] was a member of that unit.

Do you recall any dealings that you had in your earliest period of service with the CIA with PB7, now that I've refreshed your recollection?

Mr. Hunt. Not as such, no. Does Colonel Pash define what his functions were in the PB7?

Mr. Baron. Before I answer that one, let me ask you one.

Mr. Hunt. I've been trying to develop a helpful colloquy here.

Mr. Baron. This is very helpful.

Do you recall any charters that any of those planning branches had?

Mr. Hunt. At this juncture, no. I was only aware that, I think mine was PB2. This is when I first went in in 1949 or 1950. I think that was [redacted] outfit.

Mr. Baron. Colonel Pash described the charter of PB7 as giving PB7 responsibility for such other functions as the six other units didn't perform.

Does that square with your recollection of what he was doing in those early days?

Mr. Hunt. Well, you see, I don't associate Colonel Pash with the very early days. I associate him with a later period, about three years or five years later.

Mr. Baron. Do you have any specific recollection of Colonel

Pash's activities in the years 1949 to 1952?

Mr. Hunt. Not at all, no. My only other collateral recollection is that Colonel Pash was said to have come to us. He was recently assigned in Germany and he had come to us from there. That was all that I knew.

Mr. Baron. [redacted] who has also testified this past week on this subject, said that his recollection of the charter of PB7 was that it gave PB7 responsibility for assassinations, kidnappings and such other functions as higher authority may assign or as were not being performed by other units.

Does that square with the impression that you were given by your superiors of the functions of Colonel Pash's unit?

Mr. Hunt. Yes. I didn't even know that [redacted] was still alive. So [redacted] then supports my functional recollection, let's say.

Mr. Baron. Let's introduce as Exhibit 6 an article in the New York Times dated January 8th, 1976, headed "Retired Colonel Denies Heading CIA Unit for Assassinations."

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Hunt Exhibit No. 6) with real certainty that no such conversation took place and that even in terms of exploring the possibility of assassination planning or inquiring into the capability for assassination planning, he maintains that assassinations were never raised with him, what do you then have to say about his testimony?

Mr. Hunt. I would have to say that his perceptions and mine were at variance and that we were engaged in some sort of an Aesopian dialogue in which neither of us understood what the other was saying.

I had no other reason to approach him. I had never heard of the man except in that particular context.

Mr Baron. And there was no other reason for them discussing capabilities for an assassination?

Mr. Hunt. That's correct.

Mr. Baron. Were you aware of any specific function that Colonel Pash performed with the CIA after the date of 1952?

Mr. Hunt. Well, my recollection is that I saw him in '54 and '55 and that's the only specific function that I can relate him to.

Mr. Baron. Now you have drawn a chart of the PP staff, Exhibit 4, that locates Colonel Pash and [redacted] on the PP staff.

Is it possible that they served on the PP staff before the date the Colonel Pash gives as his retirement date from the CIA, which is sometime in '52?

Mr. Hunt. Is it possible? Yes, I believe it's possible because [redacted] was one of the original people in OPC.

Mr. Baron. At what point did OPC merge or was it transformed?

Mr. Hunt. Well, it merged with OSO, I think, in 1953 when I was [redacted] in Mexico in '53, and I came out of there in, I think, March of '54, I left Mexico.

By that time the merger had taken place.

Mr. Baron. So is it possible that this chart could have been a chart of the PP staff as it operated under the OPC structure, the 453?

Mr. Hunt. Yes. In fact, I don't think that there was any particular change from the PB to the PP era.

Mr. Baron. The reason for my own confusion here is that Colonel Pash and [redacted] have both said that at the point when OPC was merged, or at some point shortly thereafter, PB7 was abolished and they don't know what became of it. They say the functions that these seven planning branches performed were scrambled and reorganized and they were never sure exactly who carried through the functions that had previously been assigned to PB7.

Mr. Hunt. Well, I never heard any more about it.

Just for perhaps a bit more clarification, the labor unit or branch as it appeared in the PP staff following the merger, that had the same function and the same personnel as let's say whatever PB enumerated or numerical designations. So it's just a question of terminology. I can see that for chronological purposes you are interested in how I recall it, whether I recall it by a PB numercial designation or by -- But since I never knew what the Pash-[redacted] unit was designated, whether it was designated by a word or by a number, it doesn't help me at all. And for that reason I can't be of more assistance to you.

Just go see Colonel Pash. He's in such and such an office down there.

Mr. Baron. Off the record for a second.

(Discussion off the record)

Mr. Baron. For the record now, while we were off the record we agreed to continue this session a while to get into one or two other areas. But I have a couple of questions to tag on to the end of this one.

First of all, [redacted], in his testimony to the Committee, said that he had no recollection of a conversation with you where he was present, and you discussed assassination of a double agent, or the planning for such a mission with Colonel Pash and himself.

Do you, even having heard his testimony, still have a clear recollection that [redacted] was present when you had this conversation?

Mr. Hunt. I do, because to the best of my knowledge and belief, it was the first time that I had met [redacted] That is, I had seen him in the corridors, but it was the first time that I was able to append a name to the particular individual who I had come to recognize visually.

My memory is further jogged in this respect, that [redacted] having identified me as a member of the SE division of the staff, at a later time but not much later, talked to me about the possibility of his being assigned to the SE division. And my recollection of the conversation is that [redacted] told me that he was a great friend of [redacted] and that this friendship should be put to use for the Agency's benefit, and it could be best done by his being transferred to SE division for ultimate assignment to Athens.

Mr. Baron. Do you have from anything in your experience in the CIA any personal animosity toward Colonel Pash or [redacted]

Mr. Hunt. On the contrary. I've always regarded myself as a friend of [redacted], and I only had one contact with Boris Pash. And I have no feeling about him one way or the other except that in his recent book I read about his involvement in the Manhattan Project and I certainly admired his contribution to national security in that era.

End 2A, b. 2B

Mr. Baron. In [redacted] testimony, he gave us an account of an incident when he was stationed at [redacted] and he said that he had written a cable to CIA headquarters outlining a propaganda program because he was involved in propaganda operations at that point. And he said, unbeknownst to him, someone else in his station with the approval of the Chief of Station attached an extra paragraph to this cable which suggested the assassination of Chou En Lai in preparation for the Bandoeng Conference where Chou En Lai was supposed to be an important spokesman on behalf of many Asian nations.

And the way that [redacted] recounted the incident, he knew nothing about the paragraph that had been attached to his cable until the reply came back very strongly in the negative and eventually, a high ranking CIA official came out to [redacted] to reprimand everyone involved in the incident for suggesting assassination.

Do you have any recollection of that incident?

Mr. Hunt. No, I have no knowledge. What year does [redacted] refer to because I was in [redacted] in Tokyo from, oh, about '55 to '56 or '57. And I would have seen most of the traffic that came out of [redacted] in that period of time. But I don't know if -- I know that [redacted] stayed on in [redacted] much after my time in the Far East.

I don't know when the Bandoeng Conference took place. I remember it, of course, but I don't remember the year.

Mr. Baron. It appears to me that the Bandoeng Conference took place, according to [redacted] testimony, in 1955 and that the incident he was describing was either in '55 or late in '54.

Mr. Hunt. I had no recollection of it whatever. [redacted] is not suggesting that is some basis for personal animosity, I trust.

Mr. Baron. No. He did say, though, that you might have had knowledge of that suggestion, although he wasn't sure of it. He said you were involved at that time in a place where you might have seen cable traffic like that.

Mr. Hunt. That's quite right, but I never saw that traffic.

Mr. Baron. Let me pick up one last general question for the moment at least on assassinations.

Do you have any knowledge of even the consideration of assassinations at high levels of the American governemnt?

In other words, we have been using the term higher authority and I would like to use it for the moment now to refer to the level of the DCI or the National Security Council, the President, his close White House advisors, Cabinet officials, and the DCI.

Do you have any knowledge of any people at that level seriously considering assassination planning?

Mr. Hunt. No, none. I think you have to bear in mind to me and I was surprised when on invasion day Castro was alive. I now realize from testimony that Harvey and others have given that the matter had been discussed long before my arrival on the scene and it was in hand one way or the other.

Mr. Baron. When was your arrival on the scene?

Mr. Hunt. Spring of 1960. I transferred up, I actually made my trip to Havana the summer of 1960, and then we had the Bay of Pigs invasion the following April of '61.

Mr. Baron. Now it is my own recollection of our assassination report that no action was taken to carry out an assassination plan against Castro as early as the spring of 1960.

Did something --

Mr. Hunt. No. I've giving you, I guess, a bureaucratic answer. I was officially transferred back to Washington in the spring of 1960 and I took some leave en route in Spain [redacted]

Eventually I made my way back to Washington in the spring and early summer and got on the scene within a few days of my actually reporting into the project managers, i.e., Bissell and Barnes, who decided I would go down to Havana for a period of time, and I went down for about a week and came back, and by that time we were talking maybe July or so.

Mr. Baron. July of '60?

Mr. Hunt. That's correct.

Mr. Baron. Before we move away from Cuban operations, let me show you one cable that we have which is from Madrid and it appears to be to CIA headquarters because it is marked IN 75100, and it is dated September 16, 1964 in handwriting that was put on the copy that we have by the Agency.

This is not the original copy of the cable but it appears to be a copy that was deleted and paraphrased for the purposes of providing it to the Committee in the early days of our inquiry.

We will mark this as Exhibit 7.

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Hunt Exhibit No. 7)

Mr. Hunt. That can't conceivably have been a reference to me.

Mr. Baron. Why is that?

Mr. Hunt. Because I had not been involved in Cuban activities for more than three years at that time. I was purposely isolated from all Cuban activities after the Bay of Pigs.

Mr. Baron. You said you did operate out of Madrid for a period of time but it was later than September of '64?

Mr. Hunt. No. Let me clarify that.

I was sent to Madrid in either '64 or '65. I can't recall which, and I stayed there less than a year. [redacted] My communications were handled independently between myself and Tom Karramessines, who was then Deputy Director for Plans.

This was a project that had been laid on by Dick Helms. [redacted] and I had no Cuban activities of any kind.

Mr. Baron. And did you have any knowledge of a relationship, to a plan to assassinate Castro, supposedly to take place during a university ceremony?

Mr. Hunt. No.

Mr. Baron. Let's move on now to an entirely different area, and I will ask you to begin by describing your general role in the middle of the 1960s on the CA staff with regard to press publications or press placements or any responsibilities you may have had for media relations.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

Mr. Hunt. After Allen Dulles's resignation and retirement, I was assigned for about a period of a week to the CA staff and I then transferred to the newly set up Domestic Operations Division under Tracy Barnes, which was really the Commercial Operations Division, although it was never so-called.

I was the first Chief of Covert Action for the Domestic Operations Division and we inherited as a new division a number of projects that had been running for a period of time, that had been run by the commercial staff of the Agency and by a number of the geographic divisions.

The purpose of turning these ongoing projects over to the Domestic Operations Division was to centralize contacts with publishers in the United States for the benefit of geographic divisions such as the Asian or Far East Division which might want a book published on [redacted] for a particular purpose. They would come to Tracy Barnes with a particular request.

And I should say that the relationship with the [redacted] Publishing Company had been in existence for quite a period of time and I think they were managed by Cord Myer International Division, if I'm not mistaken, or possibly the CA staff. But what we received were ongoing operations. We were sent the case files for the [redacted] project, for the [redacted] project, for [redacted] organization, which had been operating out of [redacted] [redacted] Building in Washington. We had a project in [redacted] which I visited on one occasion called [redacted] which we ran out of a [redacted] Virginia office.

I had no personal media contacts with American magazines or newspapers, if that is the thrust of your question.

Mr. Baron. Actually, I'm interested in this whole area, both contacts with specific reporters or media people domestically or contacts with publishing houses or contacts abroad in the publishing field.

Mr. Hunt. Well, I've given you the names of the publishing houses that we had contact with. I did on one occasion meet and I can't recall the purpose of it, it was a very large textbook publishing house and their main offices were in New Jersey. If I had an annual for publishers, I could pull it out.

But beside from that publishing house, we never did any business with them. I don't recall of any publishing houses beyond [redacted] that is trade publishers, that we dealt with.

We had our own press agency, [redacted] which I imagine you're quite familiar with.

Mr. Hunt. Can you describe the standard mode of operating with these various publishing outlets?

In other words, how would you have supplied them with material? Would you urge them to publish a manuscript they already had from another source? Would you give them a manuscript that CIA personnel had written under a pseudonym?

Mr. Hunt. I don't think that ever took place, to my knowledge.

What I recall is [redacted] meeting with Tracy Barnes and me or individually, either in Washington or New York during this period and saying I have a great book I would love to publish, but it's not economically feasible, and I think it would be good for you people abroad for the following reasons. And we might come up with the differential or we might not.

I don't recall any Agency-created manuscripts that were sent to [redacted] or for that matter, any other publisher.

I recall we had a lot of accounting problems with [redacted] and finally we got really almost bogged down in arguments about back copies. It was a little on the nightmarish side. We did turn out some good books, but I couldn't give you a title at this point. But I'm sure that they are a matter of record within the Agency.

Mr. Baron. What was the nightmarish aspect of it?

Mr. Hunt. Well, apparently, before the project came under DOD, it had been handled on a very freewheeling basis by the previous project managers. [redacted] got everything he wanted from the Agency in terms of subsidy money and expense money and publicity money and that sort of thing and when we took it over it was brought under -- I hesitate to use the term professional management, but I do so in a qualified sense in that I was the only one, I guess, who knew anything about the publishing industry, who had ever been connected with the project. So I knew a little about it.

And at that time, with the help of our own commercial people within the Division, our accountants and auditors and so forth determined that there were a number of aspects of our fiduciary relationship with the [redacted] company that would bear greater investigation.

So the relationship from a freewheeling one prior to our DOD managerial take-over, it became from a freewheeling thing, it became sort of an unpleasant continuous argument about dollars and cents, rather than functional matters.

Mr. Baron. Out of what funds at the CIA did these monies come from that we were giving to [redacted]

Mr. Hunt. I wouldn't have any idea, project money.

Mr. Baron. Who signed off on the project money?

Mr. Hunt. Well, it would depend on how much it cost. I think that Karamessines could sign off up to $50,000 and beyond that it had to be signed off on by Helms, I think. That's my best recollection. And I don't know -- as annual review was conducted, and of course the division chief had to approve it.

Mr. Baron. Did the operation involve companies other than the ones you've mentioned? In other words, supplying funds to companies other than the ones you've already mentioned?

Mr. Hunt. I don't know of any. None that I knew of. I would be very surprised if a memorandum showed up saying that we were dealing with Random House, for example. I just don't recall now.

Mr. Baron. Was there any other aspect to your liaison with these publishing houses other than their seeking funds to publish books that you were interested in having published?

Mr. Hunt. Only this, that the USIA was, I think, finally brought into a formal relationship with DOD, at least my part of it, and the head of the book division at USIA and I would meet from time to time and he would indicate that he had a good one that we really ought to do rather than USIA and vice versa. And he knew fully of the [redacted] relationship.

Mr. Baron. Can you describe the process that you would go through to ensure the publication of a book that the CIA was interested in having published? An example that I was given by somebody on our staff who has been looking into this was books written by or ghosted for Chinese [redacted]

Mr. Hunt. As I recall it, the Chinese branch sort of ran a parallel operation. I don't recaall their coming through us. I don't recall a [redacted] book when I was in that particular job. What I do recall is, I remember the Near East Branch brining to our attention a book that they would like to have [redacted] publish, and it had to do with the [redacted] dispute, the name of which I can't recall. So the manuscript would have been read by [redacted] or his principal assistant, and he would give an indication of what he thought the marketability was. And at that point -- well, in this instance, we got the funds from the Near East Division. When it came down to that, why should DOD, who had no interest in the [redacted] dispute, provide money for that particular piece of propaganda. So the money would be transferred somehow from the Near East Division's allocation. It would be their project, but we would be the managers of it when it got down to the point of dealing face to face with [redacted] on the matter. My office would keep the division apprised of the project, when publication could be expected, and so forth.

Mr. Baron. Were there any other CIA publishing proprietaries than the two you have mentioned, [redacted]

Mr. Hunt. That I had personal knowledge of within the Domestic Operations Division, no.

Mr. Baron. You qualified that by saying within the Domestic Operations Division. Were there others?

Mr. Hunt. Because the international operations or International Organizational Division under Cord Myer, ran quite a few things in conjunction with the Congress for Cultural Freedom, for example. Radio Free Europe, those things that went on.

Mr. Baron. Did CIA do ghostwriting for non-CIA publications?

Mr. Hunt. I ghosted a couple of -- I'm very reluctant to go into this, although I have discussed it with John Crowdson. But this is another one of those difficult areas where it's very hard for me to prove.

There came a time in the spring of, I think it was the spring of about 1969, when the Soviet Russia Division asked me if I could cause to have published something on the -- by this time I was no longer with the Domestic Operation Division. I was with Western Europe -- on the increasing use by the [redacted]nd things like that, and Christ, I hope this doesn't get out.

And so I went to Helms. Howard Osborne was then Chief of the Division, as I recall. He was late Director of Security, and this had been staffed out. And I prepared the article and it appeared in large portions unchanged under the byline of [redacted] And it was not a fabricated article. It was just information which was supplied which he wrote somewhat in his own style, and there was a second article which appeared a month or two months later, and this was done by Dick Helms.

Mr. Baron. Also under [redacted] byline?

Mr. Hunt. Yes. You could understand the difficulties involved here and I don't need any more enemies. I have plenty.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

Now that is my own personal contribution to that sort of thing. But I can't think of anything else that was done.

Mr. Baron. By other people? Was it a general practice to supply either prefabricated articles or the material for articles to favorable press contacts in this country?

Mr. Hunt. Well, we know about the [redacted] book, [redacted] which was largely a cooperative venture with the Agency, and that was done by the SR Division.

You are aware of that, aren't you?

Now in that case, you see, the SR reached out on its own. Penkoski Papers was another example. We had nothing to do with that in DOD. That was done, again, by SR division. And I can understand why.

But basically, in answer to your question, I have given you everything that I have personal knowledge of.

Mr. Baron. When you made the arrangement with [redacted] [redacted]

Mr. Hunt. I made no arrangement with him.

Mr. Baron. Who handled liaison with him?

Mr. Hunt. Dick Helms.

Mr. Baron. And was that a one-on-one arrangement or were there other people knowledgeable?

Mr. Hunt. I believe it was a one-on-one, old school tie arrangement.

Mr. Baron. Was there any list kept at the CIA of favorable

Frederick A. Praeger organization. I felt that a strict construction of the CIA charter made the project quite suspect because if we were doing a book, for example, on Indonesian Communism, who was the target? It would have been highly inappropriate for United States citizens to be the target of the particular book, and we did a hell of a good book on Indonesian Communism. It became about this thick. I can't recall the title.

End Tape 2B

If your targets are foreign, then where are they? They don't all necessarily read English, and we had a [redacted] So unless the book goes into a lot of languages or it is published in India, for example, where English is a lingua franca, then you have some basic problems. And I think the way this was rationalized by the project review board that looked over the [redacted] operation, and the [redacted] and [redacted] and things like that was that the ultimate target was formed, which was true, but how much of the [redacted] output actually got abroad for any impact I think is highly arguable.

Now, in the case of [redacted] the material was physically mailed from Washington to foreign targets, the [redacted] newspapers, I think particularly the [redacted] Agency was a client. The mere fact that the project was rooted in the United States gave it sort of a credibility lustre abroad in that particular era. If it came out of Washington then it was probably okay.

But I -- [redacted] had no domestic U.S. papers as clients. What I'm trying to get at is that DOD handled operations which were based domestically in the United States, the commercial operations, and this includes proprietary airlines and things like that, whose ultimate target was abroad. The principal target or even a tangential target was not the United States citizen.

Mr. Baron. But, with anything that was published in English, the United States citizenry would become a likely audience for the publication?

Mr. Hunt. A likely audience, definitely.

Mr. Baron. Did you take some sort of steps to make sure that things that were published in English were kept out of or away from the American reading public?

Mr. Hunt. It was impossible because [redacted] was a commercial U.S. publisher. His books had to be seen, had to be reviewed, had to be bought here, had to be read. Again I say it was a matter of great difficulty. Mr. Barnes resolved all that philosophically, and I simply carried out the dicta.

Mr. Baron. What was your philosophical opinion of the danger of propagandizing Americans?

Mr. Hunt. Well, I knew that it was not a part of the Agency charter, and it was a matter that the USIA looked at. I talked about it occasionally. The USIA coincidentally had come under some criticism at that time for subsidizing certain publishers in the United States. That became known; I don't recall how. I discussed with the USIA book man and with Barnes the danger that we might be criticized for the same reasons. I was never enchanted with the [redacted] operation. I thought it cost far too much money and had minimal benefits abroad, and further, we had the liability, the vulnerability to quite reasonable critcism that we had U.S. citizens as a target, or an audience, I should say.

Mr. Baron. Were there any precautions taken against dissemination in America of publications by CIA proprietaries in English?

Mr. Hunt. Proprietaries, well, my only personal knowledge is the [redacted] operation which I say was simply mailed out of Washington. That was the only precaution, rather than our people mailing them themselves.

Mr. Baron. Were any techniques used to prevent contamination of American intelligence by picking up on things that the CIA was actually publishing or arranging to have published?

Mr. Hunt. I would assume so, and I would guess that that would be done in the first instance by the knowledgeability of the reports officers in the various geographic divisions at headquarters who would scan newspapers, for example, or they would receive raw reports from [redacted] let's say, and see that there had been a big sale of a particular book which we had sponsored, which they knew we had sponsored but nobody else knew. Of course, [redacted] would have known about it, too.

So I would say that it was a pretty good fail-safe. The area of knowledgeability was high. For one thing, I traveled some in those days. I traveled to Bombay. I talked to the [redacted] there. I traveled to New Delhi and talked to [redacted] there, who was my CA opposite number, and keep them up to date as to what we were planning. I would do the same in France and so forth.

Mr. Baron. Were there any specific instances that you know of of an eventual placement in the U.S. press of a story that the CIA generated or fabricated abroad somewhere? For instance, a story could conceivably be picked up by the UPI or by Reuters that the CIA had planted abroad.

Mr. Hunt. I can't recall anything significant. I would guess that during the Cuban, during the days of maximum Cuban operation that sort of thing happened. I would think it would be unavoidable, but I can't specify.

Mr. Baron. And are there any other instances than things you have mentioned of direct placements of stories in the U.S. press by the CIA?

Mr. Hunt. I have mentioned the [redacted] which was a cooperative venture with [redacted] the two [redacted] things. No, I can't recall.

Mr. Baron. I touched earlier upon the possibility of disseminating derogatory information about Agency targets. These were you aware of any general program of that nature to discredit either a foreign political leader or a foreign political faction, or domestic political groups or leaders?

Mr. Hunt. To the latter question, no. Domestic, I am not aware of any.

I think the Soviet Russia division was quite active, and it kept a list, for example, and maintained a very good list of KGB officers abroad, and when one would show up at Luanda, for example, they would make sure that the local press got the man's dossier, or at least a blind handout so that they would know who the fellow was, much as the Butz counterspy operation is doing today against the CIA.

Mr. Baron. Did you make arrangements, or did you know of arrangements being made for non-CIA authors to write pieces that were favorable to the CIA?

Mr. Hunt. No.

Mr. Baron. There was no funding of that kind of operaton?

Mr. Hunt. You mean sort of flackery, the favorable publicity for the Agency, is that what you imply?

Mr. Baron. Right.

Mr. Hunt. No.

Mr. Baron. What about subsidizing non-CIA authors to write stories of any sort, or books of any sort that the CIA was interested in having published?

Mr. Hunt. I would say this in a qualified sense. Where in the past we had given [redacted] a commitment to buy X copies of his book on the [redacted] problem, obviously we were subsidizing the author of that book because it was our money that [redacted] was ultimately passing to the individual, but that was [redacted] doing it rather than us. In other words, there was never any face to face contact.

Mr. Baron. Aside from dealing through publishing houses that you had established contact with, did you deal individually with authors who were non-CIA employees?

Mr. Hunt. I did not. I don't think DOD did. I think that Far East Division did.

Mr. Baron. Do you know with whom?

Mr. Hunt. You mentioned Chinese [redacted] for example. Well, they dealt also, the Soviet Russia division dealt with [redacted] on the Penkoski case. In fact, I had lunch with [redacted] while he was doing the Penkoski Papers. So that was an example.

Mr. Baron. Did they have a regular program?

Mr. Hunt. Yes, I think so.

Mr. Baron. Both of those two divisions?

Mr. Hunt. Yes.

Mr. Baron. Is there anything else that you think we would need in order to have a fairly clear, complete picture of the relations to the media or the publishing industry?

Mr. Hunt. Well, I think you could get probably a good deal more information from Cord Myer, who had a lot of that directly under him when he was Chief of the International Organizations Division, and of course, he served as Deputy Chief of Clandestine Services for quite a while. He would probably have as panoramic knowledge as anybody. I guess he's was that we had made the -- the President had given certain undertakings to Cuban leadership and to our own paramilitary people, and had failed to carry them out.

However, this fact was successfully disguised for a number of years, but Dulles and Dick Bissell paid the price.

In any events, the Bay of Pigs cost Dulles his leadership of the Agency, and I had the utmost respect for him. I was associated with him as an assistant for the special Cuban Bay of Pigs purposes, for a period of several months prior to, perhaps six months prior to his eventual retirement.

I had had occasional contacts with him as a [redacted] [redacted] and I had seen him in Japan when he came over there and we had some discussions. Mr. Dulles brought into the formal Central Intelligence Agency the same feeling of esprit de corps that we had all enjoyed in the Office of Strategic Services, and this was largely lost during the McCone directorship. And I think we had some admiral after that, Admiral Radford, possibly. We got under a group of managers, and the human element that we had enjoyed in OSS was gone with the passage of Allen Dulles until Dick Helms came back in. You see, I'm an unrepentent admirer of Allen Dulles and the way we used to do business. Why do I say that? Because the way we did business during Mr. Dulles's directorate was precisely the way we did it in OSS during General Donovan's creation and direction of that organization. In OSS, which was Allan Dulles's training ground as much

Retired Colonel Denies Heading C.I.A. Unit for Assassinations

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 — A retired Army colonel has denied to Senate investigators an assertion by E. Howard Hunt Jr. that the colonel once headed a Central Intelligence Agency unit set up to arrange for the assassinations of suspected double-agents.

The colonel, Boris T. Pash, told the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence yesterday that during 1954 and 1955—the period in which Mr. Hunt, a former C.I.A. officer, said he was told that Colonel Pash ran such an operation—he had left the C.I.A. and returned to military service.

In a statement made public by the panel today, Colonel Pash termed Mr. Hunt's assertions "insidious and completely false.

He said he could not recall ever having met or spoken with Mr. Hunt, who is serving a prison term for his role in the Watergage case.

Nor, the colonel said, was he ever "involved in any assassination planning" between 1949 and 1951, the period in which he was temporarily assigned to the C.I.A., or at any other time in his career.

Mr. Hunt said in a recent interview that during his service with the C.I.A.'s Balkans division in the mid-1950's he had discussed with Colonel Pash, at his superiors' behest, the prospective assassination of an individual who was believed to be a double agent.

"I was told that we had that capability," Mr. Hunt said in the interview, and "that the guy to see about this sort of things was Colonel Pash."

Mr. Hunt, who said that he had understood that Colonel Pash was deceased, added that he did discuss the matter with the colonel, who seemed shocked "that the subject has ever been brought up," and that the matter consequently was left there.

Investigators for the Senate committee are now attempting to interview Mr. Hunt about this assertion, a committee spokesman said.

SPANISH TROOPS RUN SUBWAY IN MADRID

MADRID, Jan. 7 (AP)—The Spanish Army began running the Madrid subway system today as the Government moved gingerly to break a three-day wildcat strike that set off the worst traffic snarl in the city's history.

Fearing a possible labor backlash, the Government refrained for the moment, however, from drafting the rebellious subway workers into service.

About 3,000 electric company workers marched into the center of Madrid in support of the subway workers and the police used tear gas to disperse them. The police said they broke up similar demonstrations by factory workers on the city's outskirts. No arrests or injuries were reported.

Army personnel trained as railroad engineers reopened the main subway line, which runs through the center of the capital between working-class neighborhoods. Passengers were admitted free.

MADRID, Jan. 7 (Reuters)—Striking Madrid subway workers tonight voted to defy Government pressure and to continue their walk-out. Strike leaders said they would hold out until their wage demands were met.

The strikers voted not to accept an offer from the official Government-run union to hold talks if they returned to work.

BARCELONA, Spain, Jan. 7 (AP)—The Rev. Luis María Xirinachs, an outspoken Roman Catholic priest nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize last year, was arrested today while demonstrating near the local prison in support of amnesty for political prisoners, police sources said.

Exhibit 1

STATEMENT BY E. HOWARD HUNT

A year ago when Congress established the Church Committee, Senator Baker was quoted as saying that I would be an early witness. I was then free on Appeal and readily available to testify concerning CIA involvement in allegedly illegal activities. Moreover, I viewed testifying before the Committee as a further opportunity to testify under oath concerning my total non - involvement with Messrs Oswald, Bremer and Sirhan, persons with whom my name has been slanderously and libelously linked in press and electronic media. Although I had been interviewed previously by the FBI and the Rockefeller Commission with regard to these allegations a host of assassination buffs and media advocates continued irresponsibly to associate me with the deaths of the Kennedy brothers and the crippling of Governor Wallace.

My Appeal denied, I re-entered prison in April,1975. Three weeks later US Marshals escorted me to Washington DC for what turned out to be a three-hour interview with a new Watergate Assistant Special Prosecutor. For a 9-day period I was lodged at the Leesburg, Va., jail,and finally returned via Detroit and Tallahassee where I was imprisoned in the isolation area before being driven on May 26 to Eglin Federal Prison Camp. On May 27, Assistant Committee Counsel Michael Madigan telephoned me to say that the Church Committee wanted to interview me "within the next two weeks". I apprised Mr. Madigan of Public Law 93-209, Title 18. Sec.4082(c) Para. 1 (amended) which authorises minimum security prisoners such as myself to be furloughed for up to 30 days for purposes of testifying. Counsel Madigan agreed to my testifying on this furlough basis.

Over the summer,however, I heard nothing further from Mr. Madigan or his Committee associates. Then in mid-September a Washington POST story alleged that I had been assigned by a White House superior to assassinate columnist Jack Anderson. Senator Church was thereupon quoted as saying that his Committee would investigate the charges. I welcomed this apparent opportunity, for the allegations had gained wide credence while my own delayed response appeared only incompletely in the press. Still, nothing was heard from the Committee.

In December 1975 John Crewdson of the New York Times interviewed me in prison. He asked if I knew anything about "CIA assassination capabilities", and I related to him my encounter with Col. Boris T. Pash. Mr. Crewdson then inquired whether the Church Committee had interviewed me. I responded in terms of the foregoing, noting that I would have testified about the Pash encounter had I been given the publicized opportunities. My interview with Mr. Crewdson was published and shortly thereafter my attorney was contacted by a representative of the Committee.

I consider it highly discriminatory that the Committee is unwilling to have me testify in Washington as a furloughed witness. Further, the Committee's refusal to postpone interviewing me in prison until one of two counsel familiar with my career and affairs is available places me in a difficult position with regard to representation by informed legal counsel. And, as during the Ervin Committee hearings (whose cost in legal fees to me approached $100,000) I must again pay legal fees occasioned by the interest of the Senate in a matter of no discernible benefit to me.

Between last January and April I could freely have traveled to Washington to testify at the pleasure of the Senate. From then on I could have been furloughed for that purpose and testified accompanied by customary counsel who are not now available to me. Nevertheless, in demonstration of my willingness to cooperate fully with the Senate I agree to be interviewed under oath today.

Mr. Schwarz. These are minutes of the Special Group which you attended, and it states: "Mr. Harvey gave a rundown on progress to date with agent teams and in the general field of intelligence, including the Opa-locka interrogation center and [redacted]. He outlined various difficulties encountered and said that three agent teams had been infiltrated."

Now did Mr. Harvey, at that meeting, state anything -- do you recollect Mr. Harvey making that report?

General Lansdale. In general terms, yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Did he state anything relating to the passage of pills to persons to accomplish the assassination of Fidel Castro in the week prior to this meeting?

General Lansdale. No. As a matter of fact, we were very proud that he had gotten these teams in, that they had been infiltrated, and so forth, and collecting intelligence.

Mr. Schwarz. Were they the first teams?

General Lansdale. Yes.

Mr. Schwarz. Did he say anything at that meeting that you recall about the subject of assassinations?

General Lansdale. Nothing.

Mr. Schwarz. Would you give the witness the May 7th '62 memorandum of General Taylor, Subject, Report of Progress to Higher Authority?

Now, Senators, that is supposedly slipped in your notebooks

I. OBJECTIVE

The U.S. objective is to help the Cubans overthrow the Communist regime from within Cuba and institute a new government with which the United States can live in peace.

II. CONCEPT OF OPERATION

Basically, the operation is to bring about the revolt of the Cuban people. The revolt will overthrow the Communist regime and institute a new government with which the United States can live in peace.

The revolt requires a strongly motivated political action movement established within Cuba, to generate the revolt, to give it direction towards the objective, and to capitalize on the climactic moment. The political actions will be assisted by economic warfare to induce failure of the Communist regime to supply Cuba's economic needs, psychological operations to turn the peoples' resentment increasingly against the regime, and military-type groups to give the popular movement an action arm for sabotage and armed resistance in support of political objectives.

The failure of the U.S.-sponsored operation in April 1961 so shook the faith of Cuban patriots in U.S. competence and intentions in supporting a revolt against Castro that a new effort to generate a revolt against the regime in Cuba must have active support from key Latin American countries. Further, the foreigness (Soviet Union and Bloc) of the tyranny imposed on the Cuban people must be made clear to the people of the Western Hemisphere to the point of their deep anger and open actions to defend the Western Hemisphere against such foreign invasion. Such an anger will be generated, in part, by appeals from the popular movement within Cuba to other Latin Americans especially.

The preparation phase must result in a political action organization in being in key localities inside Cuba, with its own means for internal communications, its own voice for psychological operations, and its own action arm (small guerrilla bands, sabotage squads, etc.). It must have the sympathetic support of the majority of the Cuban people, and make this fact known to the outside world. (It is reported that the majority of Cubans are not for the present regime, but are growing apathetic towards what appears to be a hopeless future or the futility of their status.)

The climactic moment of revolt will come from an angry reaction of the people to a government action (sparked by an incident), or from a fracturing of the leadership cadre within the regime, or both. (A major goal of the Project must be to bring this about.) The popular movemen

Status: Equipment to enable TV intrusion of Havana TV broadcasts has been reactivated on a small vessel under CIA control. CIA plans to attempt intrusion on 22 January during Castro's forthcoming speech and parade demonstrations.

I. Special sabotage support

Status: State has explored, with negative results, the feasibility of pre-emptive action with respect to tanker charters (most Bloc shipments to Cuba are carried in Western bottoms). CIA has initiated action to contaminate POL supplies for Cuba, although visible results (stoppage of some Cuban transport) is not expected until mid-1962. CIA is introducing [redacted] a corrosive additive, to Cuban locomotive diesel fuel oil through commercial suppliers [redacted] CIA expects to be able to have at least one agent recruited by 28 February to attempt introduction of a corrosive additive to jet fuel storage tanks in Cuba.

J. Military actions

Status: Defense has been tasked with preparing a contingency plan for U.S. military action, in case the Cuban people request U.S. help when their revolt starts making headway. This contingency plan will permit obtaining a policy decision on the major point of U.S. intentions, and is looked upon as a positive political-psychological factor in a people's revolt, even more than as a possible military action. Defense also has been tasked with fully assisting State and CIA, as commitments of Defense men, money, and materiel are required.

K. Major elements of the population

Status: Both State and CIA are continuing to explore their capabilities (with results largely negative to date) for mounting special group operations inside Cuba focused upon dynamic elements of the population, particularly operations through the Church to reach the women and families, and through Labor contacts to reach the workers. Other elements include enlistment of the youth and professional groupings. Special consideration is to be given to doing this through Latin American operational contacts. This is vital to the success of our political action nucleus when CIA can put it into place.

L. Outlook

Status: As reported to the Special Group last week, there has been a period of a realistic second look at CIA capabilities to mount the required clandestine operations against Cuba, and a subsequent start in "tooling up." After this second look, CIA has concluded that its realistic role should be to create at least the illusion of a popular movement, to win external support for it, to improve CIA operational capability, and to help create a climate which will permit provocative actions in support of a shift to overt action. This outlook, although arrived at thoughtfully within CIA, is far short of the Cuba project's goals. CIA must take yet another hard look at its potential capabilities, in the light of the following tasking, to determine if it cannot make the greater effort required.

V. TARGET SCHEDULE

A. Intelligence

Task 1: NIE 85-62 on Cuba due 7 February (CIA).

Task 2: By 15 February, Opa Locka Interrogation Center to be made an effective operation for collection and processing of intelligence (CIA with support of Defense, State, I&NS, FBI).

Task 3: Intelligence collection from Cuban refugees elsewhere than Miami area. CIA to survey other refugee points (Puerto Rico, [redacted] etc.) and on a priority basis to ensure maximum coverage of all such source points. 15 February target date.

Task 4: CIA to continue its re-examination of intelligence assets, with priority on agents inside Cuba, and report on capability by 15 February. Also included is coverage of intelligence through third country sources, particularly those having diplomatic relations with Cuba.

B. Political

Task 5: CIA to submit plan by 1 February for defection of top Cuban government officials, to fracture the regime from within. This effort must be imaginative and bold enough to consider a "name" defector to be worth at least a million U.S. dollars. This can be the key to our political action goal and must be mounted without delay as a major CIA project.

Task 6: CIA to complete plans by 1 February for Cover and Deception actions, to help fracture the Communist regime in Cuba. Defense, State and FBI are to collaborate on this.

Task 7: By 1 February, CIA to submit operations schedule for initiating popular movement within Cuba. This must include localities selected inside Cuba, assessment of selected Cubans, their infiltration, activity assignments, and political platform. One section must deal with the "underground," assess its true status and plans to use it.

Task 8: State to follow up the OAS meeting by having U.S. Embassies in Latin America exploit all opportunities to enlist local sympathy for the Cuban people and to increase hostility towards the Communist regime in Cuba. State to submit report on results of this assignment by 13 February, so further planning can be programmed.

Task 9: By 15 February, State to submit an inventory of operational assets in the Caribbean area, including capabilities of local governments or groups to mount operations on their own, to help achieve the Project's goals. Plans for early use of such capabilities are due by 19 February.

Task 10: CIA to submit operational schedule for using assets in the Caribbean area to achieve the Project's political action goals. The objective of working on dynamic elements of the Cuban population (such as workers, farmers) is underscored. Due 19 February.

Noting that you will be away from the country most of the month of February, there are some matters vital to our Project for which we should provide. Certain proposals should have evidence of your support. Some strong decisions may have to be made if our Project is to win its goal -- and the bureaucratic machine has too many people captive to it, one way or another.

It is my hope that you will make someone specifically responsible to speak for your determined course and have the role of being your "presence" as far as possible. This demands a personal conviction, freedom from bureaucratic instincts, and reasonably direct access to the President. Perhaps Dick Goodwin could fulfill this role. Secretary McNamara is an alternate suggestion; he has so many irons in the fire that I hesitated mentioning him. You might be considering General Taylor, but I do not believe he can quite play this role; he is still too much a fine military bureaucrat at heart.

FILE N. B.

As you know, I remain convinced that our goal can be won. Perhaps, if we can keep forcing U.S. agencies to work hard at it, the goal can be won through their efforts. Yet, their efforts haven't been impressive to date, and I still feel that we might uncork the touchdown play independently of the institutional program we are spurring.

F. SABOTAGE SUPPORT PLAN

ACTIVITY	PURPOSE	CONSIDERATIONS
1. Sabotage Cuban supply of nickel to Soviets.	To deny supply to Soviets and to hinder Cuba's ability to pay for Bloc imports.	This can be an early sabotage action on the Nicaro Plant by a hit-and-run team based outside Cuba. Destruction of transformers, coolant pumps and towers seems more feasible than blocking the channel. Effect can be supported later by denial of [redacted] spare parts.
2. Sabotage fuel supply.	To cripple transportation.	Effects of CIA program of lubricating oil additive is expected on locomotives [redacted] Much more can be done with fuel contaminants, particularly on jet and diesel fuels. Crews aboard Western tankers offer real opportunity for more vigorous program.
3. Sabotage communications.	To dramatize and encourage the spirit of resistance.	Prime targets for hit-and-run teams based outside Cuba are CMQ TV and the Czech radio transmitter (believed now used to jam U.S. broadcasts). Attacks mounted only when operationally feasible. The G-2 micro-wave net should be dealt with when there are sufficient assets inside to make sabotage coincide with a critical need, in August-September.
4. Sabotage power supply.	To increase strain on regime and bring daily business to a standstill, by dramatic action all people will note.	This should be a concerted attack, as feasible in July-August, on power plants at Havana, Santiago, Cinfuegas, Vicente, Santa Clara, Cuatro Caminos, Matanzas. It is of a type requiring detailed planning and special equipment, and can be mounted from outside Cuba.

ACTIVITY	PURPOSE	CONSIDERATIONS
4. * Caribbean Admission Center, Opa-Locka, Florida, fully activated by 15 March 1962.	To collect intelligence required for the operations, to identify and earmark intelligence assets as refugees arrive, and to provide security against Communist agent operations.	This operation, in response to early recommendation as essential by the Chief of Operations, is moving at utmost speed to become fully active by 15 March, with a new building completed and occupied, and with a staff of 43 at work. Operations commenced 15 February and, as of 9 March, 33 people were active at the Center. (CIA responsibility, with support by Defense, Justice, State, USIA.)
5. * Periodic intelligence estimates, as required by progress of operations.	To up-date NIE 85-62, so that current estimates can be considered at national policy levels.	As the operations develop, there will be both increased intelligence collection and a need for as current an Intelligence Estimate as the U.S. can produce meaningfully. It is likely that a more informal method of producing an Intelligence Estimate for use at the national level (than now governing the issuance of NIE's) may have to be followed. CIA is now publishing daily intelligence summaries on Cuba and is planning a bi-monthly or weekly report summing up intelligence for this purpose. (CIA responsibility, with support of others as required.)
OTHER OPERATIONS
6. * Continue negotiating [redacted] in contaminating locomotive lubricants.	To cripple Cuba's rail transportation.	[redacted] is required to undertake a successful sabotage of Cuban locomotives, through contaminating lubricants. It is expected that a minimum of 3 months is required before locomotives in Cuba start breaking down, once the contaminant is introduced.
	16 - 31 March 1962
INTELLIGENCE OPERATIONS
7. * Two teams of agents dispatched to Cuba.	To collect intelligence.	One team of 4 and one team of 3 agents. Both teams include personnel who have had resistance training and some past experience.

ACTIVITY	PURPOSE	CONSIDERATIONS
8. Establish 2 additional third-country resident agents in Cuba.	To collect intelligence.	Possible future use in communications and support.
9. By 31 March, have 105 agents selected and 50 agents trained.	To ready agent operations.	Effectiveness and numbers are dependent upon purpose of recruitment, nature of training, and policy decisions controlling these factors. If the recruitment and training are for resistance activities, the task of recruitment and training will be much less difficult than if they are limited to intelligence-collection purposes only.
10.* Develop intelligence potential of Cuban "colonies" in U. S.	To exploit the intelligence possibilities of former residents of Cuba (including U. S. citizens) now in the United States.	There are "colonies" in Washington, D. C., and other U. S. cities which are "little Cubas." Family, Church, and business interests provoke unusual personal ties inside Cuba for some of these residents; a real potential exists for collection of intelligence not otherwise available. (FBI support and coordination is basic in this effort.)
11. * Develop additional interrogation centers in other areas by 31 March 1962.	To collect intelligence in a Latin atmosphere, at different levels than now seem possible in the continental U. S., to spot additional intelligence assets and to provide security against Communist agent operations.	As Opa-Locka becomes fully activated, CIA will activate other interrogation centers as promptly as feasible. A center is being activated in [redacted] Negotiations with local authorities are being undertaken to activate centers, if possible, in [redacted] San Juan, Puerto Rico, [redacted] are being surveyed for possible centers. (CIA responsibility with support by others as necessary.)

OTHER OPERATIONS

None.

Subject: Policy Questions, Operation Mongoose

CIA HAS NO OBJECTION TO DECLASSIFICATION AND/OR RELEASE OF THIS DOCUMENT

SL 3/24/94

de sanitized 1(a)

As Operation Mongoose goes into the approved activities of Phase I, a number of policy questions have started to arise. Current problems, needing resolution, are listed below. It is requested that the Special Group (Augmented) provide guidance, as a matter of some urgency.

1. Use of U.S. military installations. CIA desires to train small groups of Cuban nationals [redacted], immediately. Defense reports that the proposed area is adequate for this training, but that such training of covert agents who will be introduced ultimately into Cuba represents a security problem and a departure from past security procedures, due to the fact that U.S. Government sponsorship will be apparent to trainees. Capture and interrogation of any of these covert agents could result in exposure (in international news media) of U.S. official involvement in efforts to unseat the present Communist Cuban regime. A policy determination is needed as to whether or not agents to be infiltrated into Cuba should be trained on U.S. Government installations.

There are other U.S. military installations and properties, in the Southeastern U.S. and Caribbean areas, which CIA would like to use for similar training and operational purposes in the future. The same policy determination could cover all uses of identifiable U.S. Government properties for training and deployment of Cuban nationals for covert infiltration into Cuba.

2. Arming of Cuban guerrillas. CIA needs a policy determination on the supplying of arms and equipment to deserving Cuban guerrillas, as they are located, assessed, and request help. Such requests are starting to surface, as the intelligence-collection effort is increased, and it is

MEMORANDUM FOR RECORD

SUBJECT: Minutes of Meeting of Special Group (Augmented) on Project Mongoose, 3 May 1962

PRESENT: General Taylor; Mr. Kennedy; Mr. Johnson; Mr. Gilpatric, General Decker, General Lansdale and General Craig; Mr. McCone, and Mr. Harvey

1. General Lansdale gave an interim report on the progress of stepping up recruitment of Cubans into the U. S. Army. He said the consensus is that there are not more than a thousand suitable individuals from whom additional recruits could be selected. The Attorney General commented that the President wishes to have a large number. General Lansdale said that various alternatives for training of such Cubans are being looked into.

It was agreed that such a cadre of Cubans would be an asset to the U.S., which might be used in a number of ways. General Lansdale, supported by General Taylor, pointed out that in this connection the matter of holding the individuals and giving them useful employment after they are trained is an important and a difficult one.

2. Mr. Harvey gave a rundown on progress to date with agent teams and in the general field of intelligence, including the Opa-locka interrogation center and the [redacted] clandestine interrogation center. He outlined various difficulties encountered, and said that three agent teams have been infiltrated and that five W/T sets are in place. Approximately 72 actual or potential reporting sources are also in place. A significant development is that Major Duque has refused to allow agents responsive to him to be dispatched on purely intelligence-gathering missions. (This sort of attitude had been forecast earlier as a possibility, but it now assumes particular importance in view of Duque's stature.)

3. Mr. Harvey also commented on the two attempts made to intrude into Havana TV programs. The Group asked that a check be made, as soon as possible, on how effective these operations were. They also asked that a copy of the scripts used be made available. The Group felt that it is worthwhile to check this capability out, as is now being done, but questioned whether once proved effective it should not perhaps be kept in reserve for a more meaningful time.

for AMUTS?

Mr. Sarno. I think from December, 1961 or January, 1962 to September, 1967. Then from June -- August, 1968 to September, 1969.

Mr. Wides. Now let me go back, and can you give us a very brief summary of your positions with the Agency prior to that? I don't mean detailed as to what you were doing.

Mr. Sarno. I joined the Agency in September of 1951.

Mr. Wides. Yes?

Mr. Sarno. I was assigned to three countries before I hit Florida.

Mr. Wides. All in the Western Hemisphere Division?

Mr. Sarno. All in the Western Hemisphere.

Mr. Wides. So you had rather long stations in each of those, three or four years?

Mr. Sarno. (Nods in the affirmative)

Mr. DeMarco. When did you become an American citizen?

Mr. Sarno. I was born in Ohio.

Mr. DeMarco. Had you been stationed with Mr. Phillips in Cuba before you came to Miami, or were you in Cuba before you came to Miami?

Mr. Sarno. Yes.

Mr. Wides. And that is when Mr. Noel was the Chief?

Mr. Sarno. Jim Noel was the Chief.

Mr. Wides. And you had contact with Mr. Phillips then?

Mr. Wides. You never heard of any plots, nor of any arrested people attempting to shoot a bazooka when he was giving a speech at Havana Stadium?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. Let me go to the period when you went to Florida.

When you first came here, that was before Station Chief [redacted] had moved the whole station to Miami?

Mr. Sarno. [redacted] wasn't there. When I arrived in Florida, [redacted] was not then -- no, sir, he was not the station chief.

Mr. Wides. Who was the station chief?

Mr. Sarno. I don't think I should give you his name. I don't know. YOu have the rest of all of them, but I can't recall --

I can state that there were two station chiefs between [redacted] and Shackley, three of them, in fact.

Mr. Wides. Shackley came in when, 1963?

Mr. Sarno. '62.

Mr. Wides. When in '62?

Mr. Sarno. I think the spring of '62 is when it was.

Mr. Wides. When was he replaced by Mr. Dimmer?

Mr. Sarno. If I am not mistaken, it was in '64, I think. June, July, I think, something like that, of '64.

Mr. Wides. And then Mr. Dimmer was replaced in '66 by Mr. [redacted] [redacted]

Mr. Sarno. [redacted]

Mr. Wides. And then Mr. Esterline replaced Mr. [redacted] or was there someone between?

Mr. Sarno. Mr. Esterline did not replace Mr. [redacted] Nobody replaced [redacted] because they closed up the station.

Mr. Wides. We understand that the station was operating very recently.

Mr. Sarno. Well, I'm not saying -- you see, the station you spoke to before, you spoke of, went out of business in June of 1960 when Mr. [redacted] left.

Mr. Wides. I see.

Now, what was the relationship between yourself and the station? Administratively, and in terms of reporting, when you first went down there.

Mr. Sarno. When I first went down there, I was outside. I believe it was concerning clearances to get me into the station, because I had never been working in a station before, so there were special clearances. So at that time, those two months you're speaking of, I attended a course and I may have been sent out once or twice to interview a Cuban refugee or one of our agents who had left Cuba.

Mr. Wides. And then you set up the [redacted] program? Did you start that project, or was that started when you came in?

Mr. Sarno. It had been started, the nucleus had been formed at that time.

Mr. Wides. And except where there's a question of an agent under cover who would be possibly exposed to harm or that kind of thing in regard to the mention of other Agency people, certainly at the level of Mr. Shackley or other officials, Mr. Dimmer, and so forth, that the general procedures have been that people at the Agency or retirees have not refused to disclose names.

Now, you certainly have your rights --

Mr. Sarno. No, sir. I am not questioning you, or anything, except I've been in this business a long time and I've never mentioned anybody's name. Now if somebody were to tell me, if Seymour Bolton were to tell me that I could tell you all the names of all my supervisors and everything, it's perfectly all right. But I've never mentioned a name and I feel that I shouldn't mention a name.

Mr. Wides. Well, we may have to take a break and do that, but let me go on.

With regard to the [redacted] program, the [redacted] Cubans were not contract agents of the station, is that correct?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. They were proprietary employees essentially of [redacted], essentially?

Mr. Sarno. [redacted] was a group -- that proprietary was set up in September of 1968. Prior to that time they were a bunch of Cubans just living down in Miami.

Mr. Wides. And what was their relationship to the Agency through you?

Mr. Sarno. They were a group of Cuban exiles who were being funded to collect information, intelligence information, on Cuba.

Mr. Wides. They were paid agents?

Mr. Sarno. They were paid agents.

Mr. Wides. Some of them received a fairly sophisticated training in tradecraft, in some cases communications intercept operations with regard to a station in Florida, and so forth, is that not correct?

Mr. Sarno. Sophisticated equipment, yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. And tradecraft, general tradecraft training?

Mr. Sarno. General tradecraft training, yes, sir. Communications training -- well, most of them weren't communicators, so they required very little if they did receive training.

Mr. Wides. Would that put them in a little bit more official status of some sort, whatever the category is called, than simply being a paid informant?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir. They were just like paid informants except we provided them funds to operate with.

They are no more -- they are not contract, we did not have them under contract.

Mr. Wides. But they would still get training?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. And the program first operated where? Where did you physically locate? Were you at the University of Miami, at the Naval Air Station at the begining?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. Where were you at first?

Mr. Sarno. Are you speaking of our station? Our station was physically at the [redacted] but these Cubans did not know where the station was.

Mr. Wides. And you just contacted them separately?

Mr. Sarno. They had houses that they rented and they worked out of different houses, and there were many of them, so I can't recall them.

Mr. Wides. Did you have an office facility apart from the station?

Mr. Sarno. Myself?

Mr. Wides. Yes.

Mr. Sarno. On one occasion, for a very short period, I had an office.

Mr. Wides. Where was the [redacted]

Mr. Sarno. The [redacted] was located on the [redacted] of Miami.

Mr. Wides. Apart from the station?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. That was a cover?

Mr. Sarno. That was the station.

Mr. Wides. And what was the mission and purpose of AMUTS when you first started out, as indicated in the project outline?

Mr. Sarno. They were to collect intelligence on Cuba, debrief refugees and provide bodies for any possible operations required by the station.

Mr. Wides. They were to debrief refugees?

Mr. Sarno. Debrief refugees, collect and evaluate, maintain records.

Mr. Wides. Was there a division of the AMUTS members into two groups, with only a small group involving the debriefing of Cuban refugees?

Mr. Sarno. Well, it wasn't too small a group, but if you would speak of the whole organization overall, yes, it was a small group.

Mr. Wides. And at what point did you set up any cover apart from the station as a proprietary or notional company, in between the AMUTS people and the Miami station? In other words, were the companies prior to the Latin America social and economic research company that preceeded it, in time?

Mr. Sarno. In the time that I handled them, which is up to the LASER, I think there were three, three covers all told, or perhaps four. I think we had our debriefing, you know, under one cover.

Mr. Wides. That was from the start? You had a separate cover for the debriefing?

Mr. Sarno. Well, from the start we didn't have a place for them, and it wasn't pulled together as a debriefing unit. When a large flow of refugees started to come in is when we set up the special unit.

Mr. Wides. When was that?

Mr. Sarno. Well, they cut off --

Mr. Wides. '64, '63?

Mr. Sarno. It could have been '62, late '62 or '63. And before, we used to send our debriefers, they were within the [redacted] group, specialists in debriefing, area specialists is the kind we used. And we would go out to the reception center and check around and see who had come out of the particular area.

Mr. Wides. At Opa-Locka?

Mr. Sarno. At Opa-Locka.

And our debriefers would go out and check around with the people who came in and try to spot somebody who would be interesting to interview, debrief, concerning the particular area. And so they usually picked them up in a car and either took them to a restaurant or took them to a motel or something and would debrief them. And then we found that it would be better to get a building for them to be in where we located them altogether, where they could prepare their reports and everything.

Mr. Wides. And so that's when you first set up the proprietary for the smaller debriefing component of [redacted]

Mr. Sarno. Well, I set up the proprietaries, the notionary company for a small debriefing office, and at the same time, we rented a building, a larger building, and they used to operate in Coral Gables, received some publicity and we moved them out of Coral Gables to near the airport in a building where the main office was, where this main office was, where these reports from the debriefers or any other information was collected would be processed, typed in finished form, translated and provided to us.

Mr. Wides. About how many people did you have in [redacted] Cubans at that time?

Mr. Sarno. Well, that's difficult to say.

Mr. Wides. 150? Would you say 150?

Mr. Sarno. I would say inside, outside, it could be close to 150.

Mr. Wides. Did you have more than a dozen or so working in the component on debriefing?

Mr. Sarno. As I recall, at one time -- as I recall it, we had about 22, 23 people working in debriefing.

Mr. Wides. And apart from those Cubans, you had a staff under you of assistants and secretaries who were Agency assigned personnel?

Mr. Sarno. Yes.

Mr. Wides. What kind of staff did you have?

Mr. Sarno. Well, it started off originally since we weren't big, I started off with one secretary, and it eventually ended up that there were one or two Intel assistants --

Mr. Wides. These were Agency personnel?

Mr. Sarno. Agency personnel.

--.and two or three case officers.

Mr. Wides. The case officers handled segments of the [redacted]?

Mr. Sarno. Segments of the [redacted].

Mr. Wides. Now, the other, speaking very roughly, hundred and fifty or so [redacted] Cubans, you said some twenty were involved when the debriefing program intensified. What were the other hundred-odd Cubans involved in?

Mr. Sarno. Well, we had records personnel, we had I would say six or seven who only worked in records and maintaining of files, and general index cards, and that was it. Then we had what we called our reports section which may have had about fifteen people, twenty people, who wrote reports, checked them out, cross-referenced, and everything else that was involved in that.

Mr. Wides. What kind of reports did they write? What were they writing reports about?

Mr. Sarno. Economic -- whatever they were learning from against Cuba, and had weapons they weren't supposed to have.

Mr. Wides. Like Alpha-66?

Mr. Sarno. Alpha-66, there were many of them.

And we usually had one of our outside types, either recruit or get next to an individual of the group and he would penetrate the group himself to report to us what they were doing.

Mr. Wides. Do you recall the flights of the Diaz, or one of the Diz brothers, over Havana dropping leaflets?

Mr. Sarno. What date was it?

Mr. Wides. I believe it was quite early, and it was not in connection with the [redacted]

Mr. Sarno. I know the Diaz brothers.

Mr. Wides. Do you recall hearing of flights with -- one of them with Frank Sturgis over Havana dropping leaflets?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. It was fairly widely known.

Mr. Sarno. Well, I didn't get into Cubans until maybe it was June of '60, but the only leaflets I ever saw fly over Cuba was the day before the invasion. Those were the only ones I saw.

Mr. Wides. When you were in Miami, did you have any contact with Frank Sturgis, Frank Fiorini?

Mr. Sarno. Never, never. To my knowledge, he never worked for us.

Mr. Wides. Not getting back to the bulk of the AMOTS group, apart from the reporting on refugees and the efforts to keep tabs, which I guess is a summary of what you are saying on what exile groups might be doing that the government might otherwise not know about, is it correct that there was surveillance of the Miami community generally with regard to possible Castro agents?

Mr. Sarno. Not that I know of.

Mr. Wides. There was no counterintelligence program in the AMOTS?

Mr. Sarno. We had a counterintelligence component in the AMOTS Program.

Mr. Wides. Why don't you describe that?

Mr. Sarno. The counterintelligence program consisted of very capable Cubans who knew of the former -- the set-up of the intelligence agency inside of Cuba, so if anybody were to come out, any refugee were to come out and name an individual that was a friend of theirs that we knew or suspected of working for the internal security which was the DSE or their external service, the DGI, our counterintelligence group or one of the individuals would go out and debrief the fellow and collect names, and prepare reports on it, and they maintained files, and that is what it is.

They never got under a surveillance of any of them, because once a report was written they suspected somebody. They maintain a file of them, and when Cuban refugees would come in, they would receive lists of names to check in their files, and if they suspected one, then they would gather all of the information possible on this individual, prepare a report, name their sources, and they would pass it to the station. The station in turn would prepare a memorandum and send it to the bureau.

Mr. Wides. Is it your sworn testimony that you never knew of any surveillances or efforts to penetrate groups for counterintelligence purposes by Cubans under your supervision?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir, no. You're speaking of penetrating groups, yes. They penetrated groups. Surveillance -- I never sent them out on a mission to surveil anybody concerning whether they were suspect or whatever.

Mr. Wides. Was there any surveillance of Cubans in Miami conducted by -- whether it was in cooperation with the Bureau or not -- conducted by any of the [redacted] Cubans that you were aware of?

Mr. Sarno. I cannot recall if there ever was.

Mr. Wides. I don't mean a specific one.

Mr. Sarno. I don't recall ever giving them any assignments.

Mr. Wides. I'm not talking about assignments, I'm talking about whether you're aware of their conducting --

Mr. Sarno. As I say, I do not recall them conducting any surveillance on anybody.

15

Mr. Wides. Any telephone taps?

Mr. Sarno. Never any telephone taps, we didn't have telephone tap capability.

Mr. Wides. Any photography?

Mr. Sarno. We had a photographer.

Mr. Wides. When was he used? In what circumstances?

Mr. Sarno. Well, the biggest majority of his work was to copy certain documents.

Mr. Wides. I mean photographic surveillance.

Mr. Sarno. There may have been. I really can't state which one he was used on if he was ever used for photographic surveillance.

Mr. Wides. Which what he was used on?

Mr. Sarno. I mean if he was used on photographic surveillance. I don't recall ever ordering him out on photographic surveillance.

Mr. Wides. Do you recall if there ever was any photographic surveillance carried out by any of the [redacted]?

Mr. Sarno. I have no recollection. I do not recall.

Mr. Wides. Were you getting reports of any sort, whether you would characterize it as surveillance or not, on people who had already come and were in Miami as distinct from the interview reports when the refugees first came?

Isn't it correct that the [redacted] personnel were providing you with reports on Cubans who were already in Miami?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. Would you describe that program?

Mr. Sarno. Certainly. As I said, they penetrated these groups, they would go around and then they would sit and talk and as you would call it, the surveillance, the fact that they penetrated, they would sit at the table and report on the individual and what the individual said and what they were planning. We call it penetration.

To me, surveillance is to put two men on the street following somebody from one place to another.

Mr. Wides. Were there ever occasions when the station was suspicious as to whether Cubans in Miami might be Castro agents that you were aware of?

Mr. Sarno. Many.

Mr. Wides. Did they ever ask for any assistance in the [redacted] group in trying to keep tabs on those individuals or to test their suspicions?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. Who would do that?

Mr. Sarno. It would be the CI section of the station.

Mr. Wides. You don't recall any situation in which -

Mr Sarno. In which [redacted] participated? No, sir.

Mr. Wides. -- working with the FBI.

Mr. Sarno. The FBI occasionally would ask for the services of one of the [redacted], but it was mainly not to surveil anybody. It was to provide information to them because their name would come up somewhere in a case.

Mr. Wides. What kind of assistance? You mean more than just a chance to interview them?

Mr. Sarno. No, just interview. They never used them to run a man on the street or anything like that, no, sir. They tried to get one individual one time and they didn't know that he worked for us and they tried to hire him and he came back and reported it. We had to advise them that he was already working for us.

Mr. Wides. And you had 115 men and all---

Mr. Sarno. There were women also, sir.

Mr. Wides. And women, and all they were doing was interviewing refugees and writing reports on exile potential activities against Cuba?

Mr. Sarno. I would say that was the biggest majority of their job.

Mr. Wides. What was the rest of it?

Mr. Sarno. They also went out, if our station was going to run an operation and they needed X amount of bodies, certain specialized personnel, the [redacted] would go and locate the personnel, talk to them, spot them, get their personal history from them, send it in, and the people would be traced out and checked and cleared and eventually introduced to the station case officer who would use them in our operations.

Mr. Wides. Who arranged for the training at the training station at [redacted] (?), was that used?

Mr. Sarno. For whom?

Mr. Wides. When the [redacted] people received training, some various kind of tradecraft, who would arrange that, yourself?

Mr. Sarno. December, 1961 when I took it over there were only three cases of [redacted] who were sent away for special training. Three cases, three individuals.

One came here to Washington, the other was going to be loaned to a station overseas. He came up and received training. The majority of the training given to the [redacted] was down in Miami, Florida.

Mr. Wides. And what kind was that?

Mr. Sarno. Basic tradecraft, reports writing --

Mr. Wides. Did they ever get training in surveillance?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, they received training in surveillance.

Mr. Wides. Why did they get that?

Mr. Sarno. Well, that is part of their program of training them as a group.

Mr. Wides. Even though there was no use of them for surveillance purposes?

Mr. Sarno. I do not recall, sir, ever sending them out on a surveillance.

Mr. DeMarco. Who conducted the training?

Mr. Sarno. Our Training Branch, personnel from our Training Branch.

Mr. DeMarco. From Washington?

Mr. Sarno. Yes.

Mr. Wides. You say the majority of the training was in Florida. What period are we talking about, throughout the period?

Mr. Sarno. It could be spread over. Reports writing, for instance, when the Agency, or when the station was being cut back in personnel, this group used to produce tons of reports, and when our station was being cut, the staff was being cut, I convinced the Chief of Station into having the reports officers, for instance, trained to prepare reports which would require very little editing or preparation once it arrived in the station, which would take a load off the station, and it was agreed to.

Mr. Wides. You arranged in general for the training or the training office?

Mr. Sarno. I never trained.

Mr. Wides. But they worked through you administratively?

Mr. Sarno. Yes.

Mr. Wides. So you were familiar with all the training [redacted] personnel would have got?

Mr. Sarno. I would say all of the training that they received during the period I was with them, with the exception of that one year there, and also I must state that although I

Mr. Wides. There were some new people coming in?

Mr. Sarno. Yes. Some of the people would move, they got a job that paid them more, but there were very few that came in after the original, say about 1964 I would say it was well established and very few dropped out or were taken aboard thereafter.

Mr. Wides. They all got what you referred to earlier as basic tradecraft training?

Mr. Sarno. No, not all of them.

Mr. Wides. How many?

Mr. Sarno. There were very few of them in the original group. I never had them trained in basic tradecraft. The original group which I took over which, if I am not mistaken, was about eighteen of them, and I understand that prior to the Bay of Pigs --

Mr. Wides. Eighteen in AMUTS or eighteen in training?

Mr. Sarno. Eighteen in AMUTS all told.

I understood that prior to the Bay of Pigs these AMUTS had been given basic tradecraft training. I never once sent them out to receive basic tradecraft training.

Mr. Wides. After you came -- when you came there were eighteen AMUTS and eventually we're talking about 150, roughly, or more?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. And you never knew of any of the people who joined [redacted] after you took over getting general tradecraft?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir, no, sir.

Mr. Wides. And to your knowledge it was only report writing?

Mr. Sarno. Well, they trained them in each one of the sections, and I didn't train the debriefers, so if a new man was hired and he was put in a debriefing, he was trained u usually by the Chief of the Debriefing Group, he was put in there to work along with other debriefers to catch onto the thing.

Mr. Wides. Now your testimony with regard to surveillance training, who issued that, or how many people?

Mr. Sarno. If I am not mistaken, it was four or five.

Mr. Wides. When you first came, or shortly therafter?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, it was all at the -- now, now, just one second, because I went in surveillance training myself.

I don't recall whether this four or five whom we trained in surveillance were trained while I had them or they were trained before I took them.

Mr. Wides. Now after that, those four or five, no other [redacted] people to your knowledge received any surveillance training, is that your testimony?

Mr. Sarno. That is true, sir.

Mr. Wides. What about picks and locks?

Mr. Sarno. Nobody.

Mr. Wides. That you know of received --

Mr. Sarno. Not a single one that I know of.

Mr. Wides. Did you know anybody at AMOTS who had capability of any previous experience at picks and locks, surreptitious entry?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. You were not aware of anyone at AMOTS having that capability?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. You never discussed it with anyone at the station?

Mr. Sarno. Possibly.

Mr. Wides. Well, let me ask the question, the capabilities in the area of surreptitious entry or picking locks and no part of AMOTS people in all those years?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. Were the group that were located in your homestate that were involved in the interception of any traffic, radio traffic or Cuban, were they under your supervision?

Mr. Sarno. They were originally under my supervision, and later the station brought an individual down from Headquarters and took over that operation.

Mr. Wides. And when was that?

Mr. Sarno. Well, the station always had somebody at the station who was reviewing all of their work and passing instructions. I handled them for a long time.

Mr. Wides. Until roughly?

Mr. Sarno. Until roughly the arrival of Mr. Dimmer. You have the date there. I think Mr. Dimmer's the one who brought down the fellow from Headquarters.

Mr. Wides. And these people received some training regarding the use of intercept equipment even if they had some experience as radio operators, isn't that true?

Mr. Sarno. Sir, I really don't know.

I know that I never brought an instructor down to train them in the use of radio equipment. These individuals had worked in this work in Cuba before they came out --

Mr. Wides. In intercept work like this?

Mr. Sarno. In intercept work, yes. We had two very brilliant fellows who were the top people in the communications field in Cuba.

And most of the radio operators had had up to twenty years experience, they were elderly people, and they had been in radio and they could read and they could send it out very well.

Mr. Wides. So your testimony is that --

Mr. Sarno. I do not recall them ever having been trained by anybody, in any sense.

Mr. Wides. Or communications in general?

Mr. Sarno. Now communications generally, I cannot say that.

because several of the [redacted] were trained and several of them who were brought out of Cuba, because several of them were in Cuba as radio operators and then they came out. They were in the Miami group not operating radios, but --

Mr. Wides. But during your administration of the [redacted] group as case officer, you don't recall any training being given in communications?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. Do you recall any cooperation of the [redacted] people with the FBI and other Federal agencies trying to DF and identify suspected illegal wireless operators in Miami, Castro agents?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir, they never did.

Mr. Wides. [redacted] was not involved in that?

Mr. Sarno. No, I never heard of any. You must remember that when Dimmer came down and brought the fellow, I never saw the traffic anymore, but during the period that I was looking at the traffic, and I was directing that special intercept group as part of the [redacted], I never once gave them an order and never saw any that they did.

Mr. Wides. When Mr. Shackley was the station chief, did you report to him or someone selse?

Mr. Sarno. I reported to my branch chief.

Mr. Wides. And what was that branch?

Mr. Sarno. FI Branch, Foreign Intelligence.

Mr. Wides. And that was the same procedure throughout the period?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. Up til '67?

Mr. Sarno. Through '67. Well, let's see, now. No, sir. Well, it was, because later they made the [redacted] group, it became a branch, and they brought in a very senior officer to be the Branch Chief, and I was considered the Deputy Branch Chief. Mr. Dimmer brought in the senior officer.

Mr. Wides. And you don't feel like you can give us his name?

Mr. Sarno. There's no reason not to. He is retired now. Bill Caldwell.

Mr. Wides. What contact did you have with a man who called himself [redacted]

Mr. Sarno. He was the Chief of the MI Group, the Cuban Chief.

Mr. Wides. [redacted]

Mr. Sarno. [redacted]

Mr. Wides. And he was your principal contact?

Mr. Sarno. He was my principal -- he was the head, the Cuban head of it.

Mr. Wides. Are you familiar with the history of the [redacted] group that he prepared in the late '60's, or worked on?

Mr Sarno. In the late '60's?

Mr. Wides. I thought so. I thought in '66 or '67, that is what I meant, that he had worked on the history of the [redacted] group.

Mr. Sarno. Well, no.

Mr. Wides. Are you familiar with the written history of the [redacted] program?

Mr. Sarno. I have never seen it. I had established the policy that every three months he had to write up about the group, so all of that, I understand, was all compiled into the history, so I don't know.

Mr. Wides. As part of the Miami Station?

Mr. Sarno. As part of the Miami Station, so I don't think he was told in '66 or '67, start all over and prepare it.

Mr. Wides. You think it was a consolidation?

Mr. Sarno. I think it was consolidated over the years.

Mr. Wides. And this is entitled what, do you know?

Mr. Sarno. I supposed it would be The History of the [redacted]

Mr. Wides. And you've never seen it?

Mr. Sarno. I've never seen it.

Mr. Wides. Do you know if it's at Headquarters in the Latin American Division?

Mr. Sarno. I do not know.

Mr. Wides. When the Cuban Operations Group was set up -- let's go back -- in '61 when you took over was approximately the period when Mr. Harvey was setting up the staff Task Force W, is that correct?

What contact, if any, did you have with Task Force W personnel as distinct from the station itself?

Mr. Sarno. None whatsoever.

Mr. Wides. They never came down and spoke to you?

Mr. Sarno. When I came out of Cuba, when I escaped from Cuba, I was brought up here to Headquarters and debriefed, so I imagine that the person that debriefed me, this is in July of '61, I would imagine that individual was part of the Task Force.

Mr. Wides. I think that was still in the Division. They had not split the Task Force until the winter of '61, '62.

Mr. Sarno. I see. Well --

Mr. Wides. But after that when you were in Florida, you had no contact with anyone, to your knowledge, other than the Station personnel?

Mr. Sarno. Well, I don't know. Occasionally they would call me to Washington to discuss something.

Mr. Wides. And did you discuss something with people in the Task Force, the Cuban Task Force?

Mr. Sarno. The Cuban Task Force.

Mr. Wides. Mr. [redacted]?

Mr. Sarno. I know Mr. [redacted], yes.

Mr. Wides. And did you have any contact with Desmond

FitzGerald when it became the Special Activities Staff and he took it over?

Mr. Sarno. I know Desmond FitzGerald, or I knew him, and discussed operations with him -- no, I never sat down and discussed an operation. I met him at a party, and that was all.

Mr. Wides. And when you came to Washington what kind of discussions would you have about the [redacted] program?

Mr. Sarno. I made so many trips to Washington, I say I was also the case officer, I used to travel and recruit people. I do not specifically recall ever being called to Washington to discuss [redacted].

Mr. Wides. But do you recall ever discussing the [redacted] program and the Cubans in it while you were in Washington?

Mr. Sarno. Well, if I would come up on a trip and some of the people who were sitting on a desk here who were maintaining the records and everything of the [redacted], I suppose, yes, they would come around and discuss perhaps the budget or perhaps get them to report in a different manner. I recall on one occasion discussing the set-up of how the [redacted] group prepared the debriefing reports, that they could remove the names from it, instead of filing them inside the report, they put the names on cards so they could be put into a computer machine here.

Mr. Wides. In the period when Mr. Shackley and Mr. Dimmer were Station Chiefs, which would be '63 through '65 or so, did you have any contact with Mr. Sternfeld or Mr. Esterline?

Mr. Sarno. Which period is this?

Mr. Wides. '62 to '65 or so.

Mr. Sarno. Mr. Esterline, who I believe at that time was -- Mr. Esterline was --

Mr. Wides. Was he in Miami?

Mr. Sarno. No, Mr. Esterline was on the staff he -- I don't know whether it was on the staff of the Task Force or who at that time, but I knew Mr. Esterline, first from his visits. I first met Mr. Esterline when he came to Miami in either late '61 or early '62, and I never saw him again until he used to make his trips down, and then I understand he was assigned overseas.

Mr. Wides. Did you discuss the [redacted] Program with him?

Mr. Sarno. At that period?

Mr. Wides. At any time.

Mr. Sarno. Well, yes, he was my Station Chief at one time.

Mr. Wides. You mean in '68 or '69?

Mr. Sarno. That's right.

Mr. Wides. But not prior to that?

Mr. Sarno. Well, yes, he came down on -- prior to his coming down and setting up the new station, he came down and discussed with all of us who might remain at our jobs there.

Mr. Wides. But not in the early period of the '60's?

Mr. Sarno. Not in the earlier --

Mr. Wides. What about Larry Sternfeld?

Mr. Sarno. No, Mr. Sternfeld was never connected with the Cuban thing until early '68.

Mr. Wides. Let me go back to the cover companies.

You say you set up one company for the smaller group, or one notional that was handling the --

Mr. Sarno. Refugees.

Mr. Wides. Refugees.

Can you give us the name of that?

Mr. Sarno. I don't recall it, sir.

Mr. Wides. Now, was there a separate company --

Mr. Sarno. For the principal group.

Mr. Wides. And what was that?

Mr. Sarno. Well, you named it off, the [redacted] --

Mr. Wides. I thought you said that didn't start until '68?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir, [redacted] started in '68.

Mr. Wides. [redacted]?

Mr. Sarno. Is that what that stands for? There was a [redacted] that they had.

Mr. Wides. [redacted] Company?

Mr. Sarno. Yeah.

Mr. Wides. What was its cover?

Mr. Sarno. They were supposed to be doing, researching Latin America, since they had a lot of files, and you could hear a lot of typewriters clicking all over the place.

Mr. Wides. And what's your best recollection of the name?

Mr. Sarno. My best recollection is [redacted].

Mr. Wides. Company?

Mr. Sarno. Company.

Mr. Wides. Did it have any other names? I think you suggested there were even more than two proprietaries and more than two notionals. Did you have three or four going at one point?

Mr. Sarno. Well, it was at one point, at one point there were three of them, if you included the Intercept. The Intercept people had another name.

Mr. Wides. But basically there were --

Mr. Sarno. There could have been three of them at one time, and basically there were two, yes. One of them was [redacted] -- that's it. I think the debriefing group came under [redacted], or something like that.

Mr. Wides. When do you first recall being approached about possible use of [redacted] people outside the Miami area in the United States?

Mr. Sarno. Use of [redacted] people outside the Miami area?

Mr. Wides. In the United States.

Mr. Sarno. Nobody ever approached me on it. They were outside of Miami, but the thing that happens is the Chief of the Miami group, when an [redacted] would leave --

Mr. Wides. This is [redacted]

Mr. Sarno. When one of the [redacted] would leave for his reasons, they would always maintain contact with [redacted] when they would move to any area, and all they would do is to report on Cuban exiles in that area.

Mr. Wides. And would the fact that they were leaving and going to another area be reported by you, back through channels to Washington for relay to CIA personnel in the area where they were going? Was this ever done?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, it was done, yes.

Mr. Wides. And was it not uncommon in the case of Cubans going to the New York area? Does that happen fairly frequently?

Mr. Sarno. Well, since it was handled in such a loose way, in that it was between [redacted] and this individual and we didn't have them on the payroll.

Mr. Wides. You mean you didn't have them on the payroll in the sense of employees, they were regularly paid agents, informants?

Mr. Sarno. They were given funds by [redacted] which obviously were authorized for sort of like operational expenses.

Mr. Wides. Excuse me. You're talking about when they were in Florida, or when they were moving?

Mr. Sarno. No, when they were in New York, if they went to New York.

Mr. Wides. Well, let's go back.

The first question I was asking you was with regard to your relaying to CIA personnel the fact that someone who had been at [redacted] in Florida was going elsewhere and you said that that happened, and then I asked you -- we will come to the operational relationships in a moment -- how frequently that happened in regard to people coming to New York. For example, I assume that there were a fair number of Cubans generally in there for one or two members of [redacted] who went up to New York during the course of all of these years.

Mr Sarno. No, sir, no, sir.

Mr. Wides. Would you say several dozen or a dozen?

Mr. Sarno. So far as I recall, there was only one that ever went up there, and he in turn collected two or three of his other friends around him who formed a little nucleus, but there was only one [redacted] that went.

Mr. Wides. What about other cities? What other cities do you recall people went to?

Mr. Sarno. In the United States?

Mr. Wides. Yes.

Washington?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir. San Juan, Puerto Rico, and that's all, in the United States.

Mr. Wides. Chicago?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. Anyplace on the West Coast or the Southwest?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. Boston?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. So you only recall persons who had been in [redacted] telling -- why don't we refer to him as [redacted] that they were going to another city as being New York and San Juan?

Mr. Sarno. New York and San Juan are the only two I ever recall they ever had any [redacted] or ex-[redacted] or people that had been in the organization went.

Mr. Wides. Now when they went and they recruited other people, was that [redacted] suggestion or under his supervision?

Mr. Sarno. They usually collected a group around people that they trusted.

Mr. Wides. Was that up to [redacted] supervision and direction?

Mr. Sarno. He directed them to do it, yes. I didn't even know the individual, I never met him. It's one individual.

Mr. Wides. Did he speak to you about the fact that he was going to do this, [redacted]

Did he consult with you on it?

Mr. Sarno. Well, I believe it came up -- I knew the fellow was leaving, because he was taken off of the role as being in Miami, and we may have discussed his being used while he was in New York in case anything ever came up.

Mr. Wides. Do you recall discussing it?

Mr. Sarno. Well, yes, we did discuss it, obviously it was discussed, because this fellow came up with a big thing when they were going to bazooka the UN building.

Mr. Wides. Was this one of the Novo brothers -- or was either of the Novo brothers in [redacted] in Florida? I believe this is the name of the two people who were arrested at the time.

Mr. Sarno. No, the [redacted] that was in New York is the one that discovered the plot and we informed the Bureau and the Bureau moved in on it.

Mr. Wides. You informed the Bureau?

Mr. Sarno. We informed the Bureau of that shelling of the UN, and it was the [redacted], this one [redacted] up there who got the information.

Mr. Wides. And he relayed that to someone in New York, or back, through [redacted] to you?

Mr. Sarno. He relayed it to [redacted] and we -- he informed us, and we in turn advised our base in New York who in turn advised the Bureau.

Mr. Wides. Which base is that, the Domestic Operations or the Security Office?

tape 3a

Mr. Sarno. Domestic Operations.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Wides. With regard to the information received from the former [redacted] in New York about the plot to shoot a bazooka at the UN, was Mr. Shackley the Station Chief at the time you received that information?

Mr. Sarno. I don't recall the date, but the date was between early '62, which it had to have been, and -- because Shackley left which I think was in July of '64 and that would have meant he was the Chief of Station.

Mr. Wides. Well, didn't he just indicate before while we were taking a rbreak that you had recalled that Shackley was the Station Chief?

Mr. Sarno. I don't recall whether he was exactly the Station Chief or not. I can't place the date with what had happened, so I know I went back to the Station and I reported it, and it in turn was reported. Now, if I told it to Shackley or if I told it to Dimmer, if I told it to the two different Branch Chiefs that were there at the time, I do not recall.

Mr. Wides. Now would that report be in the [redacted] file?

Mr. Sarno. In the history?

Mr. Wides. No, in the file, the project file.

If we got that date when that took place, the date when the Agency had the information, would your report and report of the branch or station in Florida be in the [redacted] project file or would it be in some other file?

Mr. Sarno. I don't think that they maintain a chrono on AMUTS. It was voluminous. Once they were processed by the Agency and put into our communications channel, be it by dispatch or by cable, I don't think they retained all of those tons of files.

Mr. Wides. Do you recall who the FI Branch Chief was at the time?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

If you give me a date that I know --

Mr. Wides. I believe it was '64.

Mr. Sarno. If it was early 1964, then Mr. Shackley was there. If it was late 1964 when Dimmer came, then there was another branch, so there were two branch chiefs.

Mr. Wides. Now did you relay this information, did you say, to Washington, or directly to New York?

Mr. Sarno. Sir, I never handled communications.

Mr. Wides. Well, I didn't mean you --

Mr. Sarno. If I write it up, I give it to my branch chief, and my branch chief in turn sends it out. But to me, it would seem logical, knowing communications, that we would send the cable directly to New York with info to Washington.

Mr. Wides. Were you ever told that communications had been made to New York? You said before --

Mr. Sarno. Yes, I was told, because I think there may have been a cable or something coming down and giving the boys credit for the thing.

Mr. DeMarco. Do you recall now the name of this one [redacted] who went to New York?

Mr. Sarno. His name was Enrique.

Mr. Wides. Could you spell that?

Mr. Sarno. E-n-r-i-q-u-e, that is his first name. I don't recall his last name.

Mr. DeMarco. Lazarus?

Mr. Sarno. No. Lazarus is not a last name.

Mr. Wides. How many people did he have working with him?

Mr. Sarno. Sir, I don't recall, but I know there was more than one or two.

Mr. Wides. And would [redacted] give you reports that he sent down to [redacted]

Mr. Sarno. Yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. And what did the reports talk about?

Mr. Sarno. They were on Cuban exiles, groups, collection of money, Alpha 66 and people of that group who were up in New York City.

Mr. Wides. Was it your impression at the time that this group had no contact with any CIA offices in New York?

Mr. Sarno. Which group, sir?

Mr. Wides. The group that this fellow Enrique had.

Mr. Sarno. Had no contacts with anybody else?

Mr. Wides. With any CIA offices in New York. Was your impression that the only contact that he had with CIA was all the way back through Miami?

Mr. Sarno. I believe that was the case, yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. You had no understanding?

Mr. Sarno. Well, obviously once this thing came up, we put this fellow in contact with somebody in the base up there who in turn delivered them to the Bureau.

Mr. Wides. And this was the Domestic Operations Base, not the Security Office?

Mr. Sarno. Domestic Operations.

Mr. Wides. Now thereafter, did they keep contact wit- this group?

Mr. Sarno. I cannot recall.

Mr. Wides. Did you continue after that incident to get reports through [redacted]

Mr. Sarno. I believe so, yes.

Mr. Wides. With no indication whether they were also in touch with the Agency?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. You weren't curious, or did you ever inquire?

Mr. Sarno. Well, I would believe it to be that they were not in contact with anybody up there, because if the report were to come down, they would probably have indicated in their report that they had passed this information on.

Mr. Wides. No, I mean after that, after they were put in touch with the base.

Mr. Sarno. That's what I was speaking of. Many reports that came there after, they would have indicated that it had been passed, and I don't recall ever reading a report from them that he had passed the information on to any contact up there.

Mr. Wides. Do you recall any instance in which the Agency asked, through you, and in turn through [redacted] that particular people in New York be watched or investigated?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. How would they decide what groups or what individuals to penetrate or keep under surveillance?

Mr. Sarno. Well there were the active groups. This fellow used to come down to Miami and he would talk to [redacted] and [redacted] would tell him, here is people here who are talking about collecting money, about a supposed operation, how much money are they getting for it --

Mr. Wides. Where would he get that information from, from you?

Mr. Sarno. Get what?

Mr. Wides. Where would [redacted] get that --

Mr. Sarno. The MI group knew more about what was going on in Cuban operations in the Miami area than we did, so most of the information we obtained was through them.

Mr. Wides. So how would he get the information about potential targets in New York?

Mr. Sarno. Because they had the groups down in Miami penetrated, so in Miami, these groups in Miami, would discuss their contacts with the splinter group sitting up in New York and the information would come about.

Mr. Wides. You never got any written instructions or oral instructions when you were in Washington or Miami to see if you could arrange for this person to get information on people in New York?

Mr. Sarno. Never. Never once.

Mr. Wides. What about picketing in New York by Cuban personnel? There's some reference to that in testimony we've already received.

Mr. Sarno. There is one incident of the Mexico -- I think it was against Mexico, where they went to an affair or something and threw out leaflets.

Mr. Wides. What about picketing of an airline company or an airline office?

Mr. Sarno. I heard that that took place, but I was not in Miami at the time. I was away on a trip.

Mr. Wides. But your understanding was it involved [redacted] personnel?

Mr. Sarno. This individual was involved in it.

Mr. Wides. And what did you understand had been the origins of the picketing? How would it come about?

Mr. Sarno. Well, I don't believe it was started, I know it wasn't started in AMOTS because one individual cannot start it, but the groups, the Cuban exile groups who were located in New York decided to picket it because, I believe, of Mexico's relations with Cuba.

Mr. Wides. At this time, wasn't the Agency carrying on a wide variety of operations to try and isolate Cuba economically and commercially?

Mr. Sarno. I believe they were, yes. I was never involved in any of those operations.

Mr. Wides. And including air traffic people, airlines going to Cuba. That was one aspect of the efforts to isolate Cuba.

Mr. Sarno. Well, the airlines going to Cuba, if I can recall at that time, were not Mexican airlines.

Mr. Wides. You didn't have any idea at the time as to what --

Mr. Sarno. Mexican airlines do not fly to Cuba. The Cubans always flew their airplanes over. The Mexicans were not flying.

Mr. Wides. So you understood this to be harrassment of a Mexican Company or a Mexican national company, because of Mexico's general relations with Cuba?

Mr. Sarno. General relations with Cuba, that is what I understood it to be.

Mr. Wides. And you didn't have any information that the Agency was aware of it beforehand?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir, I was never involved in it. I don't recall ever seeing the reports or anything, because as I say, I did an awful lot of travelling when I handled the AMUTS.

Mr. Wides. When you discussed this with the people at the Agency, is your testimony that you never heard any indication that the Agency was involved in that picketing?

Mr. Sarno. That is --

Mr. Wides. No one's ever suggested --

Mr. Sarno. Nobody ever suggested that the Agency was the one who backed the people who did the picketing, no.

Mr. Wides. Now was there a time when AMUTS personnel who had not moved outside of the Miami area were ever used or involved in any Agency operations to your knowledge outside of Miami, went on trips to do little jobs?

Mr. Sarno. AMUTS went out of Miami in order to do little jobs --

Mr. Wides. I don't mean to Cuba.

Mr. Sarno. No, they went out of Miami to do little jobs like for instance a specialist in say, sugar, would say come out of Cuba through Spain and he'd end up in New York, and so an AMUT would go from Miami to New York to debrief him. Or we would hear of somebody who knew of a well-known government figure in Cuba who came out and he goes to Louisiana or he goes to Chicago. Well, an [redacted] would be dispatched over to his house to debrief him. That is the only places I ever sent the [redacted], or the [redacted] were ever sent.

Mr. Wides. What about with regard to surveillances or breaking or entering?

Mr. Sarno. Never.

Mr. Wides. Mr. Sturbitz, do you know him?

Mr. Sarno. Sturbitz?

Mr. Wides. He was involved in economic warfare against Castro.

Mr. Sarno. Sturblitz or Sturbitz?

Mr. Wides. Sturbitz.

Mr. Sarno. Yes, I know Sturbitz.

Mr. Wides. He testified he conducted some inquiries in regard to the question of [redacted] involvement in possible illegal activities, breaking and entering, surveillance and so forth. Were you aware of those investigations?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. Have you ever heard any charges or allegations or suggestions that [redacted] personnel were involved in breaking and entering in New York against groups like the Fair Play For Cuba Committee, the Vinceremos Brigade?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir, no, sir.

Mr. Wides. And you never heard anything about the use of [redacted] in regard to any kind of harrassing action against those groups?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir, never.

Mr. Wides. Do you know if any members of [redacted] may have been used in these kinds of activities without your express direction or not as part of its CIA task?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. You never heard anything about it?

Mr. Sarno. Never heard.

Mr. Wides. In Florida also?

Mr. Sarno. In Florida also.

Mr. Wides. What about with regard to Puerto Rico and [redacted] going there. Tell us about that.

Mr. Sarno. Well, there were several [redacted] who left Miami and went over to Puerto Rico. There is a large Cuban community in Puerto Rico with the attendant Cuban exile groups, and it was the same thing as was going on in New York. They would collect data on what these groups were doing, operations that they were preparing, funds that they were collecting, et cetera.

Mr. Wides. Did you see those reports as they came in?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, they came in and [redacted] would prepare them and send them into the office.

Mr. Wides. When did they start including reports on Puerto Rican affairs?

Mr. Sarno. Never.

Mr. Wides. No discussion in those reports --

Mr. Sarno. Never once did they write up about Puerto Rican political affairs. I never once saw a report.

Mr. Wides. Did you ever have any discussion with [redacted] or anyone involved in the Puerto Rican Cuban community about Puerto Rican affairs?

Mr. Sarno. Never.

Mr. Wides. Was there a station operating at that time for the Caribbean in Puerto Rico?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. During the entire period, '61 til about '67?

Mr. Sarno. To my knowledge, there wasn't. There was not a station.

Mr. Wides. Do you want to go ahead?

Mr. DeMarco. Just a couple.

You mentioned, or it was touched upon earlier, the period of time you were actually in Cuba, 1961.

Mr. Sarno. '60 and '61.

Mr. DeMarco. What requirements were levied upon you when you left to go to Cuba?

Mr. Sarno. None.

Mr. DeMarco. Well, you'd better explain that. I don't understand that answer at all. You just went on a vacation?

Mr. Sarno. I was transferred from a foreign country to

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

Cuba because they needed me.

Mr. DeMarco. What foreign country were you transferred from?

Mr. Sarno. I don't think that I should state that.

Mr. DeMarco. I insist that you answer that.

Mr. Wides. Let's go off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. DeMarco. For the record, I think I should explain to you that we are highly interested in the sort of activities that you were involved in in Cuba in 1960 and '61, but our investigation has to a certain point been slowed down by the inability to obtain the right kinds of documents and that being the case, and your insistence here on not answering certain questions, will require us to simply have you come back once we have cleared this up with your superiors at the Agency and once they have been more forthcoming with documents that were long ago requested about your activities.

I don't want to pursue just suspicions with you, I'd rather talk to you about specific dates and facts.

We are going to pursue this very vigorously, and the reason I'm interested in it is the gambling background, and I would like to know your training in that area, your experience in that area and the reasons why you were down there.

Now if there is anything you want to tell me now, or do you want to come back --

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

Mr. Sarno. Sure, I'll tell you now. I was in a country -- and I don't think I have to name the country because you are interested in Cuba and you are interested in the operation that I had in Miami and I don't think you're interested in what I did before I went to Cuba. I tell you that nobody gave me any instructions when I went to Cuba. I knew the Chief of Station in Cuba and had known him for many years. He asked for me specifically to come over for my abilities or qualifications or experience. I climbed on an airplane and I went to Cuba.

I met the Chief of Station and he told me what he wanted me to do.

Mr. DeMarco. What's his name?

Mr. Sarno. [redacted]

Mr. DeMarco. You met [redacted] and he told you what he wanted you to do?

What did he tell you?

Mr. Sarno. He told me he wanted me to set up a stay-behind net in Cuba because the situation was getting very bad and he would like to set a stay-behind net up in Cuba.

Mr. Wides. This is with the break in Cuban relations?

Mr. Sarno. That's right, the pending break in diplomatic relations and the rest of the things, and he wanted to set up a net over in Cuba. And that is why he called for me.

Mr. DeMarco. Okay. So you --

Mr. Sarno. I went into Cuba and did not have a job. I had no cover. I went in as a tourist, a tourist can wear thin so I had to scrounge around in different ways. w had a brother-in-law who was a professional gambler. When I was a kid, he died. He taught me a little about gambling, so I used to go to the black jack tables and I would win money here, there and the other place.

Mr. DeMarco. Is this the hotel black jack tables predominantly?

Mr. Sarno. No, they had black jack, roulette, they had baccarat. I would go in there, I would make myself seen, they would see that I was wearing good clothes and I was winning money at the gambling tables and that's it.

I am not to be tied into any Syndicate or anything like it. I didn't know a single soul.

Mr. DeMarco. You knew no one?

Mr. Sarno. Nobody.

Mr. DeMarco. And your task then, which you learned on arriving there, was to set up a network?

Mr. Sarno. To set up a network of agents in Cuba, yes.

Mr. DeMarco. So you started meeting people to do that?

Mr. Sarno. No.

We never meet people to do that.

Mr. DeMarco. Describe to me how you did it.

Mr. Sarno. People were spotted by other individuals and they're checked out, and once they're checked out and their clearance is obtained on them, they are delivered to me for me to handle and train and what have you.

Mr. DeMarco. I see.

Were any of those Americans?

Mr. Sarno. No, I never spotted any Americans. There were two Americans over there who were already working, and they were given to me to use as, to handle some of the other ones that were involved.

Mr. DeMarco. Were they also involved in the same type of cover you were, gambling?

Mr. Sarno. No. They were not in the same cover. As I say, it was a cover provided by the Agency. It was a cover I just naturally stumbled into since I was going to the different casinos and I was winning money there and I could pass myself off as a tourist-gambler.

Mr. DeMarco. These other two Americans you were talking about, can you name them?

Mr. Sarno. Well, I'll give you the name. One I would name, because I was not involved with the other one very long. One's name is Emelio Rodriquez, but he is dead now.

Mr. DeMarco. He was an American?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, he died of a heart attack. And the other was Julian.

Mr. DeMarco. Julian?

Mr. Sarno. Julian. I don't recall the last name, but he only remained for about two months after I arrived.

Mr. DeMarco. What were these two people doing in Cuba prior to the time they were turned over to you and you met them?

Mr. Sarno. Collection of intelligence.

Mr. DeMarco. For the Agency?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, for the Agency. They were agents of the Agency, as was I. But they were residing in Cuba.

Mr. DeMarco. At any time while you were in Cuba, for that matter, at any time, did you become aware of any Agency relationships with -- I'm going to use the term generically -- organized crime. Do you understand what I mean by that?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, certainly.

Mr. DeMarco. Whether or not organized, people who you've read about in the paper, or you would consider to be involved in that kind of business, are you aware of any relationships between any Agency personnel in Cuba or elsewhere?

Mr. Sarno. None whatsoever.

Mr. DeMarco. During the period of time that you were in the casinos, playing black jack and roulette and so forth, did you get an opportunity to meet the people that were running the casinos?

Mr. Sarno. No.

There was one big Swede in the Capri that because it was close to where I was living I would go in there more often, and as soon as I take off from my house, my apartment, I would head over there and he was always seeing me in and offer me drinks, but he was not a big wheel, he was just one of their employees.

Mr. DeMarco. Where was this?

Mr. Sarno. At the Capri.

Mr. DeMarco. You say a big Swede?

Mr. Sarno. A big Swede, a blond-haired fellow. I didn't even know his name, I'd just call him Swede.

Mr. DeMarco. Was he an American, or from Sweden?

Mr. Sarno. I think he was from America.

Mr. DeMarco. Were any of the people that you were involved in handling in Cuba commercial or airline people? Any airline people?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. DeMarco. Did any of them have official Cuban government positions?

Mr. Sarno. Yes.

Mr. DeMarco. They did?

Mr. Sarno. Some of them did, those were the ones that you were looking for.

Mr. DeMarco. I don't have anything more at this time.

Mr. Wides. I am just a little puzzled by your testimony regarding the [redacted] activity with regard to the Cuban community.

You indicated there was a CI capability, but if I understand it, you said the only penetration was for purposes of finding out about exile activities being planned against Cuba.

What was your testimony with regard to the use of AMUTS for members of the Cuban community who might come under suspicion as possibly being intentionally or unintentionally --

Mr. Sarno. Suspect?

Mr. Wides. They were employed or they were not employed in any way regarding checking on this?

Mr. Sarno. If you mean to say did they go around and surveil them --

Mr. Wides. No. In any sense of counterintelligence work, keeping their ears open and reporting back information that might be of a suspicious nature.

Mr. Sarno. Well, to explain it, if an AMUT were to walk into a place and see a friend and the friend says did you see Juan, do you know Juan is here, and the AMUT himself knows and the guy he's talking to that Juan used to work for the Internal Security in Cuba, it's obvious. Where's he at, try to find him.

And then they would go back to the files and dig out all the information and in would come a report. Juan is in the city of Miami and here's the stuff that we have on him. He was a Castro collaborator, or he's a member of the security forces over there, and everything.

Mr. Wides. So in general it would be fair to say -- and

I'm not trying to twist your testimony, I know you referred to the basic purpose being to keep tabs on what was going on so you would be aware of what Alpha-66 and groups like that were planning, but in general, they were the eyes and ears of the Station in the Cuban community and might come up with counterintelligence information as well as the information about the activities?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, sir, yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. And as you understand it on a smaller scale, this was also true with regards to the group in New York?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. It was not simply to find out about Alpha-66, but they would also report to the extent that they obtained CI, that is counterintelligence information, about the Cubans in New York?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. What about with regards to the activities at the UN? Any reports regarding UN activity relative to Cuba?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. Was there a Cuban mission at the UN at this time?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, sir.

Mr. Wides. And this group never relayed any information regarding the Cuban mission or the people they contacted in New York?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. Why wouldn't they have been used for that purpose?

Mr. Sarno. Because that is the Bureau's domain. We never checked up on Cubans, the diplomats who were in the UN, nobody was ever in contact with them, they never reported on any Cuban diplomats in the UN or any of the Cubans seeing them or anything.

Mr. Wides. Did you ever hear any stories whether they were associated with AMUTS or not of Cuban exiles being involved in any harrassment or surveillance of groups in America friendly toward the Castro regime, such as the Vinceremos Brigade and the Fair Play For Cuba Committee?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. You were not aware of any activity by exiles? I'm not talking about necessarily AMUTS.

Mr. Sarno. Not of any activities.

Mr. Wides. You never heard anything?

Mr. Sarno. I never heard anything.

You're smiling. I'm telling you, I never heard anything.

Mr. Wides. What about Cubans in the late '60's after the Vietnam War arose, being involved, Cuban exiles, in any harrassment or surveillance of peace groups? What do you know about that?

Mr. Sarno. Nothing.

Mr. Wides. Do you know anything about Cubans coming up from Miami to be involved in surveillance or disruption of any peace demonstrations in Washington?

Mr. Sarno. No, sir.

Mr. Wides. You never heard of that?

Mr. Sarno. I never heard of it. I know no AMUTS and I never heard of any other Cubans.

Mr. Wides. Is there anything else that you -- have you gotten a clear understanding of our lines of interest?

Mr. Sarno. Yes, I have.

Mr. Wides. -- would like to tell us, or any information --

Mr. Sarno. I have no information. I ran a group there and we were never involved in anything which I would consider to be illegal. They were working against the government of Cuba.

Mr. Wides. I understand that.

Mr. Sarno. And that is where all of their energy went.

Mr. Wides. Who was it who would ask you to have members of AMUTS detailed for missions elsewhere in America?

You described one where they would go to another city to debrief somebody.

Mr. Sarno. I would --

Mr. Wides. How would you get those instructions? From the Branch Chief?

Mr. Sarno. No, I wouldn't get the instructions. Since it was a group and we were collecting economic and political intel --

Mr. Wides. Where would you get the information that there was a target of opportunity or someone to be debriefed in another city?

Mr. Sarno. If the AMUT were to come up with the information, if the AMUT were to come up with the information, he would come in and report it and I would authorize him to go into that city and find him, because the information could come in many ways.

See, they were known as the Cuban municipalities and operations in the city of Miami, and everybody that came out from like a province or a state would register in it, and as soon as they got information, the word would get around that Joe Blow came in or something like that, and the word would get back to the AMUTS and the AMUTS would say, well, we should discuss with this fellow, and that's it.

Mr. Wides. You never got any requests for AMUTS personnel to be made available for that kind of task from Washington?

Mr. Sarno. To debrief an individual?

Mr. Wides. Or to travel in general.

Mr. Sarno. Yes, yes, they would come down and say, we would like a person because Washington would hear of an individual and would like for him to go over and debrief.

Mr. Wides. What office?

Mr. Sarno. It would come out of the Cuban branch.

Mr. Wides. Cuban Operations Task?

Who would come down? Just a member of the staff?

Mr. Sarno. Come down? They usually came in a cable. It said, you know, we understand such and such a person is living at such and such an address and they worked at such and such, suggest send an [redacted] out to debrief.

Mr. Wides. Did you have a particular point of contact or several people who were particular points of contact for you that would tend to be the ones sending you cables?

Mr. Sarno. No, I wasn't the Station Chief. The cables come into the station, the Station Chief would pass it to me or to the Branch Chief, and that would be it.

Mr. Wides. Okay.

I think that's all the questions we have, and I want to thank you for your patience, it's been a long morning.

(Whereupon, at 12:42 o'clock p.m., the hearing recessed.)

exact month) he was ordered to go to Guatamela to train the Cuban airborne brigade that eventually was parachuted into Cuba six hours in advance of the landing at the Bay of Pigs. This training was conducted at a site in the Guatamelan jungle called "De Finca" or "the Farm". A nearby village was "Retalalao" (phonetic spelling).

During the time this training was conducted, i.e. from 1959 to the Bay of Pigs invasion, Mr. Stephens recalls there were two occasions when he and/or members of his 4-5 man training cadre were told to give parachutes and weapons to individuals who were to be parachuted into Cuba to attempt to assassinate Castro. Mr. Stephens stated that he did not precisely recall whether he was expressly told these individuals were going to Cuba to try to kill Castro, but he said he was clear that from either the instructions he received or the nature and details of the particular situation that this was the mission.

I asked Mr. Stephens to describe what he would do after being told to outfit the individuals who were to be dropped into Cuba for these assassination efforts. He stated that he or members of his cadre (he declined to specify whether he personally outfitted these individuals or whether it was done by his co-workers) would provide parachutes and whatever weapons the individuals desired. He referred to an "assassination package." Such a "package" would contain a variety of weapons, grenades, and other armaments, including a special "assassination gun." This gun, Mr. Stephens said, was a 9 mm.

taken during the Bay of Pigs operation) present Castro with a contaminated diving suit* (Colby, 5/21, pp. 38-39).

The Inspector General's Report dates this operation in January 1963, when Fitzgerald replaced Harvey as Chief of Task Force W, although it is unclear whether Harvey or Fitzgerald conceived of the plan (I.G., p. 75). It is likely that the activity took place earlier, since Donovan had completed his negotiations by the middle of January 1963. Helms characterized the plan as "cockeyed" (Helms, 6/13, p. 135).

TSD bought a diving suit, dusted the inside with a fungus that would produce a chronic skin disease (Madura foot), and contaminated the breathing apparatus with a tubercule bacillus (I.G., p. 75). The Inspector General's Report states that the plan was abandoned because Donovan gave Castro a different diving suit on his own initiative (I.G., p. 75). Helms testified that the diving suit never left the laboratory (Helms, 6/13, p. 135).

(e) AMLASH

(1) Origin of the Project

In March 1961, an officer of the Mexico City CIA station met with a highly-placed Cuban official to determine if he would cooperate in efforts against the Castro regime (I.G., p. 78). The Cuban, referred to by the cryptonym AMLASH-1, had been

*Donovan was not aware of the plan.

TOP SECRET

A CIA cable dated February 2, 1965, stated that B-1 had given AMLASH-1 a silencer and that AMLASH-1 had "small, highly concentrated explosives." On February 11, 1965 the 15-2 [redacted] Station cabled that AMLASH-1 would soon receive "one pistol with silencer and one FAL rifle with a silencer from B-1's secretary" (I.G., p. 103). A subsequent cable reported that "B-1 had three packages of special items made up by his technical people and delivered to AMLASH-1 [in Madrid"] (I.G., p. 103

In June 1965, CIA terminated all contact with AMLASH-1 and his associates because of reports that his activities were widely known (I.G., pp. 104-105).

"4. B-1 is to be in Cuba one week before the elimination of Fidel, but no one, including AM/LASH-1 will know B-1's location.

"5. B-1 is to arrange for recongition by at least five Latin American countries as soon as Fidel is neutralized and a junta is formed. This junta will be established even though Raul Castro and Che Guevara may still be alive and may still be in control of the part of the country. This is the reason AM/LASH-1 requested that B-1 be able to establish some control over one of the provinces so that the junta can be formed in that location.

"6. One month to the day before the neutralization of Fidel, B-1 will increase the number of commando attacks to a maximum in order to raise the spirit and morale of the people inside Cuba. In all communiques, in all radio messages, in all propaganda put out by B-1 he must relate that the raid was possible thanks to the information received from clandestine sources inside Cuba and from the clandestine underground apparatus directed by "P". This will be AM/LASH-1's war name."

D. CONGO

1. Introduction

The Committee has received solid evidence of a CIA plot to assassinate Patrice Lumumba. The plot proceeded to the point where lethal substances and instruments specifically intended for use in an assassination were placed in the hands of the CIA Chief of Station in Leopoldville by an Agency scientist.

Although these instruments of assassination were never used, a number of questions are presented by the Lumumba case which reflect general issues that run throughout the Committee's assassination inquiry. First, did CIA officers and operatives in the Congo take steps to attempt the assassination of Lumumba?

Second, how high in the United States government was the source of authorization for the CIA assassination plot? Finally, was the CIA connected in any way to the events that actually led to the death of Lumumba while in Congolese custody?

A thread of historical background is necessary to weave these broad questions together with the documents and testimony received by the Committee.

Stanleyville, and he was imprisoned. The central government of the Congo transferred Lumumba on January 17, 1961 to the custody of authorities in the province of Katanga, which was asserting its own independence at that time. Several weeks later, the Katangese authorities announced Lumumba's death.

There are various accounts of the circumstances and timing of Lumumba's death. The United Nations investigation of the incident concluded that Lumumba was killed on January 17.*

2. Dulles Cables Leopoldville That "Removal" of Lumumba is an Urgent Objective in "High Quarters"

Shortly after the Congolese declaration of independence from Belgium on June 30, 1960, the CIA assigned a new Chief of Station to the Congo. The Chief of Station said that the briefings he received at CIA headquarters in preparation for his departure contained no discussion of the possibility of assassinating Patrice Lumumba (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 8). On his brief return to headquarters in connection with Lumumba's visit to Washington in late July, the Chief of Station again heard no discussion of assassinating Lumumba (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 9).

During August, great concern about Lumumba's political strength in the Congo was growing among the foreign policy-makers of the Eisenhower Administration. This concern was nurtured by intelligence reports such as that cabled to CIA headquarters by the new Chief of Station:

---

* Report of the Commission of Investigation, 11/61, UN Security Council, Official Records, Supplement for October, November, and December.

 See Section 5, infra, for full discussion of the prevailing anti-Lumumba attitude in the United States government as shown by minutes of the National Security Council and Special Group and the testimony of high Administration officials.

> EMBASSY AND STATION BELIEVE CONGO EXPERIENCING CLASSIC COMMUNIST EFFORT TAKEOVER GOVERNMENT. MANY FORCES AT WORK HERE: SOVIETS ... COMMUNIST PARTY, ETC. ALTHOUGH DIFFICULT DETERMINE MAJOR INFLUENCING FACTORS TO PREDICT OUTCOME STRUGGLE FOR POWER, DECISIVE PERIOD NOT FAR OFF. WHETHER OR NOT LUMUMBA ACTUALLY COMMIE OR JUST PLAYING COMMIE GAME TO ASSIST HIS SOLIDIFYING POWER, ANTI-WEST FORCES RAPIDLY INCREASING POWER CONGO AND THERE MAY BE LITTLE TIME LEFT IN WHICH TAKE ACTION TO AVOID ANOTHER CUBA.... (CIA Cable (IN 39706), Leopoldville to Director, 8/18/60.)

This cable also stated the Chief of Station's operational "OBJECTIVE [OF] REPLACING LUMUMBA WITH PRO WESTERN GROUP" (CIA Cable, 8/18/60). Bronson Tweedy, then Chief of the Africa Division of CIA's clandestine services, replied the same day that he was seeking State Department approval for the proposed operation based upon "OUR BELIEF LUMUMBA MUST BE REMOVED IF POSSIBLE" (CIA Cable (Out 59741), Tweedy to Leopoldville, 8/18/60). On August 19, Richard Bissell, Director of CIA's covert operations branch, signed a follow-up cable to Leopoldville: "YOU ARE AUTHORIZED PROCEED WITH OPERATION" (CIA Cable OUT 59959, Director to Leopoldville, 8/19/60).

Several days later, the Chief of Station reported that a plan to assassinate Lumumba had been proposed to President Kasavubu by Congolese leaders:

> ANTI-LUMUMBA LEADERS APPROACHED KASAVUBU WITH PLAN ASSASSINATE LUMUMBA ... KASAVUBU REFUSED AGREE SAYING HE RELUCTANT RESORT VIOLENCE AND NO OTHER LEADER SUFFICIENT STATURE REPLACE LUMUMBA. (CIA Cable (IN 42761), Leopoldville to Director, 8/24/60.)

The next day, Allen Dulles personally signed a cable* to the Leopoldville Chief of Station which stressed the urgency of "removing" Lumumba:

> IN HIGH QUARTERS HERE IT IS THE CLEAR-CUT CONCLUSION THAT IF LLL [LUMUMBA] CONTINUES TO HOLD HIGH OFFICE, THE INEVITABLE RESULT WILL AT BEST BE CHAOS AND AT WORST PAVE THE WAY TO COMMUNIST TAKEOVER OF THE CONGO WITH DISASTROUS CONSEQUENCES FOR THE PRESTIGE OF THE UN AND FOR THE INTERESTS OF THE FREE WORLD GENERALLY. CONSEQUENTLY WE CONCLUDE THAT HIS REMOVAL MUST BE AN URGENT AND PRIME OBJECTIVE THAT UNDER EXISTING CONDITIONS THIS SHOULD BE A HIGH PRIORITY OF OUR COVERT ACTION. (CIA Cable, OUT 62966, Director to Leopoldville, 8/26/60.)

Dulles cabled that the Chief of Station was to be given "WIDER AUTHORITY" -- along the lines of the previously authorized operation to replace Lumumba with a pro-Western group -- "INCLUDING EVEN MORE AGGRESSIVE ACTION IF IT CAN REMAIN COVERT" (CIA Cable, 8/26/60). "WE REALIZE THAT TARGETS OF OPPORTUNITY MAY PRESENT THEMSELVES TO YOU," the cable continued (CIA Cable, 8/26/60).

---

* Cables issued under the personal signature of the DCI are a relative rarity in CIA communitations and call attention to the importance and sensitivity of the matter discussed.

 As discussed in Section 5(c), infra, Richard Bisell testified that Allen Dulles would have used the phrase "higher quarters" to refer to the President (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 48).

Dulles also authorized the expenditure of up to $100,000 "TO CARRY OUT ANY CRASH PROGRAMS ON WHICH YOU DO NOT HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY TO CONSULT HQS" (CIA Cable, 8/26/60). He assured the Chief of Station that the message had been "SEEN AND APPROVED AT COMPETENT LEVEL" in the State Department (CIA Cable, 8/26/60). But the Director of Central Intelligence made a special point of assuring the Chief of Station that he was authorized to act unilaterally in a case where the United States Ambassador to the Congo would prefer to remain uninformed:

> TO THE EXTENT THAT AMBASSADOR MAY DESIRE TO BE CONSULTED, YOU SHOULD SEEK HIS CONCURRENCE. IF IN ANY PARTICULAR CASE, HE DOES NOT WISH TO BE CONSULTED YOU CAN ACT ON YOUR OWN AUTHORITY WHERE TIME DOES NOT PERMIT REFERRAL HERE (CIA Cable, 8/26/60).

This mandate raises a question as to whether the DCI was contemplating a particular form of action against Lumumba which the Ambassador would want to be in a position to "plausibly deny" United States involvement. DDP Richard Bissell testified that he was "almost certain" that he was informed about the Dulles cable shortly after its transmission and that it was his "belief" that the cable was a circumlocutious means of indicating that the President wanted Lumumba to be killed (Bissell, 9/10/75, pp. 33, 64-65).*

---

* See Section 5(c), infra, for additional testimony by Bissell on the question of authorization for the assassination effort against Lumumba.

to a remark by the Chief of Station that implied that he might assassinate Lumumba:

> TO COS COMMENT THAT LUMUMBA IN OPPOSITION IS ALMOST AS DANGEROUS AS IN OFFICE, [THE CONGOLESE POLITICIAN] INDICATED UNDERSTOOD AND IMPLIED MIGHT PHYSICALLY ELIMINATE LUMUMBA. (CIA Cable, (IN 49679,) Leopoldville to Director, 9/7/60.)

The cable continued to report that the Chief of Station had offered to assist this politician "IN PREPARATION NEW GOVERNMENT PROGRAM" and assured him that the United States would supply technicians (CIA Cable, 9/7/60).

As the chaotic struggle for power raged, the Chief of the Africa Division succinctly summarized the prevalent U. S. apprehension about Lumumba's ability to influence events in the Congo by virtue of personality, irrespective of his official position:

stet

> LUMUMBA TALENTS AND DYNAMISM APPEAR OVERRIDING FACTOR IN REESTABLISHING HIS POSITION EACH TIME IT SEEMS HALF LOST. IN OTHER WORDS EACH TIME LUMUMBA HAS OPPORTUNITY HAVE LAST WORD HE CAN SWAY EVENTS TO HIS ADVANTAGE. (CIA Cable, (OUT 69233,) Director to Leopoldville, 9/13/60).

The day after Mobutu's coup, the Chief of Station reported that he was serving as an advisor to a Congolese effort to "eliminate" Lumumba due to his "fear" that Lumumba might, in fact, have been strengthened by placing himself in UN custody, which afforded a safe base of operations:

> STILL DIFFICULT DETERMINE WHETHER MOBUTU HAS SUFFICIENT CONTROL ARMY TO ENFORCE DECISIONS ANNOUNCED NIGHT 14 SEPTEMBER. STATION ADVISED [TWO MODERATE CONGOLESE POLITICIANS] TRY WORK WITH [KEY CONGOLESE CONTACT] IN EFFORT ELIMINATE LUMUMBA. FEAR UN PROTECTION WILL GIVE LUMUMBA OPPORTUNITY ORGANIZE COUNTER ATTACK. ONLY SOLUTION IS REMOVE HIM FROM SCENE SOONEST. (CIA Cable, (IN 13374,) Leopoldville to Director, 9/15/60.)

On September 17, another CIA operative in the Congo met with a leading Congolese senator. At this meeting, the senator requested a clandestine supply of small arms to equip some Congolese Army troops. The cable to CIA headquarters concerning the meeting reported:

> [CONGOLESE SENATOR] REQUESTED CLANDESTINE SUPPLY SMALL ARMS TO EQUIP ... TROOPS RECENTLY ARRIVED LEOP[OLDVILLE] AREA ... [THE SENATOR] SAYS THIS WOULD PROVIDE CORE ARMED MEN WILLING AND ABLE TAKE DIRECT ACTION ... [SENATOR] RELUCTANTLY AGREES LUMUMBA MUST GO PERMANENTLY. DISTRUSTS [ANOTHER CONGOLESE LEADER] BUT WILLING MAKE PEACE WITH HIM FOR PURPOSES ELIMINATION LUMUMBA. (CIA Cable, (IN 14228,) Leopoldville to Director, 9/17/60.)

The CIA operative told the Congolese senator that "HE WOULD EXPLORE POSSIBILITY OBTAINING ARMS" and recommended to CIA headquarters that they should > HAVE [ARMS] SUPPLIES READY TO GO AT NEAREST BASE PENDING [UNITED STATES] DECISION THAT SUPPLY WARRANTED AND NECESSARY (CIA Cable, 9/17/60).*

---

* This recommendation proved to be in line with large scale planning at CIA headquarters for clandestine paramilitary support to anti-Lumumba elements. On October 6, 1960, Richard Bissell and Bronson Tweedy signed a cable concerning plans which the Chief of Station was instructed not to discuss with State Department representatives or operational contacts:

(footnote continued on next page)

Several days later, while warning a key Congolese leader about coup plots led by Lumumba and two of his supporters, the Chief of Station

> URGED ARREST OR OTHER MORE PERMANENT DISPOSAL OF LUMUMBA, GIZENGA, AND MULELE (CIA Cable, (IN 15643,) Leopoldville to Director, 9/20/61).

Gizenga and Mulele were Lumumba's lieutenants who were leading his supporters while Lumumba was in UN custody.

4. The Plot to Assassinate Lumumba

In the fall of 1960, a scientist from CIA headquarters delivered to the Chief of Station in Leopoldville lethal biological substances to be used to assassinate Patrice Lumumba. The Chief of Station testified that after requesting and receiving confirmation from CIA headquarters that he was to carry out the scientist's instructions, he proceeded to take "exploratory steps" in furtherance of the assassination plot. The Chief of Station testified that in the course of his discussion with the CIA scientist, Sidney Gottlieb, he was informed that President Eisenhower had ordered the assassination mission against Patrice Lumumba. Gottlieb's mission to the Congo was both preceded and followed by general cables urging the "elimination" of Lumumba sent from CIA headquarters in an extraordinarily restricted "Eyes Only" channel -- including two messages under the personal signature of Allen Dulles.

The lethal substances were never used by the Chief of Station. But despite the fact that Lumumba had placed himself in the protective custody of the UN peace-keeping force shortly before the poisons were delivered to the Chief of Station, there is no clear evidence that the assassination operation was terminated before Lumumba's death. There is, however, no direct evidence of a connection between the CIA assassination plot and the events which actually led to Lumumba's death.*

---

* See Section 6, infra, for a discussion of the evidence about the circumstances that led to Lumumba's death in Katanga.

(a) Dulles Cables Again for "Elimination" of Lumumba, and a Messenger is Sent to Congo With a Highly Sensitive Assignment

On September 19, 1960, several days after Lumumba placed himself in the protective custody of the United Nations peacekeeping force in Leopoldville, Richard Bissell and Bronson Tweedy signed a cryptic cable to Leopoldville to arrange a clandestine meeting between the Chief of Station and "Sidney Braun," who was traveling to the Congo on an unspecified assignment:

> ["SID"] SHOULD ARRIVE APPROX 27 SEPT. . . WILL ANNOUNCE HIMSELF AS "SID FROM PARIS". . . IT URGENT YOU SHOULD SEE ["SID"] SOONEST POSSIBLE AFTER HE PHONES YOU. HE WILL FULLY IDENTIFY HIMSELF AND EXPLAIN HIS ASSIGNMENT TO YOU. (CIA Cable, OUT 71464, Bissell/Tweedy to Chief of Station, 9/19/60.)

The cable bore a highly unusual sensitivity indicator -- "PROP" -- that restricted circulation at CIA headquarters to the Chief of the Africa Division.*

---

* In a letter of September 23, 1975, the Chief of the CIA Review Staff informed the Committee that "PROP" was normally used "to denote sensitive personnel matters" (Seymour R. Bolton to Frederick A. O. Schwarz and Frederick D. Baron, 9/23/75. It appears that this sensitivity indicator, while created for other purposes, was utilized by Bissell, Tweedy, and the Chief of Station to restrict distribution of their communications about an assassination operation. The cable traffic cited in this report that was sent through the PROP channel did not touch upon personnel matters except in terms of recruiting additional CIA officers and agents for the assassination operation.

The Bissell/Tweedy cable informed the Chief of Station that he was to continue to use this indicator for

> ALL [CABLE] TRAFFIC THIS OP, WHICH YOU INSTRUCTED HOLD ENTIRELY TO YOURSELF. (CIA Cable, 9/19/60.)

The Chief of Station -- referred to herein as "Hedgman"* -- testified to a clear, independent recollection of receiving such a cable. Hedgman stated that in September of 1960 he received a "most unusual" cable from CIA headquarters (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 11, 43). The cable advised, in his words, that:

> someone who I would have recognized would arrive with instructions for me.... I believe the message was also marked for my eyes only ... and contained instructions that I was not to discuss the message with anyone. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 12-13.)

Hedgman said that the cable did not specify the kind of instructions he was to receive, and it "did not refer to Lumumba in any way" (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 12).

Three days after the Bissell/Tweedy message that Hedgman was to meet "Sid" in Leopoldville, Bronson Tweedy uses the same sensitivity indicator on a cable sent to Hedgman on an "Eyes Only" basis (CIA Cable, OUT 74837, Tweedy to Leopoldville, 9/22/60).

---

* Due to fear of reprisal from Lumumba's followers, the Chief of Station for the Congo from mid-summer 1960 through 1961 testified under the alias "Hedgman" (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 2; 8/25/75, p. 4).

Tweedy's cable indicated that a third country national would be required as an agent in the PROP operation:

> IF DECIDED SUPPORT FOR PROP OBJECTIVES, BELIEVE ESSENTIAL SUCH BE PROVIDED THROUGH THIRD NATIONAL CHANNEL WITH [AMERICAN] ROLE COMPLETELY CONCEALED. (CIA Cable, 9/22/60.)

Tweedy expressed reservations about two agents that the station was using for other operations and said "WE ARE CONSIDERING A THIRD NATIONAL CUTOUT CONTACT CANDIDATE AVAILABLE HERE WHO MIGHT FILL BILL"* (CIA Cable, 9/22/60). Despite Tweedy's concern about the two existing station contacts, he indicated that the Chief of station and his "colleague" -- presumably the man identified as "Sid" who was to arrive in the Congo shortly to explain the PROP operation to Hedgman -- were to be afforded considerable latitude in exercising their judgment on the conduct of the operation:

> YOU AND COLLEAGUE UNDERSTAND WE CANNOT READ OVER YOUR SHOULDER AS YOU PLAN AND ASSESS OPPORTUNITIES. OUR PRIMARY CONCERN MUST BE CONCEALMENT [AMERICAN] ROLE, UNLESS OUTSTANDING OPPORTUNITY EMERGES WHICH MAKES CALCULATED RISK FIRST CLASS BET. READY ENTERTAIN ANY SERIOUS PROPOSALS YOU MAKE BASED OUR HIGH REGARD BOTH YOUR PROFESSIONAL JUDGMENTS. (CIA Cable, 9/22/60.)

---

* This is probably a reference to agent QJWIN, who was later dispatched to the Congo. His mission is discussed in Sections ____, ____, and ____, infra.

On September 24, Allen Dulles personally issued a cable to Leopoldville expressing in absolute terms his desire to "eliminate" Lumumba:

> WE WISH GIVE EVERY POSSIBLE SUPPORT IN ELIMINATING LUMUMBA FROM ANY POSSIBILITY RESUMING GOVERNMENTAL POSITION OR IF HE FAILS IN LEOP[OLDVILLE], SETTING HIMSELF IN STANLEYVILLE OR ELSEWHERE. (CIA Cable, OUT 73573, Dulles to Leopoldville, 9/24/60.)

Dulles had expressed a similar view three days before in the presence of the President at an NSC meeting, stating:

> Mobutu appeared to be the effective power in the Congo for the moment but Lumumba was not yet disposed of and remained a grave danger as long as he was not disposed of. (NSC Minutes, 9/21/60)

(b) Gottlieb Delivers Lethal Substances to the Chief of Station in the Congo for the Assassination of Lumumba

The Chief of Station reported through the PROP channel to Bronson Tweedy that he had made contact with the man dispatched to Leopoldville with a highly sensitive assignment on September 26. (CIA Cable IN 18989, Leopoldville to Tweedy, 9/27/60) This was the same week in which Dulles cabled about the "elimination" of Lumumba and made his statement to the NSC about the "grave danger" that existed as long as Lumumba was not "disposed of".

Hedgman testified about the identity of "SID" -- the messenger referred to in the first cable through the PROP channel:

Q: Who was the messenger who arrived?

Hedgman: Mr. Sidney Gottlieb.

> Q: And at that time, you knew who he was?
> Hedgman: I recognized him as an officer of the Agency . . . . I believe he referred to the fact that I had received a message and that he was the person concerned. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 15-16)

The message carried by (Gottlieb, then Science Advisor to DDP Richard Bissell,) was unmistakeably clear according to Hedgman:

> Hedgman: It is my recollection that he advised me, or my instructions were, to eliminate Lumumba.
> Q: By eliminate, do you mean assassinate?
> Hedgman: Yes. I would say that was . . . my understanding of the primary means. I don't think it was probably limited to that, if there was some other way of doing it.
> Q: Of doing what?
> Hedgman: Of removing him from a position of political threat. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 17-18.)

Hedgman said that he and (Gottlieb) also may have discussed non-lethal means of removing Lumumba as a "political threat", but he said, "I cannot recall with certainty on that" (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 28).

He clearly recalled the discussion of assassination, however:

> Q: And what did Mr. (Gottlieb) indicate with regard to the possibility of physically eliminating him?
> Hedgman: It was my understanding that that was probably expected of me. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 18.)

And again:

> Q: I take it that once you started discussing these lethal agents, there was no doubt in your mind that the kind of elimination he was there particularly to discuss was killing Lumumba?

> Hedgman: There was no doubt in my mind that this was one of the way[s], and probably what they thought was the only way that would work (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 25).

Hedgman explained Gottlieb provided him with poisons as a means of assassination:

> Q: And what did he tell you with regard to how that might be accomplished?
> Hedgman: ... He brought some biological agents. I assume that that's the correct word. But in any case, poisonous agent with him, which he passed to me....
>
> Q: These were lethal biological substances?
> Hedgman: Yes. That was my understanding as a non-expert. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 18-19.)

Hedgman testified that he received "rubber gloves, a mask, and a syringe" along with the poisons and that Gottlieb instructed him in their use (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 20-21). Hedgman indicated that this paraphernalia was for administering the poisons to Lumumba:

> Q: [W]hen he [Gottlieb] came to the Congo to give you lethal biological agents for the assassination of Lumumba, was it clear at that time that the means for administering those biological agents was to inject them into a substance that was to be ingested by Lumumba, whether it be food, or drink, or toothpaste or any other substance that was to be ingested?
> Hedgman: That's my recollection, yes. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 82; accord. p. 24.)

Hedgman said that the means of assassination was not restricted to use of the poisons provided by Gottlieb:

> This was not a sine qua non that I employ this. If there were another method, another way, it would have been acceptable. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 19.)

For example, Hedgman testified that he may have "suggested" shooting Lumumba to Gottlieb as an alternative to poisoning (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 27-29).

There was a firm requirement, however, that the means of assassination should not be traceable to the United States:

> The biological substance, or specimens, what have you, I think it was up to my judgment, and if there was a better way -- certainly. [T]he point I now recall was in no way, if I implemented these instructions, no way could it be traced back to the United States. It had to be a way which could not be traced back ... either to an American or the United States government. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 19.)

Hedgman said Gottlieb assured him that the poisons were produced to meet this requirement:

> I believe I raised the point that poisons left traces in the human body, which could be found on autopsy ... I believe that I was assured that these ... lethal agents would [leave] normal traces found in people that die of certain diseases. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 23.)

Hedgman said that he had an "emotional reaction of great surprise" when it first became clear that Gottlieb was there to discuss an assassination plan (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 30). But the Chief of Station said that he did not give any indication that he would not carry out the instructions (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 46). Instead, he told Gottlieb he "would explore this" (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 46) and left him with the following impression:

> I think it would be a fair impression that he would take away the thought that I was going to look into it and try and figure if there was a way ... I believe I > stressed the difficulty of trying to carry out such an operation. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 47.)

The cable that Hedgman sent to headquarters reporting his initial contact with (Gottlieb) was clearly an affirmative response to the assignment. The (Chief of) Station said that he and (Gottlieb) were "ON SAME WAVELENGTH." (CIA Cable IN 18989, Leopoldville to Tweedy, 9/27/60.) Hedgman was "afraid" that [Mobutu's] government was "weakening under" foreign pressure to effect a reconciliation with Lumumba, and said:

> HENCE BELIEVE MOST RAPID ACTION CONSISTENT WITH SECURITY INDICATED. (CIA Cable, 9/27/60.)

(c) Hedgman Testified That (Gottlieb) Told Him That President Eisenhower Had Ordered the Assassination of Lumumba

Hedgman testified that in the course of their meeting in Leopoldville, (Dr. Gottlieb) informed him that President Eisenhower had authorized the assassination of Lumumba:

> Q: Did you raise with him the question of authorization of such instructions to you?
> Hedgman: Yes, I did. That's my quite strong recollection, that I did.
>
> Q: What do you recall in essence was what you said to him?
>
> Hedgman: In essence, I think I must have ... pointed out that this was not a common or usual Agency tactic, and I may have probably said that I never heard of it being done, which I had not, never in my training or previous work in the Agency had I ever heard any references to such, in my recollection at least, such methods. And it is my recollection I asked on whose authority these instructions were issued.
> Q: And what did Mr. (Gottlieb) reply?

Hedgman cautioned that he was recalling events long past:

> Hedgman: Gentlemen, after fifteen years, I cannot be 100 per cent certain, but I have always, since that date, had the impression in my mind that these orders had come from the President. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 34.)

But he left no doubt about the strength of his "impression":

> Q: You have a very firm recollection that he [Gottlieb] represented to you that the President of the United States directed the assassination of Patrice Lumumba, is that correct?
> Hedgman: That's my recollection. Yes. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 102; accord, p. 34.)

(d) Headquarters Makes the Assassination Plot "Highest Priority" and Authorizes Steps in Furtherance of It

On the basis of his talks with "Sid," Hedgman listed a number of "possibilities" for covert action against Lumumba. At the top of the list was the suggestion that a particular agent be used in the following manner:

> HAVE HIM TAKE REFUGE WITH BIG BROTHER. WOULD THUS ACT AS INSIDE MAN TO BRUSH UP DETAILS TO RAZOR EDGE. (CIA Cable, 9/27/60.)

Hedgman indicated that he would begin to follow this course by recalling the agent to Leopoldville. (CIA Cable, 9/27/60.) He informed headquarters: "PLAN PROCEED ON BASIS PRIORITIES AS LISTED ABOVE, UNLESS INSTRUCTED TO CONTRARY" (CIA Cable, 9/27/60).

On September 30, the Chief of Station urged that headquarters authorize "exploratory conversations" with this agent so

The same day, through the PROP channel, Hedgman received authorization from headquarters to proceed with his top priority plan:

> YOU ARE AUTHORIZED HAVE EXPLORATORY TALKS WITH [redacted] TO ASSESS HIS ATTITUDE TOWARD POSSIBLE ACTIVE AGENT OR CUTOUT ROLE. ... APPRECIATE MANNER YOUR APPROACH TO PROBLEM. (CIA Cable, OUT 75900, Fields to Leopoldville, 9/30/60.)

In this cable, Glenn Fields, Assistant Chief of the Africa Division, expressed a "HOPE ... FOR MODERATE HASTE" (CIA Cable OUT 75900, Fields to Leopoldville, 9/30/60.)

According to the report of the Chief of Station, Gottlieb left the Congo to return to headquarters on October 5 in view of the "EXPIRATION DATE HIS MATERIALS" (CIA Cable IN 24171, Leopoldville to Tweedy, 10/7/60). The "expiration" of Gottlieb's "materials" probably refers to the date beyond which the substances would no longer have lethal strength. Although the relation of the "expiration date" to Gottlieb's departure is unclear from the cables, it probably signifies that some of the biological substances had lost their toxicity. Nonetheless, the Chief of Station indicated that Gottlieb left some biological substances that were still lethal and that he intended to proceed with the assassination operation:

> [SID] LEFT CERTAIN ITEMS OF CONTINUING USEFULNESS. [CHIEF OF STATION] PLANS CONTINUE TRY IMPLEMENT OP. (CIA Cable IN 24171, Leopoldville to Tweedy, 10/7/60.)

By this point, Hedgman had conducted his "exploratory conversation" with the agent who was his best candidate for gaining access to Lumumba (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 60). Hedgman testified that the subject he "explored" was the agent's ability to find a means to inject poison into Lumumba's food or toothpaste (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 60):

> I believe that I queried the agent who had access to Lumumba, and his entourage, in detail about just what that access, what access he actually had, as opposed to speaking to people. In other words, did he have access to the bathroom, did he have access to the kitchen, things of that sort.
> I have a recollection of having queried him on that without specifying why I wanted to know this. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 48.)

On October 7, the Chief of Station reported to headquarters on this meeting:

> CONDUCTED EXPLORATORY CONVERSATION WITH [AGENT] ... AFTER EXPLORING ALL POSSIBILITIES [AGENT] SUGGESTED SOLUTION RECOMMENDED BY HQS. ALTHOUGH DID NOT PICK UP BALL, BELIEVE HE PREPARED TAKE ANY ROLE NECESSARY WITHIN LIMITS SECURITY ACCOMPLISH OBJECTIVE.

Hedgman testified that his exploratory steps left him with doubts about the wisdom or practicality of the assassination plot:

> [C]ertainly I looked on it as a pretty wild scheme professionally. I did not think that it ... was practical professionally. Certainly ... to keep the U.S. out of it....
> I explored it, but I doubt that I ever really expected to carry it out. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 111.)

However, his cables indicate that he was planning to continue to implement the operation and sought the resources to do it successfully. He urged headquarters to send him an alternate operative for the assassination mission in the event that they found his first choice unacceptable:

> IF HQS BELIEVE [AGENT'S CIRCUMSTANCES] BAR HIS PARTICIPATION, WISH STRESS NECESSITY PROVIDE STATION WITH QUALIFIED THIRD COUNTRY NATIONAL. (CIA Cable IN 24171, Leopoldville to Tweedy, 10/7/60.)

Tweedy cabled the Chief of Station the same day that he "HAD GOOD DISCUSSION YOUR COLLEAGUE 7 OCT" -- presumably referring to a de-briefing of Gottlieb upon his return to the United States. (CIA Cable OUT 78336, Tweedy to Leopoldville, 10/7/60.) Tweedy indicated that he was

> CONSIDERING DISPATCHING THIRD COUNTRY NATIONAL OPERATOR WHO, WHEN HE ARRIVES, SHOULD THEN BE ASSESSED BY YOU OVER PERIOD TO SEE WHETHER HE MIGHT PLAY ACTIVE OR CUTOUT ROLE ON FULL TIME BASIS. (CIA Cable OUT 78336, Tweedy to Chief of Station, 10/7/60.)

This expression of support for the operation was followed by an extraordinary pair of cables from headquarters on October 15, 1960. One of these cables was issued by a desk officer in CIA's Africa Division and released under Bronson Tweedy's signature, as Division Chief, and sent to Leopoldville through standard CIA channels, which would allow for distribution of the message to appropriate personnel in the CIA station and the United States embassy. This cable ... generally discussed the possibility of covertly supplying certain Congolese leaders with funds and military aid (CIA Cable OUT 81476 Director to Leopoldville, 10/15/60). This cable also delimited the kind of action against Lumumba that would be authorized:

> ONLY DIRECT ACTION WE CAN NOW STAND BEHIND IS TO SUPPORT IMMOBILIZING OR ARRESTING [LUMUMBA], DESIRABLE AS MORE DEFINITIVE ACTION MIGHT BE. ANY ACTION TAKEN WOULD HAVE TO BE ENTIRELY CONGOLESE. (CIA Cable OUT 81476, Director to Leopoldville, 10/15/60.)

On the same day that this message was dispatched, a second cable was sent to Leopoldville. This cable was issued personally by Bronson Tweedy and sent in the special PROP channel for Hedgman's "EYES ONLY" (CIA Cable OUT 81396 Tweedy to Chief of Station, 10/15/60).

> YOU WILL NOTE FROM CABLE THROUGH NORMAL CHANNEL CURRENTLY BEING TRANSMITTED A PARA[GRAPH] ON PROP TYPE SUGGESTIONS. YOU WILL PROBABLY RECEIVE MORE ALONG THESE LINES AS STUMBLING BLOC [LUMUMBA] REPRESENTS INCREASINGLY APPARENT ALL STUDYING CONGO SITUATION CLOSELY AND HIS DISPOSITION SPONTANEOUSLY BECOMES NUMBER ONE CONSIDERATION.
> RAISE ABOVE SO YOU NOT CONFUSED BY ANY APPARENT DUPLICATION. THIS CHANNEL REMAINS FOR SPECIFIC PURPOSE YOU DISCUSSED WITH COLLEAGUE AND ALSO REMAINS HIGHEST PRIORITY. (CIA Cable OUT 81396, Tweedy to Chief of Station, 10/15/60).

Thus, Tweedy resolved the apparent duplication of cables by indicating that communications about the assassination mission were restricted to the PROP channel and that the assassination mission was to move forward. He went on to request Hedgman's reaction to the prospect of sending a senior CIA case officer to the Congo on a "DIRECTED ASSIGNMENT ... TO CONCENTRATE ENTIRELY THIS ASPECT" (CIA Cable OUT 81396, Tweedy to Chief of Station, 10/15/60). This referred to CIA officer Justin O'Donnell who testified that in late October he was asked by Richard Bissell to undertake the mission of assassinating Lumumba.*

In the course of suggesting the assignment of an additional officer to the Congo, the cable provided insight into the reason that the assassination mission had not progressed more rapidly under the Chief of Station:

> SEEMS TO US YOUR OTHER COMMITMENTS TOO HEAVY GIVE NECESSARY CONCENTRATION PROP. (CIA Cable OUT 81396, Tweedy to Chief of Station, 10/15/60.)

Again, in contradiction of the limitations on anti-Lumumba activity outlined in the cable sent through normal channels, Tweedy's cable also proposed a plan to kidnap Lumumba:

> POSSIBILITY USE COMMANDO TYPE GROUP FOR ABDUCTION [LUMUMBA], EITHER VIA ASSAULT ON HOUSE UP CLIFF FROM RIVER OR, MORE PROBABLY, IF [LUMUMBA] ATTEMPTS ANOTHER BREAKOUT INTO TOWN ... REQUEST YOUR VIEWS. (CIA Cable OUT 81396, Tweedy to Chief of Station, 10/15/60.)

---

* For a full account of the meeting between Bissell and O'Donnell and O'Donnell's subsequent activities in the Congo, see Section 5(a), infra.

This series of cables sent during, and after Gottlieb's visit to the Congo demonstrated a clear intent at CIA headquarters to authorize and support rapid progress on the assassination mission. The cables also show an intent to severely restrict knowledge of the assassination operation among officers in CIA's Africa Division and among United States personnel in the Congo, including those who were aware of and involved in other covert activities.

(e) The Chief of Station Moves Forward With Assassination Plot

The testimony of the Chief of Station, taken fifteen years after the events in question and without benefit of review of the cables discussed above, was compatible with the picture derived from the cables of a fully authorized and tightly restricted assassination operation. Hedgman's testimony is at variance from the cables only with respect to the lack of vigor with which he claims to have pursued the assignment which he dealt with in an affirmative, aggressive manner in the cables.

(i) The Chief of Station Testified That He Requested and Received Confirmation of the Assassination Plan from Headquarters

Hedgman testified that, after receiving Gottlieb's instructions, he cabled CIA headquarters seeking confirmation that he was to carry out Gottlieb's instructions (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 36). Hedgman did not recall whether he identified Gottlieb by name, and he doubted that he "would have" mentioned the President in such a cable (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 36, 43).

Hedgman described the extraordinary security precautions he took cabling his request for confirmation of the assassination instructions:

> There was some special channel ... because it was handled differently than any other normal message. For example, it was not put on a regular cable form, which, you know, you have several copies for your various files. And it was my recollection that I personally carried the message to the communicator to encrypt, and that was worded in a doublt-talk way that even the communicator would not necessarily know what it was about."
> (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 42-43.)

This description approximates the PROP channel that was used for all cables relating to the assassination mission.

Hedgman testified that soon after cabling his request for confirmation that he was to carry out the assassination assignment, he received an affirmative reply from headquarters:

> I believe I received a reply which I interpreted to mean yes, that he was the messenger and his instructions were ... duly authorized.
> (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 37-38.)

Despite the cryptic nature of the cables, Hedgman said "I was convinced that yes, it was right." (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 44, 50.)

Hedgman did not recall receiving any indication, either from Gottlieb or by cable, that he was to await further authorization before using the poisons (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 38). Hedgman expressed some uncertainty about whether he "had an absolute free hand" to proceed with an assassination attempt without receiving "final confirmation" (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 38, 47, 53).

Hedgman summarized his testimony on this question in his second appearance:

> I probably had authority to act on my own but ... it was possible that I had to go back and get clearance for my action. (Hedgman, 8/25/75, p. 11; see also 8/21/75, p. 39.)

Hedgman testified, however, that a "policy decision" had been made -- that assassination had been "approved" as "one means" of eliminating Lumumba as a political threat (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 52).

> I thought the policy decision had been made in the White House, not in the Agency, and that the Agency had been selected as the Executive Agent, if you will, to carry out a political decision. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 52.)

Although Hedgman assumed that the President had not personally selected the means of assassination, he testified that he was under the impression that the President had authorized the CIA to do so and to proceed to take action:

> Hedgman: ... I doubt that I thought the President had said, you use this system. But my understanding is the President had made a decision that an act should take place, but then put that into the hands of the Agency to carry out his decision.
> Q: Whatever that act was to be, it was clearly to be assassination or the death of the foreign political leader?
>
> Hedgman: Yes.
> Q: Instigated by the CIA, initiated by the CIA?
> Hedgman: Certainly if those -- if Dr. Gottlieb's lethal agents were employed, that would have been the result, yes. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 104.)

Nonetheless, Hedgman said he had no "desire to carry out these instructions" (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 106). Whether or not he felt there was authority to attempt an assassination without seeking final confirmation, he said that he would have checked with headquarters before taking action:

> I think probably that I would have gone back and advised that I intended to carry out and sought final approval before carrying it out had I been going to do it, had there been a way to do it. I did not see it as ... a matter which could be accomplished practically, certainly. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 51-52.)

He proceeded to affirm that his reason for seeking a final approval would have been to receive assurances about the practicality of the specific mode of assassination that he planned to use (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 53).

(ii) The Chief of Station Took "Exploratory Steps" in Furtherance of the Assassination Plot and Testified That He Destroyed Cable Traffic Related to the Plot

Hedgman testified that after Gottlieb's visit, he locked the lethal substances in the bottom drawer of his safe, "probably" sealed in an envelope marked "Eyes Only" with his name on it (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 48-49). He said that his secretary was the only other person with access to the safe and that she would not have examined a package marked in this fashion (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 49).

Hedgman testified that it was "possible" that he preserved the poisons in his safe until after Lumumba's death; at any

The cable traffic conforms to Hedgman's recollection. For two months after Gottlieb's arrival in the Congo, a regular stream of messages flowed between the Leopoldville Chief of Station and headquarters through the PROP channel. In late September and early October the cables concerned the initiation of Hedgman's top priority plan -- recruiting the aid of a particular agent thought to have sufficient access to Lumumba's entourage to be able to poison Lumumba.* In mid-October, Tweedy notified the Chief of Station that the assassination mission remained "HIGHEST PRIORITY", and he suggested sending additional personnel to Leopoldville to intensify "CONCENTRATION" on this operation (CIA Cable OUT 81396, Tweedy to Chief of Station, 10/15/60).

These cables were followed by Hedgman's report to Tweedy on October 17 that the agent he had picked for the assassination mission

> HAS NOT BEEN ABLE PENETRATE ENTOURAGE. THUS HE HAS NOT BEEN ABLE PROVIDE OPS INTEL NEEDED THIS JOB. (CIA Cable (IN 28936,)(Chief of) Station to Tweedy, 10/17/60.)

Hedgman testified that this operative left Leopoldville "sometime in October" which terminated their discussions about gaining access to Lumumba for the purpose of assassinating him (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 61). The (Chief of) Station continued to communicate with headquarters about finding a means to move forward with the assassination operation and securing the necessary manpower to do so.

Hedgman confirmed Tweedy's view that although the assassination operation was still his highest priority, he was overburdened with responsibility for other operations so that he could not concentrate on the progress of the assassination mission:

> ALTHOUGH MAINTAINING PRIORITY INTEREST THIS OP, ABLE DEVOTE ONLY LIMITED AMOUNT TIME, VIEW MULTIPLE OPS COMMITMENTS. (CIA Cable, (IN 28936,) 10/17/60.)

Due to his workload, the (Chief of) Station responded enthusiastically to Tweedy's suggestion of an additional case officer:

> BELIEVE EARLY ASSIGNMENT SENIOR CASE OFFICER HANDLE PROP OPS EXCELLENT IDEA ... IF CASE OFFICER AVAILABLE [(CHIEF OF) STATION] WOULD DEVOTE AS MUCH TIME AS POSSIBLE TO ASSISTING AND DIRECTING HIS EFFORTS. (CIA Cable (IN 28936,) 10/17/60.)

The (Chief of) Station concluded this cable with the following cryptic recommendation, reminiscent of his testimony that he may have "suggested" shooting Lumumba to (Gottlieb) as an alternative to poisoning (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 27-29):

> IF CASE OFFICER SENT, RECOMMEND HQS POUCH SOONEST HIGH POWERED FOREIGN MAKE RIFLE WITH TELESCOPIC SCOPE AND SILENCER. HUNTING GOOD HERE WHEN LIGHTS RIGHT. HOWEVER AS HUNTING RIFLES NOW FORBIDDEN, WOULD KEEP RIFLE IN OFFICE PENDING OPENING OF HUNTING SEASON. (CIA Cable (IN 28936,) 10/17/60.)

The first sentence of Hedgman's recommendation clearly refers to sending a sniper rifle to the Congo via diplomatic pouch. The rest of the message is probably an oblique reference to the possibility of shooting Lumumba at the "OPENING OF HUNTING SEASON" -- in other words, at the first opportunity to find Lumumba outside the residence where he remained in UN protective custody. This interpretation is bolstered by a report sent the next month by the (Chief of) Station through the PROP channel for Tweedy's "EYES ALONE." Hedgman's cable described the stalemate which prevailed from mid-September until Lumumba's departure for Stanleyville on November 27; Lumumba was virtually a prisoner in UN custody, but inaccessible to CIA agents and the Congolese:

> TARGET HAS NOT LEFT BUILDING IN SEVERAL WEEKS. HOUSE GUARDED DAY AND NIGHT BY CONGOLESE AND UN TROOP.... CONGOLESE TROOPS ARE THERE TO PREVENT TARGET'S ESCAPE AND TO ARREST HIM IF HE ATTEMPTS. UN TROOPS THERE TO PREVENT STORMING OF PALACE BY CONGOLESE. CONCENTRIC RINGS OF DEFENSE MAKE ESTABLISHMENT OF OBSERVATION POST IMPOSSIBLE. ATTEMPTING GET

> COVERAGE OF ANY MOVEMENT INTO OR OUT OF HOUSE BY CONGOLESE.... TARGET HAS DISMISSED MOST OF SERVANTS SO ENTRY THIS MEANS SEEMS REMOTE. (CIA Cable IN 42478, Chief of Station to Tweedy.)

Hedgman testified that all of his cable traffic about the assassination question would have been sent with the same extraordinarily stringent security precautions -- presumably referring to the PROP channel -- which concerned Gottlieb's visit and the confirmation of authorization for his instructions:

> I would have sent in a special channel anything dealing with Lumumba, at least that would touch upon his removal in one way or another. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 62.)

The Chief of Station also testified that sometime before leaving the Station, he destroyed all cable traffic relating to the assassination mission (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 89). Hedgman's best recollection was that he had received instructions to destroy those cables (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 96). Hedgman said he had never before in his tenure as Chief of Station in the Congo destroyed cable traffic because of its sensitivity (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 91). But he stated that the cables relating to assassination were destroyed because of their extremely sensitive nature.* He said that eventually

---

* It is possible that copies of cables dealing with such a sensitive operation were also destroyed at CIA headquarters.

> I destroyed a great deal of traffic, because the Congo was a highly sensitive area in which -- at one period I recall we had all of our files in the burn barrels. I mean, when you wanted a file, you went over and dug it out of the burn barrell. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 91.)

At the conclusion of his testimony about the assassination plot, the Chief of Station was asked to give a general characterization of the advisability of the plot and the tenor of the times in which it took place. His response indicated that although he was willing to carry out what he considered a duly authorized order, he was not convinced of the necessity of assassinating Lumumba:

> I looked upon the Agency as an executive arm of the Presidency.... Therefore, I suppose I thought that it was an order issued in due form from an authorized authority.
> On the other hand, I looked at it as a kind of operation that I could do without, that I thought that probably the Agency and the U.S. government could get along without. I didn't regard Lumumba as the kind of person who was going to bring on World War III or something.
> I might have had a somewhat different attitude if I thought that one man could bring on World War III and result in the deaths of millions of people or something, but I didn't see him in that light. I saw him as a danger to the political position of the United States in Africa, but nothing more than that. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 110-111.)

(f) Testimony of Bissell and Tweedy About the Degree of Support for and Perpetration of the Assassination Plot

There is a great variance between the testimony of Richard Bissell and Bronson Tweedy and the picture of the assassination plot presented by the Chief of Station and the cable traffic from the period. While the weight of the evidence demonstrates that the assassination effort was the "highest priority" at CIA headquarters among operations in the Congo, Bissell has no direct recollection of Gottlieb's mission to the Congo and Tweedy can recall nothing more than consideration of the feasibility of an assassination attempt.

(i) Tweedy Had No Recollection of the Operation To Poison Lumumba

As Chief of the Africa Division, Bronson Tweedy was the principal liaison at CIA headquarters with the Chief of Station in Leopoldville for all instructions, plans, and progress reports concerning the effort to assassinate Lumumba, which were communicated through the special PROP channel. Most of the reports and recommendations cabled to headquarters by the Chief of Station on the assassination operation were marked for Tweedy's "Eyes Only."

Tweedy personally signed both the cable which initially informed the Chief of Station that "SID" would arrive in Leopoldville, with an assignment (CIA Cable OUT 71464, Bissell/Tweedy to Chief of Station, 9/19/60) and the cable of October 7 indicating that he had debriefed Gottlieb upon his return from the Congo (CIA Cable OUT 78336, Tweedy to Chief of Station, 10/7/60). Tweedy was also the "Eyes Only" recipient of Hedgman's reports on Gottlieb's arrival in the Congo (CIA Cable IN 18989, Chief of Station to Tweedy, 9/27/60) and the subsequent communications about the plan which emerged from the discussions between Gottlieb and Hedgman as the top priority -- infiltration of an agent into Lumumba's entourage to administer a lethal poison to the Congolese leader (CIA Cable IN 20857, Chief of Station to Tweedy, 9/30/60; CIA Cable, Chief of Station to Tweedy, 10/7/60; CIA Cable, Chief of Station to Tweedy, 10/17/60).

Tweedy testified, however, without benefit of reviewing these cables, that he had no knowledge of the plot to poison Lumumba:

> Q. Do you have any knowledge of a messenger from CIA headquarters having to go to the Congo to provide the Chief of Station in the Congo with instructions to carry out the assassination of Lumumba, if possible, and also provide him with the tools to carry out such an assassination, namely, poisons and medical equipment for administering them?
> Mr. Tweedy. No, I do not. (Tweedy, 9/9/75, pp. 30-31)

---

* See Sections 4(a) - 4(e) for full treatment of the cables sent in the PROP channel between Tweedy and the Chief of Station in Leopoldville.

When asked his opinion about the truth of the testimony received by the Committee that poisons were delivered to the Congo by (Gottlieb), who carried instructions that they were to be used in the assassination of Lumumba, Tweedy replied:

> There is nothing in my experience with the Agency which would really bear on that point whatsoever. (Tweedy, 9/9, pp. 39-39)

Tweedy added that if (Gottlieb) went to the Congo as a courier, "I will bet I knew it, but I don't recall it" (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 35). Tweedy testified that it was "perfectly possible" for lethal biological substances to have been sent to the Congo, "but I don't recall it" (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 30).

In response to a question about whether he knew about a cable from headquarters informing Hedgman that a messenger was to come to the Congo with instructions for him, Tweedy said that he would be "very surprised if I didn't [know], but I certainly have no recollection of it whatsoever (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 31).

Tweedy said that he "was not going to gainsay" the testimony of the (Chief of) Station that a cable was sent to headquarters through a special channel requesting confirmation that the instructions were to be carried out but he did not recall it (Tweedy, 9/9, pp. 32-33).

Tweedy commented that rather than questioning the truth of the testimony of the (Chief of) Station,* the discrepancies in their testimony could be attributed to his own lack of recall:

* Tweedy expressed a high regard for the general credibility of the (Chief of) Station. Tweedy said that he never had occasion to doubt Hedgman's veracity or integrity, adding, "I would trust his memory and I certainly trust his integrity." (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 36)

> I really am having trouble with this. I had to be reminded of so many things. . . [T]he things that I recall the most vividly about all my African experiences were. . . the things I was basically concerned with all the time, which was putting this division together and the rest of it. When it comes to operational detail I start fuzzy and you would have thought with something like thinking about Mr. Lumumba in these terms, that I would have gone to bed and got up thinking about Lumumba, I can assure you this wasn't the case. (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 34)

Tweedy was firm, however, in his disbelief that "Gottlieb would have left instructions with the Chief of Station which would have empowered [him]. . . to go out and assassinate Lumumba, without any further recourse or reference to headquarters" (Tweedy, 9/9, pp. 32, 36). Tweedy said:

> In such a matter of this kind, headquarters would have wanted to have a last word up to the last minute. (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 36)

(ii) Tweedy Testified That He Discussed With Bissell the Feasibility of Assassinating Lumumba and He Cabled Hedgman About Gaining Access to Lumumba For the Purpose of Assassination

Despite Tweedy's lack of recollection about the actual plot to poison Lumumba, he did recall exploring the feasibility of an assassination attempt.

Tweedy testified that he had discussed the subject of assassinating Lumumba "more than once" with Richard Bissell in the fall of 1960 (Tweedy, 9/9, pp. 14-15). Tweedy stated that he did not know whether Bissell had consulted with any "higher authority" about exploring the possibilities for assassinating Lumumba (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 28). Generally, Tweedy said, when he received an instruction from Bissell he would proceed to implement it on the assumption that it was fully authorized above the level of DDP:

> I would proceed with it on the basis that he was authorized to give me instructions and it was up to him to bloody well know what he was empowered to tell me to do. (Tweedy, 9/9, p.13)

Tweedy characterized his discussions with Bissell about assassinating Lumumba as "contingency planning" (Tweedy, 9/9/75, p. 28):

> Tweedy. . . .I think it came up in the sense that Dick would have said we probably better be thinking about whether it might ever be necessary or desirable to get rid of Lumumba, in which case we presumably should be in position to assess whether we could do it or not successfully.
> Q. Do it, meaning carry off an assassination?
> Tweedy. Yes, but it was never discussed with him in any other sense but a planning exercise, . . . never were we instructed to do anything of this kind. We were instructed to ask whether such a thing would be feasible and to have the Chief of Station be thinking along those lines as well. (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 15)

Tweedy said that the planning that he undertook pursuant to his conversation with Bissell included "a few" cables that he remembers sending to the Chief of Station asking him > to keep in mind what sort of access one might ever have had to Lumumba. . .[in] the eventuality that we might wish to get rid of Mr. Lumumba personally. (Tweedy, 9/9, pp. 19-21)

Tweedy did not recall inquiring about gaining access to Lumumba for the purpose of abducting him from UN custody (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 24); rather he "supposed" that various means of assassination were being explored:

> Q. Would this be access to shoot him or would this be access to his personal food or drink or toiletries?
> Tweedy. I suppose all those types of things might have been considered. (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 23)
>
> Q. In your discussions with Bissell, about the feasibility of an assassination operation, did poisons come up as one means that was being considered and which the (Chief of) Station should explore?
> Tweedy. I am sure it must have. After all, there are not many ways of doing it. Shoot a man, poison him, of course you could, I suppose, stab him or something like that. But basically you are talking about a contingency plan which I assume has the best possibility of protecting the involvement of the U.S. Government and if you want to do it in a manner which would be as distant, if that is the right word, as possible, I think poison would then stand high on the list of possibilities.

Tweedy did not "recall specifically" the response from the (Chief of) Station, but said he was "sure" that he received "a serious answer. . . a disciplined reply to an instruction from headquarters" (Tweedy, 9/9, pp. 23,27).

Although Tweedy did not recall sending or receiving cables in a special channel concerning the "messenger" to the Congo or confirmation of his instructions, he acknowledged that the cables exploring access to Lumumba for the purpose of assassination would have been sent in a channel that was even more closely restricted than the normal CIA cable traffic (Tweedy, 9/9, pp. 22, 32-33). Tweedy said destruction of such cable traffic would have been left to the discretion of the (Chief of) Station and he did not know whether Hedgman destroyed the Station's copies (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 22).

Tweedy said "I would be surprised if I didn't" have a conversation with (Sidney Gottlieb) about "anything in his inventory that could possibly be used, including lethal biological substances (Tweedy, 9/9, pp. 68-69). Tweedy "suspected" that "the first conversation along these lines would undoubtedly have been held between Dick Bissell and (Sidney Gottlieb)," which Tweedy then would have "followed-up" (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 69).

Tweedy maintained that the period in which he explored the means of access for assassinating Lumumba remained "a planning interval and at no point can I recall that I ever felt it was imminent that somebody would say 'go'" (Tweedy, 9/9. pp. 18-19):

> Tweedy. It was always my assumption that at the time anything like this should occur there would have been some kind of real focus on the problem at probably a very considerable policy level within the Agency. . . and it never occurred to me that I would get a call or Bissell would ask me to come down to his office and sya go to it. Nor were we ever in a position where he said that I would merely implement plan so-and-so. We never got that far.
> Q. You didn't have any action plans for the assassination of Lumumba that you had prepared or were aware of?

> Tweedy. No. Planning, yes, but nothing that ever got anywhere. (Tweedy, 9/9, p. 19)

It is difficult to reconcile the cable traffic with Tweedy's testimony that no action plans were launched and that no authorization for implementing the assassination operation, authorization for Hedgman's approach to his agent to explore access to Lumumba's entourage is in accord with Tweedy's description of his inquiries about gaining access to Lumumba.

However, the fact that Tweedy was personnaly informed that the (Chief of) Station "PLANS CONTINUE TRY IMPLEMENT OP" (CIA Cable (IN 24171) (Chief of) Station to Tweedy, 10/7/60) is harder to reconcile with his statements that a "go ahead" on the operation was never imminent, especially in light of Tweedy's PROP cable the next week which told the (Chief of) Station that Lumumba's

> DISPOSITION SPONTANEOUSLY BECOMES NUMBER ONE CONSIDERATION. . . THIS CHANNEL REMAINS FOR SPECIFIC PURPOSE YOU DISCUSSED WITH COLLEAGUE AND ALSO REMAINS HIGHEST PRIORITY (CIA Cable (OUT 81396), Tweedy to (Chief of) Station, 10/15/60)

(iii) Bissell Testified That He Did Not Recall Whether The Assassination Operation Had Moved From Planning To Implementation But It Was Not Against Agency Policy to Send Poisons to The Congo

Richard Bissell testified that he did not remember discussing the feasibility of assassinating Lumumba with Bronson Tweedy, but it seemed "entirely probable" to him that such discussions took place (Bissell, 9/10, pp. 3-4).

Bissell said he "may have" given Tweedy specific instructions about steps he was to take to further an assassination plan, but he did not remember to do so (Bissell, 9/10,p.4). Bissell said that exploring access to Lumumba --"almost certainly" seeking information from the Chief of Station about access for poisoning -- would have been a "key part" of his "planning and preparatory activity" but he had no specific recollection of cable communications on this subject (Bissell, 9/10, pp. 6-8). Bissell remembered that he was aware that the Chief of Station had an agent thought to have direct access to Lumumba (Bissell, 9/10, p. 80).

Bissell testified that he "most certainly" approved any cables that Tweedy sent to the Chief of Station seeking information about gaining access to Lumumba but it was so sensitive a matter (Bissell, 9/10, p. 8) Bissell added:

> I think Mr. Tweedy, on the basis of an oral authorization from me, would have had the authority to send such a cable without my signing off on it. (Bissell, 9/10, p. 8)

Bissell believed that Tweedy would have known of Gottlieb's trip to the Congo, although it was possible that Tweedy was "cut out of knowledge of the specific operation" (Bissell, 9/10, p. 21). Bissell's lack of recollection of discussing his assignment to Justin O'Donnell* with Tweedy was the reason for his speculation that

---

* Bissell's assignment to O'Donnell is discussed in Sections 5(a)(i) and 5(a)(ii), infra.

Tweedy might have been unaware of the true purpose of Gottlieb's visit (Bissell, 9/10, pp. 20-22).

Bissell did not recall cables concerning the dispatch of a messenger and subsequently confirming that his instructions were to be followed, but he said "This sounds highly likely. . . I would expect, given the background, that the confirmation would have been forthcoming" (Bissell, 9/10, p. 43).

It was "very probable," according to Bissell, that he discussed the assassination of Lumumba with Sidney Gottlieb, who was then his Science Advisor (Bissell, 9/10, p. 14). Bissell said that on a number of occasions he discussed with Gottlieb "the availability of means of incapacitation, including assassination" (Bissell, 9/10, p. 60).

Although he had no "specific recollection," Bissell assumed that, if Gottlieb went to the Congo, he had approved the mission, (which "might very well" have dealt with the assassination of Lumumba) (Bissell, 9/10, pp. 18, 20, 44). Despite his absence of specific recollection of these events, Bissell said, "There is nothing in mind that I remember that would be in conflict" with the testimony of the Chief of Station that Gottlieb carried poisons to the Congo (Bissell, 9/10, p. 35).

Bissell testified that it would not have been against CIA policy in the fall of 1960 to send poisons to the Congo (Bissell, 9/10, p. 35).

He classified "the act of taking the kit to the Congo. . . as still in the planning stage" (Bissell, 9/10, p. 49). Bissell acknowledged, however, that the dispatch of poisons and paraphernalia with which to administer them was an extraordinary event:

> It would indeed have been rather unusual to send such materials -- a specific kit. . . of this sort -- out to a relatively small station, unless planning for their use were quite far along. (Bissell, 9/10, p. 37).

Nonetheless, Bissell said that he "probably believed" that he had sufficient authority at that point to direct CIA officers to move from the stage of planning to implementation (Bissell, 9/10, pp. 60-61). In light of his absence of a specific recollection of these events, he stated that "if it be taken as established that Mr. Gottlieb took specific instructions 'to implement,' " Gottlieb would not have been acting beyond the mandate given to him by Bissell and it would show that the assassination plot "had then passed into an implementation phase" and that "authorization was given" (Bissell, 9/10/ pp. 39, 41, 49).

5. The Question of a Connection Between the Assassination Plot and Other Actions of CIA Officers and Operatives in the Congo

Justin O'Donnell, a senior CIA officer in the clandestine operations division in 1960, testified that during this period he had been asked by DDP Richard Bissell to go to the Congo to carry out the assassination of Lumumba (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, pp. 11-12). O'Donnell said that he refused to participate in an assassination operation, but proceeded to the Congo to attempt to draw Lumumba away from the protective custody of the UN guard and place him in the hands of Congolese authorities (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, pp. 13-14).

Shortly after O'Donnell's arrival in the Congo he was joined by a CIA agent with a criminal background who was used the following year by the CIA as part of a program to develop a stand-by assassination capability. Late in 1960, one of the operatives of the Chief of Station in Leopoldville approached this agent of O'Donnell's with a proposition to join an "execution squad" (CIA Cable IN 18739, Leopoldville to Director, 12/7/60).

Despite the fact that O'Donnell was initially approached to be part of the plot to assassinate Patrice Lumumba, it is unlikely that O'Donnell was actually involved in the implementation of that plot by the Chief of Station. Whether there is any connection between the assassination plot and either of the two operatives -- QJWIN and WIROGUE -- is less clear.

(a) O'Donnell's Operations in the Congo

(i) Tweedy and the Chief of Station Agreed That a Senior Case Officer Should be Sent to the Congo to Concentrate on the Assassination Operation

In early October, 1960, several cables sent in the specially restricted PROP channel dealt with a plan to send a "senior case officer" to the Congo to aid the Chief of Station with the assassination operation.* On October 7, Bronson Tweedy informed Hedgman that he "WOULD EXPECT DISPATCH TDY [TEMPORARY DUTY] SENIOR CASE OFFICER RUN THIS OP" by supervising a third country national operative (CIA Cable OUT 78336, Tweedy to Chief of Station, 10/7/60). On October 15, Tweedy requested Hedgman's reaction to the suggestion of dispatching the senior case officer as soon as possible to concentrate on the assassination operation (CIA Cable OUT 81396, Tweedy to Chief of Station, 10/15/60). Two days later, the Chief of Station replied affirmatively:

> BELIEVE EARLY ASSIGNMENT SENIOR CASE OFFICER HANDLE PROP OPS EXCELLENT IDEA. (CIA Cable IN 28936, Chief of Station to Tweedy).

The Chief of Station advised that his responsibilities for "MULTIPLE OPS" had restricted the amount of time he was able to devote to the assassination operation (CIA Cable, 10/17/60).

(ii) Bissell Discussed Assassination of Lumumba With O'Donnell and Sent Him to Congo: October-November 1960

Probably shortly after the Chief of Station's cable of October 17 requesting the assignment of a senior case officer to concentrate on the assassination operation, Richard Bissell broached the subject with CIA officer Justin O'Donnell.

At that time, O'Donnell was the Deputy Chief of a component of the Directorate of Plans -- the CIA's covert action arm (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 8).

Justin O'Donnell testified that in October of 1960, he was asked by Richard Bissell to undertake the mission of assassinating Patrice Lumumba (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, pp. 11-12; 9/11/75, pp. 19, 43):

> O'Donnell: He called me in and he told me he wanted to go down to the Belgian Congo, the former Belgian Congo, and to eliminate Lumumba . . . .
> Q: What did you understand him to mean by eliminate?
>
> O'Donnell: To kill him and thereby eliminate his influence.
>
> Q: What was the basis for your interpreting his remarks, whatever his precise language, as meaning that he was talking about assassination rather than merely neutralizing him through some other means?
> O'Donnell: It was not neutralization . . . Clearly the context of our talk was to kill him. (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, pp. 11-12.)

O'Donnell reacted strongly to Bissell's instruction:

> I told him that I would absolutely not have any part of killing Lumumba. He said, I want you to go over and talk to Sidney Gottlieb. (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 12.)

Gottlieb was a CIA scientist who was at that time the Science Advisor to Bissell (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 14).

O'Donnell said it was "inconceivable that Bissell would direct such a mission without the personal permission of Allen Dulles" (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 44). But the question of authorization was never raised by Bissell:

> I assumed that he had authority from Mr. Dulles in such an important issue, but it was not discussed, nor did he purport to have higher authority to do it. (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 15.)

O'Donnell promptly met with Gottlieb and testified that he was "sure that Mr. Bissell had called Gottlieb and told him I was coming over" (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 13; 9/11/75, p. 7). O'Donnell said that Gottlieb told him "that there were four or five ... lethal means of disposing of Lumumba" (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 13). O'Donnell recalled that "one of the methods was a virus and the others included poison" (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 12; 9/11/75, p. 7). O'Donnell said that Gottlieb "didn't even hint ... that he had been in the Congo and that he had transported any lethal agent to the Congo" (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 7-A).

After speaking with Gottlieb, O'Donnell said:

> I then left his office, and I went back to Mr. Bissell's office and I told him in no way would I have any part in the assassination of Lumumba ... and reasserted in absolute terms that I would not be involved in a murder attempt. (O'Donnell 9/11/75, p. 43.)

(O'Donnell) said that in one of his two conversations with Bissell about Lumumba, he raised the prospect "that conspiracy to commit murder being done in the District of Columbia might be in violation of federal law" (O'Donnell), 6/9/75, p. 14). He said that Bissell "airily dismissed" this prospect (O'Donnell), 6/9/75, p. 14).

Despite his refusal to participate in assassination, (O'Donnell) agreed to go to the Congo on a general mission to "neutralize" Lumumba "as a political factor" (O'Donnell), 9/11/75, pp. 43-44):

> I said I would go down and I would have no compunction about operating to draw Lumumba out [of UN custody], to run an operation to neutralize his operations which were against Western interests, against, I thought, American interests. (O'Donnell), 6/9/75, p. 13.)

(O'Donnell) added that his objective was to > neutralize Lumumba's influence ... and his activities against [a Congolese leader], whom at that time you might say was our close instrument, he was the man we had put our chips on. (O'Donnell), 9/11/75, p. 20.)

Bissell also recalled that, after their discussions about assassination, (O'Donnell) went to the Congo "with the assignment ... of looking at other ways of neutralizing Lumumba" (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 53).

Although (O'Donnell) did not formulate a precise plan until he reached the Congo, he discussed a general strategy with Bissell:

> Mr. O'Donnell: I told Mr. Bissell that I would be willing to go down to neutralize his activities and operations and try to bring him out [of UN custody] and turn him over to the Congolese authorities, that is correct.
>
> Senator Mondale: Was it discussed then that his life might be taken by the Congolese authorities?
> Mr. O'Donnell: It was, I think, considered in the -- not to have him killed, but then it would have been a Congolese being judged by Congolese for Congolese crimes. Yes, I think it was discussed. (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 38.)

There was a "very, very high probability" that Lumumba would receive capital punishment at the hands of the Congolese authorities, according to O'Donnell (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 24). But O'Donnell "had no compunction about bringing him out and then having him tried by a jury of his peers" (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 14).

Although O'Donnell had expressed his aversion to assassination to Bissell and had undertaken a more general mission to "neutralize" Lumumba's influence, it was clear to him that Bissell was still interested in the assassination of Lumumba:

> in leaving at the conclusion of our second discussion ... he said, well, I wouldn't rule out that possibility -- meaning the possibility of the elimination or the killing of Lumumba -- I wouldn't rule it. In other words, even though you have said this, don't rule it out.... There is no question about it, he said, I wouldn't rule this other out, meaning the elimination or the assassination (O'Donnell) 9/11/75, p. 45).

O'Donnell had a distinctive recollection that after his second discussion of Lumumba with Bissell, he met with Richard Helms in order to make his opposition to assassinating Lumumba a matter of record (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, pp. 44-45):

> [I]n the Agency, since you don't have documents, you have to be awfully canny and you have to get things on record, and I went into Mr. Helms' office, and I said, Dick, here is what Mr. Bissell proposed to me, and I told him that I would under no conditions do it, and Helms said you're absolutely right. (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, pp. 15-16).

Richard Helms testified that it was "likely" that he had such a conversation with O'Donnell and he assumed that O'Donnell's version of their conversation was correct (Helms, 9/16/75, pp. 22-23).*

William Harvey testified that O'Donnell had informed him about the conversations with Bissell:

> Mr. O'Donnell came to me and said that he had been approached by Richard Bissell ... to undertake an operation in the Congo, one of the objectives of which was the elimination of Patrice Lumumba. He also told me that he had declined to undertake this assignment. (Harvey, 6/25/75, p. 9.)

Harvey said that in a later conversation with Bissell, Bissell told him that he had asked O'Donnell to undertake such an operation (Harvey, 6/25/75, p. 9).

O'Donnell said that within forty-eight hours of his second discussion with Bissell, he departed for the Congo (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, pp. 45-46).

---

* Helms testified that he did not follow-up on this conversation in any way. He did not recall why O'Donnell had gone to the Congo or what his mission was (Helms, 9/16/75, pp. 32-33).

(iii) Bissell Testified That he Asked O'Donnell to Plan and Prepare for an Assassination Operation

Bissell remembered "very clearly" that he and O'Donnell discussed the assassination of Lumumba in the fall of 1960 (Bissell, 6/9/75, p. 75) and that O'Donnell reacted negatively (Bissell, 9/11/75, p. 18). According to Bissell, O'Donnell said that he thought that assassination "was an inappropriate action and that the desired object could be accomplished better in other ways" (Bissell, 6/11/75, p. 54).

Bissell also confirmed the fact that he had asked O'Donnell to see Sidney Gottlieb (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 44).

Bissell differs with O'Donnell's account on only one important point -- the degree to which Bissell's initial assignment to O'Donnell contemplated the mounting of an operation as opposed to contingency planning. O'Donnell flatly testified that Bissell requested him to attempt to kill Lumumba. In his first testimony on the subject, Bissell said that he asked O'Donnell "to investigate the possibility of killing Lumumba" (Bissell, 6/11/75, p. 54; see also pp. 55, 75). In a later appearance, however, Bissell stated that O'Donnell "had been asked to plan and prepare for" the assassination of Lumumba (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 24).

Bissell said that after his conversations with O'Donnell, he felt that it would be necessary to "postpone" the assassination operation because, "given O'Donnell's reaction, there was a risk that the planning of such an operation would be blown" (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 25). Despite his impression that he might have deactivated assassination operations against Lumumba at that time, Bissell could not preclude the possibility that the Hedgman/Gobblieb poison plot continued to move foward:

> [T]his had been in my mind a very sensitive assignment to him, limited -- with the knowledge of it limited very narrowly even within the Agency. And it is difficult to separate recollection from inference on occasion. But I seem to recollect that after this conversation with him, I wanted this put very much on the back burner and inactivated for quite some time. Now that doesn't rule out the possibility that some action through completely different channels might have gone forward. But the best of my recollection is, I viewed this not only as terminating the assignment for him, but also as reason for at least postponing anything further along that line. (Bissell, 9/10/75, pp. 25-26).

In Tweedy's mind, O'Donnell's eventual mission to the Congo was linked to assessing the possibility for assassinating Lumumba rather than to a general plan to draw Lumumba out of UN custody (Tweedy, 9/9/75, p. 26).

(iv) O'Donnell Arrived in the Congo and Learned That a Virus Was in the Station Safe

On October 29, the Chief of Station was informed through the PROP channel that Justin O'Donnell was soon to arrive in Leopoldville "IN FURTHERANCE THIS PROJECT" (CIA Cable OUT 86798, Fields to Chief of Station, 10/29/60). On November 3, O'Donnell arrived in Leopoldville (CIA Cable (IN 38052), Leopoldville to Director, 11/4/60). (Chief of) Station Hedgman testified that he had been made aware by cable that (O'Donnell) was coming to the Congo (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 40). Hedgman said it was "very possible" that as a new (Chief of) Station he took the dispatch to the Congo of a senior officer like (O'Donnell) as a signal that CIA headquarters was "dissatisfied with my handling" of (Gottlieb)'s instructions (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 42).

Hedgman had a general picture of (O'Donnell)'s mission:

> I understood it to be that -- similar to mine, that is, the removal or neutralization of Lumumba ... I have no clear recollection of his discussing the assassination. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 54.)

Hedgman said that he had no recollection of (O'Donnell) indicating one way or the other whether he was considering assassination as a means of "neutralizing" Lumumba (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 55). Hedgman said, "in view of my instructions, I may have assumed that he was" considering assassination (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 55). Generally, however, Hedgman perceived (O'Donnell) as being unenthusiastic about his mission (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 56, 88-89).

When (O'Donnell) arrived in the Congo, he met with the (Chief of) Station, who informed him that there was "a virus in the safe" ((O'Donnell), 9/11/75, p. 7-A; 6/9/75, p. 16). (O'Donnell) said he assumed it was a "lethal agent" ((O'Donnell), 6/9/75, p. 37), although Hedgman was not explicit:

> I knew it wasn't for somebody to get his polio shot up to date. ((O'Donnell), 6/9/75, p. 16.)

He added that if the virus was to be used for medical purposes, "it would have been in the custody of the State Department" personnel, not the CIA station (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 36).

O'Donnell said that he did not recall that Hedgman mentioned the source of the virus (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 8).* But O'Donnell assumed that it had come from Sidney Gottlieb's office:

> It would have had to have come from Washington, in my estimation, and I would think, since it had been discussed with Gottlieb that it probably would have emanated from his office. (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 28.)

Hedgman did not recall discussing Gottlieb's trip to the Congo with O'Donnell, but "assumed" that he did so (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 60-61).

O'Donnell was "certain" that the virus had arrived before he did (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 24). He was surprised to learn that such a virus was being held at the Leopoldville station because he had refused an assassination mission before departing for the Congo (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 17).

O'Donnell stated that he knew of no other instance where a lethal biological substance was in the possession of a CIA station (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 50). He assumed that its purpose was assassination:

---

* When O'Donnell was informed about Hedgman's testimony on the visit of Gottlieb to the Congo and the plot to poison Lumumba, he said, "I believe absolutely in its credibility" (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 53). O'Donnell found nothing in the facts as he knew them, nor in Hedgman's character to raise a question about that testimony. O'Donnell regarded Hedgman as "an honest and a decent man" (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 19) -- "a totally truthful man" (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 56).

> My feeling definitely is that it was for a specific purpose, and was just not an all-purpose capability there begin held for targets of opportunity, unspecified targets. (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 49.)

At several points, O'Donnell stated that he did not think that Lumumba was the target specified for the use of the virus (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 17; 9/11/75, p. 48). But he allowed for that possibility:

> I supposed it was for a lethal operation, very possibly Lumumba, but very possibly in connection with other people. (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 24; accord. 6/9/75, p. 17.)

His final word on the subject was that he assumed that the "specific purpose" of the virus was the assassination of Lumumba (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 50).

O'Donnell said that the Chief of Station never indicated that O'Donnell was to employ the virus (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 52). In fact, O'Donnell testified that Hedgman "never discussed his assassination effort, he never even indicated that this was one." (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 54.)

While Hedgman has no direct recollection of discussing his assassination operation with O'Donnell, he "assumed" that he had at least discussed with O'Donnell the problem of gaining access to Lumumba for the purpose of assassinating him (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 55, 60). O'Donnell testified, however, that because he was "morally opposed to assassination" he would "absolutely not" have explored the means by which such access could be gained, nor would he have undertaken a mission to the Congo if it involved assessment of the situation for an assassination operation by someone else (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 26).

O'Donnell was "sure" that he "related everything" to Hedgman about his conversations with Bissell concerning the assassination of Lumumba (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 46). Hedgman, however, had no recollection of learning this from O'Donnell (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 56).

Beyond this, O'Donnell said that his discussions of assassination with Hedgman were general and philosophical, dealing with "the morality of assassinations" (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, pp. 46, 54):

> From my point of view I told him I had moral objections to it, not just qualms, but objections. I didn't think it was the right thing to do. (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 9).

When asked to characterize Hedgman's attitude toward assassination based on those discussions, O'Donnell said:

> I will answer your question just as fairly and as scrupulously as I can. I have a great deal of respect for Hedgman. And if he said something, I would believe him to be speaking the truth as he knew it without shading it.... The best I could say, I think, would be this, that he would not have been opposed in principle to assassination in the interests of national security.... I know that he is a man of great moral perception and decency and honor, and so forth. And that it would disturb him to be engaged in something like that. But I think I would have to say that in our conversations, my memory of those, at no time would he rule it out as being a possibility. (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 18.)

(v) O'Donnell Planned to "Neutralize" Lumumba by Turning Him Over to Congolese Authorities and Requested the Assignment of Agent QJWIN to Leopoldville as His Alter Ego

After Justin O'Donnell arrived in the Congo, he formulated a plan for "neutralizing" Lumumba by drawing him away from the custody of the UN force which was guarding his residence:

> O'Donnell: [W]hat I wanted to do was to get him out, to trick him out, if I could, and then turn him over ... to the legal authorities and let him stand trial. Because he had atrocity attributed to him for which he could very well stand trial.
> Q: And for which he could very well have received capital punishment?
> O'Donnell: Yes. And I am not opposed to capital punishment. (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, pp. 20-21.)*

To implement his plan, O'Donnell made arrangements to rent "an observation post over the palace in which Lumumba was safely ensconced"

---

* According to an earlier report from the Chief of Station, it was the view of the Special Representative of the Secretary General of the United Nations that arrest by Congolese authorities was "JUST A TRICK TO ASSASSINATE LUMUMBA" (CIA Cable Leop Chief of Station to Director, 10/11/60). The Chief of Station proceeded to recommend Lumumba's arrest in the same cable:

> STATION HAS CONSISTENTLY URGED [CONGOLESE] LEADERS ARREST LUMUMBA IN BELIEF LUMUMBA WILL CONTINUE BE THREAT TO STABILITY CONGO UNTIL REMOVED FROM SCENE (CIA Cable, 10/11/60).

(O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 20).* O'Donnell also "spotted" a member of the UN guard and made his acquaintance to recruit him for an attempt to lure Lumumba outside UN protective custody (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 20; 9/11/75, p. 21).

O'Donnell said that he cabled progress reports on his plan to CIA headquarters (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 26). He also said that he informed the Chief of Station about his plan (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 56).

In connection with his effort to draw Lumumba out of UN custody, O'Donnell arranged for a CIA agent, whose code name was QJWIN, to come to the Congo to work with him (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 19):

> What I wanted to use him for was ... counter-espionage[.]... I had to screen the U.S. participation in this ... by using a foreign national whom we knew, trusted, and had worked with ... the idea was for me to use him as an alter ego. (O'Donnell Tr., pp. 19-20.)

In mid-November, two cables from Leopoldville urged CIA headquarters to send QJWIN as soon as possible (CIA Cable IN 41261, Leopoldville to Director, 11/11/60) with this message:

> LOCAL OPERATIONAL CIRCUMSTANCES REQUIRE IMMEDIATE EXPEDITION OF QJWIN TRAVEL TO LEOPOLDVILLE. (CIA Cable IN 41556, Leopoldville to Director, 11/13/60.)

---

* A cable from the Chief of Station to Tweedy in mid-November reported that the double guard of United Nations and Congolese troops around Lumumba's residence thwarted this plan: "CONCENTRIC RINGS OF DEFENSE MAKE ESTABLISHMENT OF OBSERVATION POST IMPOSSIBLE" (CIA Cable IN 42478, Chief of Station to Tweedy, 11/14/60).

The cables contained no exploration of this sense of urgency about the "operational circumstances."

(b) Agent QJWIN's Mission in the Congo: November-December 1960

QJWIN was a foreign citizen with a criminal background, recruited in Europe (Memorandum to CIA Finance Division, Re: Payments to QJWIN, 1/31/61), and supervised by CIA officer [redacted] [redacted] In November 1960, at O'Donnell's request (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, p. 19), agent QJWIN was dispatched to the Congo by [redacted] to undertake a mission that "might involve a large element of personal risk." (CIA Cable IN 36814, 11/2/60.)*

A dispatch from the CIA headquarters on his pending trip to Africa made clear the high degree of sensitivity accorded to his mission:

> In view of the extreme sensitivity of the objective for which we want him to perform his task, he was not told precisely what we want him to do.... Instead, he was told ... that we would like to have him spot, assess, and recommend some dependable, quick-witted persons for our use.... It was thought best to withhold our true, specific requirements pending the final decision to use [him]. (CIA Dispatch, [redacted]-147, 11/2/60.)

---

* Part of the purpose in dispatching QJWIN to Africa was to send him from the Congo to another African country for an unspecified mission. QJWIN's mission to this country is not explained in the cable traffic between CIA headquarters and the various stations that dealt with him.

There is no indication in CIA files as to whether QJWIN completed this mission. O'Donnell said he had no knowledge of any mission that would have taken QJWIN to this country (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, pp. 32-33).

This message itself was deemed too sensitive to be retained at the station: "this dispatch should be reduced to cryptic necessary notes and destroyed after the first reading." (CIA Dispatch, 22 [redacted]-147, 11/2/60.)

QJWIN arrived in Leopoldville on November 21, 1960 (CIA Cable IN 49486, 11/29/60) and returned to Europe in late December 1960 (CIA Cable OUT 54710, Director to Leopoldville, 12/9/60).

The CIA Inspector General's Report said that QJWIN > had been recruited earlier by 03 [redacted] for use in a special operation in the Congo [the assassination of Patrice Lumumba] to be run by Justin O'Donnell. (I.G. Report, p. 38.)

However, both O'Donnell and Bissell testified that O'Donnell refused to be associated with an assassination operation.* Instead, O'Donnell said he went to the Congo to attempt to snatch Lumumba from the protective custody of the U.N. guard and place him in the hands of the Congolese army. (O'Donnell, 6/9/75, pp. 13-14, 37.)

According to O'Donnell, QJWIN was a man who was capable of undertaking an assassination mission:

> O'Donnell: ... I would say that he would not be a man of many scruples.
> Q: So he was a man capable of doing anything?
>
> O'Donnell: I would think so, yes.
>
> Q: And that would include assassination?
>
> O'Donnell: I would think so.
> (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, pp. 35-36.)

---

* See Sections 5(a)(ii) and 5(a)(iii) above.

But O'Donnell had no knowledge that QJWIN was ever used for an assassination mission (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, pp. 36, 42).

O'Donnell said that, as far as he knew, he was the only CIA officer with supervisory responsibility for QJWIN and QJWIN did not report independently to anyone else (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 28). When asked if it was possible that QJWIN had a mission independent of that he was performing for O'Donnell, he said:

> O'Donnell: Yes, that is possible -- or it could have been that somebody contacted him after he got down there, that they wanted him to do something along the lines of assassination. I don't know. (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 29.)

But he discounted this possibility as "highly unlikely" because it would be a departure from standard CIA practice -- placing an agent in a position of knowledge superior to that of his supervising officer (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 29).

Despite O'Donnell's doubt that QJWIN had an independent line of responsibility to the Chief of Station, a cable of November 29 shows that Hedgman was aware of WIN's activities.

In that cable, the Chief of Station reported through the PROP channel to Tweedy that QJWIN had begun implementation of a plan to "PIERCE BOTH CONGOLESE AND UN GUARDS" to enter Lumumba's residence and "PROVIDE ESCORT OUT OF RESIDENCE" (CIA Cable IN 49486, Chief of Station to Tweedy, 11/29/60). O'Donnell said that he had directed QJWIN to make the acquaintanceship of the member of the UN force whose help he sought for the plan to snatch Lumumba from UN custody

(O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 21). But Lumumba had left UN custody at this point to travel toward his stronghold at Stanleyville. This did not deter QJWIN:

> VIEW CHANGE IN LOCATION TARGET, QJWIN ANXIOUS GO STANLEYVILLE AND EXPRESSED DESIRE EXECUTE PLAN BY HIMSELF WITHOUT USING ANY APPARAT (CIA Cable, 11/29/60).

It is unclear whether this latter "plan" contemplated assassination as well as abduction. An affirmative reply from headquarters came through the PROP channel the next day which was also susceptible of interpretation as an assassination order:

> CONCUR QJWIN GO STANLEYVILLE.... WE ARE PREPARED CONSIDER DIRECT ACTION BY QJWIN BUT WOULD LIKE YOUR READING ON SECURITY FACTORS. HOW CLOSE WOULD THIS PLACE [UNITED STATES] TO THE ACTION? (CIA Cable (OUT 98314), Chief of Africa Division to (Chief of) Station, 11/30/60.)

(O'Donnell) said that agent QJWIN's stay in the Congo was "co-extensive with my own, allowing for the fact that he came after I did." (O'Donnell), 6/9/75, p. 19.) (O'Donnell) said he left the Congo around the time of Lumumba's death in Katanga at the hands of Congolese authorities. (O'Donnell), p. 20.) QJWIN left in December shortly after Lumumba was captured by the Congolese army.

In a memorandum to arrange the accounting for QJWIN's activities in the Congo, William K. Harvey -- under whom (O'Donnell) had worked before being detached for assignment to the Congo -- noted the success of QJWIN's mission: "QJWIN was sent on this trip for a specific, highly sensitive operational purpose which has been completed" (Memorandum for Finance Division from William K. Harvey, 1/11/61). (O'Donnell) explained Harvey's reference to the fact that QJWIN's mission had been "completed" by saying that once Lumumba was in the hands of the Congolese authorities "the reason for the mounting of the project ... had become moot" (O'Donnell), 9/11/75, p. 35). When asked if he and QJWIN were responsible for Lumumba's departure from UN custody and subsequent capture, (O'Donnell) said: "Absolutely not" (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 35). Harvey did not recall the meaning of the memorandum, but he assumed that (O'Donnell)'s return from the Congo constituted the "completion" of QJWIN's mission (Harvey, affidavit, p.).

Despite the indication in the Inspector General's Report that QJWIN may have been recruited initially for an assassination mission and the suggestive language of the cables at the end of November, there is no clear evidence that QJWIN was actually involved in any assassination plan or attempt. The CIA officers who were involved in or knowledgeable of an assassination plot against Lumumba gave no testimony that tended to show that QJWIN was related to that plot.

The (Chief of) Station had a "vague recollection" that QJWIN was in the Congo working for (Justin O'Donnell). (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 95.) But Hedgman did not recall why QJWIN was in the Congo. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 95.) QJWIN was not a major operative of Hedgman's. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 95.) Richard Bissell and Bronson Tweedy did not recall anything about QJWIN's mission in the Congo (Bissell, 9/10/75, pp. 54-57; Tweedy, 9/9/75, pp. 54, 61).

William Harvey, from whose division QJWIN was on loan for his Congo assignment, had no specific knowledge of WIN's activities in the Congo:

> I was kept informed of the arrangements for QJWIN's trip to the Congo and, subsequently, of his presence in the Congo. I do not know specifically what QJWIN did in the Congo. I do not think that I ever had such knowledge.... If QJWIN were to be used on an assassination mission, it would have been cleared with me. I was never informed that he was to be used for such a mission. (Harvey affidavit, p.)

He stated that 03 [redacted] probably wrote the memoranda concerning QJWIN and submitted them for HARVEY's signature (Harvey affidavit, p.).

(c) QJWIN's Connection to Project ZRRIFLE

After leaving the Congo in early 1961, QJWIN was used by CIA officer William Harvey as the principal asset in Project ZRRIFLE, a project which included research into a capability to assassinate foreign leaders.* QJWIN's role in Project ZRRIFLE was to "SPOT" figures of the European underworld who could be utilized as agents by the CIA if required. Harvey stated that before the formation of Project ZRRIFLE:

---

* For a full treatment of Project ZRRIFLE, see Section ____, infra, on the "Executive Action Capability."

> [redacted] had not previously used QJWIN as an assassination capability or even viewed him as such. (Harvey affidavit, p.)

Although Harvey also had discussions with Sidney Gottlieb in connection with Project ZRRIFLE, he believed that Gottlieb never mentioned to him either QJWIN's activities in the Congo or Gottlieb's own trip to Leopoldville (Harvey affidavit, p.). Harvey had consulted with [redacted] about the initiation of Project ZRRIFLE (Harvey, 6/25/75, p. 52).

The Chief of Station in Leopoldville testified that he had never heard of Project ZRRIFLE, nor was he aware of any CIA project to develop the capability of assassinating foreign leaders. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 93.) Furthermore, Hedgman said that he was "quite certain" that he never discussed assassination capabilities or assets with Harvey at any time. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 95.) Hedgman testified that [redacted] came to the Congo on a counterintelligence mission during his tenure, but they did not discuss the plan to assassinate Lumumba. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 92.)

An interesting note on the value accorded QJWIN by the CIA and the inherent predicament for an intelligence agency that employs hoodlums is found in a cable from CIA headquarters to [redacted] in 1962. The CIA had learned that QJWIN was about to go on trial in Europe on smuggling charges. The cable suggested:

> IF ... INFOR TRUE WE MAY WISH ATTEMPT QUASH CHARGES OR ARRANGE SOMEHOW SALVAGE QJWIN FOR OUR PURPOSES. (CIA Cable OUT 73943, 4/18/62.)

(d) Agent QJWIN Was Asked By Hedgman's Operative WIROGUE to Join an "Execution Squad": December 1960

The one incident where there is an explicit reference to assassination in connection with QJWIN involved his contact with WIROGUE, another asset of the Congo station.

WIROGUE was an "essentially stateless" European who was " a forger and former bank robber" and had fought with the French Foreign Legion (Inspector General Memorandum, 3/14/75.) He was sent to the Congo after being given plastic surgery and a toupee by the CIA so that he would not be recognized by Europeans traveling through the Congo. (I.G. Memorandum, 3/14/75.) WIROGUE was assessed by the CIA as a man who "LEARNS QUICKLY AND CARRIES OUT ANY ASSIGNMENT WITHOUT REGARD FOR DANGER" (CIA Cable OUT 86554, Africa Division to Leopoldville, 10/27/60).

The Chief of Station described WIROGE as "a man with a rather unsavory reputation, who would try anything once, at least." (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 96.) Hedgman used him as "a general utility agent" because "I felt we needed surveillance capability, developing new contacts, various things." (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 96.) Hedgman supervised WIROGUE directly and did not put WIROGUE in touch with Justin O'Donnell. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 97.)

A report on agent WIROGUE, prepared for the CIA Inspector General's office in 1975, described the training and tasking he received:

> On 19 September 1960 two members of Africa Division met with him to discuss "an operational assignment in Africa Division." In connection with this assignment, WIROGUE/1 was to be trained in demolitions, small arms, and medical immunization.... In October 1960 a cable to Leopoldville stated that ... Headquarters [had] ... intent to use him as utility agent in order to "(a) organize and conduct a surveillance team; (b) intercept packages; (c) blow up bridges; and (d) execute other assignments requiring positive action. His utilization is not to be restricted to Leopoldville." (I.G. Memorandu, 3/14/75.)

WIROGUE made his initial contact with Hedgman in Leopoldville on December 2, 1960 (CIA Cable (IN 18739), 12/17/60). He was given two instructions by Hedgman: (1) to "build cover during initial period;" and (2) to "spot persons for [a] surveillance team" of intelligence assets in the province where Lumumba's support was strongest. (CIA Cable (IN 18739), 12/17/60.)

Soon after receiving these instructions, agent WIROGUE approached QJWIN and asked him to join an "execution squad." This incident is described by Leopoldville (Chief of) Station Hedgman in a cable to CIA headquarters (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 99):

> QJWIN WHO RESIDES SAME HOTEL AS WIROGUE REPORTED LATTER TOLD HIM HE HAD LIVED ALASKA, JAPAN, SOUTH AMERICA, GERMANY AND OTHER PARTS EUROPE. QJWIN SAID WIROGUE SMELLED AS THOUGH HE IN INTEL BUSINESS. STATION DENIED ANY INFO ON WIROGUE. 14 DEC QJWIN REPORTED WIROGUE HAD OFFERED HIM THREE HUNDRED DOLLARS PER MONTH TO PARTICIPATE IN INTEL NET AND BE MEMBER "EXECUTION SQUAD." WHEN QJWIN SAID HE NOT INTERESTED, WIROGUE ADDED THERE WOULD BE BONUSES FOR SPECIAL JOBS. UNDER QJWIN QUESTIONING, WIROGUE LATER SAID HE WORKINF FOR [AMERICAN] SERVICE.
> ... IN DISCUSSING LOCAL CONTACTS, WIROGUE MENTIONED QJWIN BUT DID NOT ADMIT TO HAVING TRIED RECRUIT HIM. THEN [(CHIEF OF) STATION] TRIED LEARN WHETHER WIROGUE HAD MADE APPROACH LATTER CLAIMED HAD TAKEN NO STEPS. [(CHIEF OF) STATION] WAS UNABLE CONTRADICT, AS DID NOT WISH REVEAL QJWIN CONNECTION [CIA]. (CIA Cable, Leopoldville to Director, 12/17, 60.)

The cable also expressed Hedgman's concern about WIROGUE's actions:

> ... LEOP CONCERNED BY WIROGUE FREE WHEELING AND LACK SECURITY. STATION HAS ENOUGH HEADACHES WITHOUT WORRYING ABOUT AGENT WHO NOT ABLE HANDLE FINANCES AND WHO NOT WILLING FOLLOW INSTRUCTIONS. IF HQS DESIRES, WILLING KEEP HIM ON PROBATION, BUT IF CONTINUE HAVE DIFFICULTIES, BELIEVE WIROGUE RECALL BEST SOLUTION. (CIA Cable, Leopoldville to Director, 12/17/60.)

WIROGUE's attempt to recruit QJWIN for an execution squad is explained by Hedgman as a mistake and by the actions of QJWIN as an unauthorized, unexpected contact which he did not initiate.

The (Chief of) Station testified that he had not instructed WIROGUE to make this kind of proposition to QJWIN or anyone else. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 100.) He added:

> I would like to stress that I don't know what WIROGUE was talking about as a[n] "execution squad," and I am sure he was never tasked to go out and execute anyone. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 100.)

Hedgman suggested that WIROGUE may have concocted the idea of an execution squad:

> His idea of what an intelligence operative should do, I think, had been gathered by reading a few novels or something of the sort. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 100.)

(Justin O'Donnell) had no knowledge of an attempt by anyone connected to the CIA to recruit an execution squad and no recollection of WIROGUE (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, pp. 39-42). O'Donnell mentioned that agent QJWIN was considered for use on a "strong arm squad," but said that this was for purposes more general than assassinations:

> surveillance teams where you have to go into crime areas ... where you need a fellow that if he gets in a box can fight his way out of it. (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 36).

Richard Bissell recalled nothing of the WIROUGE approach to QJWIN (Bissell, 9/11/75, p. 71). Bronson Tweedy did recall that WIROGUE was "dispatched on a general purpose mission" to the Congo (Tweedy, 9/9/75, p. 63). But Tweedy testified that WIROGUE would "absolutely not" have been used on an assassination mission against Lumumba because "he was basically dispatched, assessed and dealt with by the balance of the Division" rather than by the two people in the Africa Division -- Tweedy himself and his deputy, Glenn Fields -- who would have known that the assassination of Lumumba was being considered (Tweedy, 9/9/75, pp. 64-65).

The Chief of Station said that if the WIROGUE incident was connected to an actual assassination plan, he would have transmitted a message in a more narrowly restricted channel than that in which this cable was sent. His cable on WIROGUE's approach to QJWIN was sent to headquarters with a security designation that allowed much wider distribution than the PROP cables that he sent and received concerning the Gottlieb assassination assignment. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 102.) In contrast, he limited distribution of the cable about

WIROGUE only as a CIA officer would "normally do ... when you speak in a derogatory manner of an asset." (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 101)

The Chief of Station maintained that WIROGUE's proposition to QJWIN to join an "execution squad" could be attributed to WIROGUE's "freewheeling" nature. Hedgman said:

> I had difficulty controlling him in that he was not a professional intelligence officer as such. He seemed to act on his own without seeking guidance or authority ... I found he was rather an unguided missile ... the kind of man that could get you in trouble before you knew you were in trouble.... (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 96-97).

But Hedgman did not disavow all responsibility for WIROGUE's actions:

> [I]f you give a man an order and he carries it out and causes a problem for the Station, why then as Chief of Station, well, you accept responsibility. (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 97.)

In sum, the Chief of Station testified that despite the fact that the CIA was interested in the assassination of Lumumba during this period, agent WIROGUE's attempt to form an "execution squad" was an unauthorized, maverick action, unconnected to the CIA assassination plan.

Nonetheless, the fact that WIROGUE was to be trained in "medical immunization" (I.G. Memorandum, 3/14/75) raises the possibility that he was connected to the plot to assassinate Lumumba by means of lethal biological substances. The 1975 report on WIROGUE's case by the Inspector General's office leaves this question open. The report concludes with the statement that "WIROGUE/1 spent most of his time trying to develop contacts and was not directly involved in any particular operation." (I.G. Memorandum, 3/14/75.) But, when the report was circulated in the Inspector General's office, the following comment was handwritten by Scott Breckinridge, one of the principal authors of the 1967 report on CIA involvement in assassination attempts: "ROGUE's pitch is too clear to be discarded out of hand as 'exceeding instructions.'" (I.G. Memorandum, 3/14/75)

6. The Question of Whether the CIA Was Involved in Bringing About Lumumba's Death in Katanga

There is no direct evidence of CIA involvement in bringing about Lumumba's death in Katanga. The CIA officers most closely connected to the plot to poison Lumumba testified uniformly that they knew of no CIA involvement in Lumumba's death.

(a) Lumumba's Escape from UN Custody, Capture by Congolese Army, and Imprisonment at Thysville: November 27-December 3, 1960

The strongest hint that the CIA may have been involved in the capture of Lumumba by Mobutu's troops after his departure from UN custody on November 27, was contained in a PROP cable from the (Chief of) Station to Tweedy on November 14 (CIA Cable IN 42478, (Chief of) Station to Tweedy, 11/14/60). In the cable, Hedgman reported that an agent of his had learned that Lumumba's

> POLITICAL FOLLOWERS IN STANLEYVILLE DESIRE THAT HE BREAK OUT OF HIS CONFINEMENT AND PROCEED TO THAT CITY BY CAR TO ENGAGE IN POLITICAL ACTIVITY. (CIA Cable, 11/14/60.)

The Chief of Station was confident that he would have foreknowledge of Lumumba's departure and that action plans were prepared for that eventuality:

> DECISION ON BREAKOUT WILL PROBABLY BE MADE SHORTLY. STATION EXPECTS TO BE ADVISED BY [AGENT] OF DECISION WHEN MADE.... STATION HAS SEVERAL POSSIBLE ASSETS TO USE IN EVENT OF BREAKOUT AND STUDYING SEVERAL PLANS OF ACTION. (CIA Cable, 11/14/60.)

There is no other evidence, however, that the CIA actually gained prior knowledge of Lumumba's plan to depart for Stanleyville. In fact, a cable from Leopoldville on the day after Lumumba's escape betrays the station's complete ignorance about the circumstances of Lumumba's departure (CIA Cable IN 48484, Leopoldville to Director, 11/28/60).

But the same cable raises at least a question as to whether the CIA was involved in the capture of Lumumba enroute by Congolese troops:

> [STATION] WORKING WITH [CONGOLESE GOVERNMENT] TO GET ROADS BLOCKED AND TROOPS ALERTED [BLOCK] POSSIBLE ESCAPE ROUTE. (CIA Cable, 11/28/60.)

A cable of December 2 reporting Lumumba's capture militates against CIA involvement, however, because it portrays the Congolese forces as the source of the station's information (CIA Cable IN 10643, Leopoldville to Director, 12/3/60).

The Chief of Station testified that he was "quite certain that there was no Agency involvement in any way" in Lumumba's departure from UN custody and that he had no foreknowledge of Lumumba's plan (Hedgman, 8/21/75, pp. 63-64). He stated that he consulted with Congolese officers about the possible routes Lumumba might take to Stanleyville, but he was "not a major assistance" in tracking down Lumumba prior to his capture (Hedgman, 8/21/75, p. 65).

Despite the fact that (O'Donnell) had planned to draw Lumumba out of UN custody and turn him over to Congolese authorities, he insisted that Lumumba escaped by his own devices and was not tricked by the CIA (O'Donnell, 9/11/75, p. 22).

(b) Transfer of Lumumba to Katanga Where He Was Killed: January 17, 1960

The contemporaneous cable traffic shows that the CIA was kept informed of Lumumba's condition and movements in January of 1961 by the Congolese and that the CIA still considered Lumumba a serious political threat. But there is no direct evidence of CIA involvement in bringing about Lumumba's death in Katanga.

* Excerpts from cable traffic of January 1961 and from the testimony of CIA officers Hedgman, Tweedy, (O'Donnell,) and Helms (investigative report) should be inserted.

Group

> agreed that planning for the Congo would not necessarily rule out "consideration" of any particular kind of activity which might contribute to getting rid of Lumumba. (Minutes of Special Group Meeting, 25 August 1960)

The next day CIA Director Allen Dulles, who had attended the Special Group meeting, personally cabled to the (Chief of) Station in Leopoldville that Lumumba's "REMOVAL MUST BE AN URGENT AND PRIME OBJECTIVE . . . A HIGH PRIORITY OF OUR COVERT ACTION" (CIA Cable (OUT 62966), Dulles to Leopoldville, 8/26/60). Dulles added: "YOU CAN ACT ON YOUR OWN AUTHORITY WHERE TIME DOES NOT PERMIT REFERRAL HERE."

Although the Dulles cable does not explicitly mention assassination, Richard Bissell -- the CIA official under whose aegis the assassination effort against Lumumba took place -- testified that, in his opinion, this cable was a direct outgrowth of the Special Group meeting and signaled to him that the President had authorized assassination as one means of removing Lumumba (Bissell, 9/10/75, pp. 33-34, 61-62; see Section 7(c), infra). Bronson Tweedy, who bore the primary administrative responsibility for activities against Lumumba, testified that the Dulles cable confirmed the policy that no measure, including assassination, was to be overlooked in the attempt to remove Lumumba from a position of influence (Tweedy, 10/9/75, pp. 4-5).

On September 19, 1960, Bissell and Tweedy cabled the (Chief of) Station to expect a messenger from CIA headquarters. Two days later, in the presence of the President at a meeting of the National Security Council, Allen Dulles stated that Lumumba "would remain a grave danger as long as he was not yet disposed of" (Memorandum, 460th NSC Meeting, 9/21/60). Five days after this meeting, a CIA scientist arrived in Leopoldville and provided the (Chief of) Station with lethal biological substances, instructed him to assassinate Lumumba, and informed him that the President had authorized this operation.

Two mitigating factors weaken this chain just enough so that it will not support an absolute finding of Presidential authorization for the assassination effort against Lumumba.

First, the two officials of the Eisenhower Administration responsible to the President for national security affairs testified that they knew of no Presidential approval for, or knowledge of, an assassination plot.

Second, the minutes of discussions at meetings of the National Security Council and its Special Group do not record an explicit Presidential order for the assassination of Lumumba. The Secretary of the Special Group maintained that his memoranda reflect the actual language used at the meetings without omission or euphemism for extremely sensitive statements (Parrott, 7/10/75, pp. 18-19). NSC staff executives stated, however, that there was a strong possibility that a statement as sensitive as an assassination order would have been omitted from the record or handled by means of euphemism. Several high Government officials involved in policy-making

7/21/60). Nonetheless, the attitude toward Lumumba even at these early meetings was vehement:

> Mr. Dulles said that in Lumumba we were faced with a person who was a Castro or worse . . . Mr. Dulles went on to describe Mr. Lumumba's background which he described as "harrowing" . . . It is safe to go on the assumption that Lumumba has been bought by the Communists; this also, however, fits with his own orientation. (NSC Minutes, 7/21/60)

The President presided over the other two NSC meetings. After looking at the records of those meetings, Johnson was unable to determine with certainty which one was the meeting at which he heard the President's statement (Johnson, 9/13/75, p. 16).

However, the chronology of meetings, cables, and events in the Congo during this period makes it most likely that Johnson's testimony refers to the NSC meeting of August 18, 1960.

The meeting of August 18 took place at the beginning of a series of events that preceded the dispatch of a CIA scientist to Leopoldville with poisons for the assassination of Lumumba.* The September 7 meeting took place in the midst of this series of events.

---

* The major events in the series, each of which is discussed in detail in other sections of the report, may be summarized as follows: The week following the NSC meeting of August 18, the Special Group was informed of the President's "extremely strong feelings about the necessity for very straightforward action" and the Group agreed to consider "any particular kind of activity which might contribute to getting rid of Lumumba" (Special Group Minutes, 8/25/60). At this meeting, DCI Allen Dulles commented that "he had taken the comments referred to seriously and had every intention of proceeding as vigorously as the situation permits" (Special Group Minutes, 8/25/60; see Section 7(a)(iii), infra). The next day, Dulles sent an "Eyes Only" cable under his personal signature to the Chief of Station in

The NSC meeting of August 18, 1960, was held three weeks before the "quasi-coup" in the Congo -- the dismissal of Lumumba by Kasavubu -- which Johnson remembers as taking place "not long after" he heard the President's statement. The only other meeting at which Johnson could have heard the statement by the President was held on September 7, two days after this event.

Robert Johnson's memorandum of the meeting of August 18, 1960, indicates that Acting Secretary of State C. Douglas Dillon* introduced on September 21, 1960, Allen Dulles stressed the danger of Soviet influence in the Congo. Despite the fact that Lumumba had been deposed from his position as Premier and was in UN custody, Dulles continued to regard him as a threat, especially in light of reports of an impending reconciliation between Lumumba and the post-coup Congolese government:

---

* Leopoldville, indicating that it had been concluded in "HIGH QUARTERS" that Lumumba's "REMOVAL MUST BE AN URGENT AND PRIME OBJECTIVE AND THAT . . . THIS SHOULD BE A HIGH PRIORITY OF OUR COVERT ACTION" (CIA Cable OUT 62966, Dulles to (Chief of) Station, 8/26/60). The Dulles cable added:

> WE WISH GIVE YOU WIDER AUTHORITY . . . INCLUDING EVEN MORE AGGRESSIVE ACTION IF IT CAN REMAIN COVERT . . . YOU CAN ACT ON YOUR OWN AUTHORITY WHERE TIME DOES NOT PERMIT REFERRAL HERE. (CIA Cable, 8/26/60)(See Section 2, supra, for more complete treatment of this cable.)

On September 19, a CIA scientist was dispatched from headquarters to the Congo on an extraordinarily sensitive assignment (CIA Cable OUT 71464, Bissell/Tweedy to (Chief of) Station, 9/19/60; see Section 4(a), supra). On September 21, in the presence of the President at an NSC meeting, Allen Dulles stated that Lumumba "remained a grave danger as long as he was not disposed of" (NSC Minutes, 9/21/60; see Section 7(a)(iv), infra). Finally, on September 26, the CIA scientist arrived in the Congo, provided the (Chief of) Station with lethal biological substances, instructed him to assassinate Lumumba, and informed him that the President had ordered the DCI to undertake an assassination effort (see Sections 4(a)-4(c), supra). The (Chief of) Station stated that he received confirmation from CIA headquarters that he was to follow the instructions he had been given (see Section 4(e)(i), supra).

 In 1960, Dillon served as Undersecretary of State, the "number two position in the State Department," the name of which subsequently changed to Deputy Secretary of State. In this position, he frequently (Continued)

> Mobutu appeared to be the effective power in the Congo for the monent but Lumumba was not yet disposed of and remained a grave danger as long as he was not disposed of. (NSC Minutes, 9/21/60.)

Three days after this NSC meeting, Allen Dulles sent a personal cable to the (Chief of Station) in Leopoldville which included the following message:

> WE WISH GIVE EVERY POSSIBLE SUPPORT IN ELIMINATING LUMUMBA FROM ANY POSSIBILITY RESUMING GOVERNMENTAL POSITION OR IF HE FAILS IN LEOP[OLDVILLE], SETTING HIMSELF IN STANLEYVILLE OR ELSEWHERE. (CIA Cable, (OUT 73573), Dulles to Leopoldville, 9/24/60.)

On September 26, (Sidney Gottlieb), under assignment from CIA headquarters, arrived in Leopoldville (CIA Cable (IN 18989), Leopoldville to Director, 9/27/60), provided the (Chief of) Station with poisons, instructed him to assassinate Lumumba, and assured him that there was Presidential authorization for this mission (see Sections 4(b)-4(c), supra).

Marion Boggs, NSC Deputy Executive Secretary, who wrote the memorandum of the discussion of September 21, did not interpret Dulles' remark as referring to assassination.

Other Eisenhower Administration officials who were active in the Special Group in late 1960--Assistant Secretary of Defense John N. Irwin II, Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs Livingston Merchant, and Deputy Secretary of Defense James Douglas--stated that they did not recall any discussion about assassinating Lumumba (Irwin affidavit, 9/22/75, pp. 1-2; Merchant affidavit, 9/8/75, p. 1; Douglas affidavit, 9/5/75).

(c) Richard Bissell Testified That, Despite His Lack of a Specific Recollection, He "Strongly Inferred" That the Assassination Effort Against Lumumba Was Authorized by President Eisenhower and Allen Dulles

Richard Bissell's testimony on the question of high-level authorization for the effort to assassinate Lumumba is problematic. Bissell insisted that he had no direct recollection of receiving such authorization and that all of his testimony on this subject "has to be described as inference" (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 48). Bissell began his testimony on the subject by asserting that it was on his own initiative that he instructed Justin O'Donnell to plan the assassination of Lumumba (Bissell, 6/11/75, pp. 54-55). Nevertheless, Bissell's conclusion--based on his inferences from the totality of circumstances relating to the entire assassination effort against Lumumba--was that an assassination attempt had been authorized at the highest levels of the government (Bissell, 9/10/75, pp. 32-33, 47-49, 60-62, 65).

As discussed above, Bissell testified that the minutes of meetings of the Special Group on August 25, 1960 and the NSC on September 21, 1960 indicate that assassination was contemplated at the Presidential level as one acceptable means of "getting rid of Lumumba" (see Sections 5(a)(ii) and 5(a)(iii), supra).

There was "no question", according to Bissell, that the cable from Allen Dulles to the (Chief of) Station in Leopoldville on August 26, which called for Lumumba's removal and authorized Hedgman to take action without consulting headquarters, was a direct outgrowth of the Special Group meeting Dulles had attended the previous day (Bissell, 9/10/75, pp. 31-32). Bissell was "almost certain" that he had been informed about the Dulles cable shortly after its transmission (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 12). Bissell testified that he assumed that assassination was one of the means of removing Lumumba from the scene that is contemplated within the language of Dulles' cable (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 32):

> It is my belief on the basis of the cable drafted by Allen Dulles that he regarded the action of the Special Group as authorizing implementation [of an assassination] if favorable circumstances presented themselves, if it could be done covertly. (Bissell, 9/10/75, pp. 64-65.)

Dulles' cable signalled to Bissell that there was Presidential authorization for him to order action to assassinate Lumumba (Bissell, 9/10/75, pp. 61-62):

> Q: Did Mr. Dulles tell you that President Eisenhower wanted Lumumba killed?
>
> Mr. Bissell: I am sure he didn't.
> Q: Did he ever tell you even circumlocutiously through this kind of cable?
> Mr. Bissell: Yes, I think his cable says it in effect. (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 33.)

As for discussions with Dulles about the source of authorization for an assassination effort against Lumumba, Bissell stated:

> I think it is probably unlikely that Allen Dulles would have said either the President or President Eisenhower even to me. I think he would have said, this is authorized in the highest quarters, and I would have known what he meant. (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 48.)

When asked if he had sufficient authority to move beyond the consideration or planning of assassination to order implementation of a plan, Bissell said, "I probably did think I had [such] authority" (Bissell, 9/10/75, pp. 61-62).

When informed about the (Chief of) Station's testimony about the instructions he received from (Gottlieb), Bissell said that despite his absence of a specific recollection:

> I would strongly infer in this case that such an authorization did pass through me, as it were, if (Sid Gottlieb) gave that firm instruction to the Station (Chief.) (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 40.)

Bissell said that the DCI would have been the source of this authorization (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 40).

Bissell did not recall being informed by Gottlieb that Gottlieb had represented to the Chief of Station that there was Presidential authorization for the assassination of Lumumba (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 46). But Bissell said that assuming he had instructed Gottlieb to carry poison to the Congo, "there was no possibility" that he would have issued such an instruction without authorization from Dulles (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 47). Likewise Bissell said he "probably did" tell Gottlieb that the mission had the approval of President Eisenhower (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 47). This led to Bissell's conclusion that if, in fact, the testimony of the Chief of Station about Gottlieb's actions is accurate, then Gottlieb's actions were fully authorized:

> Q: In light of the entire atmosphere at the Agency and the policy at the Agency at the time, Mr. Gottlieb's representation to the Chief of Station that the President had instructed the DCI to carry out this mission would not have been beyond the pale of Mr. Gottlieb's authority at that point?
> Bissell: No, it would not. (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 65).

Bissell further stated:

> Knowing Mr. Gottlieb, it is literally inconceivable to me that he would have acted beyond his instructions. (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 41.)

With respect to his assignment to Justin O'Donnell to "plan and prepare for" the assassination of Lumumba (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 24) Bissell testified that "it was my own idea to give O'Donnell this assignment" (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 50). But he said that this specific assignment was made in the context that an assassination mission against Lumumba already had authorization above the level of DDP (Bissell, 9/10/75, p. 50; see also pp. 32-33, 47-48, 60-62).

that, while he could have created the capability on his own, any urgings would have come from Bundy or Walt Rostow. In a later appearance, however, Bissell said he merely informed Bundy of the capability and that the context was a briefing by him and not urging by Bundy. Bundy said he received a briefing and gave no urging, though he raised no objections. Rostow said he never heard of the project.

William Harvey testified that he was "almost certain" that on January 25 and 26, 1961, he met with CIA officials Sidney Gottlieb, 03 the new Chief of CIA's Technical Services Division, and [redacted] a CIA recruiting officer, to discuss the feasibility of creating a capability within the Agency for "executive action" (Harvey, 6/25/75, p. 52). After reviewing his notes of those meetings,* Harvey testified that they took place after his initial discussion of executive action with Bissell, which, he said, might have transpired in "early January" (Harvey, 6/25/75, p. 52). When Bissell was shown these notes, he agreed with Harvey about the timing of their initial discussion (Bissell, 7/17/75, p. 10).

---

* As to the date of these notes, Harvey was asked whether his notations "25/1-Sid G" and "26/1-[redacted]" 03 indicate that he spoke to Sidney Gottlieb and [redacted] 03 in 1961, as opposed to 1962. Harvey testified as follows:

> Q: And is it your judgment that that is January 26, 1961 and is about the subject of Executive Action?
> Harvey: Yes, it is.
> Q: And it followed your conversation with Mr. Bissell that you have recounted?
> Harvey: . . . [W]ell, when I first looked at this, I thought this, well, this has got to be '62, but I am almost certain now that it is not. If this is true, this might place the first discussion that I had with Dick Bissell in early January and this is difficult to pinpoint because there were several such discussions in varying degrees of detail during the period in the spring, and very early in '61 to the fall of '61 period, but I did find out fairly early on that [redacted] 03 > had -- or that Bissell had discussed the question of assassination with Arnold Silver and this discussion, at the very least, had to take place after I know Bissell already had discussed the matter with Silver (Harvey, 6/25/75, p. 52).

Harvey had also testified that, after receiving Bissell's initial instructions to establish an executive action capability:

> the first thing I did . . . was discuss in theoretical terms with a few officers whom I trusted quite implicitly the whole subject of assassination, our posture, going back, if you will, even to the fundamental questions of A, is assassination a proper weapon of an American intelligence service, and B, even if you assume that it is, is it within our capability within the framework of this government to do it effectively and properly, securely and discreetly. (Harvey, 6/25/75, pp. 37-A, 38).

The Inspector General's Report connected Silver and Gottlieb to the early stages of the executive action project as follows:

> Harvey says that Bissell had already discussed certain aspects of the problem with Arnold Silver and with Sidney Gottlieb. Since Silver was already cut in, Harvey used him in developing the Executive Action Capability.... Harvey's mention of him [Gottlieb] in this connection may explain a notation by Dr. Gunn that Harvey instructed Gunn to discuss techniques with Gottlieb without associating the discussion with the Castro operation. (I.G. Report, pp. 37-38).

It is evident from the testimony of Harvey and Bissell that the turnover to Harvey of the Roselli contact in November 1961 was discussed as part of ZRRIFLE (see Section (d), infra). Thus, their initial discussion of executive action can, at the least, be dated before November 1961 and the "25/1" and "26/1" notations would have to refer to January 1961.

bring a CIA officer together with the criminal syndicate (Bissell, 6/11/75, pp. 19-20). Harvey did not recall any mention of the White House or any higher authority than the DDP in his November meeting with Bissell (Harvey, 7/11/75, pp. 60-61).

Although Richard Helms was briefed and given administrative responsibility (as DDP) for Project ZR/RIFLE three months later, he did not recall that ZR/RIFLE was ever contemplated as a capability to assassinate Castro (Helms, 6/13/75, p. 55). Asked whether the actual assassination efforts against Castro were related to ZR/RIFLE (executive action), Helms testified: "In my mind those lines never crossed" (Helms, 6/13/75, p. 52). However, Bissell's testimony leaves more ambiguity: "the contact with the syndicate which had Castro as its target . . . folded into the ZR/RIFLE project . . . and they became one" (Bissell, 6/11/75, p. 47). When asked by Senator Baker whether the executive action "capability . .. for assassination" was "used against Castro", Bissell replied that it was "in the later phase". (Bissell, 6/11/75, p. 47). The instruction from Bissell to Harvey on November 15, 1961, however, preceded the reactivation of the CIA-syndicate assassination operation against Castro by approximately five months.

(iii) Use of Agent QJ/WIN in Africa

QJ/WIN was a foreign citizen with a criminal background who had been recruited by the CIA for certain sensitive programs involving surreptitious entries which pre-dated Project

ZR/RIFLE. Harvey testified that QJ/WIN's function after the advent of Project ZR/RIFLE in 1961 was restricted to the "spotting" of potential assets for "multi-purpose" covert use.

However, in the Fall of 1960--before Harvey was assigned to create Project ZR/RIFLE by Richard Bissell--agent QJ/WIN had been dispatched to the Congo by 03 [redacted] his supervising CIA case officer in Europe. William Harvey, as the Chief of the CIA Foreign Intelligence staff on which 03 [redacted] worked, had ordered QJ/WIN's mission to the Congo (CIA Dispatch 22 [redacted] 147, 11/2/60) and arranged the financial accounting for the mission afterward (Memorandum to Finance Division from William K. Harvey, 1/11/61). [QJ/WIN's activities in the Congo are treated in detail in the discussion of the Lumumba case; see Section ___, supra.]

There are two factors which may raise a question as to whether QJ/WIN was being used in an ad hoc capacity to develop an assassination capability before ZR/RIFLE was formally initiated. First, there is a similarity in the cast of characters: Harvey, QJ/WIN, 03 [redacted], and Gottlieb were connected with the Lumumba matter and reappear in connection with the subsequent development of ZR/RIFLE. Second, Bissell informed Harvey that the development of an assassination capability had already been discussed with 03 [redacted] and Gottlieb before Harvey's assignment to ZR/RIFLE (Harvey, 6/25/75 p. 52; I.G. Report, pp. 37-38).

Nevertheless, there does not appear to be any firm evidence of a connection between QJ/WIN and the plot to assassinate Lumumba.

Documents indicate that consideration was given within the CIA to airdropping rifles into the Dominican Republic. At a June 21, 1960, meeting with 03 [redacted] of the CIA Western Hemisphere Division, Ambassador Farland reportedly suggested possible sites for the drops.
(CIA memo, 6/21/60)

Documents also indicate that a meeting was held around the end of June 1960 between Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Roy R. Rubottom and Col. J. C. King, Chief of CIA's Western Hemisphere Division. Apparently King sought to learn the Assistant Secretary's view regarding "To what extent will the U.S. government participate in the overthrow of Trujillo." A number of questions were raised by King, among them:

> "c. Would it provide a small number of sniper rifles or other devices for the removal of key Trujillo people from the scene?"

King's handwritten notes indicate that Rubottom's response to that question was "yes" (CIA memo of 6/28/60; King affidavit) */

On July 1, 1960, a memorandum directed to General Cabell, the Acting Director of Central Intelligence, was prepared for Colonel King's signature and, in his absence, signed by his principal deputy, Rudy Gomez (I.G. Report, p. 26). The memorandum stated that a principal leader of the anti-Trujillo opposition had asked Ambassador Farland for a limited number of arms to precipitate Trujillo's overthrow, and recognized that such arms

* Neither King nor Rubottom recalls such a meeting, nor does either recall any proposal for supplying sniper rifles. (Rubottom affidavit, King affidavit.)

Trujillo government could be successful unless it involved Trujillo's assassination.

He communicated this opinion to both the State Department and the CIA. In July 1960, he advised Assistant Secretary Rubottom that the dissidents were > "... in no way ready to carry on any type of revolutionary activity in the foreseeable future except the assassination of their principal enemy."

> (Dearborn to Rubottam letter, 7/14/60)

It is uncertain what portion of the information provided by Dearborn to State was passed above the Assistant Secretary level. Through August of 1960, only Assistant Secretary Rubottom, his Deputy, Lester Mallory, and Staff Assistant Frank Devine, were, within the Latin American Division of the Department, aware of Dearborn's "current projects." (Devine to Dearborn letter, 8/15/60)*

By September 1960, Thomas Mann had replaced Roy Rubottom as Assistant Secretary for Inter-American Affairs, and Frank Devine had become a Special Assistant to Mr. Mann. While serving as Special Assistant to the Assistant Secretary, Devine reportedly spent ninety percent of his time coordinating State activities in Latin America. It was in this capacity that Devine maintained almost daily communication with [redacted] and other officials of the CIA's Western Hemisphere Division (Devine, p.7)

*Dearborn's candid reporting to State during the summer of 1960 raised concern with the Department and he was advised that certain specific information should more appropriately come through "the other channel" (presumably, CIA communications). Dearborn was advised that his cables to State were distributed to at least 19 different recipient offices. (Id.)

> have asked us for a few sandwiches, hardly more, and we are not prepared to make them available. Last week we were asked to furnish three or four pineapples for a party in the near future, but I could remember nothing in my instructions that would have allowed me to contribute this ingredient. Don't think I wasn't tempted. I have rather specific guidelines to the effect that salad ingredients will be delivered outside the picnic grounds and will be brought to the area by another club. (Dearborn letter to Devine, 3/16/61)

After reviewing his "picnic" letter, together with the requests in the March 14 and 15 cables discussed above, Dearborn concluded during his testimony before the Committee that the "pineapples" were probably the requested fragmentation grenades and the restriction on delivering salad ingredients outside of the picnic grounds was, almost certainly, meant to refer to the requirements of the January 12 Special Group order that arms be delivered outside the Dominican Republic. (Dearborn 7/29, pp. 25-27)

2. The Passage of Pistols

a. Pouching to the Dominican Republic

03

In a March 15, 1961 cable, Chief of Station Owen reported that Dearborn had asked for three .38 caliber pistols for issue to several dissidents. In reply, Headquarters cabled: "Regret no authorization exists to suspend pouch regulations against shipment of arms" and indicated that their reply had been coordinated with State. (HQS to Station cable, 3/17/61) The Station Chief then asked Headquarters to seek the necessary authorization and noted that at his last two posts, he had received pistols via the pouch for "worthy purposes" and, therefore, he knew it could be done. (Station to Hqs cable, 3/21/61) Two days later, Headquarters cabled that the pistols and ammunition were being pouched. However, the Station Chief was instructed not to advise Dearborn. (Hqs. to Station cable, 3/24/61)*

b. Reason for the CIA Instruction Not to Tell Dearborn

03 [redacted] testified that he believed the "don't tell Dearborn the pistol is being pouched" language simply meant that the sending of firearms through the diplomatic pouch was not something to be unnecessarily discussed. (03 [redacted] pp. 78,79) Dearborn said he never doubted the pouch was used, since he knew 03 [redacted] had no other means of receiving weapons. (Dearborn, 7/29, p. 33)

c. Were the Pistols Related to Assassination?

Dearborn testified that he had asked for a single pistol for purposes completely unrelated to any assassination consideration. (Dearborn, 7/29, pp. 29-31) He said he had been approached by a Dominican contact who lived in a remote area and was concerned for the safety of his family in the event of political reprisals. Dearborn testified that he had believed the man's fears were well-founded and had promised to seek a pistol.*

---

* The Inspector General's Report, issued in connection with a review of these events, concludes that:

> "There is no indication in the EMDEED operational files that the pistols were actually pouched. The request for pistols appears to have been overtaken by a subsequent request for submachine guns." (I.G. Report, p. 60)

This conclusion is difficult to understand in light of the March 24, 1961, Headquarters to Station cable, which provides:

> "C. Pouching revolvers and ammo requested TRUJ 0462 (in 20040) on 28 March. Do not advise (name Dearborn deleted) this material being pouched. Explanation follows."

Although there is no direct evidence linking any of these pistols to the assassination of Trujillo, a June 7, 1961, CIA memorandum, unsigned and with no attribution as to source, states that two of the three pistols were passed by Owen to 03 [redacted] a United States citizen who was in direct contact with the action element of the dissident group. It should also be noted that the assassination was apparently conducted with almost complete reliance upon hand weapons. Whether one or more of these .38 caliber Smith & Wesson pistols eventually came into the hands of the assassins and, if so, whether they were used in connection with the assassination, remain open questions.

Both Dearborn and 03 [redacted] testified that they regarded the pistols as weapons for self-defense purposes and they never considered them in any way connected with the then-current assassination plans. (Dearborn 7/29, p.70; 03 [redacted] pp.38,73) However, none of the Headquarters cables inquired as to the purpose for which the handguns were sought and 03 [redacted]'s cable stated only that Dearborn wanted them for passage to dissidents. (Station to HQS cable, 3/15/61) Indeed, the March 24, 1961, cable advising that the pistols were being pouched is the very cable which was sent in response to a request by the dissidents for machine guns to be used in an assassination effort which had been previously described to Headquarters. As with the carbines discussed below, it appears that little, if any, concern was expressed within the Agency over passing these weapons to would-be assassins.

---

*Dearborn is clear in his recollection that he asked 03 [redacted] to request only one pistol. (Dearborn, 7/29, pp.30,31) [redacted],03 on the other hand, testified that if his cables requested three pistols for Dearborn then Dearborn must have asked for three pistols.03([redacted] p.72)

The pistols were, however, apparently sent in one package (HQS to Station cables, 3/27/61 and 3/24/61) and Dearborn testified that, what he believed to be the one gun, came "wrapped up" and that he passed it. (Dearborn, 7/29, p.30)

3. Passing of the Carbines

a. Request by [redacted] and Dearborn and Approval by CIA

In a March 26, 1961 cable to CIA Headquarters, [redacted] asked for permission to pass to the dissidents three 30 caliber M1 carbines. The guns had been left behind in the Consulate by Navy personnel after the U.S. broke formal diplomatic relations in August 1960. Dearborn testified that he knew of and concurred in the proposal to supply the carbines to the dissidents. (Dearborn 7/29, pp. 42,43) On March 31, 1961 CIA Headquarters cabled approval of the request to pass the carbines. (Hqs to Station cable, 3/31/61)

b. Were the Carbines Related to Assassination?

The carbines were passed to the action group contact [redacted] on April 7, 1961. (Station to HQS cable, 4/8/61) Eventually, they found their way into the hands of one of the assassins, Antonio de la Maza. (Station to HQS cable, 4/26/61; I.G. Report pp. 46, 49) Both Dearborn and [redacted] testified that the carbines were at all times viewed as strictly a token show of support, indicating U.S. support of the dissidents' efforts to overthrow Trujillo. (Dearborn 7/29, pp. 46-48; [redacted] p. 39)

c. Failure to Disclose to State Department Officials in Washington

There is no indication that the request or the passage of the carbines was disclosed to State Department officials in Washington until several weeks after the passage. In fact, on April 5, Headquarters requested its Station to ask Dearborn not to comment in correspondence with State that the carbines and ammunition were being passed to the dissidents. This cable was sent while [redacted] was in Washington, and it indicated that upon his return to the Dominican Republic, he would explain the request. The Station replied that Dearborn had not commented on the carbines and ammunition in his correspondence with State and he realized the necessity not to do so. (Station to HQS cable, 4/6/61)

Dearborn testified, however, that he believed, at the time of his April 6 cable, that someone in the State Department had been consulted in advance and had approved the passage of the carbines (Dearborn 7/29, p. 44)

3. Requests For and Pouching of the Machine Guns

a. [redacted] Requests Machine Guns (for Use in Assassination)

The Station Chief suggested that Headquarters consider pouching an M3 machine gun on February 10, 1961 ([redacted] pp. 63,64; Station to HQS cable, 3/15/61). The request was raised again in March but no action was taken. On March 20, 1961, [redacted] cabled a dissident request for five M3 or comparable machine guns specifying their wish that the arms be sent via the diplomatic pouch or similar means. The dissidents were said to feel that delivery by air drop or transfer at sea would overly-tax their resources. (Station to HQS cable, 3/20/61)

The machine guns sought by the dissidents were clearly identified, in [redacted]'s cable, as being sought for use in connection with an attempt to assassinate Trujillo. This plan was to kill Trujillo in the apartment of his mistress and, according to [redacted] cable:

> "4. To do they need five M3 or comparable machine-guns. and 1500 rounds ammo for personal defense in event fire fight. Will use quiet weapons for basic job." (Id.)

In essence, CIA's response was that the timing for an assassination was wrong. [redacted] was told that precipitious or uncoordinated action could lead to the emergence of a leftist, Castro-type regime and the "mere disposal of Trujillo may create more problems than solutions." It was Headquarters' position that:

> "...we should attempt to avoid precipitous action by the internal dissidents until opposition group and HQS are better prepared to support /assassination/*, effect a change in the regime, and cope with the aftermath." (HQS to Station cable, 3/24/61)

---

* Word supplied by CIA in previously sanitized cable.

The cable also stated that Headquarters was prepared to deliver machine guns and ammunition to the dissidents when they developed a capability to received them, but that security considerations precluded use of U.S. facilities as a carrier.* Soon, thereafter, on April 6, 1961, while [redacted] was in Washington for consultation with Headquarters, he reported on events in the Dominican Republic and

> "especially on the insistence of the EMOTH [dissident] leaders that they be provided with a limited number of small arms for their own protection (specifically, five M3 caliber .45 SMG's)." (CIA memo for the record, 4/11/61)

b. Pouching the Machine Guns is Approved by Bissell

Accordingly, on April 7, 1961, a Pouch Restriction Waiver Request and Certification was submitted seeking permission to pouch "four M3 machine guns and 240 rounds of ammunition on a priority basis for issuance to a small action group to be used for self protection." (Pouch Restriction Waiver Request 4/7/61)

The request, submitted on behalf of the Chief, Western Hemisphere Division, further provided:

> "B. A determination has been made that the issuance of this equipment to the action group is desirable if for no other reason than to assure this important group's continued cooperation with and confidence in this Agency's determination to live up to its earlier commitments to the group. These commitments took in cables from Dearborn and [redacted]. (Station to HQS cables 4/25/61) On April 25, 1961, [redacted] advised Headquarters that [redacted] had informed him that Antonio de la Maza was going to attempt the assassination between April 29 and May 2. [redacted] also reported that this attempt would use the three carbines passed from the American Consulate, together with whatever else was available. (Id.)

In response to the April 26 cable, Headquarters restated that there was no approval to pass any additional arms to the dissidents and requested [redacted] to advise the dissidents that the United States was simply not prepared at that time to cope with the aftermath of the assassination. (See C/S comments, Station to HQS cable, 4/27/61) The following day, April 27, 1961, [redacted] replied that, based upon further discussions with the dissidents, "We doubt statement U.S. government not now prepared to cope with aftermath will dissuade them from attempt." (Station to HQS cable, 4/27/61)

Dearborn recalls receiving instructions that an effort be made to turn off the assassination attempt and testified that efforts to carry out the instructions were unsuccessful. In effect, the dissidents informed him that this was their affair and it could not be turned off to suit the convenience of the U.S. government.

(Dearborn, 7/29, p.52)

> additional support, coupled with fact ref. C items [the carbines] already made available to them for personal defense; station authorized pass ref. A items [the machine guns] to opposition member for their additional protection on their proposed endeavor." (Draft of HQS to Station cable, 5/2/61).

The cable was never sent.

In his testimony before the Committee, Bissell characterized his reasoning for recommending release of the machine guns as:

> " . . . having made already a considerable investment in this dissident group and its plans that we might as well make the additional investment." (Bissell, 7/22, p.127)

The following day, May 3, 1961, Ray Herbert, Deputy Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division of CIA, who frequently acted as liaison with the State Department in matters concerning covert operations in the Dominican Republic, met with Adolph Berle, Chairman of the State Department's Interagency Task Force on Latin America.

A Berle memorandum of the meeting states that Herbert informed Berle that a local group in the Dominican Republic wished to overthrow Trujillo and sought arms for that purpose. The memorandum continued:

> "On cross examination it developed that the real plan was to assassinate Trujillo and they wanted guns for that purpose. Herbert wanted to know what the policy should be.
> "I told him I could not care less for Trujillo and that this was the general sentiment. But we did not wish to have any thing to do with any assassination plots anywhere, any time. Herbert said he felt the same way." (Berle, Memo of Conversation, 5/3/61)

Copies of Berle's memorandum were sent to Wymberly Coerr, the Acting Assistant Secretary for Inter-American Affairs, and to Special Assistant Frank Devine.

Both Herbert and Devine, who had been in almost daily contact with each other since August of 1960, had been advised of the assassination plans of the dissident group. In fact, Herbert, along with Bissell, had signed off on the proposed cable of May 2, releasing the machine guns for passage.

C. Special Group Meetings of May 4 and May 18, 1961

On the day following the Berle-Herbert meeting, the Special Group met and, according to the minutes:

> "The DCI referred to recent reports of a new anti-Trujillo plot. He said we never know if one of these is going to work or not, and asked what is the status of contingency planning should the plot come off. Mr. Bundy said that this point is covered in the Cuba paper which will be discussed at a high level in the very near future." (Special Group Minutes, 5/4/61)

Once again, the cryptic reporting of Special Group Minutes makes subsequent analysis as to the scope of matters discussed speculative. It is not known to what extent and in what detail Allen Dulles referred to "recent reports" of a new anti-Trujillo plot. Certainly, the most recent report of such a plot was Dearborn's April 30 cable -- disclosing an imminent assassination attempt potentially utilizing U.S.-supplied weapons.

On May 18, 1961, the Special Group again considered the situation in the Dominican Republic and, according to the to continue to take the same line until he received contrary instructions which clearly indicated they had been cleared in advance by the State Department itself. This cable from State was approved by Under Secretary Bowles. (Department to Dearborn, 5/16/61)

Ray Herbert referred to Dearborn's May 16 request in a memorandum he sent to Devine on the same date and asked to be advised as to the Department's policy concerning passage of the machine guns. Herbert noted that when this request was last taken to the Department, Berle made the decision that the weapons not be passed. (Memo to ARA from CIA, 5/16/61)

Devine responded to Herbert's memorandum on the same day, advising Herbert that the Department's policy continued to be negative on the matter of passing the machine guns.* Herbert's attention was directed to the January 12, 1961 Special Group limitation concerning the passage of arms outside of the Dominican Republic. A copy of Devine's memorandum to Herbert was forwarded to the Office of the Under Secretary of State, to the attention of his personal assistant, Joseph Scott. (Devine to Herbert memo, 5/16/61)

E. Dearborn in Washington for Consultation -- Drafting of Contingency Plans

At a meeting of the National Security Council on May 5, 1961, the question of U.S. policy toward the Dominican Republic was considered and it was:

> "Agreed that the Task Force on Cuba would prepare promptly both emergency and long-range plans for anti-communist intervention in the event of crises in Haiti or the

---

* By May 27, 1961 Dearborn was advising the State Department that the group was no longer requesting the arms and had accepted the fact that it must make do with what it had. (Dearborn to State Cable, 5/27/61)

> fact, we feel that the transfer of arms would serve very little purpose and expose the United States to great danger of association with assassination attempt."

The cable, as revised by Goodwin and approved by President Kennedy, was sent to Dearborn on May 29, 1961. (State Dept. to Dearborn cable, 5/29/61)

VII. May 30, 1961 and Immediately Thereafter:

A. Trujillo Assassinated

Late in the evening of May 30, 1961, Trujillo was ambushed and assassinated near San Cristobal, Dominican Republic. The assassination closely paralleled the plan disclosed by the action group to American representatives in the Dominican Republic and passed on to officials in Washington at both the CIA and the State Department. (Dearborn cable to State, 5/30/61) The assassination was conducted by members of the action group, to whom the American carbines had been passed, and such sketchy information as is available indicates that one or more of the carbines were in the possession of the assassination group when Trujillo was killed. (I. G. Report, pp. 60-61). This evidence indicat however, that the actual assassination was accomplished by handguns and shotguns. (I.G. Report, p.61)

B. Cables to Washington

After receiving the May 29 cable from Washington, both Consul General Dearborn and Station Chief [redacted] sent replies. According to Dearborn's testimony, he did not regard the May 29 cable as a change in U.S. policy concerning support for assassinations. (Dearborn 7/29/75, p. 74).

He interpreted the May 29 cable as saying:

> "...we don't care if the Dominicans assassinate Trujillo, that is all right. But we don't want anything to pin this on us, because we aren't doing it, it is the Dominicans who are doing it." (Dearborn, 7/29, p. 104)

Dearborn testified that this accorded with what he said had always been his personal belief; that the U.S. should not be involved in an assassination and that if an assassination occurred it would be strictly a Dominican affair. (Dearborn 7/29, pp. 100, 101)

In contrast the CIA Station Chief, 03 Owen did regard the cable as manifesting a change in U.S. policy, particularly on the question of supplying arms. 03 (Owen p. 120) He believed the May 29 cable was the final word in U.S. policy on this matter and consequently felt that the government had retreated from its prior position, of offering material support to the dissidents, and had adopted a new position of withholding such support. 03 Owen's responsive cable to Headquarters stated:

> "HQS aware extent to which U.S. government already associated with assassination. If we are to at least cover up tracks, CIA personnel directly involved in assassination preparation must be withdrawn." (Station to HQS cable, 5/30/61)

III. CIA's Implementation of Track II

A. Evolution of CIA Strategy

The President's instruction to the CIA on September 15 to prevent Allende's assumption of power was given in the context of a broad U.S. Government effort to achieve that end. The September 15 instruction to the CIA involved from the beginning the promotion of a military coup d'etat in Chile. Although there was talk of a coup in Chilean military circles, there was little indication that it would actually take place without active U.S. encouragement and support.

> There was much talk among Chilean officers about the possibility of some kind of coup...but this was not the kind of talk that was being backed by, you know, serious organizational planning.
> (Karamessines testimony, Aug. 6, 1963, p. 32)

1. The "Constitutional Coup" Approach

Although efforts to achieve a political solution to the Allende victory continued simultaneous with Track II, the Agency premised its activities on the assumption that the political avenue was a dead end. On September 21, CIA Headquarters cabled its Station in Santiago:

> Purpose of exercise is to prevent Allende assumption of power. Paramilitary legerdemain has been discarded. Military solution is objective.
> (Hqs. 236, Sept. 21, 1970, para. 3)

The initial strategy attempted to enlist President Frei in promoting a coup to perpetuate his presidency for six more years. The Agency decided to promise "help in any election which was an outgrowth of a successful military takeover." (Nov. 18, 1970 Helms memo to Kissinger) Under this plan Frei would invite the military to take over, dissolve the Congress, and proclaim a new election. (A private U.S. citizen who had been a conduit for CIA funds to Frei's 1964 campaign was sent to see him) (with this message on September 24. (Task Force Log, September 23))

Thomas Karamessines, the Deputy Director for Plans, testified:

> So this was in a sense not Track II, but in a sense another aspect of a quiet and hopefully non-violent military coup....This was abandoned when the military were reluctant to push Frei publicly...and, number two, Frei was reluctant to leave on his own in the absence of pressure from the military....There was left as the only chance of success a straight military coup.
> (Karamessines testimony, Aug. 6, 1975, p. 6)

At the same time, the Station in Santiago reported:

> Strong reasons for thinking neither Frei nor Schneider will act. For that reason any scenario in which either has to play an active role now appears utterly unrealistic. Overtures to lower echelon officers (e.g., Valenzuela) can of course be made. This involves promoting Army split.
> (Stn. to Hqs. 424, September 23, 1970)

2. Military Solution

President Frei's failure even to attempt to persuade his own party convention on October 3-4 from reaching a compromise with Allende ended all hope of using him to prevent an Allende presidency. (November 18 memo, Helms to Kissinger, page 16) Thus, by the beginning of October, it was clear that a vehicle for a military solution would have to be found in the second echelon of Chilean officers, and that the top leadership of the Armed Services, particularly General Rene Schneider, constituted a stumbling block. (Santiago 424, September 23, 1970; Santiago 439, September 30, 1970) The Agency's task was to cause a coup in a highly unpromising situation and to overcome the formidable obstacles represented by Frei's inaction, Schneider's strong constitutionalism, and the absence of organization and enthusiasm among those officers who were interested in a coup.

A three-fold program was set into motion:

TOP SECRET

David A. Phillips, Chief of Station in Rio de Janeiro, was summoned back to Washington to head the operation. With the exception of the Division Chief, William Broe, his deputy James Flannery and the head of the Chile Branch, no other officers in the Division were aware of the task force's activities, not even those officers who normally had responsibility for Chile. The task force had a special communications channel to Santiago and Buenos Aires to compartment cable traffic about Track II. (November 18, 1970, Helms to Kissinger memo, page 3) Most of the significant operational decisions were made by Phillips, Broe and Karamessines, who met on a daily basis.

stet

It should be noted that all those involved with the task force described the pressure from the White House as intense. Indeed, Karamessines has said that Kissinger "left no doubt in my mind that he was under the heaviest of pressure to get this accomplished, and he in turn was placing us under the heaviest of pressures to get it accomplished." (Karamessines testimony, August 6, 1975, page 7) The Deputy Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division, James Flannery, testified that pressure was "as tough as I ever saw it in my time there, extreme." (Flannery testimony, July 15, 1975, page 20) Broe testified that "I have never gone through a period as we did on the Chilean thing. I mean it was just constant, constant....Just continual pressure....It was coming from the White House." (Broe testimony, August 4, 1975, page 55)

C. The Use of the Army Attache and Interagency Relations

The CIA Station in Santiago had inadequate contacts within the Chilean military to carry out its task. However, the U.S. Army Attache in Santiago, Colonel Paul Wimert, knew the Chilean military very well due to his five years of service there and his broad personal contacts among the Chilean officers. Following a proposal by the Chief of Station, the CIA decided to enlist Colonel Wimert in collecting intelligence concerning the possibility of a coup and to use him as a channel to let the interested Chilean military know of U. S. support for a coup. Karamessines described this procedure for the Committee:

> We also needed contact with a wider segment of the military, the senior military which we had not maintained and did not have, but which we felt confident that our military representative in Chile had....And we got the approval of the DIA to enlist the cooperation of Colonel Wimert in our effort to procure intelligence.
> (Karamessines testimony, August 6, 1975, p. 6)

To obtain Wimert's services, CIA officials prepared a suggested message for the Director of DIA to send to the Army Attache in Santiago through CIA communications channels. Because the DIA Director, General Donald V. Bennett, was in Europe on official business, the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, General Cushman, invited DIA Deputy Director Lt. General Jammie M. Philpott to his office on September 28, 1970.* During that meeting, General Cushman requested the assistance of the Army Attache, and General Philpott signed a letter which authorized transmission of a message directing the Army Attache:

> ...to work closely with the CAS chief, or in his absence, his deputy, in contacting and advising the principal military figures who might play a decisive role in any move which might, eventually, deny the presidency to Allende.
> Do not, repeat not, advise the Ambassador or the Defense Attache of this message, or give them any indication of its portent. In the course of your routine activities, act in accordance with the Ambassador's instructions. Simultaneously, I wish--and now authorize you--to act in a concerted fashion with the CAS chief.

---

* General Bennett returned to the United States on the evening of October 10, 1970. General Philpott was Acting Director in Bennett's absence.

This message is for your eyes only, and should not be discussed with any person other than those CAS officers who will be knowledgeable. CAS will identify them. (Headquarters 380 to Santiago)

For this and all subsequent messages intended for the Army Attache, the secret CIA communications channel was used.

Both General Philpott and Thomas Karamessines testified that initially the Army Attache would be used only to "obtain or procure" intelligence on Chilean military officers.* (Philpott, p. 11; Karamessines, p. 6) The September 28, 1970 message to the Army Attache, however, did in fact trigger his deep involvement in the coup attempt. According to the Attache's testimony, he received day-to-day instructions from the Chief of Station, and on occasion, the COS would show him messages ostensibly from Generals Bennett and/or Philpott, directing him to take certain actions. The COS also transmitted messages from the Army Attache to these Generals.

General Bennett testified that he never had knowledge of Track II and that he never received any communication relating thereto, nor did he ever authorize the transmission of any messages to the Army Attache. General Philpott also testified that he had no recollection of anything connected with Track II after his initial meeting with General Cushman on September 28. (Philpott, p. 16)

U. S. Army Colonel Robert C. Roth, who in September and October 1970 was the Chief of the Human Resources Division, Director of Collection, DIA, testified that he recalled working for Generals Bennett and Philpott on "a priority requirement to identify Chilean personalities who might be helpful in preventing the election of Allende as President of Chile." (Roth, Vol. I, p. 6) Though Roth recalls no mention of Track II as such, the goal of this mission is identical to that described in the message of September 28 bearing Philpott's signature.

* In this connection it should be noted that when questioned about this letter, General Philpott testified that he recalled signing an authorization such as that contained in the first paragraph of Headquarters 380 but that he did not recall the authorizations and instructions in paragraphs two and three.

Beginning on October 15, Roth kept a chronology of his activities connected with Chile. This chronology reflects that there was a meeting on October 21 regarding the preparation of biographic material on Chilean generals which focused on their willingness to participate in a military coup. Generals Bennett, Philpott, and a CIA representative attended. The chronology also shows that on October 21, Roth delivered a message to Mr. Broe to be sent by CIA channels.* A message was sent to Col. Wimert that same day, ostensibly from General Bennett, which authorized:

> FYI: Suspension temporarily imposed on MAP and FMS has been rescinded. This action does not repeat not imply change in our estimate of situation. On the contrary, it is intended to place us in a posture in which we can formally cut off assistance if Allende elected and situation develops as we anticipate. Request up date on situation. (Santiago 446; Ref: Headquarters 762) (Headquarters 934, 21 October 1970)

Roth testified that this DIA project ended on October 23 when he followed Philpott's instructions to deliver biographic information on Chilean figures to Mr. Broe at CIA. Philpott also instructed him that

---

* Roth believes that General Philpott directed him to deliver this message and also pressed him on several occasions to seek a response from Broe to an earlier message to Colonel Wimert. (Roth, Vol. II, p.)

TOP SECRET

"any further action on the subject would henceforth be the responsibility of the CIA and that DIA would perform normal support functions." (Roth, p. 8)*

Both Bennett and Philpott testified that the activities described by Roth were routine DIA activities. However, Colonel Roth testified:

> I believe my impression at the time, or my recollection, is that I was informed that there was concern at the highest U.S. Governmental level over the possible election of Allende, that DIA then had a priority responsibility of coming up with the identities of key Chilean personalities that would be helpful, and so forth. I have nothing specific as to the nature of the instructions or the channels through which they came.
> Q. It was your sense at the time that you were working on a project that if it had not been initiated by, at least had the attention of or concern of, the highest level?

---

* Roth's chronology also indicates that Philpott had asked that Broe be queried on two or three occasions regarding a report from Wimert and that Philpott instructed that only he (Philpott) would communicate with Cushman if the need arose. (Roth, p. 11) Roth also testified that Philpott advised him that communications with Wimert would be by CIA channels. (Roth, p. 41)

TOP SECRET

Colonel Roth. That was my impression at the time.

Q. You understand from your work in the Defense Department that the highest level of government usually indicated the President of the United States?

Colonel Roth. I would assume that.

The CIA produced copies of several messages which identify Generals Bennett and Philpott as either the sender or recipient. Among these documents is a message relating to Track II which bears Philpott's purported signature. (Undated message. ca. 14 October 1970) General Philpott admitted that the signature appears to be his but doubted that it was and he could not recall signing it, or having seen it. (Philpott, p.) CIA also produced messages of October 14 (Headquarters 762) and October 21 (Headquarters 934) conveying instructions from General Bennett to the Army Attache. General Bennett testified he did not authorize these messages:

> It is beyond the responsibilities which I had in the military assistance area. It goes beyond the responsibility which I had in terms that I would have to get the authority or the approval of the Secretary through the Chairman for covert action of this magnitude. This message would not have been signed by me. (Bennett testimony, p. 21)

According to Karamessines, only the White House had the authority to issue the directives contained in those messages (Karamessines testimony, p. 84)

The Department of Defense was unable to provide any documents bearing on the issue of Wimert's Track II instructions or responses. A DOD file search under the direction of General Daniel O. Graham, the present Director of DIA, produced no copies of communication documents for the September-October 1970 period. (Graham, p. 6) However, Roth testified that detailed memoranda for the record which he prepared on his activities are missing from the files. (Roth, Vol. II, p.)

CIA officials maintain that they acted faithfully in transmitting messages to Generals Bennett and/or Philpott and in never sending a message without proper authorization. Mr. Karamessines was particularly forceful in this regard:

> ...I can recall no instance in my experience at the Central Intelligence Agency in which a message was received for an individual, an officer of the government anywhere, in whatever department, which was not faithfully, directly, promptly and fully and accurately delivered to that officer, or to his duly authorized representative.
> (Karamessines testimony, p. 79)
> We may have played tricks overseas, but it stopped at the water's edge, and we didn't play tricks among ourselves or among our colleagues within the Agency or in other agencies.
> (Karamessines testimony, p. 79)
> We could not remain in business for a day...if this had been the practice of the Agency. It would have been no time at all before we would have been found out, a single instance of the kind of thing you are suggesting might have taken place would have put us out of business.
> (Karamessines testimony, p. 80)

Dr. Kissinger denied he was ever informed of the Army Attache's role or that he authorized any messages to be sent to the Army Attache. (Kissinger testimony, p. 22)

The investigation to date has not resolved the conflict between the statements of the senior CIA, DIA and White House officials. There are four possibilities that could explain the conflict. First, Generals Bennett and Philpott were cognizant of Track II and communicated their general instructions to the Army Attache. This possibility would be contrary to their sworn testimony. Second, General Bennett was not aware of Track II but General Philpott was and communicated general instructions to the Army Attache. This possibility is supported by Roth's testimony but would be contrary to Philpott's sworn testimony and his duty to keep General Bennett informed. Third, the CIA acted on its own, and, after receiving initial authority from General Philpott, co-opted and ordered the Army Attache without further informing any member of the Department of Defense of the White House. This possibility would be contrary to the sworn testimony of David Phillips, William Broe, Thomas Karamessines, and William Colby. Fourth, members of the White House staff authorized the CIA to convey orders to the Army Attache on the basis of high or highest government authority. Further, that the White House staff directed that the Army Attache's superiors in the Pentagon not be informed. This possibility would contradict the sworn testimony of Dr. Kissinger and General Alexander Haig.

D. The False Flag Base

In order to minimize the risks of making contact with the dissident Chilean officers, the task force decided in late September to set up a "False Flag Base," i.e., to send four staff officers to Chile posing as nationals of other countries to supplement Colonel Wimert's contacts with Chilean military officers.* Given the limitations of the Station's resources and Colonel Wimert's visibility, Headquarters felt the use of "False Flag Officers" was necessary because "We don't want to miss a chance." One of these officers posed as a Brazilian intelligence officer so that "any flap would be a Brazilian one." (Headquarters 363, September 27, 1970)

---

*The use of "False Flag Officers" is not, according to David Phillips, "an unusual practice," either by the CIA or foreign intelligence services. (Phillips testimony, pp. 47-48)

The False Flaggers were compartmented from each other and reported separately on their contacts to a "deep cover" CIA officer in Santiago who in turn reported to the Station. According to the testimony of the Chief of Station, they received their instructions from Washington and not from him. (Chief of Station testimony (Felix), August 1, 1975, p. 27)

E. Chief of Station

Although most of the Station officers in Santiago did not know of Track II, the Chief and Deputy Chief of Station were knowledgeable and the Chief of Station initiated contacts on his own with Chilean officers. The COS has testified that he regarded Track II as unrealistic:

> I had left no doubt in the minds of my colleagues and superiors that I did not consider any kind of intervention in those constitutional processes desirable....And one of the reasons certainly for my last recall (to Washington) was to be read the riot act--which was done in a very pleasant, but very intelligible manner. Specifically, I was told at that time that the Agency was not too interested in continuously being told by me that certain proposals which had been made could not be executed, or would be counterproductive. (Chief of Station (Felix) testimony, August 1, 1975, p. 10)

The Chief of Station's objection to Track II did not go unnoticed. The following instruction to the COS was sent on October 7: "Report should not contain analysis and argumentation but simply report on action taken." (Headquarters 612, 7 October) Very simply, Headquarters wanted the Station to take orders quietly as was the Agency itself.

IV. CIA Efforts to Promote a Coup

A. The Chilean Conspirators

Anti-Allende coup plotting in Chile centered around several key individuals. One of these was retired General Roberto Viaux, the General who had led the "Tacnazo" insurrection a year before.* Following the "Tacnazo" revolt, and his dismissal from the Army, Viaux retained the support of many non-commissioned and junior officers as well as being the recognized leader of several right-wing civilian groups. (CIA Briefing Paper, "Special Mandate from the President on Chile," July 15, 1975)

Another individual around which plotting centered was General Camilo Valenzuela, Commander of the Santiago Garrison. General Valenzuela was in league with several other active duty officers, including 06, 08 [redacted] 06, 06 [redacted] 06, 06 [redacted] and 06, 08 [redacted] (CIA Report on Chilean Task Force Activities, November 18, 1970) All of these officers, with the possible exception of 06 [redacted] were in contact with Viaux as well.

---

*This revolt was engineered by Viaux ostensibly for the purposes of dramatizing the military's demand for higher pay, but was widely interpreted as an abortive coup.

The record of meetings between Viaux and the active duty military officers is incomplete. The record does show, however, that Viaux met with [redacted] 06 around October 7. (Chile Task Force Log, October 7). On October 12 Viaux met with General Valenzuela (Chile Task Force Log, 14 October). One cable from Santiago indicates that [redacted] may have been a member of Viaux's inner circle of conspirators 06 (Station 545, 16 October 1970) At the very least, [redacted] 06 was in contact with Viaux.

Although a distinction can be made between the Viaux and Valenzuela groups, as CIA witnesses did throughout their testimony before the Committee, the principal distinction between the two was that the latter was led by active duty military officers. The two groups were in contact with each other. The record also indicates that they worked together in at least two of the three Schneider kidnap attempts.

There was considerable communication among the various plotting elements. As Thomas Karamessines testified:

> ...I might add here that it seemed that a good dozen or more, maybe 20 Chilean senior officers were privy to what was going on (in addition to President Frei) and they were all talking to one another exchanging views and trying to see how best to mount the kind of coup that they wanted to see take place. (Karamessines testimony, p. 10)

B. Contacts Prior to October 15

The CIA's initial task in Chile was to assess the potential within the Chilean military to stage a coup. It recognized quickly that anti-Allende currents did exist in the military and the Carabineros (police), but were immobilized by "the tradition of military respect for the Constitution" and "the public and private stance of General Schneider, Commander in Chief of the Army, who advocated strict adherence to the Constitution." (CIA Report on Chilean Task Force Activities, 18 November 1970, p. 17) The Agency's task, then, was to overcome "the apolitical, constitutional-oriented inertia of the Chilean military." (Ibid, p. 2)

Since the very top of the Chilean military, embodied by General Schneider and his second-in-command, General Prat, were hostile to the idea of a coup against Allende, discreet approaches were made to the second level of general officers. They were to be informed that the U.S. Government would support a coup both before and after it took place.* (Headquarters to Station 611, 7 October 1970) This effort began in earnest on October 5 when (Colonel Wimert) informed both an Army General ("Station's priority contact") an an Air Force General of the pro-coup

---

*The military officers were told, for example, that should Allende be prevented from taking office, "The Chilean military will not be ostracized, but rather can continue to count on us for MAP support and maintenance of our close relationship." (Hqs. 075517, 7 October 1970)

U.S. policy. (Santiago 469, October 5; Santiago 473, October 6)* Three days later the Chief of Station told 06,08 [redacted] of the Carabineros that "the U.S. Government favors a military solution and is willing to support it in any manner short of outright military intervention." (Task Force Log, 9 October) 06 [redacted] informed the COS that there was no chance of a coup by the Chilean Army high command. (Task Force Log, 10 October)

On October 7, Colonel Wimert approached members of the War Academy in Santiago who in turn asked him to provide light weapons. This was Colonel Wimert's first contact with the Army 08 [redacted] to whom he would ultimately pass three submachine guns on October 22. At this meeting, the 06 [redacted] told Colonel Wimert that he and his colleagues were > trying to exert force on Frei to eliminate Gen. Schneider to either replace him, send him out of the country. They had even studied plans to kidnap him. Schneider is the main barrier to all plans for the military to take over the government to prevent an Allende presidency. (Santiago 483, 8 October)

---

*According to the CIA's wrap-up report on Track II, between October 5 and October 20, the CIA Station and the Army Attache--for the most part the latter--made 21 contacts with key military and Carabinero officials. (CIA Report on Chilean Task Force Activities, 8 November 1970)

In his testimony, Colonel Wimert indicated that the 08 [redacted] was affiliated with General [redacted] 06 (Wimert testimony, p. 52) In a cable sent to Headquarters on October 18, in which the [redacted]'s 08 request for three submachine guns was made, the Station indicated that Wimert believed the Army officer, and his companion, a Navy [redacted] 08 were in league with Admiral [redacted] 06 (Station 562, October 18) At another point in his testimony, Wimert stated, "There was Valenzuela here and the Navy Captain and the Army Lt. Colonel and the Air Force General over here." (Wimert testimony, p. 107) The Committee has been unable to determine the exact affiliation of the Army Lt. Colonel. 06 However, as previously stated, both General [redacted] 06 and [redacted] were affiliated with General Valenzuela and Admiral [redacted] was in contact with General Viaux. 06

The next day, October 8, Headquarters cabled the Station in response to the Wimert-Lt. Colonel meeting. Headquarters took note of Schneider's resistance to coup plans and stated:

> ...This would make it more important than ever to remove him and to bring this new state of events...anything we or Station can do to effect removal of Schneider? We know this rhetorical question, but wish inspire thought on both ends on this matter.
> (Hqs. 628, 8 October)

During the first week of intensive efforts chances of success looked unusually bleak. The Chile Task Force Log commented:

> President Frei and the highest levels of the armed forces unable to pull themselves together to block Allende. The Chilean military's tradition of non-intervention, Frei's reluctance to tarnish his historical image, General Schneider's firm constitutional stand, and most importantly, the lack of leadership within the government and military are working against a military takeover.
> (Task Force Log, 8 October)

The following day the Station made reference to the "rapid(ly) waning chances for success." (Santiago 487, 9 October) This pessimism was not dispelled by their simultaneous judgment: "Station has arrived at Viaux solution by process of elimination." (Santiago 504, 10 October) Three days later the Task Force agreed: "We continue to focus our attention on General Viaux who now appears to be the only military leader willing to block Allende." (Task Force Log, 13 October)

If Viaux was the CIA's only hope of staging a coup, things were bleak indeed. His own colleagues, Generals [redacted] and Valenzuela described him as "a General without an army." (Santiago 495, 9 October) Yet in the first two weeks of October he came to be regarded as the best hope for carrying out the CIA's Track II mandate.

Although Colonel Wimert was instructed not to involve himself with Viaux because of the high risk involved (Santiago 461, 5 October), he served initially as a contact to Viaux through an Argentine military Attache. The Argentine reported on October 5 that Viaux wanted several hundred paralyzing gas grenades to launch a coup on October 9. (Santiago 476, 6 October) Headquarters turned down the request, concluding that a "mini-coup at this juncture would be counterproductive" and Viaux should postpone his plans, "while encouraging him in a suitable manner to maintain his posture so that he may join larger movement later if it materializes." (Headquarters 585, 6 October)

The primary purpose of the "False Flag Base" was to contact Viaux, and it very rapidly relieved Wimert and the Argentine Attache of that task. Viaux reiterated his demand for an air drop of weapons to the "False Flagger," and again the response was the same: reject the demand for arms, but encourage him to keep planning. In essence the Agency was buying time with Viaux: "We wish to encourage Viaux to expand and refine his coup planning. Gain some influence over his actions." (Headquarters 689, 10 October) To achieve this latter purpose, Headquarters authorized passing $20,000 in cash and a promise of $250,000 in life insurance to Viaux and his associates, as a demonstration of U.S. support. (Headquarters 729, 13 October)

On October 13, Headquarters again indicated its concern over Schneider by asking: "What is to keep Schneider from making statement in early hours which will freeze those military leaders who might otherwise join Viaux?" (Headquarters 729, 13 October) The Station's response later that same day was "Viaux intends to kidnap Generals Schneider and Prats within the next 48 hours in order to precipitate a coup." (Santiago 527, 13 October) This Viaux kidnapping of Schneider was reported by the Station "as part of a coup that included Valenzuela." (Station 529, 13 October)

At about this time the Station began to receive encouragement from its other contacts. On October 14, ten days before the Chilean Congress was to vote, the Task Force Log concluded:

> Now we are beginning to see signs of increasing coup activity from other military quarters, specifically, 06 an Army General (name deleted), Admiral [redacted] the forces in Concepcion and Valdivis and perhaps even Frei and [redacted] 06
> (Task Force Log, 14 October)

C. October 15 Decision

To summarize, by October 15, General Viaux had advertised to his contact a desire to proceed with a coup, had indicated he would deal with the Schneider obstacle by kidnapping him, had met at least once with Generals 06 [redacted] and Valenzuela and had once postponed his coup plans.*

On October 15 Thomas Karamessines met Henry Kissinger and Alexander Haig at the White House to discuss the situation in Chile. According to the Agency's record of this meeting, Karamessines "provided a rundown on Viaux, the 06 [redacted] meeting with 06 [redacted], and, in some detail, the general situation in Chile from the coup-possibility viewpoint." (Memorandum of Conversation/Kissinger, Karamessines, and Haig, 15 October 1970) A decision was made at the meeting "to de-fuse the Viaux coup plot, at least temporarily:"

---

* The reason for Viaux postponing his coup plans was the subject of a cable from Santiago to Headquarters:

> We discount Viaux's statement that he had called off his coup attempt because of False Flag Officer's impending visit. Other reporting indicated Viaux probably not able or intending move this weekend. (Santiago 499, 10 October)

There is also reason to believe that General Valenzuela was instrumental in persuading Viaux to postpone. According to the Chile Task Force Log:

> Station reported that on 12 October General Valenzuela met with General Viaux and attempted to persuade him not to attempt a coup." (Chile Task Force Log, 14 October)

> It was decided by those present that the Agency must get a message to Viaux warning him against any precipitate action. In essence the message should state: "We have reviewed your plans and based on your information and ours, we come to the conclusion that your plans for a coup at this time cannot succeed. Failing, they may reduce your capabilities in the future. Preserve your assets. We will stay in touch. The time will come when you with all your other friends can do something. You will continue to have our support." (15 October Memorandum of Conversation, Kissinger, Karamessines, Haig)

The meeting concluded, according to the Agency's record, "on Dr. Kissinger's note that the Agency should continue keeping the pressure on every Allende weak spot in sight--now, after the 24th of October, after 5 November, and into the future until such time as new marching orders are given. Mr. Karamessines stated that the Agency would comply."*

The following day CIA Headquarters cabled the results of the White House meeting to the Station in Santiago:

> 2. It is firm and continuing policy that Allende be overthrown by a coup....We are to continue to generate maximum pressure toward this end utilizing every appropriate resource.
> 3. After the most careful consideration it was determined that a Viaux coup attempt carried out by him alone with the forces now at his disposal would fail. Thus it would be counterproductive to our Track Two objectives. It was decided that CIA get a message to Viaux warning him against precipitate action. (Headquarters 802, 16 October)

The message was supplemented by orders to "continue to encourage him (Viaux) to amplify his planning; encourage him to join forces with other coup planners." (Headquarters 802, 16 October) The message concluded: "There is great and continuing interest in the activities of [redacted] [redacted] Valenzuela _et al_ and we wish them optimum good fortune." (Ibid.)

---

* Secretary Kissinger's recollection of the October 15 meeting is not in accord with that of Mr. Karamessines or the cable (Headquarters 802) that was sent the following day to the Station in Santiago. This matter will be discussed in Part V of this report.

D. Coup Planning and Attempts After October 15

The decision to "de-fuse" General Viaux was passed to Viaux's 08 [redacted] on October 17. The 08 [redacted] responded that it did not matter because they had decided to proceed with the coup in any case. (Santiago 533, 17 October) At the final meeting of the CIA "False Flagger" and Viaux's 08 [redacted] on October 18, the Agency was informed that the coup would proceed on October 22, "and that the abduction of General Schneider is first link in chain of events to come." (Santiago 568, 19 October) An "emergency channel" of communication with Viaux was maintained. (Report on CIA Chilean Task Force Activities, 18 November 1970, page 21)

As previously stated, by mid-October things suddenly looked brighter for a coup being mounted by the high-level Chilean military contacts.* As a CIA overview statement in Track II stated:

> Coup possibilities afforded by the active duty military group led by General Valenzuela and Admiral 6 [redacted] had always seemed more promising than the capabilities of the Viaux group. These military officers had the ability and resources to act providing they decided to move and organized themselves accordingly.
> (CIA Briefing Paper, "Special Mandate from the President on Chile," July 15, 1975, p. 5)

By mid-October those military officers appeared to be moving in this direction.

On the evening of October 17, Colonel Wimert met with the Army 06 [redacted] and the Navy 06 [redacted] They requested 8 to 10 tear gas grenades, three 45-caliber machine guns and 500 rounds of ammunition. The Navy 06 [redacted] said he had three machine guns himself "but can be identified by serial numbers as having been issued to him. Therefore unable to use them." (Santiago 562, 18 October) Colonel Wimert and the Chief of Station have testified that the officers wanted the machine guns for self-protection. The question, of course, is whether the arms were intended for use, or were used, in the kidnapping of General Schneider. The fact that the weapons were provided the 06 [redacted] and the Navy 06 [redacted] and that Viaux associates were convicted of the Schneider killing suggests that the guns were not involved.

*Two coup plotters, Generals 06 [redacted] and 06 [redacted], made one last attempt to persuade General Schneider to change his anti-coup position on October 15. The Station reported that the meeting turned out to be a "complete fiasco. Schneider refused to listen to General [redacted] 6 eloquent presentation of Communist action in Chile...and adament in maintaining his non-involvement stance." (Santiago 548, 16 October)

The machine guns and ammunition were sent from Washington by diplomatic pouch on the morning of October 19, although Headquarters was puzzled about their purpose: "Will continue make effort provide them but find our credulity stretched by Navy 06 [redacted] leading his troops with sterile guns. What is special purpose for these guns? We will try send them whether you can provide explanation or not." (Headquarters 854, 18 October) The first installment was delivered to the Army 06 [redacted] and the Navy 06 [redacted] late in the evening of October 18 and consisted of the six tear gas grenades intended originally for Viaux.*

* As previously stated, after October 15 CIA efforts to promote a coup in Chile focussed on the active duty military officers--Valenzuela, et. al.--rather than Viaux. 06 An example of this shift in focus was the decision to provide the Army [redacted] and the Army 06 [redacted] the tear gas grenades originally intended for Viaux. A cable from Santiago explained the purpose of this action:

> Station plans give six tear gas grenades to Colonel Wimert for delivery to Armed Forces officers (deletion) instead of having False Flag Officer deliver them to Viaux group. Our reasoning is that Wimert dealing with active duty officers. Also False Flagger leaving evening 18 October, and will not be replaced but Wimert will stay here. Hence important that Wimert credibility with Armed Forces officers be strengthened.
> (Santiago 562, 18 October)

That same day, General Valenzuela informed Colonel Wimert that he, General Huerta, Admiral Tirado and an Air Force General were prepared to sponsor a coup. (CIA Report on Chilean Task Force Activities, 18 November 1970) Their plan was to begin with the kidnapping of General Schneider on the following evening, October 19, at a military dinner being given for Schneider,* after which Schneider would be flown to Argentina, Frei would resign and leave Chile, Admiral Tirado would head the military junta, and dissolve Congress. With respect to the kidnapping of Schneider, the cable reports:

> General Viaux knowledgeable of above operation but not directly involved. He has been sent to Vina to stay with prominent physcian. Will be seen in public places during 19 and 20 October to demonstrate fact that above operation not his doing. Will be allowed to return to Santiago at end of week. Military will not admit involvement in Schneider's abduction which is to be blamed on leftists. (Santiago 566, 19 October)*

The kidnapping of the evening of October 19 failed because General Schneider left in a private vehicle, rather than in his official car, and his police guard failed to be withdrawn, but the Army [redacted] assured Colonel Wimert that another attempt would be made on October 20. (Santiago 582, 20 October) Colonel Wimert was authorized to pay Valenzuela $50,000 "which was the price agreed upon between the plotters and the unidentified team of abductors."

---

* The "False Flag Officer" who was in contact with Viaux at the time the Valenzuela plan was given to Colonel Wimert apparently understood that Viaux was involved in the October 19 attempt. He stated:

> Q. Were you told any of the details of how the (Viaux) kidnapping would be carried out?
>
> Mr. Sarno. They indicated it was going to be at some sort of a banquet which the General (Schneider) would be attending.
> (Sarno testimony, p. 37)

but Wimert insisted that the kidnapping be completed before he paid the money. (Task Force Log, 20 October) At the same time General Valenzuela assured Colonel Wimert that the military was now prepared to move. (Task Force Log, 20 October) The second abduction attempt on the 20th also failed and the Task Force concluded

> Since Valenzuela's group is apparently having considerable difficulty executing even the first step of its coup plan, the prospects for a coup succeeding or even occurring before 24 October now appears remote. (Task Force Log, 22 October)

E. The Killing of General Schneider

In the early morning hours of October 22 (2 am), Colonel Wimert delivered the three submachine guns with ammunition to the Army [redacted] in an isolated section of Santiago.*

---

*Although Colonel Wimert's testimony and the cable traffic do not clearly establish the identity of the group to which the [redacted] was affiliated (see page 31) two CIA statements on Track II tie the weapons, and therefore the [redacted] to the Valenzuela group:

> ...The only assistance requested by Valenzuela to set the plan /of October 19/ into motion through Schneider's abduction was several sub-machine guns, ammunition, a few tear gas grenades and gas masks (all of which were provided) plus $50,000 for expenses (which was to be passed upon demand.
> (CIA Report on Chilean Task Force Activities, 18 November 1970, p. 22)

> ...Three sub-machine guns, together with six gas cannisters and masks, were passed to the Valenzuela group at 2 am on 22 October. The reason why they still wanted the weapons was because there were two days remaining before the Congress decided the Presidential election and the Valenzuela group maintained some hope they could still carry out their plans.
> (CIA Briefing Paper, "Special Mandate from the President on Chile," p. 7, July 15, 1975)

At about 7 am that day the group that intended to kidnap General Schneider met to discuss last-minute instructions. According to the findings of the Chilean Military Court which investigated the Schneider killing, neither the Army [redacted] nor the Navy [redacted] were there. Shortly after 8 am, General Schneider's car was intercepted, on his way to work, by the abductors and he was mortally wounded when he drew his handgun in self-defense. The Military Court determined that hand guns had been used to kill General Schneider, although it also found that one unloaded machine gun was at the scene of the killing.*

The first Station reports following the Schneider shooting said "Military Mission sources claim General Schneider machine gunned on way to work" (Santiago 587, 22 October) and "Assailants used grease guns." (Santiago 589, 22 October) The submachine guns had previously been described as "grease guns." Thus the initial reaction of the Station was that Schneider had been shot with the same kind of weapons delivered several hours earlier to the Army [redacted]. Santiago then informed Headquarters "Station has instructed Col. Wimert to hand over $50,000 if Gen. Valenzuela requests " (Santiago 592, 22 October), thus indicating that the Station thought the kidnapping had been accomplished by Valenzuela's paid abductors. Later that day, the Station cabled Headquarters:

* The Military Court determined that those who participated in the shooting of General Schneider on October 22 were part of the Viaux-led conspiracy. The Court also found that this same group had participated in the October 19 and 20 kidnap attempts.

In June 1972 General Viaux was convicted for complicity in the plot culminating in the death of General Schneider. He received a 20-year prison sentence for being "author of the crime of kidnapping which resulted in serious injury to the victim," and a five-year exile for conspiring to cause a military coup. Also convicted on the latter charge were Generals Valenzuela and [redacted]. They received sentences of three years in exile.

> Station unaware if assassination was premeditated or whether it constituted bungled abduction attempt. In any case, it important to bear in mind that move against Schneider was conceived by and executed at behest of senior Armed Forces officers. We know that General Valenzuela was involved. We also near certain that Admiral [redacted] 06, Army [redacted] 06 and Navy 06 [redacted] witting and involved. We have reason for believeing that General Viaux and numerous associates fully clued in, but cannot prove or disprove that execution or attempt against Schneider was entrusted to elements linked with Viaux. Important factor to bear in mind is that Armed Forces, and not retired officers or extreme rightests, set Schneider up for execution or abduction.... All we can say is that attempt against Schneider is affording Armed Forces one last opportunity to prevent Allende's election if they are willing to follow Valenzuela's scenario.
> (Santiago 598, 22 October)

F. Post October 22 Events

The shooting of General Schneider resulted immediately in a declaration of martial law, the appointment of General Prats to succeed Schneider as Commander in Chief, and the appointment of General Valenzuela as chief of Santiago province. These measures, and others taken, caused the Chile Task Force to make the following initial judgment:

> With only 24 hours remaining before the Congressional runoff, a coup climate exists in Chile....The attack on General Schneider has produced developments which closely follow Valenzuela's plan....Consequently the plotters' positions have been enhanced.
> (Chile Task Force Log, 22 October)

On October 23, Director Helms reviewed and discussed Track II:

> It was agreed...that a maximum effort has been achieved, and that now only the Chileans themselves can manage a successful coup. The Chileans have been guided to a point where a military solution is at least open to them.
> (Task Force Log, 24 October)

A. September

September 18

Helms and Karamessines met with Kissinger at the White House. As Helms' notes of the September 15 meeting indicate, Kissinger wanted a plan within 48 hours. In the meeting on the 18th, according to CIA records, there was little discussion of a military coup. Rather the conversation focused on "what economic leverage could be exercised in the Chilean situation...." (Memorandum/Meeting with DDP, 18 September)

The efficacy of economic pressure continued to be a subject of concern during the last days of September. Apparently that pressure was viewed as another inducement to Frei to opt for the "Frei gambit."

September 21

The 40 Committee met. The Select Committee has no confirmation that Chile was on the agenda at this meeting. Karamessines' calendar confirms that he attended; presumably Kissinger, the 40 Committee chairman, also attended, although the Committee has not been able to review his calendar. All that can be said about this meeting--and the meetings of the Senior Review Group, which Kissinger also chaired--is that the meetings afforded Karamessines and Kissinger an opportunity to meet privately and discuss Track II if they desired. In all these instances save the 40 Committee meeting on September 22, the Committee has no evidence to confirm that such a private Kissinger/Karamessines meeting actually took place. That the CIA prepared a memorandum of conversation for the private meeting on the 22nd but has been able to find none for other meetings may provide some support for the argument that no other such private meetings occurred.

September 22

Kissinger asked Karamessines to stay behind after a 40 Committee meeting called to discuss Track I. The two men discussed Track II actions, (especially the contacts with then-Chilean-President Frei.) According to

TOP SECRET

CIA records of the meeting, Kissinger told Karamessines that "our handling of the problem during the earlier meeting had been perfect and he added we were doing fine and keep it up." (Memorandum for the Record/Chile, 22 September 1970, by Thomas Karamessines)

B. October

October 5

A cable sent to Santiago, released by Karamessines, requested a report on how the Station planned to contact the three Chilean Generals --Prats, Valenzuela and [redacted]-named in a cable of September 30. (Headquarters 449) The October 5 cable indicated that the report was needed for a discussion with Kissinger on October 6. (Santiago 556, 5 October 1970) Karamessines presumed such a meeting had taken place, although he had no specific memory of it. (Karamessines testimony, pp. 69-70) His calendar for October 6 indicates that he attended a 40 Committee meeting on Chile. (Karamessines calendar) Kissinger chaired the 40 Committee.

October 6

The Station reported that General Viaux was "ready to launch golpe evening 9 October, or morning 10 October." (Santiago 472, 6 October 1970) In response, CIA Headquarters labeled the prospective coup one "with scant chance of success which will vitiate any further more serious action." The Station was directed to try to "stop ill-considered action at this time." (Headquarters 585, 6 October 1970)

Kissinger testified he had not been informed of the Viaux plan, supporting his recollection with the fact that the CIA memorandum of an October 10 conversation between Karamessines and Haig (see below) makes no mention of any previous plots. (Kissinger testimony, p. 24)

> It seems to me, although the records don't reflect it, that there was a meeting in September, a very brief one, in which I must have been told that there was a specific program going underway. That probably would have been by Henry (Kissinger) and perhaps with Karamessines there. I am not sure. (Haig testimony, p. 12)

October 10

Karamessines discussed the Chilean situation by telephone with General Haig. He indicated that the Station had "made direct contact with a number of the senior military officers, especially those who had been reportedly very activist-minded and had received pessimistic reactions from all." (Memorandum/FUBELT, by William Broe, 10 October 1970)

.02

Haig recalled the telephone conversation with Karamessines on the 10th. His recollection accords with the CIA memorandum of conversation.

> I do know, and I know that from looking at the record this morning, that Karamessines made a telephone call to me in which he gave a progress report. I recall that. It was in effect a negative progress report, that they were just not coming up with it. (Haig testimony, p. 12)

Haig indicated to the Committee that he would have passed along the substance of that conversation to Kissinger, and that in general his role at the time was one of a conduit to Kissinger:

> I am quite confident that, given my own conception of my role at that time, that I would have conveyed that information to Henry,...
> (Haig testimony, p. 13)
> Q. If Mr. Karamessines was unable to see Dr. Kissinger, and talked to you, what degree of latitude did you have concerning what you would pass on to Dr. Kissinger?
>
> General Haig. At that time I would consider I had no degree of latitude, other than to convey to him what had been given to me. (Ibid., p. 15)

October 14

A cable to Santiago for Colonel Wimert, ostensibly from General Bennett, authorized Wimert to select two Chilean general officers and convey to them the following message: "High authority in Washington has authorized you to offer material support short of armed intervention to Chilean Armed Forces in any endeavors they may undertake to prevent the election of Allende on October 24...." (Headquarters to Station cable 762, October 14, 1970) Karamessines testified that in this case "high authority" would have been Kissinger or the President, for no one else could have given Wimert such broad authorization. Karamessines presumed that the message had been drafted in, or at least cleared with, the White House. (Karamessines testimony, p. 91)

However, Kissinger did not recall having authorized the October 14th cable. He found the sequence of events puzzling: having been told on the 10th that little was happening, he would have expected in the

October 15

Karamessines met with Kissinger and Haig at the White House to discuss Track II. According to the CIA memorandum of conversation, Karamessines gave a run-down on Viaux, 06 [redacted] and 06 [redacted] and "the general situation in Chile from the coup-possibility viewpoint." It was concluded that Viaux did not have more than one chance in twenty--perhaps less--to launch a successful coup. Kissinger ticked off the list of negative repercussions from an unsuccessful coup. The CIA record of the meeting continues:

> 5. It was decided by those present that the Agency must get a message to Viaux warning him against any precipitate action. In essence our message was to state: "We have reviewed your plans, and based on your information and ours, we come to the conclusion that your plans for a coup at this time cannot succeed. Failing, they may reduce your capabilities for the future. Preserve your assets. We will stay in touch. The time will come when you with all your other friends can do something. You will continue to have our support."
> 6. After the decision to de-fuse the Viaux coup plot, at least temporarily, Dr. Kissinger instructed Mr. Karamessines to preserve Agency assets in Chile, working clandestinely and securely to maintain the capability for Agency operations against Allende in the future.
> 8. The meeting concluded on Dr. Kissinger's note that the Agency should continue keeping the pressure on every Allende weak spot in sight--now, after the 24th of October, after 5 November, and into the future until such time as new marching orders are given. Mr. Karamessines stated that the Agency would comply.

meeting on the 15th (see below) to have discussed the results of the October 14th message. But the CIA record makes no mention of any such discussion. (Kissinger testimony, p. 53)

October 14

The Senior Review Group met to discuss Chile. (Karamessines calendar)

October 15

Karamessines met with Kissinger and Haig at the White House to discuss Track II. According to the CIA memorandum of conversation, Karamessines gave a run-down on Viaux, 06 [redacted] and 06 [redacted] and "the general situation in Chile from the coup-possibility viewpoint." It was concluded that Viaux did not have more than one chance in twenty--perhaps less--to launch a successful coup. Kissinger ticked off the list of negative repercussions from an unsuccessful coup. The CIA record of the meeting continues:

> 5. It was decided by those present that the Agency must get a message to Viaux warning him against any precipitate action. In essence our message was to state: "We have reviewed your plans, and based on your information and ours, we come to the conclusion that your plans for a coup at this time cannot succeed. > 8. The meeting concluded on Dr. Kissinger's note that the Agency should continue keeping the pressure on every Allende weak spot in sight--now, after the 24th of October, after 5 November, and into the future until such time as new marching orders are given. Mr. Karamessines stated that the Agency would comply.
> (Memorandum of Conversation/Dr. Kissinger, Mr. Karamessines, Gen. Haig at the White House, 15 October 1970)

Kissinger, in his testimony before the Committee, regarded the CIA memorandum of conversation as substantially correct, although somewhat more detailed than he would have remembered. (Kissinger testimony, p. 52) He believed the Agency had been told to "stand down and preserve your assets."

Kissinger believed that the gist of the October 15th meeting as recorded in the CIA memorandum was incompatible with the order the CIA issued to its Station the next day, an order ostensibly based on the October 15th meeting. And, he noted, in writing its memorandum of the meeting of the 15th, the CIA had a "high incentive to preserve the maximum degree of authority." (Ibid., pp. 55-56) The October 16th order indicated that Track II had been reviewed at "high USG level" the previous day, and stated:

> 2. It is firm and continuing policy that Allende be overthrown by a coup. It would be much preferable to have this transpire prior to 24 October but efforts in this regard will continue vigorously beyond this date....
> 4. There is great 6 and 06 continuing interest in the activities of [redacted], [redacted] Valenzuela et al and we wish them optimum good fortune.
> (Headquarters 802, 16 October 1970)

Kissinger recalled the October 15th conversation as "turning off the coup plans rather than giving a new order to do them." (Kissinger testimony, p. 56) Haig agreed in his testimony.

> The conclusions of that meeting were that we had better not do anything rather than something that was not going to succeed....My general feeling was, I left that meeting with the impression that there was nothing authorized."
> (Haig testimony, p. 13)

Lodge further warned that "the US must not appear publicly in the matter, thus giving the 'kiss of death' to its friends" (Cable, Lodge to Harriman, 8/26/63).

In a cable on August 25, CIA Chief of Station John Richardson reported the result of a conference among himself, Lodge, Trueheart, General Harkins (Commander, Military Assistance Command, Vietnam (MACV) and General Weede (Chief of Staff, MACV). They accepted Deptel 243 "as a basic decision from Washington and would proceed to do their best to carry out instructions", (I.G., C, pp. 7-8) but believed that Diem would refuse to remove his brother from his position in the government.

Early in the morning of August 26, 1963, the Voice of America in South Vietnam placed the blame on Nhu for the August 21 raids and absolved the army. The broadcast also reported speculation that the United States contemplated suspending aid to the South Vietnamese Government (Pentagon Papers, p. 212).* Later on that same day, Lodge presented his credentials to Diem. CIA officers Conein and Spera were told to see Generals Khiem and Khanh, respectively, and to convey to them the substance of Deptel 243, but to remind them that "we cannot be of any help during initial action of assuming power of state. Entirely their own action, win or lose" (SAIG 0304, 8/26/63).

A message from the White House on August 29 authorized Harkins to confirm to the Vietnamese Generals that the United States would support a coup if it had a good chance of succeeding, but did not involve United States armed forces. Lodge was authorized to suspend United States aid at his discretion.(Deptel 272, 8/29/63.) A cable from the President to Lodge on the same day stated:

---

*In a cable to Harriman, Lodge complained that the VOA broadcast had "complicated our already difficult problem" by eliminating "the possibility of the generals' effort achieving surprise." Lodge further warned that "the US must not appear publicly in the matter, thus giving the 'kiss of death' to its friends" (Cable, Lodge to Harriman, 8/26/63).

against a coup, but suggested that alternative leadership should be identified and cultivated. The recommendations were promptly approved by the President. (Pentagon Papers, pp.215-216)

On October 3 Conein contacted Minh. Minh explained that a coup was being planned, and requested assurances of American support if it were successful. Minh outlined three courses of action, one of which was the assassination of Diem's brothers, Nhu and Can (Conein, p.25; cable, Saigon to Director, 10/5/63).* The Acting Chief of the CIA Station, 03 [redacted] cabled on October 5 that he had recommended to Lodge that "we do not set ourselves irrevocably against the assassination plot, since the other two alternatives mean either a blood bath in Saigon or a protracted struggle" (Cable, Saigon to Director, 10/5/63).

A cable from the Director, CIA to Saigon responded that:

> "(w)e certainly cannot be in the position of stimulating, approving, or supporting assassination, but on the other hand, we are in no way responsible for stopping every such threat of which we might receive even partial knowledge. We certainly would not favor assassination of Diem. We believe engaging ourselves by taking position on this matter opens door too easily for probes of our position re others, re support of regime, et cetera. Consequently believe best approach is hands off. However, we naturally interested in intelligence on any such plan."

---

* The other courses of action were the encirclement of Saigon by various military units and direct confrontation between military units involved in the coup and loyalist units.

 Colby, who was then Chief, Far Eastern Division, drafted this cable for McCone. Colby testified:

> "Q: So you were on notice as of that date that the Director personally opposed any involvement by the CIA in an assassination?
> "Colby: I certainly was." (Colby, p. 57)

McCone testified that he met privately with the President and the Attorney General, taking the position that "our role was to assemble all information on intelligence as to what was going on and to report it to the appropriate authorities, but to not attempt to direct it" (McCone, p. 62). He believed the United States should maintain a "hands off attitude" (McCone, p. 62). McCone testified:

> "I felt that the President agreed with my position, despite the fact that he had great reservations concerning Diem and his conduct. I urged him to try to bring all the pressure we could on Diem to change his ways, to encourage more support throughout the country. My precise words to the President, and I remember them very clearly, was that Mr. President, if I was manager of a baseball team, I had one pitcher, I'd keep him in the box whether he was a good pitcher or not. By that I was saying that, if Diem was removed we would have not one coup but we would have a succession of coups and political disorder in Vietnam and it might last several years and indeed it did." (McCone, pp. 62-63.)

McCone stated that he did not discuss assassination with the President, but rather "whether we should let the coup go or use our influences not to". He left the meeting believing that the President agreed with his "hands off" recommendation (McCone, pp. 62-63). McCone cabled [redacted] on October 6:

> "McCone directs that you withdraw recommendation to ambassador (concerning assassination plan) under McCone instructions, as we cannot be in position actively condoning such course of action and thereby engaging our responsibility therefore" (CIA to Saigon, DIR 73661, 10/6/63).

In response, the CIA Station in Saigon cabled headquarters:

> "Action taken as directed. In addition, since DCM Trueheart was also present when original recommendation was made, specific withdrawal of recommendation at McCone's instruction was also conveyed to Trueheart. Ambassador Lodge commented that he shares McCone's opinion." (Saigon to CIA, SAIG 1463, 10/7/63)

None of the informed sources give any indication of direct or indirect involvement of the United States.*

---

* It must be noted that on October 30, 1963, Ambassador Lodge notified Washington that there might be a request by ked leaders for evacuation, and suggested Saipan as a point for evacuation (Saigon Station Cable No. 2036, 10/30/63). Conein was charged with obraining the airplane. Between 6:00 and 7:00 on the morning of November 2, Minh and Don asked Conein to procure an aircraft. Conein relayed the request to [redacted], Acting Chief of Station at the Embassy, who replied that it would not be possible to get an aircraft for the next twenty-four hours, since it would have to be flown from Guam. Conein testified that Smith told him that Diem could be flown only to a country that offered him asylum and that the plane could not land in any other country. There were no aircraft immediately available that had sufficient range to reach a potential country of asylum (Conein, p. 54).

United States "as [a] matter of general policy cannot condone assassination", although he did state that if the coup succeeded, the United States would support the plotters.

d. Lumumba

The chain of events revealed by the documents and testimony is strong enough to permit a reasonable inference that the assassination plot was authorized by the President. It is absolutely clear that Allen Dulles authorized the plot.

The juxtaposition of discussions concerning "disposing of" Lumumba and taking "straightforward action" against him at NSC and Special Group meetings with Dulles' cable to the Congo, Bissell's representation to Gottlieb about "highest authority", and the delivery of poison to the Congo can be read to support an inference that the President and the Special Group urged the assassination of Lumumba.

Robert Johnson's testimony that he understood the President to have ordered Lumumba's assassination at an NSC meeting does, as he said, offer a "clue" about Presidential authorization which, however, should be read in light of the uncertain record of the meetings Johnson attended and the contrary testimony of others in attendance at the meetings, including the President's national security advisors. The fact that both the Chief of Station and Gottlieb were under the impression that there was Presidential authorization for the assassination of Lumumba is not in itself direct evidence of such authorization because this impression was derived solely from Gottlieb's meetings with Bissell and Tweedy. Neither Gottlieb nor the Chief of Station had first-hand knowledge of Allen Dulles' statements about Presidential authorization. Richard Bissell assumed that such authorization had been conveyed to him by Dulles, but Bissell had no specific recollection of any event when this occurred.

The evidence leads us to conclude that DDP Bissell and DCI Dulles knew about and authorized the plot to assassinate Lumumba. However, we are unable to make a finding that President Eisenhower intentionally authorized an assassination effort against Lumumba because of the lack of absolute certainty in the evidence.

First, it assumes that Dulles himself knew of the plots, a matter which is not certain. Second, it assumes that Dulles went privately to the two Presidents--a course of action which Helms, who had far more covert action experience than Bissell, testified was precisely what the doctrine of plausible denial forbade CIA officials from doing. Third, it necessarily assumes that the Presidents would understand from a "circumlocutious" description that assassination was being discussed.

The chain of assumptions is far too speculative for the Committee to make findings inplicating Presidents who are not able to speak for themselves. Moreover, it is inconsistent with Bissell's other testimony that "formal and explicit" approval would be required for assassination,* and contrary to the testimony of all the Presidential advisors, the men closest to both Eisenhower and Kennedy.

---

* If the evidence concerning President Eisenhower's order to assassinate Lumumba is correct, it should be weighed against Bissell's testimony concerning circumlocutious briefings of the Presidents in the Castro case. First, the Lumumba case would imply that President Eisenhower and Dulles did discuss such matters bluntly and not circumlocutiously. Second, the Lumumba example indicates that the President would discuss such matters openly in an appropriate forum, and would not need to be approached privately. Third, it can be inferred from Bissell's testimony in the Castro case that if President Eisenhower had told Dulles that he approved of the plot, Dulles would not have told anyone else of that fact. Yet Gottlieb's testimony in the Lumumba case states that he had been told of Presidential authorization for assassination by Bissell, who in turn assumed he was told by Dulles.

MEMORANDUM FOR: SA/DDO (Mr. John H. Waller)

SUBJECT: JMWAVE Contacts with State, County and Local Police Organizations and Individuals, 1960-1973

REFERENCE: Mr. Waller's Memorandum to DC/LAD dated 19 August 1975

The following is a list from the Latin America Division of contacts between Station JMWAVE and state, county and local police organizations and individuals in the Miami area between 1960-1973:

1. State

a. The Department of Public Safety provided the Station with blank Florida drivers licenses when needed for operational purposes by Station officers. These licenses, which were never used as licenses to drive a vehicle, were filled in with aliases and utilized primarily by Station officers as a means of establishing identification under an assumed name with informants such as Cuban exiles living in the Miami area. The Station's point of contact (1962-1966) was a Colonel H. N. Kirkman, Director of Public Safety.

b. The Florida Highway Patrol, which is part of the Department of Public Safety, provided the Station with courtesy cards to facilitate their Agency work which requested Florida highway patrolmen to render assistance to the bearer of the cards. The Station also had access to the Highway Patrol's communication system that could be used in an emergency to establish contact with our officers in various parts of the State of Florida when needed. Major Lee Simmons, Inspector, Florida Highway Patrol, was the Station's point of contact at the time, 1962-1966. 24

c. The Commissioner of Motor Vehicles in Tallahassee, Florida, furnished the Station with "blocked" automobile license plates for use on Station vehicles. These plates protected Station personnel and installations, since the records for the plates were withdrawn from the issuing offices. Any inquiries made by outsiders [illegible]

2. County

a. The Criminal Intelligence Bureau of the Dade County Sheriff's Department provided the Station with access to other law enforcement agencies at state, county and local levels anywhere in the United States for the purpose of keeping track of Cuban exile movements. [redacted] ccess to these reports was of particular value when Station fficers, on occasion when driving with alias documentation nd involved in an automobile accident, had identified themselves in alias because of the presence of agent personnel [redacted] e vehicle. The Criminal Intelligence Bureau also provide [redacted] e Station with access to Cuban exile [redacted] At the time (1962-1966) a Lieutenant [redacted] was in charge of the Criminal Intelligence Bureau. 06

b. The Broward County Sheriff's Office provided the Station with identification of owners of automobiles and boats registered by Cuban exiles and other foreigners within the county. No names were recorded as the Station's point of contact in Broward County.

c. The Collier County Sheriff's Office provided information on berthing sites in Naples, Florida. This information was of security value as the Station maintained a major operational berthing site in Naples, and it was necessary to have advance information on over-the-road shipments and logistic movements in the area. [redacted] 06,24 1962-1966.

d. The Monroe County Sheriff's Office provided berthing site information south of Miami down to the Florida Keys. This information was of interest to keep track of Cuban exile boat movements into the Caribbean. [redacted] ct, 1962-1966. 06,24

5. Memo from Chase to Bundy, 4 December 1963.

Plans for a meeting regarding Cuban policy. John Crimmins will present several options for discussion including unleashing of Cuban exiles and the intensification of the covert program.

6. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 2 December 1963.

This memo is mainly important because it reveals who in the Administration was dealing with Cuban policy. The list of people to attend the meeting on Cuba held this day included: Lyndon B. Johnson, Rusk, Ed Martin, McNamara, McCone, Helms or Des Fitzgerald, Don Wilson, Bundy, and Chase.

7. Memo, Bundy to Lyndon B. Johnson, 12 December 1963.

For a press conference, Bundy recommends the following language regarding Cuba: "...say...that you expect to take every available means to stop and turn back the spread of Communism in this hemisphere."

8. CIA Summary of Costs for Cuban Operations, FY 1960-1964, dated 15 December 1963.

This table reveals that the CIA spent $106,155,774 on Cuban Operations, almost 50 percent of which was spent on paramilitary action ($47,815,122). The total covert action budget (psychological and paramilitary warfare) was approximately $81,000,000 in this four-year period.

NSC defers to CIA

9. Chase minutes on meeting with Lyndon B. Johnson, 27 December 1963.

The meeting appears to be the first major briefing for the new President on Cuba. Desmond Fitzgerald did most of the briefing, which included a detailed description of CIA assets in Cuba, proposed sabotage plans, and attempts by the CIA to stimulate an internal coup which would dislodge Castro. The CIA was aiding two exile groups in particular: one led by Manuel Artime, the other by Manolo Ray. Bundy recommends that Lyndon B. Johnso[illegible]ake "a more vigorous line /toward Cuba/ than we have in the past."

10. Memo, Bundy to L[illegible]on B. Johnson, 9 January 1964.

Bundy recommends a Cabinet-level review of the whole principle of covert sabotage against Cuba. He notes that Rusk and McNamara do not support the program of sabotage, while 'McCone and the CIA are for it, and so are most of the middle-level officers dealings with the Castro problem." Bundy concludes: "...in your position, I would stop sabotage attacks on the ground that they are illegal, ineffective, and damaging to our broader policy."

action up to or including invasion."

18. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 21 April 1964.

Notes that Alexis Johnson is in charge of contingency planning for a coup in Cuba.

19. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 14 May 1964.

This memo suggests that a primary goal of the Johnson Administration was "to keep the lid on Cuba" until after the November Presidential elections. Thus, the continued exile raids were viewed negatively since they increased the noise level. The memo makes it clear that the exile raids were becoming completely beyond U.S. control despite CIA financial support to the groups.

20. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 2 June 1964.

Chase notes that Castro has executed three anti-Castro Cubans and jailed two others as CIA agents. CIA admits having a connection with the executed Cubans "but that it is completely deniable."

21. Memo, Helms, DDP, to DCI, 10 June 1964. Subject: "Plans of Cuban Exiles to Assassinate Selected Cuban Government Leaders"

The CIA was made aware of certain plans to kill Castro. The Agency told the sources, according to Helms, that "the United States Government would not, under any circumstances, condone the planned actions." Apparently on 2 March 1964 a wealthy Cuban exile was approached with a Cosa Nostra offer to assassinate Castro for $150,000. The wealthy exile turned down the offer. Similar offers were make to other Cuban exiles in early March. A leading figure in the negotiations was Byron Cameron, a shipping-businessmen from Ft. Lauderdale. An agreement was finally made to pay the Cameron group $100,000 for killing Castro, plus $2,500 for expenses. Julio Lobo Olavarria, a wealthy Cuban exile in New York was to pay much of the money, and did pay the $2,500 on 25 April. Though Cameron's group remained anonymous, it was clear the Mafia was involved. Cameron revealed that his contact was a police officer in the St. Louis (Mo.) Vice Squad.

22. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 15 June 1964. Subject: "Assassination of Castro."

Referring to the above memo from DDP to DCI, Chase notes that John Crimmins feels the matter should be discussed at a Special Group meeting.

"John's own inclination is that the U.S. Government cannot knowingly permit any criminal American involvement in this sort of thing, " notes Chase, "and should go all out to stop the plot." In marginal notations, Bundy agrees with John and with the need to forward the matter to the Special Group.

23. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 16 June 1964, with attachment (Des FitzGerald's "A Reappraisal of Autonomous Operations")

FitzGerald makes a defense of the autonomous operations. Tom Mann and Chase disapprove of the operations, though for different reasons.

24. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 18 June 1964.

Chase warns that further U.S. support of the autonomous groups is more likely to lead to a U-2 shootdown and a Caribbean crisis than the overthrow of the Castro regime. Chase continues to be worried about noice levels and the November election. This memo is very much like his 14 May memo (see Item 19).

25. Memo for the Record, Peter Jessup, 22 June 1964.

In a reference to Helm's memo on assassination (see Item 21), it was pointed out in a 303 Committee meeting of 18 June that "these reports, in effect, put the United States Government on notice that failure to take preventive action could be construed as condonation. " The AG said Justice would look into the matter.

26. Memo, McCone to Bundy, 19 August 1964.

McCone summarizes the FBI investigation of Cuban exile plots against Castro as outlined in Helm's memo of 19 June (See Item 21). The Bureau interviewed many people allegedly involved, most of whom denied the existence of such a plan (The Bureau did not interview Cameron, since he was out of the country). The most interesting finding was that Lobo had in fact discussed the matter with CIA.

27. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 10 November 1964.

The election past, Chase et al. agreed that "we can usefully do some basic review work on Cuba." FitzGerald pushes for re-institution of CIA-directed covert program.

28. Memo, R.C. Bowman to Bundy, 12 November 1964, with JCS attachment dated 30 October 1964. Subject: SQUARE DANCE.

A contemptable proposal intiated by the Army to use germ warfare against Cuban sugar and livestock. Bowman and Bundy agree that the White House should "remain aloof from formal consideration of 'Square Dance' at this stage." I believe this plan for covert action is even more shocking and unacceptable than plans for assassination.

29. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 12 November 1964, and attachment (apparently a Bundy memo for a meeting with LBJ on 7 April 1964).

The Bundy memo suggests that LBJ approved various options "short of war to get rid of the Castro regime," including the possible contamination of sensitive Cuban imports (not food). The Chase memo indicates that a Fitzgerald operation was underway in November 1964 to ship contaminating elements into Cuba.

30. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 30 December 1964.

The Artime group is out of control, though State, Defense and CIA (as well as Bundy) all agree that it would be unwise to try to interfere with him at this stage.

31. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 5 January 1965.

Chase reports a plan told to Crimmins and the CIA about an Artime plot to stage a "palace coup" during which Castro and other top leaders would be "neutralized." D-Day was to be March 13. This matter was to be discussed at an upcoming Special Group meeting on whether or not "to cut off Artime's water." Chase notes: "CIA at this point is loath to make a hard evaluation of the Artime/Cubela plot."

32. Memo to 303 Committee, unsigned, 18 January 1965, presumably a CIA document.

Discusses the virtues of continuing Underwater Demolition Teams against ships in Cuban harbors. If such activities are disallowed, the CIA should be authorized to reduce its commitment in the paramilitary field.

33. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 8 February 1965.

This memo indicates that not even Artime had his group in control. The memo also discusses CIA covert activities in British Guiana, such as penetrating the PPP and proping up the democratic trade unionism.

34. Memo, Murat Wil[illegible] (INR) to Peter Jessup, White House staff, 23 February 1965.

Recommends immediate termination of Artime support.

35. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 2 March 1965

Discussion of who is for maintaining a covert capability against Cuba (presently on the shelf) and who is opposed. Chase guessed that CIA would be opposed ("fish or cut bait"); State would not. Rusk's general attitude toward Cuba at this time was to keep the temperature low while sorting out the Vietnam problem.

36. Memo, Chase to Bundy, 4 March 1965.

Chase recommends phasing out support to Artime. The CIA is considering diluting pesticides sent to Cuba; this is similar to the kinds of tactics mentioned in Items 28 and 29 above and are a manifestation of the moral bankruptcy of U.S. policy. Also some talk here of backing a new exile group, RECE, though not much enthusiasm for the idea from anyone apparently. Oddly, CIA wishes to drop its paramilitary capability, while DoD and State want the capability maintained.

37. Memo, Grant Hilliker (State) to Bundy, 18 June 1965.

This is a summary of U.S. policy toward Cuba. The ultimate objective is still to replace the Castro regime. The memo notes that "the paramilitary program involving CIA-controlled actions was set aside even before it really started."

38. Memo, Bundy to LBJ, 26 June 1965.

Adm. Raborn recommends reactivation of a paramilitary effort against Cuba. Bundy, Tommy Thompson, Rusk, McNamara, and Cy Vance are against this chiefly because of the concomitant international noise level. "Most of us," Bundy writes, "do not recommend visible violent actions against Cuba." Raborn's recommendations said nothing about assassination.

39. Memo, Rostow to LBJ, 30 May 1966.

Rostow notifies the President that a CIA exfiltration mission ran into ambush and the agents were captured. The President could expect "the noise level of Castro's charges of 'threatened Yankee aggression' may go up."

40. Memo, Karamessines, DDP, to Rostow, 7 August 1967.

This memo is important because it lists the names of two or three Cubans who worked on CIA missions. If they are in the U.S., it may be worthwhile talking to them about their activities.

41. Memo, W.G. Bowd[illegible]-Rostow, 18 December 1967.

The new CIA emph[illegible] is on developing contacts within Castro's inner circle. Dave Phillips was to be in charge of the new CIA Cuba program. Bowdler advises that "we be alert to indications that Castro is looking for accommodation or his disillusioned lieutenants want to know where we stand if they move to dump him."

DATE: July 6, 1975

This will confirm our conversation concerning obtaining proof with respect to the alleged peace talks with Castro in October and November 1963. Box 45 "Cuba-William Attwood," reviewed by Susan Pitts in the Kennedy Library, is said to contain "correspondence concerning arrangements for negotiations for U.S./Castro talks, 10-11/63." We have also heard stories about French journalist Jean Daniel being an emissary from Kennedy to Castro at that time. As you know, during October and November assassination devices were being prepared and were offered to AMLASH.

You ought to at least see from the documents and from taking some single-Senator testimony from Attwood whether there was a genuine effort to make peace; if so, was that communicated to the Agency? Was the AMLASH assassination effort consistent?

In the telephone conversation I had with Arthur Schlesinger he said he thought Bill Attwood was more important than Daniel. Schlesinger will be here in Washington on July 9 and 10 and plans to come see us at 9:00 a.m. on July 10.

Would you take care of all of the above.

SUBJECT: List of Documents Referred to in Special Group Minutes 1960-1964 (Less 1962) which the Committee May Wish to Obtain

1. The document reflecting a project discussed at the Special Group meeting on February 17, 1960, with respect to "a project providing for covert spotting and assessment of potential agents for eventual sabotage of sugar mills." (Source: Special Group Minutes dated February 17, 1960)

2. Paper entitled "General Covert Action Plan for Cuba" which was read at the Special Group meeting on March 14, 1960. (Source: Special Group Minutes dated March 15, 1960, para. 1. Note that in para. 12 it is stated "Mr. Gray said he would like to submit later this week to his associate the paper entitled 'General Covert Action Plan for Cuba' but modified on the basis of this morning's discussion. Mr. Dulles promised a revised paper this week.")

3. Any paper which relates to the briefing by Mr. Dulles "on certain confidential aspects of the situation in the Dominican Republic" to the Special Group meeting on March 30, 1960. (Source: Minutes of Special Group meeting March 30, 1960. Note the Minutes do not indicate the nature of this briefing.)

4. Special Group Minutes dated October 27, 1960, state: "The paper outlining a proposal to aid Col. Mobutu in working toward the eventual formation of a moderate government was read by the Group." The Minutes indicate that "the Group approved the proposal." (Source: Minutes of Special Group meeting dated October 27, 1960.)

5. Any backup papers or documents relating to a reference in the minutes of the Special Group meeting on November 3, 1960, where it is stated: "Mr. Merchant asked whether any real planning has been done for taking direct, positive action against Fidel, Raul, and Che Guevara."

6. The Minutes of November 10, 1960, Special Group meeting state: "Mr. Bissell mentioned briefly that we are making certain contingency plans for the Congo against the possibility of a pro-Soviet Lumumba government...."

7. The document containing the plan which was presented to the Special Group meeting on December 29, 1960, by Mr. Bissell. The Minutes for that meeting state: "Mr. Bissell gave the broad outlines of a two-pronged plan for proceeding with certain limited covert activities directed against the Trujillo regime...he also emphasized that the proposed actions would not of themselves bring about the desired result in the near future, lacking some decisive stroke against Trujillo himself."

8. Any paper or document used by Mr. Dulles and Mr. Bissell in the briefing they gave to new members of the Special Group at the meeting on 14 February 1961. The Minutes state: "Mr. Dulles, assisted by Mr. Bissell, then summarized for the benefit of the new members of the Special Group the specific actions taken by the predecessor group during the past year, and also a list of significant projects which antedate the beginning of 1960 and which it is planned to continue."

9. The memorandum which was requested by Mr. Bundy at the Special Group meeting on February 14, 1961. The minutes state: "Mr. Bundy asked that a memorandum be prepared for higher authority on the subject of what plans can be made for a successor government to Trujillo."

10. The reports referred to by the DCI at the Special Group meeting on May 4, 1961. The Minutes state: "The DCI referred to recent reports of a new anti-Trujillo plot."

11. The "Cuba Paper" mentioned in the Special Group Minutes of May 4, 1961. The Minutes state: "Mr. Bundy said that this point (anti-Trujillo plot planning) is covered in the Cuba Paper which will be discussed at a high level in the very near future."

12. Any Action Memoranda or other documents which would clarify the action taken by the Special Group at the meeting on May 18, 1961. At that meeting, Gen. Cabal noted that internal dissidents in the Dominican Republic were pressing for the release to them of certain small arms, "now in U.S. hands in the Dominican Republic. He inquired whether the feeling of the group remained that these arms should not be passed. The members showed no inclination to take a contrary position at this time." (It is not clear whether a contrary position signified contrary to the desire of the internal dissidents or contrary to Gen. Cabal's suggestion that these arms not be passed.) (Source: Special Group Minutes 18 May 1961,02769)

13. A paper on Covert Programs for Cuba was presented by the DCI at the July 20, 1961, Special Group meeting. The paper appeared to be a basic position paper: Its para. 2a read: "The basic objective is to provide support to a U.S. program to develop opposition to Castro and to help bring about a regime acceptable to the U.S." (Source: Minutes dated July 21, 1961, 02778)

14. On July 27, 1961, the Special Group discussed a CIA paper titled: "Internal Action Operations Against Cuba" dated July 25, 1961. The Group discussed its relevance to the "basic paper discussed last week." (Source: Special Group Minutes July 27, 1961, 02781)

15. On August 3, 1961, the Special Group reviewed "a condensed set of recommendations summing up the proposed Cuban program." This paper was approved for consideration by higher authority. (Source: Special Group Minutes August 3, 1961, 02782)

16. On October 6, 1961, Mr. Parrott told the Special Group that there was in preparation "a contingency plan in connection with the possible removal of Castro from the Cuban scene." (We should obtain this plan as it may relate to an assassination plot.) (Source: Special Group Minutes October 6, 1961, 02783)

17. On December 8, 1961, Gen. Lansdale presented "the outline of a program designed to overthrow the Castro government." (Source: Special Group Minutes December 8, 1961, 02795)

18. The March 26 Special Group Minutes referred to a "Shipping Sabotage Paper of 19 March. The proposal reflected in the paper was remanded for Group consideration by the Cottrell Committee." (Source: Special Group Minutes March 26, 1963, 02839)

19. On April 4, 1963, the Special Group approved three papers which were subsequently approved by "higher authority" on April 9. The papers were titled "Sabotage of Shipping," "Russian Language Broadcasts," and "Propaganda Inciting Cubans within Cuba to Attack Soviet Troops." (Source: Special Group Minutes April 4, 1963, 02844 and Memo for Members of the Special Group April 9, 1963, 02845)

20. The Minutes of April 11, 1963, Special Group meeting referred to "Three papers being considered at today's meeting." One of these papers may deal with sabotage in Cuba as there was a "lengthy discussion" of the entire question of sabotage at the meeting. Also, the Minutes state: "The comments from the Coordinator of Cuban Affairs dated 11 April on the three papers being considered at today's meeting (were requested by the group to) be withdrawn and destroyed for security reasons." Note: We should perhaps make a request for such comments, to determine whether they were in fact destroyed. (Source: Minutes dated 11 April 1963, 02846)

21. The Minutes of 18 April 1963 indicate the Special Group "turned to discussion of the papers from the Coordinator of Cuban Affairs dated April 16, 17, and 18." There is no indication of the subject matter of these papers. The Minutes state that it was agreed these papers should be "staffed and sharpened up for presentation at next week's meeting." Note that the Minutes indicate the title of the paper dated April 17, as "Maximum Covert Action Program" which consists basically of "sabotage and harrassment, plus support to Cuban exile groups and individuals who may be responsive to our advice but not certainly to our command." Note further that the Minutes state Mr. Bundy and McCone expressed doubts as to whether "we are in a position to decide major problems of this type (presumably reflected in the three papers) until we have a clearer picture of what the overall policy toward Cuba is likely to be...." Note also that Mr. Bundy stated he was not sure whether "it would be possible to embark on the activities proposed in the Coordinator's papers, without a drastic change in U.S. policy." (Source: Minutes dated 18 April 1963, 02848-49)

22. A memorandum for the Special Group dated April 26, 1963, (02853) which discusses a paper on "new covert policy and programs toward Cuba" states that decisions have been made regarding certain of the item numbers in that paper.

23. The Minutes of the Special Group meeting on April 25 (02855) refer to a paper on a "proposed new policy and program toward Cuba."

24. A memorandum for the Special Group dated June 19, 1963, subject: "Sabotage Program, Cuba," discusses a meeting with higher authority on that subject at which a "proposed program was approved dealing with 'external sabotage' directed at four major segments of the Cuban economy: (1) electric power; (2) petroleum refineries and storage facilities; (3) railroad and highway transportation; and (4) production and manufacturing." (Source: Memorandum June 19, 1963, 02871)

25. The Minutes of Special Group meeting on 18 July 1963 state that higher authority had no objection to a program recommending a new "political action" plan for Haiti. Col. King told the Special Group that "everyone concerned with the project agrees that Duvalier must be removed in some manner or other." King went on to say that the existing plan is unworkable and thus it is "best to switch to a different kind of operation. This would include training of exiles in cross-border operations with a long-range objective of establishing a clandestine organization and building an effective opposition in Haiti." (Source: Minutes 18 July 1963, 02878)

26. Minutes of Special Group meeting 15 August 1963 (02880) indicate the Special Group approved a "Operational Proposal"dated 12 August 1963, relating to "a non-violent program to inhibit free world and neutral trade with Cuba."

27. The Minutes of Special Group meeting on August 29, 1963 (02883) state the Group considered a paper from the Coordinator of Cuban Affairs dated August 12, 1963, titled "Support of Autonomous Anti-Castro Groups."

28. The Minutes of the Special Group meeting on 5 September 1963 refer to a paper from the Coordinator of Cuban Affairs dated August 13 on the "subject of Commandos L." Mr. Fitzgerald referred to the fact that "it would be feasible to take off from a point in the northern Bahamas, rather than from one of the keys very near Cuba." Note that the August 29 Minutes (02883) refer to the project for support of Commandos L as "useful, but not essential" and that the "economic damage which this group might inflict would be comparatively minor" but there might be "some psychological advantages...and such operations would serve to keep the Cuban security forces busy." Note further that the Minutes of October 3, 1963, state that higher authority (President Kennedy) had reviewed the proposed Commandos L operation and felt it might be "a worthwhile mission to undertake" provided certain conditions were met. The Special Group on August 3 agreed to review the project once more if it still appears desirable in light of the comments at that meeting and by higher authority. Also note that the Minutes of October 24, 1963 (02898) state that "CIA is dropping its earlier proposal to support Commandos L, due to the crackdown on exile raids by various U.S. and British Government agencies."

29. The Minutes of November 12, 1963 (02905-08) indicate Mr. Fitzgerald reported on Cuban operations under six main headings. Given the length of this report, there may have been some formal paper from which Fitzgerald spoke, although the minutes do not refer to any particular piece of paper.

30. A number of particular "operations" designated by number and purpose are mentioned in the minutes of Special Group meetings on 14 November, 5 December, 6 December, 19 December, 20 December, 1963 and January 2 and January 9, 1964. If desired, we might request the backup papers for these operations. Typical operations were described as "the exfiltration of two members of an existing resistance net," the"infiltration of a five-man team for the purpose of sabotaging a railway bridge."

31. The Minutes of a Special Group meeting on February 13, 1964, state the Special Group discuss "a specific Department of Defense paper" which dealt with, among others, the following topics: "Harrassment of Free World Shipping to Cuba," "Covert Economic Activities," "Encouraging Dissidents Among Factions," "Actions Against Cuban Subversion in Latin America." Source: Minutes dated 14 February 1964 (02919)

32. The Minutes of April 3, 1964 (02924) refer to a paper entitled "Status of Sabotage and Raiding Capability Against Cuba." The Minutes also state that "three separate papers" were submitted to all members of the Group and the Group concluded to approve five infiltration/exfiltration operations and five caching operations, but table the five sabotage proposals.

33. A memorandum for Mr. Bundy dated 18 June 1964 (02931) refers to a "Helms Memo to DCI entitled Plans of Cuban Exiles to Assassinate Selected Cuban Leaders, June 10, 1964."

34. The Minutes of a meeting on June 18, 1964, (02932) state that: "A paper was discussed on alleged plans which involved the underworld to assassinate certain Cuban leaders." No other identification of this paper is given, it may refer to the Helms memo immediately above.

35. The Minutes of July 9, 1964, (02937) indicate that Mr. Bundy read a draft NSAM "dealing with the establishment of a new working group to examine the problem of Cuba."

36. A memorandum by John McCone to McGeorge Bundy dated August 19, 1965, summarizes seven reports regarding the status of an FBI investigation re "Plans by Cuban Exiles to Assassinate Cuban Government Leaders." The reports apparently were of interviews by FBI agents of various individuals allegedly involved in the plans. (Source: 02943-44)

37. A memo dated September 3, 1964, refers to a paper titled "Request by Revolutionary Student Directorate for Permission to Move Personnel to the Dominican Republic for Purpose of Engaging in Hit and Run Activities Against Cuba." (Source: Memo for the Record, 02947)

38. A memo for the record dated 11 September 1964 (02948) states that "basic reports of the Cuban Study Group established by NSAM 311 of 10 July 1964 were nearing their final stages and that certain gaps were being closed between the SNIE findings and those of the Critical Collection Committee."

TOP SECRET FILE:

This morning Joe DiGenova and I interviewed Bruce Cheever at the Carroll Arms. We focused on Cheever's tenure as deputy director of Task Force W.

Background:

1938-43	Marine Corps
1943-44	OSS Parachute School
1944-46	Marine Corps
1950-53	Office Police Coordination; headed Plans Section for Western European Division
1953-56	[redacted] 14-3
1956-60	Deputy Chief, European Division
1960-3/62	Headquarters, U. S. European Command (U. S. representative)
3/62-65	Deputy Director: Task Force W
1965-71	[redacted] 12-12
1971	Retired from Agency
3/64-2/65	Deputy Chief, Special Operations Branch (developing paramilitary capabilities for Agency)

Apparently selected for Task Force W because of extensive paramilitary background. Not sure whether slotted by Harvey or Helms.

Prior to his Task Force W assignment, Harvey was known to Cheever by reputation only. He described Harvey as one of the finest operatives the Agency ever had, citing Harvey's Berlin tunnel.

Cheever understood that Task Force W was Mongoose's instrument to get rid of the Castro regime; that the Cuban operations had White House backing; and that the Agency had been given an operational carte blanche, with the caveat that each operation had to receive explicit SGA approval prior to getting off the drawing board.

Cheever told us: "You don't pull in fast-rising men like [Ted] Schakley unless you have solid backing." Cheever believes that Lansdale was RFK's representative and that Task Force W would not suggest aggressive covert action to the SGA without Lansdale's approval.

Cheever confirmed what we knew about Harvey. Although Cheever worked closely with Harvey, he told us that Harvey was a loner and most surely would not inform him of operations unless he had a "must need to know". In Cheever's opinion, Harvey was one of the great believers in compartmentalization; Cheever "complained that Harvey turned him into his staff man" (as compared to an operational extension). Cheever also told us that Harvey was a two martini man at lunch with thyroid problems; this often "led to problems for Harvey at early afternoon meetings".

Cheever believes he attended at least ten SGA meetings. However, he does not recall RFK, only recalls briefing Bundy. (Maybe Cheever attended other than SGA meetings -- the minutes do not reflect his attendance.)

Cheever met weekly with designees of the SGA principals in Lansdale's office (Messrs. Califano, Haig, Hurwitch, Craig, and Johnson). Cheever would brief these designees on proposed operational plans; discussion of the details would ensue. Subsequent to the staff meetings, the principals would meet and decide whether or not the particular plan would be approved. Cheever did state that the Group often rejected proposals. In one instance, Max Taylor vetoed the maritime infiltration of a small team. Taylor felt that the chances of success were small and attributability great. (Cheever agreed with Taylor -- "but it was one of Lansdale's brain childs.")

Cheever told us that "around the Task Force W shop it was known that the Kennedys wanted to get rid of the Castro regime." In order to get this done, "the Kennedys built a fire under the Agency's tail and installed Lansdale as Chief of Operations". According to Cheever, Lansdale and the SGA were "geared to keeping the Kennedys informed as to what was happening".

However, after the Cuban missile crisis, Cuban operations were not pursued with the same sense of urgency.

FILE:

This morning, Joe and I met with Paul David ("P.D.") at the Carroll Arms for approximately two hours. George Clarke from the CIA's General Counsel's staff was present for the last fifteen minutes of the interview.

Background:

1948-51 - Assistant to [redacted] - [redacted]
1951-54 - Chief Rumanian Desk
1954-58 - Chief of Operations Against Communist Areas (Eastern Bloc) - (Operations from 15-16 [redacted] - stationed in [redacted]

1969-73 - Chief of Operational Services - Chief of Staff in DDP. (Director Clandestine Services)
1973 - Chief Career Management Personnel
1973-74 - Chief Plans & Programs for Directorate

Interview Summary:

Bissell "out of the blue" asked P.D. to read and comment upon Zoogby's Cuban operations paper. P.D. told Bissell that the paper/proposals "stunk" (. . . "much like another Bay of Pigs"). Apparently, Helms also read and liked P.D.'s comments. After Bissell "left", Helms requested that P.D. come on board as his staff assistant.

P.D. stressed that he was not in the operational line of command -- "I provided an interface for intelligence information." A typical day in P.D.'s life:

-- Screening cable traffic (7 - 9 a.m.). Primarily cables relating to positive intelligence, to prepare Helms for his daily 9 a.m. hour-long meeting with DCI McCone.

-- Prepared a daily briefing for the White House on Cuban intelligence.

-- Preparing review of books such as "The Invisible Government" and damage reports (i.e., reports setting forth what sensitive information exposed by book).

P.D. stressed that he was "out of touch with the day-to-day operations of Task Force W". However, he believes that Harvey kept Helms fully briefed.

Harvey, in P.D.'s own words, was "not an ordinary man", . . . "egocentric", "bombastic", "one of the strongest proponents of compartmentalization and need to know". In addition, Harvey had a law degree and a successful FBI stint prior to joining the Agency.

Harvey had a thyroid problem. As one of the "CIA's most interesting characters", Harvey was often talked about; P.D. has difficulty separating personal experience from rumors. Describing Harvey as a "four martini man at lunch" . . . which, coupled with Harvey's thyroid medicine, caused Harvey to be sleepy, etc., after lunch. In fact, P.D. told us that this was the "last straw" in McCone's eyes; i.e., apparently when McCone called Harvey in to "discuss" the Kennedys' complaints about Harvey's utterings, it was immediately after lunch and Harvey either fell asleep or failed to pay attention. ("McCone did not have an audience.") P.D. added that there was general "bad chemistry" between McCone and Harvey.

P.D. noted Harvey's intense loyalty to "his people" (including Helms and [redacted]).03 However, P.D. is sure that even with these people, Harvey was likely to have been extremely close-mouthed.

Book V, p. 79 In mid-1965 the CIA interrogated Tepedino, New York jeweler who had been involved with the AMLASH operation from the beginning. The report concluded that the subject was deceptive during the interrogation and withheld pertinent information in one or more relevant areas. Tepedino lied in response to questions dealing with AMLASH's and his ties to Cuban intelligence. Tepedino stated that AMLASH had no plan to overthrow Castro. Tepedino stated AMLASH had strong connections with Cuban intelligence and was probably cooperating with it in various ways. Although AMLASH never mentioned these connections to his CIA case officers; Teledino stated that AMLASH had mentioned them to him and almost everyone else he had met.

Book V, p. 25

Helms directed Karamessinis and Angleton to fully cooperate with the desk officer, John Whitten, charged with investigating the assassination. On November 24, Mexico City cabled the names of known contacts of Soviet personnel in Mexico City and AMLASH's name (Rolando Cubela) was included on that list. Nonetheless neither Fitzgerald, Helms, Tom K or Angleton advised the desk officer of significance of this name.

OCCURRENCE: Helms notes that McCone briefed the panel of the President's foreign intelligence advisory board on political action projects. He pointed out that"each projec must have his approval to the circulation to the members of the Special Group". For example, reconnasiance overflights are now approved. He noted covert financial support in Peruvian, Greek, Finnish, Italian, and Brazilian elections. Helms "read to the panel a paper on the operation Mongoose which theDirector had used earlier in the day for giving a briefing to the President."

Father Peyton Peter Grace	Dec. 5, 1960	Mongoose ✓ Special Group

OCCURRENCE: The Special Group discussed (1) the possibility of providing sixty thousand dollars from the Cuba budget to sponsor the religious activity of Father Peyton in Cuba; (2) a proposal to survey the possibility of establishing a strike base in Nicaragua; (3) the necessity for the Defense Department to supply 38 military men to CIA. "Mr. Douglas questioned whether the present concept of 600 or 700 Cubans is any longer practicable. He said that it had been his understanding that the current thinking contemplated figures more on the order of 3,000." Mr. Barnes replied that the CIA believes what is required is enough individuals to serve as a rallying point for the anti-Castro elements in Cuba and thus 600 is as useful as 3,000. The CIA justified the request for 38 military men because it now believed it was necessary to train the Cubans in infantry tactics involved in a defense, in addition to the guerrilla warfare training previously contemplated.

OCCURRENCE:

Lansdale briefed the group on numbers of agents in Cuba. Air resupply proposal submitted by CIA "should be deferred pending broader review of the entire situation." Taylor noted if urgent need for air supply proposal could be made to the Special Group Augmented at any time. "Mr. McCone emphasized that no high-level penetrations of the Cuban government have yet been attained." "The Attorney General inquired about the status of popular support for Castro, and also the possibility of a revolt against him." Lansdale replied, "There is no rallying point for active opposition." The AG and Johnson emphasize need to obtain hard intelligence on subversive activities by Castro in the hemisphere. A complete review of MONGOOSE was set toward the end of July. Taylor emphasized need for summaries of results "and a statement of future alternatives open to the U.S. should be developed." Looking into proposal to subsidize Japanese purchases of Dominican sugars so that the Japanese could divert these purchases from Cuba. McCone said that his experts had informed him that from a legal point of view, CIA could use unvouchered funds to support an operation of this kind. He cautioned, OCCURRENCE: Lansdale traces the history of the project from its inception on Nov. 30, 1961 through March 1, 1962. Under the latter date, he notes, "The Chief of Operations /Lansdale/ is to report to the President through the Special Group (NSC 5412 Augmented by the Attorney General and the Chairman, JCS); the Special Group will be responsible for providing policy guidance for approving important operations, and for monitoring progress." (00181) Lansdale also submitted an intelligence plan for basic intelligence collection upon which to base the decision to undertake actions to cause the overthrow of Castro. The plan itself at pages 00183 through 00187, included establishing intelligence agents inside Cuba; collecting intelligence from Cubans inside the United States; counterfeiting ration cards and currency inside of Cuba; geographical surveys of air fields, military installations, communications centers; attempts to place trained agents inside the government organizations or to defect officials "in place"; [redacted]. OCCURRENCE: Memo for Richard Helms from Gen. Lansdale concerning NSA cover. The memo alludes to a conversation on the previous day, Jan. 31, 1962, about NSA cover for the Cuba Project. It indicates that Cuba cover is top priority. It indicated that this was not possibly known to the members of the United States Intelligence Board. The problem seemed to be to be able to decide how much of NSA (National Security Agency)'s assets were needed to provide cover for the Cuban project.

OCCURRENCE: Helms testified that the aim of the Cuban operations was "to get rid of Castro or the Castro regime in Cuba, lets put it that way, and no limitations were placed on the means. In fact, I never recall having been told by anybody do not do this, do not do that, do not do the other thing." (26) (The above statements refer to Mongoose.) Helms testified that "the pressure was very intense and I remember vividly it was very intense." The pressure led to several "very nutty schemes." (26) Helms testified the pressure built up to the Bay of Pigs and then lay dormant for awhile and intensified again toward the end of 1961 and 1962. The Cuban Missile Crisis itself was the period of greatest intensity. Afterwards interest tapered off, although Helms recalled efforts in 1963 involving "economic warfare" such as turning off oil deliveries and stopping bus deliveries [redacted] (27) meeting of foreign ministers which opened January 22, 1962. The object was to get wide Western Hemisphere support for OAS resolutions condemning Cuba and isolating it from the rest of the hemisphere. "The OAS meeting is to be supported by public demonstrations in Latin America, generated by CIA and a psychological campaign assisted by USIA." The major task of the diplomatic capability was to encourage Latin American leaders to develop independent operations similar to the instant project seeking an internal revolt of the Cuban people against the Communist regime. In the economic warfare area an embargo on Cuban trade was to be considered after the OAS meeting. The CIA was unable to undertake the action to sabotage the sugar harvest which commences about January 15 and upon which Cuba's one-crop economy depended. Sabotage of transport, mills, sugar sacking in cane fields was explored, according to Lansdale's review. Special sabotage support was noted.→

"CIA has initiated action to contaminate POL supplies for Cuba, although visible results (stopage of some Cuban transports) is not expected until mid-1962. CIA is introducing "lubzol," a corrosive additive to Cuban locomotive diesel fuel oil through commercial suppliers in Belgium. A similar project was noted for jet fuel storage tanks in Cuba. Lansdale noted that the CIA had concluded that its realistic role should be to at least create the illusion of a popular movement, to win external support for it, to improve CIA operational capability, and to help create a climate which will permit provocative actions in support of a shift to overaction. Lansdale wanted them to reevaluate to see whether or not they could make a greater effort. An outline of what the 33 tasks are for each of the entities involved then follows in Lansdale's memo. The memorandum notes that the President directed that the Chief of Operations conduct the project through the appropriate organizations and departments of the government. The memorandum notes that six men to form the initial nucleus for work for inside Cuba have been assessed in depth. Fifteen locations have been selected as suitable centers for resistence. It was also noted that in support of State's efforts, CIA has conducted propaganda operations including a number of mass demonstrations in Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Columbia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Guatemala, Mexico, Panama, Peru, Uruguay, and Venezuela.

OCCURRENCE: Helms notes that McCone briefed the panel of the President's foreign intelligence advisory board on political action projects. He pointed out that"each project must have his approval to the circulation to the members of the Special Group". For example, reconnasiance overflights are now approved. He noted covert financial support in Peruvian, Greek, Finnish, Italian, and Brazilian elections. Helms "read to the panel a paper on the operation Mongoose which theDirector had used earlier in the day for giving a briefing to the President."

OCCURRENCE: Lansdale traces the history of the project from its inception on Nov. 30, 1961 through March 1, 1962. Under the latter date, he notes, "The Chief of Operations /Lansdale/is to report to the President through the Special Group (NSC 5412 Augmented by the Attorney General and the Chairman, JCS); the Special Group will be responsible for providing policy guidance for approving important operations, and for monitoring progress." (00181) Lansdale also submitted an intelligence plan for basic intelligence collection upon which to base the decision to undertake actions to cause the overthrow of Castro. The plan itself at pages 00183 through 00187, included establishing intelligence agents inside Cuba; collecting intelligence from Cubans inside the United States; counterfeiting ration cards and currency inside of Cuba; geographical surveys of air fields, military installations, communications centers; attempts to place trained agents inside the government organizations or to defect officials "in place"; and [negotiating for British help in contaminating lubricants and fuels to cripple Cuban transportation. Lansdale noted that the CIA had concluded that its realistic role should be to at least create the illusion of a popular movement, to win external support for it, to improve CIA operational capability, and to help create a climate which will permit provocative actions in support of a shift to overaction. Lansdale wanted them to reevaluate to see whether or not they could make a greater effort. An outline of what the 33 tasks are for each of the entities involved then follows in Lansdale's memo. Hard intelligence coverage of Cuba has been developed. Fifty-nine controlled agents inside of Cuba exist. Not so successful on infiltrating intelligence reporting in resistence cadre teams. OCCURRENCE: Helms states that agency officers have reported plans of Cuban exiles to assassinate selected Cuban government leaders. Agency officers told Cubans that U.S. would not condone the planned actions. Plans included: Cuban exile approach to March 2, 1964 by businessman to discuss a plan which was "still in the embryonic state to assassinate Fidel Castro." Businessman has underworld connections with Cosa Nostra. Latter group has offered to assassinate Castro for $150,000. Proposes to use 5 men. March 3, 1964 meeting in which Byron Cameron says he met an unidentified group which would be willing to assassinate selected Cuban officials for cash. Specifically the Cameron group is interested in assassinating Fidel Castro, Raul Castro, and Ernesto Che Guevera." "Cameron knows that he can indicted for conspiracy

OCCURRENCE:

SGA discussed various possibilities of accomplishing reconnaissance of Cuba, ranging from very low level coverage by tactical aircraft to high performance aircraft and drones. Overflights and peripheral flights were discussed.

It was agreed that the first priority is one high performance mission in the western part of ✓ the island, to be accompanied by all out Elint support. Depending on the results of this, a number of similar searches may be mounted. First mission was later approved by higher authority, but the decision on the second proposition left open.

The entire package was to be discussed at the USIB, and by Chiefs on Wednesday, October 10th.

OCCURRENCE: In discussing the possible methods of accomplishing the mission, Sam Gold suggested that they not resort to firearms, but that if he could be furnished with some type of potent pill that could be placed in Castro's food or drink. Sam indicated that he had a prospective nominee in the person of Juan Orta, a Cuban official, who had been receiving back payments from the gambling interests who still had access to Castro, and was in a financial bind. Cornelius Roosevelt, Chief, TSD was consulted and assigned Dr. Raymond Treichler to develop a pill that had the elements of rapid solubility, high lethal content, and little or no traceability. Six of these items were produced and after being checked out for their effectiveness by Dr. Edward M. Gunn, three pills were ultimately turned over to Sam for the mission. OCCURRENCE: The Special Group discussed (1) [redacted]; (2) a proposal to survey the possibility of establishing a strike base in Nicaragua; (3) the necessity for the Defense Department to supply 38 military men to CIA. "Mr. Douglas questioned whether the present concept of 600 or 700 Cubans is any longer practicable. He said that it had been his understanding that the current thinking contemplated figures more on the order of 3,000." Mr. Barnes replied that the CIA believes what is required is enough individuals to serve as a rallying point for the anti-Castro elements in Cuba and thus 600 is as useful as 3,000. The CIA justified the request for 38 military men because it now believed it was necessary to train the Cubans in infantry tactics involved in a defense, in addition to the guerrilla warfare training previously contemplated.

DR. EDWARD GUNN, Chief, Operations Division, Office of Medical Services, has a notation that on 16 August 1960, he received a box of Cuban cigars to be treated with a lethal material. (21). He understood them to be CASTRO's favorite brand. (21). GUNN's notes show that within the next month he contacted [redacted] of TSD, (Sept. 6, 1960) and gave him the box of cigars (21). [redacted] recalls "that he did contaminate a full box of 50 cigars with Botulinum Toxin, a virulent poison," (21) which would kill the intended victim upon merely putting it in the mouth. [redacted] notes showed delivery of the box on February 13, 1961, although they do not indicate to whom. (22).

Background: In response to the increasing requirements for the operational procurement of foreign code and cipher materials division D in 1960 began spotting of agent assets as a developmental activity. During the same period requirements from NSA became more refined and in many respects more sentative because most agencies are not equipped to conduct this type of operation, and because of the desirability to completely centralize control over this entire effort, it was determined that division d which was the closest touch with NSA on procurement requirements, could best conduct the activity. OCCURRENCE:

The EXECUTIVE ACTION program authorized by BISSELL and run by WILLIAM HARVEY "came to be known as ZRRIFLE. Its principal asset was an agent, QJWIN, who had been recruited earlier by ARNOLD SILVER for use in a special operation in the Congo (the assassination of PATRICE LUMUMBA) to be run by JUSTIN O'DONNELL. (O'DONNELL made a survey of the scene, decided he wanted no part in that assassination attempt, and asked to be released -- which BISSELL granted.)" (38)

NOTE: In the copy of the I.G. REPORT provided to the Committee, which was, according to EARMAN's cover memorandum the ribbon copy, which was the only text of the report in existence, the phrase in the above paragraph "(the assassination of PATRICE LUMUMBA)" was crossed out. S. BRECKENRIDGE indicated to the Committee that this phrase was crossed out by RICHARD HELMS when he read the report. Why?

OCCURRENCE: With regard to paragraph 2 of Lansdale's memorandum to SGA dated 14 Nov. 1962 Harvey states: "The statement that Operation Mongoose had had no information on this operation since early October was patently false. Specific references made to the pen ultimate paragraph and Lansdale's memorandum concerning a report for the CIA which he used as a basis for memorandum dated 31 Oct. 1962 to Oswald Kirkpatrick. This refers to a telephonic conversation on the evening of 30 Oct. 1962 between Lansdale and Cheever which is referred specifically in paragraph 2 on pages 7 and 8 of my reference memorandu. I have discussed this matter in detail with Cheever and clearly recollects that his conversation with Lansdale on that date took place as reflected in my reference memorandum. During this conversation there was no discussion of previous operations except a brief discussion of the COBRA and [redacted] teams and Lansdale did not ask, according to Cheever's recollection, any specific questions concerning assets inside or prior operations which would logically have led to the discussions at the time of the Matahambre operation."

OCCURRENCE:

Due to reports of popular unrest, political strife, and economic disruptions inside Cuba, it was suggested that the Special Group Augmented consider the value of having an SNIE on Cuba made in the immediate future. [redacted] For operational effectiveness, the CIA has selected a new area in Cuba for its initial radio broadcasts from a submarine for "Voice of Cuba." The Navy states that the new area is feasible and State has concurred in the theme and content of the broadcast. They will take place around the end of the month. No proposals for actions by the Department of State have been submitted since the appointment of State's special representative, Mr. Hurwitch. They are expected on June 22, 1962.

OCCURRENCE:

SGA discussed various possibilities of accomplishing reconnaissance of Cuba, ranging from very low level coverage by tactical aircraft to high performance aircraft and drones. Overflights and peripheral flights were discussed.

It was agreed that the first priority is one high performance mission in the western part of ✓ the island, [redacted]. Depending on the results of this, a number of similar searches may be mounted. First mission was later approved by higher authority, but the decision on the second proposition left open.

The entire package was to be discussed at the USIB, and by Chiefs on Wednesday, October 10th.

In regard to Task #7 of General Lansdale's review this memo notes, "Moreover, the development of a resisitence movement will not remain controllable, so that operational time tables produced during the next four weeks can serve only as guides for a proposed sequence of actions." (00107)

The memorandum notes that six men to form the initial nucleus for work for inside Cuba have been assessed in depth. Fifteen locations have been selected as suitable centers for resistence. It was also noted that in support of State's efforts, CIA has conducted propaganda operations including a number of mass demonstrations [redacted]

OCCURRENCE: In a Presidential meeting on Vietnam with the CIA participants being McCone and Colby the record by Colby reflects that McNamarra pointed out that Lodge has little contact with Diem and has not been out of Saigon. Mr. McCone commented that he believed that we should move cautiusly, that we should talk seriously to Diem and that Lodge should be urged to visit the countryside to obtain a more realistic view of the effects of suspending aid. Mr. McCone also suggested that another approach be made to Nhu to seek his cooperation ina departure. The President asked whether we had carefully studied the detail effects of cuts in aid (as proposed in a paper prepared by Hillsman). It was evident that the effects had not been studies. The President asked DOD and CIA to analyze the Hillsman paper. He also asked that a telegram be sent to Lodge asking him to try to reduce the press leakage from Saigon and to establish some real contact with Diem. Any current plans for aid negotiation should be stalled, and the President should be well informed of any steps taken in this context [redacted]

OCCURRENCE:

In a Presidential meeting on Vietnam on October 29, 1963 with MCCONE, HELMS, AND COLBY in attendance. The following record by HELMS and COLBY shows that: it was suggested that in the Ambassador's absence, HARKINS, TRUEHART, and DAVID SMITH act as a committee to direct a coup operation. MCCONE countered with the view that SMITH should not be involved in such a policy-making function, although he would be in a position to provide technical advise to HARKINS and TRUEHART as well as carry out their instructions in the operations field. The President stated that if the forces in Saigon were not clearly in favor of the coup we should discourage its launching. The Attorney General felt the U.S. was risking too much based on flimsy ev idence. The DCI stated his view that even a successful coup would create a period of interregmum, confusion which might only be solved by a second or third coup.

OCCURRENCE:

Meeting of SGA On Operation MONGOOSE, 6 September 1962. Discussion of LANSDALE's suggestion #32 (agricultural sabotage). GENERAL CARTER emphasized the extreme sensitivity of any such operation and the disasterous results that would flow from something going wrong particularly if there were obvious attribution to the U.S. He went on to say, however, that it would be possible to accomplish this purpose by methods more subtle than those indicated in the paper. He mentioned specifically the possibility of producing crop failures by the introduction of biological agents which would appear to be of natural origin. BUNDY said that he had no worries about any such sabotage which could clearly be made to appear as a result of local Cuban disaffection or a natural disaster, but that we must avoid external activities such as release of chemicals, etc. unless they could be completely covered up. ✓

OCCURRENCE: According to the minutes of the 303 Committee on 7/30/64,"It was agreed that MR. FITZGERALD would contact SAM PAPICH of the FBI in regard to the earlier report of an alleged plot with Mafia overtones to assassinate Castro and which the AG agreed to handle as a matter of law enforcement." (116)" The reference is clearly to a 6/10/64 memorandum information report from the DDP to the Director," (116) which was disseminated to the Spec. Asst. to the Pres. for Natl. Security Affrs.; ASst. Sect. for Inter-American Affairs,Dept. of State; Dir. of Intell. and Research, State Dept.; Director, DIA; The AG; the Director, FBI; DDCI and the DCI. The 6/10/74 report"related a proposal for the assassination of Castro that was made to prominent Cuban exiles. The Mafia appeared to be involved in the scheme." The asking price was $150,000.-JOSE MARIO PEPIN BOSCH, Preso of Bacardi Rum would contribute $50,000. BOSCH approached the Chief of Station, JMWAVE, and suggested the U.S. government also contribute. This was rejected. The record indicates CIA's only involvement was to report information of its existence."

SOURCE: Last record of incident found by IG Rept. is memo from McCone to Bundy, 8/19/64, reporting the results of FBI intvws with the alleged participants."Obviously nothing came of the plot."(117)

Under the latter date, he notes, "The Chief of Operations /Lansdale/is to report to the President through the Special Group (NSC 5412 Augmented by the Attorney General and the Chairman, JCS); the Special Group will be responsible for providing policy guidance for approving important operations, and for monitoring progress." (00181) Lansdale also submitted an intelligence plan for basic intelligence collection upon which to base the decision to undertake actions to cause the overthrow of Castro. The plan itself at pages 00183 through 00187, included establishing intelligence agents inside Cuba; collecting intelligence from Cubans inside the United States; counterfeiting ration cards and currency inside of Cuba; geographical surveys of air fields, military installations, communications centers; attempts to place trained agents inside the government organizations or to defect officials "in place"[redacted]. meeting of foreign ministers which opened January 22, 1962. The object was to get wide Western Hemisphere support for OAS resolutions condemning Cuba and isolating it from the rest of the hemisphere. "The OAS meeting is to be supported by public demonstrations in Latin America, generated by CIA and a psychological campaign assisted by USIA." The major task of the diplomatic capability was to encourage Latin American leaders to develop independent operations similar to the instant project seeking an internal revolt of the Cuban people against the Communist regime. In the economic warfare area an embargo on Cuban trade was to be considered after the OAS meeting. The CIA was unable to undertake the action to sabotage the sugar harvest which commences about January 15 and upon which Cuba's one-crop economy depended. Sabotage of transport, mills, sugar sacking in cane fields was explored, according to Lansdale's review. Special sabotage support was noted.→

"CIA has initiated action to contaminate POL supplies for Cuba, although visible results (stopage of some Cuban transports) is not expected until mid-1962. CIA is introducing "Lubzol," a corrosive additive to Cuban locomotive diesel fuel oil through commercial suppliers in Belgium.) A similar project was noted for jet fuel storage tanks in Cuba. Lansdale noted that the CIA had concluded that its realistic role should be to at least create the illusion of a popular movement, to win external support for it, to improve CIA operational capability, and to help create a climate which will permit provocative actions in support of a shift to overaction. Lansdale wanted them to reevaluate to see whether or not they could make a greater effort. An outline of what the 33 tasks are for each of the entitities involved then follows in Lansdale's memo. The memorandum notes that the President directed that the Chief of Operations conduct the project through the appropriate organizations and departments of the government. In this regard the memo notes "Also, CIA apparently believes that its role should be to create and expand a popular

In regard to Task #7 of General Lansdale's review this memo notes, "Moreover, the development of a resisitence movement will not remain controllable, so that operational time tables produced during the next four weeks can serve only as guides for a proposed sequence of actions." (00107)

The memorandum notes that six men to form the initial nucleus for work for inside Cuba have been assessed in depth. Fifteen locations have been selected as suitable centers for resistence. It was also noted that in support of State's efforts, CIA has conducted propaganda operations including a number of mass demonstrations in Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Columbia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Guatemala, Mexico, Panama, Peru, Uruguay, and Venezuela.

OCCURRENCE: Helms testified that the aim of the Cuban operations was "to get rid of Castro or the Castro regime in Cuba; lets put it that way, and no limitations were placed on the means. In fact, I never recall having been told by anybody do not do this, do not do that, do not do the other thing." (26) (The above statements refer to Mongoose.) Helms testified that "the pressure was very intense and I remember vividly it was very intense." The pressure led to several "very nutty schemes." (26) Helms testified the pressure built up to the Bay of Pigs and then lay dormant for awhile and intensified again toward the end of 1961 and 1962. The Cuban Missile Crisis itself was the period of greatest intensity. Afterwards interest tapered off, although Helms recalled efforts in 1963 involving "economic warfare" such as turning off oil deliveries and stopping bus deliveries including an attempt to stop the sale by theLeyland Bus Company in Spain of buses to Cuba. "Pursuant to our telephone conversation this afternoon, it would seem worthwhile to get the consensus of the group's views as to the type and timing of the activities in Phase II."

In my opinion, the following numbered activities may pose possible policy questions 20 (balloons), 23 (SWAN radio), 27 (sabotage), 32 (attack agriculture [with chemicals]), 40 (COMINT), 48-50 (Cuban exiles, Carribbean nations), 54 (post-Castro).

OCCURRENCE:

Meeting of SGA On Operation MONGOOSE, 6 September 1962. Discussion of LANSDALE's suggestion #32 (agricultural sabotage). GENERAL CARTER emphasized the extreme sensitivity of any such operation and the disasterous results that would flow from something going wrong particularly if there were obvious attribution to the U.S. He went on to say, however, that it would be possible to accomplish this purpose by methods more subtle than those indicated in the paper. He mentioned specifically the possibility of producing crop failures [redacted] which would appear to be of natural origin. BUNDY said that he had no worries about any such sabotage which could clearly be made to appear as a result of local Cuban disaffection or a natural disaster, but that we must avoid external activities such as release of chemicals, etc. unless they could be completely covered up. ✓

OCCURRENCE: When RFK asked Helms for his comments, Helms stated that "we were prepared to get on with the new action program and that we would execute it agressively." Helms pointed out, however, that the objective of Operation MONGOOSE would have to be determined at some point since the Cubans with whom we have to work were seeking a reason for risking their lives in these operations. Helms detailed his conversation with the young Cuban [redacted] who pointed out that they were willing to commit people only on operations which they regarded as sensible. Helms defines sensible in Cuban terminology as meaning an action which would contribute to the liberatic of their country, another way of saying that the United States, perhaps in conjunction with other Latin American countries, would bail them out militarily. Helms' point was specially echoed by Huston and Ryan.

Specific references made to the pen ultimate paragraph and Lansdale's memorandum concerning a report for the CIA which he used as a basis for memorandum dated 31 Oct. 1962 to Oswald Kirkpatrick. This refers to a telephonic conversation on the evening of 30 Oct. 1962 between Lansdale and [redacted] which is referred specifically in paragraph 2 on pages 7 and 8 of my reference memorandu. I have discussed this matter in detail with [redacted] and clearly recollects that his conversation with Lansdale on that date took place as reflected in my reference memorandum. During this conversation there was no discussion of previous operations except a brief discussion of the COBRA [redacted] teams and Lansdale did not ask, according to [redacted] recollection, any specific questions concerning assets inside or prior operations which would logically have led to the discussions at the time of the Matahambre operation."

OCCURRENCE: The Special Group heard Mr. Merchant state his opinion that the only solution is to move the Guatemalan train activities to the United States even though the U. S. could probably not get away with this either. A number of alternative base sites for the training of the Cubans was considered both in the United States, in Puerto Rico, at the CIA site on Saipan or in the Panama Canal zone. Mr. Douglas felt the "U. S. capability for intervention in Cuba will probably not be effective enough unless there is more overt participation than has been contemplated to date." "Mr. Grey supported this general position, stating that when the current Cuban plan was approved, the situation in that country was different than it is now. Since then, the Cubans have received sizeable amounts of bloc arms and have organized a malitia. Mr. Gray wondered how a few hundred exiles could be." "Mr. Mann expressed the opinion that the way to proceed is to seal Cuba off from the rest of Latin America and settle down for a one- or two-year wait..."

OCCURRENCE:

Lansdale briefed the group on numbers of agents in Cuba. Air resupply proposal submitted by CIA "should be deferred pending broader review of the entire situation." Taylor noted if urgent need for air supply proposal could be made to the Special Group Augmented at any time. "Mr. McCone emphasized that no high-level penetrations of the Cuban government have yet been attained." "The Attorney General inquired about the status of popular support for Castro, and also the possibility of a revolt against him." Lansdale replied, "There is no rallying point for active opposition." The AG and Johnson emphasize need to obtain hard intelligence on subversive activities by Castro in the hemisphere. A complete review of MONGOOSE was set toward the end of July. Taylor emphasized need for summaries of results "and a statement of future alternatives open to the U.S. should be developed." Looking into proposal to subsidize Japanese purchases of Dominican sugars so that the Japanese could divert these purchases from Cuba. He pointed out that"each project must have his approval to the circulation to the members of the Special Group". For example, reconnasiance overflights are now approved. He noted covert financial support in Peruvian, Greek, Finnish, Italian, and Brazilian elections. Helms "read to the panel a paper on the operation Mongoose which theDirector had used earlier in the day for giving a briefing to the President."

OCCURRENCE:

SGA discussed various possibilities of accomplishing reconnaissance of Cuba, ranging from very low level coverage by tactical aircraft to high performance aircraft and drones. Overflights and peripheral flights were discussed.

It was agreed that the first priority is one high performance mission in the western part of ✓ the island, to be accompanied by all out Elint support. Depending on the results of this, a number of similar searches may be mounted. First mission was later approved by higher authority, but the decision on the second proposition left open.

The entire package was to be discussed at the USIB, and by Chiefs on Wednesday, October 10th.

OCCURRENCE: President Kennedy's visit to Mexico greatly enhanced U.S. goodwill in Mexico. It fulfilled U.S. plans to impress upon Castro that Mexico is solidly with the United States and the West. State believes this should ease the way for future discussions about Cuba with the Mexicans. Re: Operation MONGOOSE, the joint communique issued by President Kennedy and President Lopez Mateos included a phrase which was 'They proposed to respect and maintain the principles of non intervention--whether this intervention may come from a continental or extracontinental state--and of self-determination of peoples." In response to a Lansdale query, the Department of State noted that "There were no developments resulting from the President's trip to Mexico including the text of the joint United States-Mexico communique which alter the basic guidelines which govern the Cuba Project." Lansdale noted that the CIA now had [redacted] in Havana operating. In addition there are agents and teams in the provinces. "Voice of Cuba" broadcasts from the U.S. Navy submarine were successful. "It is noted that UPI carried this news item but spiced it up with added stories of Castro's use of militia against guerillas in Mantanzas. The 2 stories put together by UPI have no relationship in reality, and the 'Voice of Cuba' broadcasts are being closely directed to fit in with other operations and to keep within Mongoose guidelines.'

The group discussed a draft State Department cable to various Latin American embassies related to this incident. It was agreed that the point should be made in the cable that any such contemplated raid would be premature at this time. Disassociation of the United States from any such endeavor was to be accomplished by leaking stories of the impending raid to the press.

to reactivate the operation, to renew the attempt, until after I had left the Agency, which was in February 1962.

Senator Mondale. Now, you say you discussed probably with Bundy and Rostow the capability in developing more capability of assassinations. And you may have discussed it in the context of various potential targets without deciding on them. Once you decided on a target, or you were going to recommend a target, what was the process of getting clearance?

Mr. Bissell. I can't answer you that, simply because no specific target was ever recommended. And to the best of my knowledge and belief, other than the case we have discussed at length of Castro, which in time preceded the SRRIFLE project. The issue of obtaining clearance never arose. I can speculate on how that would have worked if you wish.

Senator Mondale. No.

The Chairman. Let's go ahead then with the questions.

Mr. Schwarz. Senator Baker asked, did Helms succeed you?

Mr. Bissell. That is correct.

Mr. Schwarz. Did you turn over SRRIFLE to him and did you tell him about it?

Mr. Bissell. I believe I did. And I also believe that Mr. Harvey told him about it promptly after the turnover.

Mr. Schwarz. Do you know a man called Justin O'Donnell?

Mr. Bissell. Yes, I do.

Mr. Schwarz. Did you ask him in words or substance to kill Mr. Lumumba?

Mr. Bissell. I asked him to investigate the possibility and to make explanation for so doing.

Mr. Schwarz. When did you do that?

Mr. Bissell. I don't remember the date of that. I may have it on a chronology here, but I imagine that is a matter of record, or that he has testified to that date. I don't remember the date.

Mr.Schwarz. Did you tell him this connection with making plans to go see the passer of the poison, Mr. Gottlieb?

Mr. Bissell. I think I probably did.

Mr. Schwarz. Did he tell you he wouldn't do it?

Mr. Bissell. Later he told me that he didn't want to do it. But he also said that he thought it was an inappropriate action, and that the desired object could be accomplished better in other ways.

Mr. Schwarz. Who authorized you to tell Mr. O'Donnell to take steps to move toward assassinating Mr. Lumumba?

Mr. Bissell. Nobody.

Mr. Schwarz. Did you inform the White House of that?

Mr. Bissell. No.

Mr. Schwarz. To the best of your knowledge, did anybody inform the White House of that?

Mr. Bissell. To the best of my knowledge, no.

Mr. Schwarz. Why did you seek to assassinate Mr. Lumumba?

Mr. Bissell. I didn't seek to assassinate him. I told a member of the clandestine service to make plans and develop the capability so to do if it were approved and ordered.

Senator Goldwater. Approved by who?

Mr. Bissell. It would have then had to have approval at the highest level of government.

The Chairman. Where did the idea come from?

Mr. Bissell. I don't remember, Mr. Chairman. It could possibly have been mine.

The Chairman. It could possibly have been yours?

Mr. Schwarz. Did you tell Rostow that was your initiative?

Mr. Bissell. I told him that the instruction as to [redacted] was my initiative.

Senator Baker. How many others did you plan on, just as a contingency?

How many other people did you instruct to draw up plans to assassinate?

Mr. Bissell. I don't believe there were any others which went to the point of instructing that a man be prepared.

Senator Baker. How many were there that didn't go that far? How many murders did you contemplate?

Mr. Bissell. Well, Senator -- quoting a cable concerning the asset WIROGUE, who was sent to the Congo in the fall of 1960.

The Chairman. Mr. Bissell, the memorandum to which counsel has referred reads as follows:

"In recommending the agent or asset ROGUE, the Chief of Station, Leopoldville, the Chief of the Agency's African Division, probably Bronson Tweedy, wrote in late 1960:

'He is indeed aware of the precepts of right and wrong, but if he is given an assignment, which may be morally wrong in the eyes of the world,but necessary because his case officer ordered him to carry it out, then it is right, and he will dutifully undertake appropriate action for its execution without pangs of conscience. In a word, he can rationalize all actions'".

Is that fairly representative of the philosophy that applied to such matters at the time?

Mr. Bissell. Well, it certainly applied within the range of matters that would have come under SRRIFLE.

Could I say, Mr. Chairman, that I know of no way in which it is possible to operate a secret intelligence agency or a secret service unless it has at least a number of employees who are willing to and can be depended upon to carry out orders involving acts of this sort.

The Chairman. That assumes, of course, that the United States ought to assassinate foreign leaders.

meant to suggest that that was entirely comparable?

Mr. Bissell. It was not meant to suggest that it was entirely comparable, but the individual whom I have mentioned were all perceived in their time and place as menaces to their own countries and the U.S. interests.

Senator Goldwater. Might I ask a question based on his experience?

From my readings in trying to learn more about intelligence, I gathered the impression that the actions such as you have been describing up to and including assassination, are practiced by every intelligence organization that I have been studying, is that correct?

Mr.Bissell. That is my impression likewise, Senator.

Senator Goldwater. Including England?

Mr. Bissell. I believe so. In fact, I think definitely it has been used by MI6. I couldn't give you specific cases.

Senator Goldwater. Certainly KGB.

Mr. Bissell. Certainly the KGB -- although as, the Chairman pointed out the other day, I at least cannot point to any case where the KGB has carried out the assassination of a chief of state.

Senator Goldwater. Would you assume that in the cases of those other countries that this ruler would have knowledge of this in every case?

Mr.Bissell. In the case specifically of the U.K., I would answer in the affirmative. I also believe, however, that the Chief of the Intelligence Service of any one of those countries would flatly deny that the chief of state had knowledge of such action.

Senator Goldwater. Thank you.

Senator Baker. Would you deny it?

Mr. Bissell. In our case here?

Senator Baker. Yes, sir.

Mr. Bissell. Yes, it would be appropriate to do so.

Senator Baker. Have you done so?

Mr. Bissell. I have not had occasion to, because I am unaware of any high level assassination that occurred by the U.S.

Senator Baker. Doesn't that amount to a denial?

Mr. Bissell. It is a denial that any has occurred, at least in the period that I am aware of.

Mr. Schwarz. Was your answer to Senator Baker meant to indicate that you would perjure yourself on this matter?

Mr. Bissell. It depends a little bit on the context. There are occasions when I would go a long way to protect the President of the United States from certain kinds of embarrassment.

Senator Baker. The question was, very simply, would you try to protect the President in such a case as you described, MI6 or otherwise?

Mr.Bissell. I can conceive of so doing, Senator.

Senator Tower. May I pursue that just a moment further?

You might say one thing in sworn testimony before a committee like this, but say another thing publicly, is that what you mean?

Mr. Bissell. That is exactly what I mean.

The Chairman. Have you lied to this committee?

Mr. Bissell. No, sir.

The Chairman. Would you lie to this committee?

Mr. Bissell. No, sir.

Senator Tower. I think that distinction has to be made. I think I would have lied about the U-2 myself.

The Chairman. Shall we proceed with the questions?

Mr. Schwarz. The remaining topic I have is Trujillo. It is respectfully indicated, and involves a lot of documents. And we have some procedural matters that we need to take up. I know we can't finish Trujillo before 12:30, and I would suggest that we ask the witness and whatever Senators that can return to come back this afternoon on Trujillo.

The Chairman. We have a Senate order that there will be no further committee meetings this afternoon.

I doubt that we can obtain unanimous consent.

ls

almost any kind of paramilitary operation, such as the Guatamalan operation, the Bay of Pigs itself is, the earlier operation that has been discussed in the press in Iran, and which resulted in the ouster of Mossedeg and the return of the Shah, there is an expectation that such operations will involve military or semimilitary action, and that some people will lose their lives in the process.

Senator Baker. Yes, but I am speaking rather more precisely of a single person or a group of people ~~who were~~ targeted, or discussions were held about targeting them, for what would be an assassination were it not for the legal significance of the term.

Mr. Bissell. I don't think I remember any cases in which that sort of matter was discussed or was the subject of planning, other than the ones which have already been mentioned in testimony.

Senator Mathias. Could I interject a question at this point.

But of course that contemplates what we have seen in the earlier testimony, that when you begin an operation -- and I think this was the history of the Castro operation -- to in some way incompacitate him politically, that it often moves to the extreme of incapacitating him physically, isn't that true?

Mr. Bissell. That is correct, sir.

AFTERNOON SESSION

2:17

TESTIMONY OF RICHARD M. BISSELL (CON'D)

The Chairman. The hearing will come to order.

Mr. Schwarz will commence the questioning.

It will be understood that the oath still continues to apply.

Mr. Schwarz. Before we turn to Trujillo, two quick questions. [redacted]

Mr. Bissell. I have no recollection of that.

Mr. Schwarz. And if I took out any of the details and broke it apart you would have no recollection?

Mr. Bissell. I am afraid not.

Mr. Schwarz. And the second thing, to pin down on Mr. Helms, did you brief him about the Mafia matter?

Mr. Bissell. I am reasonably clear that I did not brief him in the early stages, that is to say, in 1960. And my impression is that he may very well not have been briefed on it until I was about to leave the Agency in early 1962.

Mr. Schwarz. But at that point you did brief him?

Mr. Bissell. I don't remember whether I personally they might eventually be so used.

Mr. Schwarz. Is that a supposition, or is it based upon any recollection?

Mr. Bissell. I would say it is a faint recollection. But I find it very difficult in this case to distinguish between an element of supposition and a dim recollection.

Let me come to what I seem to remember about this matter. There was, as you have already indicated, several discussions in the Special Group, and one or more at least in other very small groups with representation from State, the White House and the Agency. And I am clear -- I do recollect that the plans at that time contemplated the arming of obviously a relatively small group inside the Dominican Republic, that is, the provision of arms perhaps for a dozen or so people, but not for something like a Bay of Pigs invasion or a major geurilla activity.

Now, in discussing that kind of an operation, I am perfectly certain that everyone that participated in the discussion was clear that weapons so supplied might very well be used against Trujillo or other senior supporters of his.

Mr. Schwarz. For how many countries in your experience at the CIA has the US Government supplied arms to dissident groups within the country?

Mr. Bissell. Well, we have talked about two cases; Indonesia is another case during the time I was in the Agency, or before I was DDP. Off hand I can't remember other cases, but there may have been some. Well, earlier before I was ever in the Agency, there was the case of Iran. And there was the reasonably well publicized case of Guatamala.

Mr. Schwarz. And the Iron Curtain countries?

Mr. Bissell. I think we have.

Mr. Schwarz. But what I am driving at, it is fairly common to supply arms to dissident elements in countries all over the world?

Mr. Bissell. Yes, that is correct.

Mr. Schwarz. Does taht also imply that there is an assassination contemplated or not?

Mr. Bissell. I would say definitely not, in most cases not. In a large scale operation like Guatamala there was no intention of any assassination. I think you would include it under that term.

The same is true in Iran of course -- the possibility that a chief of state would be killed.

The Chairman. But you would distinguish this matter from just supplying of arms to dissidents? In other words, there was an element of knowledge here that the arms were supplied for a purpose, and that that purpose might well be the assassination of Trujillo or other highly placed people in this Government, correct?

Mr. Bissell. The way I would prefer to state it, Senator, I think is basically consistent with what you said. I would say that in the planning of this operation, and in the approval process, those involved would probably have given a higher probability to such use being made of the weapons than they would in some of the other operations that I have referred to.

Mr. Schwarz. However, just focusing on the Special Group as of the 12th of January, you can't tell from the minutes which state of mind existed, but you have a faint recollection that the more targeted state of mind existed as of the 12th of January?

Mr. Bissell. My impression is that as of that time, as I mentioned at the end of the testimony this morning, the reason that the State Department, and probably the Agency's representatives in the Special Group, favored this group was a pragmatic reason. It was to maintain and strengthen political ties with the dissidents.

Mr. Schwarz. The next matter of record that we should focus on is a memorandum of January 25, 1961, apparently reflecting a discussion of [redacted]. Was [redacted] the code for the overthrow of Trujillo?

Mr. Bissell. I suspect it was the code name for the project of support to the dissidents.

Mr. Schwarz. Do you remember the name EMSLEW?

I show you the memorandum of January 24, 1961 headed "Discussion of Project EMDEED." Does it appear to be a and this record, which is a record we have obtained from the Agency, may be unfair to you. But do you not agree that on this record it appears that on the item of the passing of the weapons which were the weapons that were in fact used, it appears that the AGency elected to keep the State Department uninformed on that item?

Mr. Bissell. No, sir, it does not quite appear that way. It appears -- if I put these two together --

Mr. Schwarz. By these two you mean your cable of March 24 and the cable of May 1 relating to certain matters is not to be discussed with the State Department?

Mr. Bissell. Yes. The earlier cable of those refers to machine guns.

Mr. Schwarz. And to the pouching of revolvers?

Mr. Bissell. And the pouching of revolvers. And I believe that what eventually passed to the dissidents were three rifles, not the revolvers. And, therefore, neither of these cables in fact refers to the passage to the dissidents out of U.K.'s control.

This cable states the conditional willingness at some time in the future to pass machine guns. That permission was never granted and they were never passed.

It refers to pouching revolvers. And I don't know whether there was a record that those were ever passed, or even intended to be passed, to the dissidents. And it would the first man contacted by Mr. Maheu, worked through a Cuban exile leader. And he offered -- and he said that he could do something of this nature provided he got some funds and the assistance. And he was supported in this regard. And I think again we have some doubts as to the accuracy of his reporting.

Mr. Schwarz. In November 1961 did Mr. Bissell indstruct a William Harvey to take charge of the gambling syndicate operation designed to kill Fidel Castro? Page 3 of Mr. Greer's report, which is at the beginning of your report.

Mr. Colby. I believe so, yes.

Yes. That is what our evidence says, the summary sais, "of the evidence available". And this is the evidence available in 1963. And there have been some minor changes in some of the details of this summary, very minor changes. But the essence of this report is still roughly accurate, I believe.

Mr. Schwarz. Mr. Harvey -- was Mr. Harvey the man that had hired an agent in order to kill Lmumba?

Mr. Colby. Mr. Harvey was the head of Staff D, Staff D of the Operations directorate [redacted]

1(B)

1(B)

[redacted], and in the process, you obviously work up some people who are able to do this kind of work, which is quite different from the normal life style of most of us.

Mr. Harvey had been a very venturesome officer in the past. He was responsible for the Berlin tunnel. And he was sent down to take this job. And he assumed as part of it the capability of -- he was given by Mr. Bissel this chore of carrying on this particular operation as well.

Mr. Schwarz. Had he been the person who had, in connection with the abortive effort to kill Mr. Lmumba, hired an agent for that purpose?

Mr. Colby. I have forgotten whether he hired him. He hired a foreigner. And this foreigner's job -- [redacted]. And there are some very obscure references that an additional assignment was to look into the possible assassination of Mr. Lmumba. The evidence is that he went down to what is now Kinshasa, Elizabethville in 1960, stayed there a few weeks, and left in October, I believe. And then Mr. Lmumba was killed thereafter in a totally separate set of circumstances in which we had nothing to do. There is some indication that a CIA officer who was asked to have something to do with this particular job said he did not want to do it.

was not advised of the assassination activities. Quite likely I cannot say that for sure, but I know the compartmentation system was such.

Chairman Church. What was the name of the CIA agent who was given the responsibility for liaison between the CIA and the Warren Commission?

Mr. Colby. To my knowledge it is Mr. Raymond Rocca.

Chairman Church. Where is it now?

Mr. Colby. He retired at the end of December of last year. He remained working for us for a few months. I think he is retired. I think he is retired. I believe he is still in the Washington area.

Mr. Knoche. Yes, he is still working with us.

Mr. Colby. Still working with us to help on the transition of the whole counter intelligence program.

Chairman Church. Why did he retire?

Mr. Colby. That was the Angleton case, Mr. Chairman, and the facts of that case were that I had had some professional differences in the organization with Mr. Angleton as to the way the counterintelligence business was run [redacted] 1(b). I believed that it required a higher degree of coordination of the other elements of the Directorate and of the Agency. We had debated this on various occasions in the past. I did reorganize that staff in 1973 and took a number of functions away from it. The liaison with the FBi for instance, and a couple of other things. [redacted] 1(b)

Mr. Angleton [redacted].

[redacted]. 1(b)

Also, I believed that there was a undue degree of compartmentation of that staff, that it needed more interchange with our other divisions. We debated this and discussed it and I set as my time limit for this discussion the end of December because there were some very substantial retirement benefits that people would loose if they stayed after that point. Then unfortunately the Seymour Hirsh article of December 22nd came to our attention before it was actually published, and so I brought Mr. Angleton up and said that I was going to make two basic decisions. [redacted] I was going to put some sucessor leadership into the Head of the Counterintelligence Staff. I said I would offer him a post of tying together some counterintelligence doctrine, he could stay working with us. He did not have to Chinese Communists subsequently blamed the Chinese Nationalists and the US for sabotaging the aircraft. The aircraft employee had fled to Taiwan. We had nothing to do with that incident and frankly heard about it after it occurred.

In the fall of 1956, a senior Chinese Nationalist official informed an officer of CIA that a Chinese National planned to assassinate Chou En Lai during his visit to Cambodia in November '56 and had been thwarted by the Cambodian arrest of the Chinese Nationalist officer sent to Phnom Penh to supervise the attempt. We learned of this after it had happened and we had nothing to do with it.

[redacted] Intelligence Service over the [redacted] 1bA

These are two that were separate.

Also I was asked to look at the photographs of Howard Hunt and Sturgis that appeared in Newsweek some years ago. We obtained this photograph from the FBI last night about 5 o'clock. We had not had it before. We had a copy of the Newsweek edition.

These are photographs of Howard Hunt in 1949, 1950 and 1961. This is the only photograph we have of Mr. Sturgis. It is taken out of the Newsweek.

We have had no connection with Mr. Sturgis and so we have individuals in it.

Senator Schweiker. Did you get the other photograph, the supposed Oswald photograph leaving the Embassy?

Mr. Colby. I don't have that with me. It is in the Warren Commission published report. It is in there.

Senator Schweiker. It is in there?

Mr. Colby. Yes. It was cropped slightly in order to conceal where it was taken but it was --

Senator Schweiker. It is in the Warren Commission?

Mr. Colby. Yes, it is in the Warren Commission.

Just one additional matter.

Chairman Church. Just one thing I would like to say to you, Mr. Colby, before I forget it. [redacted] 1(f)

Mr. Colby. Right.

Chairman Church. And I think you should prepare to discuss it with us and we will have further questions to ask you in connection with it.

I just wanted to give you notice.

Mr. Colby. Right. In our lexicon it doesn't count as a covert action but that is all right, no problem, I will cover it.

them.

Mr. Harvey was given the responsibility of this by Mr. Bissel and originally it continued as a separate action from the Castro operation, but Mr. Harvey was also given that responsibility, and for all intents and purposes they became wedded.

Mr. Helms was the person who formally approved ZR Rifle as a project. ZR Rifle had a dual purpose that has not been clarified by our inquiry. It apparently was in fact used for the stated purposes, as far as organizational activities went along, [redacted] and Mr. Helms, when he approved the project, authorized accounting on certification, which meant that rather than the usual vouchers supporting expenditures, that the officer involved would simply certify that the money had been spent and this would be accepted. It had a project amount of some dollars, $7500 - $10,000 -- some of it to include the salary of an agent, some to include operating expenses.

So Mr. Helms' main appearance in the approval of ZR Rifle does not necessarily equate with the date when he became familiar with the Castro operation.

Mr. Schwarz. Because of the dual purpose of Rifle, Rifle means both, rifle files and used rifles?

Mr. Breckinridge. It may mean either or both.

Mr. Colby. It is supposed to disassociate but sometimes

Mr. Schwarz. November 1961?

Mr. Breckinridge. I think that is probably correct. It was in the fall of 1961 that Mr. Harvey was given this assignment by Mr. Bissel. I think Mr. Bissel left in 1962. I am not sure of the dates, So Mr. Bissel would have known at that time. But I am not sure after that.

Chairman Church. Helms succeeded Mr. Bissel as chief of operations?

Mr. Colby. Deputy Director of Plans.

Chairman Church. Deputy Director for Plans.

Your record shows that Helms had knowledge of the ZR Rifle operation, which, among other things, was to develop an executive capability -- whatever that means. Presumably that means a capability to conduct an assassination if and when authorized by proper authority?

Mr. Breckinridge. That is my understanding.

Chairman Church. Is that your understanding?

Mr. Breckinridge. Yes, sir.

Chairman Church. Do your records show that, or is that based upon what has been revealed through your interrogation?

Mr. Breckinridge. First, let me go back and clarify, then I will answer this question, if I may.

Mr. Helms approved ZR Rifle, [redacted] 1(b)

My understanding, from my interviews, is that ZR Rifle had Chairman Church. Senator Hart.

Senator Hart of Colorado. Mr. Colby, in connection with ZR Rifle, I think you testified or your associate said this was a multi-purpose operation, [redacted] and the development of the capability of what euphemistically is called executive action. 1(B)

In your professional judgment, and with your history of your background in the Agency, does it make any sense to you that a major operation, a major intelligence gathering operation [redacted] would be mounted under the direction of a man about whom all I know is that Mr. Harvey has a background of something like a soldier of fortune, and funded at the level, I should say, of $7500 to $10,000? 1(B)

Does it not suggest to you that [redacted] was in fact an internal cover for what was explicitly an assassination operation with unlimited, non-voucher financial capability? 1(B)

Mr. Colby. No, not that it is purely a cover.

In the first place, Mr. Harvey had a very successful tour in Berlin where he ran the Berlin tunnel operation, which was one of our major successful intelligence operations.

Mr. Harvey was a very colorful figure who had his lifestyle, which is different than some others, but he had been very effective at that, [redacted] and a very venturesome idea of that nature. 1(B)

He was in the assignment of Chief of the FI Division staff. [redacted] 1(B)

[redacted] 1(B)

Now, the thing that puts it together with this "capability", executive action, is the high degree of compartmentation of this material, that kind of a project. [redacted] 1(B) Therefore, there is a system of very sharp compartmentation of the work of that particular group.

You also are dealing with some very venturesome people [redacted] 1(B

So, given you have a man who had some good technical experience, who is a venturesome type himself and is running a program which is not too far off the requirements of high compartmentation, and a very high risk kind of operation, and therefore, for Mr. Bissel to have selected Harvey to carry out this project seems to me that it is compatible [redacted] as well as this other activity.

Now, in the lifestyle at the time, not mentioning the second one, this gets back into the recordkeeping that we have been discussing. It was not to be put on the record although to be done. That is a perfectly proper hypothesis, it seems to me, but to say that [redacted] was only a cover I think is probably an unwarranted conclusion.

1 B

Senator Hart of Colorado. What about the level of funding of $7,500 to $10,000?

Mr. Colby. That is not very much money for that kind of an operation.

Senator Hart of Colorado. Precisely. I think it is too little.

Mr. Colby. No. For a capability of that nature, it is largely a staff operation. In other words, you use your own staff officers. You may hire an agent or something, but I don't think you can draw much conclusion from the actual number on the figure one way or the other.

This might not have been the only such project. You know, an assassination project would cost you more money than that, too.

Senator Hart of Colorado. Absolutely.

Mr. Colby. I find it hard to say that that is the only amount of money involved. I think you get into a situation where additional money would be put into either of those kinds

Chairman Church. Before you do, would you just explain exactly what the relationship between CIA and Giancana and Maheu was because that is not clear in my mind.

Would you develop for the Committee that whole relationship?

Mr. Breckinridge. Robert Maheu used to work for the FBI and he resigned from the FBI and opened a private investigative firm here in Washington and CIA used him from time to time for certain kinds of support activities.

Chairman Church. What kind of support activities?

Mr. Breckinridge. On one occasion he obtained a female companion [redacted]

1(B)

Chairman Church. What other kind of support?

Mr. Breckinridge. In the early days -- and this becomes an embarrassment. As nearly as I can reconstruct, the people who knew him decided to put him on a retainer in the Office of Security, which they did for awhile, until he was so successful he said he no longer needed the retainer, which he didn't do much to earn. He later got involved representing one of the Greek shipping interests and we were given the results of some of the information that he obtained from that where there was a fight between Niarchos and Onassis. We think he may have had some involvement in another [redacted] companionship when he was in this country. I don't have the details. I think we can probably reconstruct it for you.

Mr. Schwarz. I would like to pick up on the discussion we had.

Chairman Church. Mr. Schwarz has five minutes more, and we will conclude, and I would like to ask the Committee to stay on for ten more minutes for an executive session.

Mr. Schwarz. In the discussion we had on the use of criminal elements, we have dealt with the Castro operation.

In the middle of the book supplied to us by Mr. Breckinridge earlier this week, there is a discussion about the Lumumba operation, and the Agent Q. J. Win.

Now, is it a fact that Q. J. Win was the agent, or asset, however you would refer to him, who apparently was considered for the effort to assassinate Lumumba, which never took place; is that right?

Mr. Colby. Yes, sir.

Mr. Schwarz. Now, is it accurate that Q. J. Win operated [redacted] 1(B)

Mr. Colby. This is what is reported, and it is quite possible.

Mr. Breckinridge. The record indicates that.

Mr. Schwarz. And is it further so that one of the CIA officers who first met Q. J. Win [redacted] 1(B)

Mr. Colby. Yes, that is what it says.

they operate and the difference between a contact at a proprietary firm, like Air America or [redacted], Incorporated or the Mullen Company would contact, you deal with contact men, some of whom were military who are cleared, but others are agency who are in there.

Like Gil Greenaway was in the Pentagon, he was an Agency employee, he was not a military man. So when air lines contacted Greenaway they thought they were contacting a military man, but he was really an employee of the Agency, for other reasons. But he was a contact man. So there was an array of different contact men.

Now, in that elaborate context Schorr approached the subject, and he said, were there contacts in the White House?

And I said, well, sure. Being the senior members of NSC we had contact for our Forty Committee work, and then 54/12 Committee, and we knew who to deal with in the White House.

And he said, well, were there ever any otherkind of contacts?

And I said, the only POW contact was a very slight thing tied up with the Mullen Company, and then went on into the story.

And the only way that I heard about the contact was, not that I was able to say that Butterfield was the contact, but that they brought up the name of Butterfield, and they said, we will get this business done -- am not too far off in what I am about to tell you. The contract was structured in such a way that as the bottoms of other companies became obsolete, they could only be replaced with Onassis' tankers. Even ARAMCO had to, by attrition, within a period of four-and-a-half to five-and-a-half years, would have, if their tankers became obsolete, they could only be replaced by Onassis tankers.

Our statistics, after having studied the contract and making what we considered to be proper projections, indicated that at the completion of approximately five-and-a-half years, Mr. Onassis would control more dead weight tonnage than the United States controlled in its entirety, that he would control on the high seas annually more oil by tens of thousands of gallons more than were used by all of the Allied nations during the most severe year of the Korean War, that in the first year his profit would be approximately $17 million dollars, that after five-and-a-half years his annual profit would be in the area of $200 million.

While this analysis is going on, we also found that a million dollar pay-off had been made to one of the top ministers in Saudi Arabia and we had the evidence [redacted].

We then prepared our inputs and presented them to the National Security Council --

Senator Huddleston. Of the United States?

Mr. Maheu. -- of the United States, and within a matter, I believe, of forty-eight hours, our State Department denounced the agreement. It was the first time that anyone had actually seen what this meant, and frankly, there was an innate fear that with the initial $17 million, then there would be no way of stopping, I mean, he might go to Venezuela and do the same thing, and there were also other inputs about the background of Mr. Onassis that I would just as soon not make a matter of record, but they were not too favorable, that we presented to the National Security Council verbally but not in writing.

Mr. Madigan. Who made the presentation?

Senator Schweiker. What subsequently happened then with the Security Council denunciation, et cetera?

Mr. Madigan. The State Department denounced the agreement and that same evening we were told that two [redacted] officials were on their way to Saudi Arabia.

Then I proceeded to dig up the gentleman by the name of Carl Twitchell by virtue of reading about the country, because I'm not about ready to go there and not know about the customs and the formation of the country. I dug up a man by the name of Carl Twitchell who was living in Connecticut who turned out to be the first American who had ever really been accepted by

National Security Council --

Mr. Maheu. -- of the United States, and within a matter, I believe, of forty-eight hours, our State Department denounced the agreement. It was the first time that anyone had actually seen what this meant, and frankly, there was an innate fear that with the initial $17 million, then there would be no way of stopping, I mean, he might go to Venezuela and do the same thing, and there were also other inputs about the background of Mr. Onassis that I would just as soon not make a matter of record, but they were not too favorable, that we presented to the National Security Council verbally but not in writing.

Senator Schweiker. What subsequently happened then with the Security Council denunciation, et cetera?

Mr. Madigan. The State Department denounced the agreement and that same evening we were told that two [redacted] officials were on their way to Saudi Arabia.

Then I proceeded to dig up the gentleman by the name of ~~Carl Twitchell~~ by virtue of reading about the country, because I'm not about ready to go there and not know about the customs and the formation of the country. I dug up a man by the name of ~~Carl Twitchell~~ who was living in Connecticut who turned out to be the first American who had ever really been accepted by old King Saud. [redacted] had spent time in the country as a mining engineer to help them in the exploitation of mines. It was in fact to [redacted] that the old king gave the power of attorney to come to the United States government or come back to the United States and try to form a consortium for the exploitation of oil from which emanated ARAMCO.

[redacted] was the type of man who was only reimbursed for his expenses. I think his total expenses were slightly in excess of $8,000. He didn't even keep the banking and percentage for himself, or a piece of the action, so to speak, and he was highly, highly loved by the Saudis and although the old king was then gone and King Saud, the son, was in power, [redacted] had the same respect and reverence from the present leaders as he did from the father and I convinced [redacted] that -- he already had a clearance, a satisfactory clearance, and I convinced him to precede me to Saudi Arabia to try to lay the groundwork.

Senator Schweiker. What year was this, roughly?

Mr. Maheu. This, I believe, was in '54 or '55, yes.

Anyway, I finally ended up going to Saudi Arabia, having a meeting with the King's confidential assistant, presenting all of this evidence, frankly at the time not knowing if the King himself had a piece of the action --

Senator Huddleston. Had some of this evidence come from the wiretap?

Mr. Maheu. That tap was entirely unproductive, entirely unproductive.

Senator Schweiker. What happened then at your meeting?

Mr. Maheu. Well, it's very interesting, if we could take a little time, I mean, I was scheduled to have the meeting "with the King," but he doesn't show, he stays somewhere else and the confidential assistant shows up and one trusted minister that he had with [redacted] present.

And my meeting was scheduled for 8:00 p.m. one night, and this happaned to be the last day that the King was supposed to be in Jidda, he was then leaving for the capital further inland, Jidda being the only major port in Saudi where he spends his summers, and they were having a big parade for him, and from the balcony of the hotel, I'm watching the parade go by, and finally the King's car comes and he is arm and arm with the man on whom I'm going to give the evidence that night, and I frankly was not too comfortable, particularly in view of the fact that in those days -- and I don't know whether it has changed, but in Saudi, the same document did not give you permission to enter and leave; you had to make application for an exit visa after you arrived, and I was in constant contact with the then-United States Ambassador. He made it very clear that the government approved of everything I was doing, but if something went wrong they could not come to my rescue, I would have to be the fall guy, and I was prepared to do it. That was Saudi Arabian government would have its flag flying the high seas, and at the time that all of this is going on they are building what then, upon completion of production, had been the biggest tanker in the world at that time, a ship named after the old King, a tanker which was scheduled to go and take a maiden flight and take off, and it turned out the biggest problem that we had was to find a save-face gimmick. But finally the whole thing was accomplished, and it took two and a half years to do it.

Senator Schweiker. I didn't mean to get you off the track.

Mr. Maheu. Well, I'm sorry I am so verbose.

Senator Huddleston. You said you bought a paper in Athens? You mean by that you actually bought the paper or just paid them to run the story?

Mr. Maheu. We bought a newspaper.

You'll have to understand, Senator, that in Rome, in those days, there were fifty newspapers. I mean, the big circulation in those days, big circulation in Rome was 20,000. It's hard for us to visualize that.

Senator Huddleston. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. Yes.

Can we go off the record?

Senator Schweiker. Yes.

Mr. Liebengood. Was this listening post that you referred to, was that a project that was related to work for the Central Intelligence Agency?

Mr. Maheu. I don't believe it was.

Mr. Madigan. Did you have any New York assignments other than Onassis that you gave to Frank?

Mr. Maheu. I don't remember any.

Mr. Madigan. How about [redacted] I may have asked you that yesterday. Do you recall whether he had any relationship with your company during the 1950's?

Mr. Maheu. I don't remember a [redacted]

Mr. Madigan. A CIA employee.

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall his name.

Mr. Madigan. I got sidetracked off of my question of whether you recall a prosecution or an investigation of the Onassis wiretap. You may have already have answered that.

Mr. Maheu. I think I did, yes.

Mr. Madigan. What did you say?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that I appeared before a Grand Jury that was investigating Mr. Frank on another matter.

Mr. Madigan. On another matter, but you had no recollection of any investigation of that particular tap?

Mr. Maheu. No, I don't.

Mr. Madigan. Either an investigation of you or Frank or Leone or anyone?

Mr. Maheu. No, I don't.

Mr. Madigan. No interviews by the FBI?

Mr. Maheu. It's conceivable, but I don't remember it.

Mr. Madigan. You don't remember it?

Mr. Maheu. No.

Mr. Madigan. Let's go off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

tape 2a

Mr. Madigan. Did there come a time when you were asked by the Central Intelligence Agency to be involved in a project which would involve sending a woman by the name of Florence Horn over to a foreign country?

Mr. Maheu. Yes, sir.

Mr. Madigan. And what were you asked to do with regard to that?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that I was asked to find a woman, preferably from Los Angeles, who would agree to go to a foreign country and under some pretext try to meet the leader of the country and hopefully change his basic philosophies which at the time were thought to be detrimental to the United States, and that they were very, as a result, very seriously jeopardizing the national security of the government of the United States.

Mr. Madigan. Did you find such a woman?

Mr. Maheu. Yes, I did.

Mr. Madigan. And did the Agency sponsor her trip overseas, that is the CIA?

Mr. Maheu. I placed her in touch with a representative of the CIA. He made certain commitments, financial commitments to her. At the completion of the assignment, she claimed that she had additional funds coming to her which I paid out of my own pocket, so that I guess a more accurate way of saying it is that the Agency and I sponsored her trip.

Mr. Madigan. Did she ever get to meet the foreign leader, whom we will call A?

Mr. Maheu. I do not have any recollection.

Mr. Madigan. You don't know whether she did or she didn't?

Mr. Maheu. I don't have any recollection.

Mr. Madigan. Do you know how long she was gone?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that she was gone for several months.

Mr. Madigan. And this person is the woman I referred to earlier by the name of Florence Horn, is that right?

Mr. Maheu. That is correct.

Mr. Madigan. Now can you date that assignment as sometime in 1956 or '57, does that sound about right, or do you have any recollection of what year it was?

Mr. Maheu. I don't have any recollection. It was before 1960.

Mr. Madigan. It was sometime after you had begun in '54 with your Agency operation?

Mr. Maheu. That is correct.

Mr. Madigan. Or your sponsorship?

Mr. Maheu. That is correct.

Mr. Madigan. Subsequently, did this Leader "A" come to the United States to your knowledge after this?

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall whether he came subsequently or prior to.

Mr. Madigan. When the same leader did come to the United States, were you involved in any assignment for the CIA with regard to his presence in the country?

Mr. Maheu. Yes, I was.

Mr. Madigan. And what was that assignment?

Mr. Maheu. [redacted]

Mr. Madigan. Who was the Agency representative that gave you this assignment? Did you go through Mr. O'Connell, or was it someone different?

Mr. Maheu. This request emanated from, directly from the State Department.

Mr. Madigan. Who in the State Department?

Mr. Maheu. Mr. Scott McCloud, who was then Director of the Office of Security and Consular Affairs.

Mr. Madigan. Was it coordinated with the CIA, or was this strictly between yourself and the State Department?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that the CIA was kept apprised, however that the coordination was with the State Department, in connection with the security that was being provided for this leader during his visit to the United States.

Mr. Madigan. Did you meet with the State Department or CIA people or both in New York City when the leader arrived there?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that I met with Security Personnel of the State Department.

Mr. Madigan. What did you do in New York for this assignment?

(Pause)

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall.

Mr. Madigan. And did you meet with the New York police with regard to the assignment?

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]

[redacted]

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall.

Mr. Madigan. Do you recall telling me yesterday that you [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. No, I don't.

Mr. Madigan. Did you travel from New York to any other city with this leader?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that I did.

Mr. Madigan. What occurred when you arrived at the other cities?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that I contacted the security representatives of the State Department.

Mr. Madigan. And after you contacted the security representatives, what were you supposed to do in these other cities?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that I, through local Police Department officials or law enforcement officials[redacted] not be a security risk insofar as the national security of our government was concerned.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. I don't know what you mean[redacted] Mr. Madigan.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]?

Mr. Maheu. That is my recollection, yes.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]?

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall.

Mr. Madigan. Do you recall telling me yesterday that you did?

Mr. Maheu. No, I do not.

Mr. Madigan. Do you recall telling me yesterday when I asked you whether someone had travelled from city to city, you indicated that you thought maybe one did, but you weren't sure about how many others.

Mr. Maheu. That is correct.

Mr. Madigan. How many cities did you visit during the trip that this Leader "A" made?

Mr. Maheu. Several cities.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall.

Mr. Madigan. Do you recall telling me yesterday that they were?

Mr. Maheu. Do you recall yesterday identifying the leader?

Mr. Madigan. I do.

Let's go off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. That they may have been, yes.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. That is correct.

Mr. Madigan. And that occurred in New York and the other cities that he stayed at while he was in the United States?

Mr.Maheu. That is correct.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted] --

Mr. Maheu. No.

Mr. Madigan. But, you did not bring a crowd of six or seven.

Mr. Maheu. I have no recollection that any woman travelled with me, may have travelled independently, but I have no recollection of being on the same plane with any of these people.

Mr. Madigan. You think may have traveled from city to city, or four or five?

Mr. Maheu. One may have gone to one further city. That is the best of my recollection.

Mr. Madigan. And the others that were provided in each city were sort of local, so that they could be controlled, more or less, by the local police?

Mr. Maheu. That's my recollection.

Mr. Madigan. Is that the theory of the project?

Mr. Maheu. That's my recollection.

Mr. Madigan. Now with regard to this same leader, did you ever receive an assignment from the CIA to produce any film with regard to him?

Mr. Maheu. Yes, I did.

Mr. Madigan. Do you remember when that assignment was in terms of whether it was before or after this visit to the United States?

Mr. Maheu. Subsequent to his visit to the United States he made a trip to Russia. Our inputs were to the effect that he brought back from Russia with him an attractive, Russian agent, and that his philosophies relative to the United States began to change appreciably and that the security of the United States was in great jeopardy as a result of whatever influence this female agent was able to have upon him.

Mr. Madigan. As a result of that, what assignment did you receive, if any, from the CIA?

Mr. Maheu. As a result, I was asked if -- well, as a result I was provided with pictures reflecting the quarters, allegedly reflected the quarters to which she was assigned during his trip to Russia, photographs of the female agent, and I was asked if I could find some contacts in Los Angeles who could produce a set resembling the headquarters reflected on the pictures, a woman who looked like the female agent, a male who looked like the leader, and take some pictures subsequently showing them together within the confines of the alleged headquarters.

Mr. Madigan. Did you recruit anybody to be in this film?

Mr. Maheu. Yes, I did.

Mr. Madigan. Who was that?

Mr.Maheu. I recruited a man who was working for me in Tucson, Arizona by the name of Charles Kays, a female agent who was known to -- I mean a female who was known to the law

[redacted]

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. I have no recollection. I can't believe that where you would find [redacted], I don't believe so no.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. [redacted]

Mr. Madigan. Was that Bautzer?

Mr. Maheu. No, sir.

Mr. Madigan. Who was that?

Mr. Maheu. First I discussed the matter with Howard Hughes and he recommended that I contact Mr. Larry Crosby, which I did.

Mr. Madigan. Did Hughes have to approve your being involved in this?

Mr. Maheu. I am not sure he had to approve. I was just seeking his advice.

Mr. Madigan. You were more or less just telling him about it?

Mr. Maheu. I beg your pardon?

Mr. Madigan. You were just telling him about it?

Mr. Maheu. No, Mr. Hughes had been in the industry, he had been in movie studios, I thought he could be helpful to this contract.

Mr. Madigan. Did you deal with O'Connell with regard to this contract or with somebody else?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that I dealt with Mr. O'Connell and Colonel Edwards.

Mr. Madigan. Colonel Edwards?

Who was this person, the female who was known to --

Mr. Maheu. I really don't remember. The one and only time I have seen her in my life.

Mr. Madigan. Could this film have been described as a pornographic film, or was it something less than that?

Mr. Maheu. By today's technology, I would say definitely no.

Mr. Madigan. You say this woman was known to the law enforcement authorities. Was she suspected by yourself to be a prostitute?

Mr. Maheu. Not at all.

Mr. Madigan. Not at all?

Mr. Maheu. Not at all.

Mr. Madigan. She was just an actress of some kind?

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall, but my recollection is she was highly respected by the law enforcement authorities. Whether she was an informant for them or what the relationship was, I don't know.

Mr. Madigan. So you produced one film? One film cannister as a result of this, movie film?

Mr. Maheu. Very short.

Mr. Madigan. Did you make any still photographs or anything like that?

Mr. Maheu. No, I did not.

Mr. Madigan. And then you turned the film over to the CIA?

Mr. Maheu. That is correct.

Mr. Madigan. And thereafter do you know what happened to it?

Mr. Maheu. No, I do not.

Mr. Madigan. Were you told what was going to be done with it?

Mr. Maheu. I was told that the stills would be distributed in the country of the leader in an attempt to embarrass him and hopefully as a result remove what was considered to be a very serious threat to the national security of our country.

Mr. Madigan. Were you ever familiar with the project names that were attached to these assignments by the CIA?

Mr. Maheu. Not that I recollect, no.

Mr. Madigan. Did you ever hear of project Happy Days?

Mr. Maheu. No.

Mr. Madigan. Or Project Harp Star?

Mr. Maheu. No.

Mr. Madigan. Or Project Norfok?

Mr. Maheu. No.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. Yes, sir.

Mr. Madigan. What was your assignment in that regard?

Mr. Maheu. [redacted]

Mr. Madigan. And who did you contact with regard to that?

Mr. Maheu. I contacted Mr. Gregson Bautzer.

Mr. Madigan. Is that B-a-u-t-z-e-r?

Mr. Maheu. B-a-u-t-z-e-r, a Hollywood attorney.

Mr. Madigan. And did he hold the [redacted] that you refer to?

Mr. Maheu. Yes, he did.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that the intent was to have young movie starlets present at the party, but I do not have any recollection of receiving any instructions stating that, for instance, one specific person was to be his date, if that's what you're --

Mr. Madigan. So your understanding was to have a number available at the party, that's all. Not to have anyone --

Mr. Maheu. To have the party, period.

Mr. Madigan. Not to introduce one to him?

Mr. Maheu. That is correct.

I did not go to the party. I do not know who all was there. I do recall that there were quite a few people present and again, my recollection is that since this particular leader was enthralled with Hollywood that the intent was to have present people who -- with whom he would have an opportunity to converse concerning his interests in the movie industry, and the making of movies, and talk to not only starlets, but I believe that some male stars were also invited to the party.

Mr. Madigan. As a result of the party, did the leader associate himself with one particular female?

Mr. Maheu. I was subsequently told that as a result of the -- having met a young starlet at the party, that he subsequently invited her to spend time with him in his country.

Mr. Madigan. Were you ever asked to be involved in providing a house in Long Island for him to stay at with this particular female?

Mr. Maheu. I have no recollection that I was asked.

Mr. Madigan. Do you know who that person was?

Mr. Maheu. I do not recall the name.

Mr. Madigan. You indicated that your recollection was that there was some [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. [redacted]

Mr. Madigan. Was your assignment in that regard solely [redacted] was that the end of it?

Mr. Maheu. That is my recollection of it, yes.

Mr. Madigan. Did you have any other assignments with regard to that Leader "B"?

Mr. Maheu. I have no recollection.

Mr. Madigan. Did you have any other assignments with regard to Leader "A"?

Mr. Maheu. I have no recollection that I did.

Mr. Madigan. Did you undertake any other Agency assignments with regard to any other leader of any other country?

Mr. Maheu. I have no recollection that I did.

Mr. Madigan. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. That name is familiar, yes, now that you mention it.

Mr. Madigan. Do you think [redacted] might have been the person?

Mr. Maheu. I think [redacted] might have been, yes.

Mr. Madigan. Did you contact Howard Hughes with regard to that assignment?

Mr. Maheu. No, I did not. However, Mr. Bautzer was, in those days, Mr. Hughes' personal attorney.

Mr. Madigan. Would you date that [redacted] assignment as being around 1959?

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall. It was before 1960, but that would sound approximately right.

Mr. Madigan. Did you ever have your office in Washington used for cover purposes by the CIA?

Mr. Maheu. Yes, I have.

Mr. Madigan. Do you know on how many occasions?

Mr. Maheu. On several occasions.

Mr. Madigan. Do you know what the purpose of the agent that would be using it for cover was?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that my role was limited simply to fund their income. In other words, they would be on the payroll of Robert A. Maheu Associates and that I would be reimbursed the exact amount of their payroll.

As to the specific assignments, I have no recollection.

Mr. Madigan. What types of duties would they have for an employee who was working in [redacted] at some point in their career?

Mr. Maheu. Yes, we did.

Mr. Madigan. Would you recall that to be around 1968, or do you have a specific recollection?

Mr. Maheu. It would be about that time.

Mr. Madigan. About that time.

Mr. Maheu. Yes.

Mr. Madigan. And did you ever hear of the name [redacted] with regard to that cover arrangement? [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall. My recollection is that the guy's name was [redacted] but I don't recall the name [redacted] Perhaps he was placed on the payroll as [redacted] but I don't recall.

Mr. Madigan. You did not address him as [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. No, not to my recollection.

Mr. Madigan. What was he supposed to be doing in [redacted] do you know?

Mr. Maheu. Covertly or overtly?

Mr. Madigan. Both.

Let's start with covertly.

Mr. Maheu. Covertly he was -- he had an assignment from the Agency which I don't know. Overtly he was an employee of Robert A. Maheu Associates trying to exploit the possibility of business ventures in the country [redacted]

Mr. Madigan. You have no inclination or no feeling at all for what his assignment was?

Mr. Maheu. No, I do not.

Mr. Madigan. In covert terms whether it was an espionage assignment or whether it was a PR kind of assignment? No idea?

Mr. Maheu. I don't know.

Mr. Madigan. Was there ever an island involved with that assignment to your knowledge?

Mr. Maheu. Not to my knowledge or recollection.

Mr. Madigan. You never heard of an island called [redacted] have you?

Mr. Maheu. Not to my recollection.

Mr. Madigan. During the 1960's did you employ a fellow by the name of Jack Buckley? We may have discussed this before.

Mr. Maheu. I believe that from time to time a Jack Buckley did work for Robert A. Maheu Associates. I don't believe he was an employee.

Mr. Madigan. Would he be on a kind of an intermittent contract basis like Frank was? You would use him every once in awhile?

Mr. Maheu. My recollection is that he did some work for Robert A. Maheu Associates and, as I say, not an employee.

Mr. Madigan. Do you know what types of assignments he did?

Mr. Liebengood. Mr. Mort Jackson?

Mr. Maheu. I don't remember his name.

Mr. Madigan. Mort Jackson being an attorney --

Mr. Liebengood. -- in Los Angeles.

Mr. Al Long of the Secret Service?

Mr. Maheu. Don't remember his name.

Mr. Liebengood. [redacted] formerly of the Central Intelligence Agency, a resident of Florida.

Mr. Maheu. Don't remember his name.

Mr. Liebengood. [redacted]

Mr. Maheu. Don't remember his name.

Mr. Liebengood. James McCord?

Mr. Maheu. Only what I saw in the newspapers.

Mr. Liebengood. But you had no dealings with him while you were in Washington?

Mr. Maheu. Not to my recollection.

Mr. Madigan. Just briefly, in that regard, we discussed yesterday whether you had any recollection of Mr. McCord being involved -- or at least I think we discussed it -- in any either sweeping of your office or electronic equipment or using of your office as a listening post or anything like that?

Mr. Maheu. I don't remember.

Mr. Madigan. And your indication was you didn't have any recollection?

Mr. Maheu. No.

payroll, and for the second time I was turned down by Mr. Hughes. I believe it was in September of 1969 that I finally called Mr. Meier in and requested his resignation and then I informed Mr. Hughes that he had resigned.

After the departure of Mr. Meier, while going through his files, Mr. Ellson ran into some documents that indicated some very serious double escrows on mining properties and we recommended to Mr. Hughes that all the information be made available to the authorities and let the chips fall where they may.

Mr. Liebengood. Do you know why Mr. Hughes was not inclined to follow your recommendations with regards to Meier's termination at earlier dates?

Mr. Maheu. He was afraid that Meier would embarrass him. At least, that is what he told me.

Mr. Liebengood. You are aware of no CIA interest in Meier?

Mr. Maheu. The only thing I know is that Meier was cut in on the cover [redacted] and was aware of that operation.

Mr. Liebengood. How did that come about? How was he cut in on that?

Mr. Maheu. Because it was he who initially had worked on a deal for a venture in Mexico on the part of Hughes Aircraft for cable television and subsequent to -- well, when that collapsed, the person who was to be the partner of Hughes Aircraft in that particular venture threatened to sue Howard Hughes and all of the Hughes interest for non-fulfillment of contract, and I made a recommendation to that person whose name slips my mind, but I believe his last name was Jamie, J-a-m-i-e or something like that, I don't recall. But to try to discourage him from filing such a lawsuit I suggested that he and I put up $10,000 in [redacted] and check into the possibility of developing business there.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

I put up my ten, he never put his up, and Meier was the one who was involved. But when the Agency needed a cover for an assignment in [redacted] Meier was made privy of this by the Agency.

Mr. Liebengood. Just to be certain I understand, this was because of Meier's role in reestablishing the operation in [redacted] Is that correct?

Mr. Maheu. Well, of trying to save the lawsuit, yes. That's right.

Mr. Liebengood. And you think the name of this would-be partner was Jamie?

Mr. Maheu. I don't remember whether that was the first name or last name.

Mr. Liebengood. How did [redacted] whatever way do you spell his last name, do you recall?

Mr. Maheu. I don't recall.

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

Mr. Liebengood. Do you know who accompanied Meier and F. Donald Nixon on this trip to the Dominican Republic, the celebrated trip?

Mr. Maheu. No, I do not.

Mr. Liebengood. As far as you know, they had nothing to do with any Agency interest in that?

Mr. Maheu. No, sir, not as far as I know.

As a matter of fact, it's my recollection I found out about this afterwards.

Mr. Liebengood. Who else was witting of the cover arrangements that you had with the Agency through Robert A. Maheu Associates? You mentioned Meier and this particular one. Did you have other employees who were witting of the cover?

Mr. Maheu. I believe Bill Staton was aware of some of it.

Mr. Liebengood. And did he keep your books?

Mr. Maheu. Yes.

Mr. Liebengood. And outside of the [redacted] Meier was not witting of any other cover arrangements, I take it?

Mr. Maheu. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Liebengood. Do you recall who the other personnel were through the years that obtained Robert A. Maheu Associates cover for the Agency?

Mr. Maheu. I don't.

MEMORANDUM FOR: FILE

FROM: JAMES N. ROETHE

SUBJECT: Further Information obtained from George Brewer
(See February 18 Interview)

On Monday, February 24, I again spoke with George Brewer in the Commission offices from approximately 9:00 am until 10:15 am. The following additional information was obtained.

Technical Operations

In 1960 and 1961, Brewer was primary involved in Bay of Pigs operations (providing support to the Miami Field Office in smuggling friendly Cubans into the United States). He was engaged in little technical activity during that time. Between 1962 and 1965, he was involved in approximately 30 technical operations, only four of which were telephone taps (the rest were mike and wire cases). During that same period four or five other support agents were also engaged in technical activities, each performing approximately the same amount of technical work that Brewer was performing. Some of the agents doing technical work were Jack Cryer, Hal Tittsler, and Bill Simpson, the latter being a former instructor of Brewer's. Both Cryer and Simpson had been doing technical work for quite some time (throughout the 50's). (1151-52)

In 1965 or 1966, following President Johnson's Executive Order precluding wire taps without court order or without approval of the Attorney General in security cases, technical work performed by Brewer and others at the Washington Field Office almost stopped completely. Brewer can recall only two taps that were placed during that period. One of these was placed in a Safe House in the Washington area, and the other was placed in a New York apartment in connection with Project PARAGON. Brewer assumes that the appropriate approvals were obtained prior to his placing these taps. (1147-48)

Most of the technical operations in the early 1960's were performed at the request of the Operations Directorate. While Brewer was not privy to the purpose for each technical operation that he performed, he believes that many involved

Safe Houses for use by defectors and the wiring of operations assets' apartments or other premises where conversations with assets would be forthcoming. For instance, in 1962 the apartment of a defector (Golitzen) was wired. It was believed that Golitzen had become unhappy with CIA treatment and was considering leaving the country. A telephone tap was placed on his phone to attempt to verify this. Brewer believes that these cases involved positive foreign intelligence gathering as opposed to being security cases. From the names of the individuals whose conversations were to be recorded, Brewer presumes that most of these technical operations were directed against foreigners.

Brewer is aware of a few technical operations relating to security. One involved the bugging of the premises of a former employee [redacted] in about 1964 because of his questionable associates. Another, in 1963, involved a telephone tap on a newsman (although Brewer was unaware at the time the tap was placed that it was being directed against a newsman). (1149)

The Technical Division of the Office of Security may have been involved in some technical operations in the United States during the 1960's and earlier. However, their primary responsibility was counter-audio work overseas. Brewer does not believe that they would have been involved in significant amounts of technical work in the States.
To his knowledge, FBI was not informed of these technical operations, p.1155)

Surveillance Operations

Prior to 1968, the Washington Field Office was performing some unsophisticated surveillance. This generally related to surveillance of defectors and training operations directed against perspective overseas CIA agents. The purpose of the training was to assist WFO in its surveillance techniques and to determine how well the perspective overseas agents could make contacts and "drops" without being detected. The Field Office had little equipment to undertake sophisticated surveillance at that time. (1120-28)

In 1968, with the creation of the Surveillance and Technical Unit, a much more concentrated effort was made in the area of surveillance. (1127)

Assistance to Local Police

Brewer remembers that at some point in time two sets of alias documents prepared by Technical Services were given to the Metropolitan Police Department. This included a social security card, driver's license, D. C. permit, etc.

I again interviewed Mr. Brewer at approximately 2:30 pm on the same day, just prior to his leaving for the Commission hearings, at which he was testifying. He indicated that it was the policy of the CIA to offer gratuities to various police officers in the Washington, D.C., area for their assistance to the CIA. Each Christmas a list would be prepared of those individuals from local police departments who had provided assistance,and appropriate gifts would be given to these individuals, ranging from candy and liquor to $25 gift certificates. The money for these gifts was taken from CIA's "Blue Jay" fund, used for miscellaneous expenses. Some police officials would not accept such gratuities. (11723,75)

Brewer is also aware of one occasion when police officials from several departments were flown to a hunting lodge owned by the Agency in southern Virginia. Brewer recalls several officers from the Montgomery County, Fairfax County (including [redacted]), and Metropolitan Police Departments(including [redacted], but not [redacted]--who refused an invitation) attending, as well as a high police official from Boston. Brewer himself attended this gathering and indicated that as best as he can remember it was strictly a social affair. Brewer could not recall ever having agreed to provide [redacted] of the Fairfax County Police Department with an automobile while [redacted] was on vacation in California, although he would not deny that he may have done so. (11727,73)

Brewer indicated that all gratuities given police officials were approved by Headquarters and that none were specifically connected with any particular request being made of the police by the CIA. (1172)

COMMISSION ON CIA ACTIVITIES WITHIN THE UNITED STATES
Washington, DC 20500

February 20, 1975

SECRET/SENSITIVE

MEMORANDUM FOR: FILE

FROM: JAMES N. ROETHE

SUBJECT: Summary of an Interview with George R. Brewer, Conducted on Tuesday, February 18, 1975, in the Offices of the Commission by James N. Roethe and Robert Olsen

The interview commenced at approximately 4:00 pm on February 18, 1975, and ended at approximately 8:30 pm on the same date. Mr. Brewer appeared voluntarily at the request of the Commission staff.

Background of Mr. Brewer

Mr. Brewer is a graduate of the University of Maryland. He has been with the CIA for over twenty years and is presently Chief of the Director's Security Staff. The interview concerned itself primarily with the activities of the Washington Field Office of the Office of Security. Mr. Brewer first worked in that office from January 1955 to February 1956. From February 1956 to April 1959 he was on Director Dulles' personal security staff. He served with the Headquarters Field Office (now defunct) from April 1959 to August 1960 and again served with the Washington Field Office from August 1960 to July 1973, when he obtained his present position.

Activities at the Washington Field Office

The Washington Field Office is made up of 35-40 agents. Clericals bring the total of employees to about 100. It is by far the largest security field office. The majority of the agents are designated as field agents, whose primary activity is investigating applicants for employment with the Agency and some covert investigations (investigations under cover, such as investigations of contractor's employees or individuals planning to be sent overseas under cover). The remaining agents are designated as support agents (about 8 men) who provide a broad range of support to the field agents. In 1966 Mr. Brewer, a support agent, was designated as the Washington Field Office's liaison with the local police (including the Metropolitan Police Department, most suburban police departments, and the Virginia and Maryland State Police). In November of 1968, Mr. Brewer was placed in charge of a newly created "Surveillance and Technical Unit" of the Support Squad. He remained in both positions until he left the Office in July of 1973. Mr. Brewer emphasized that no activity was undertaken by the field office without the approval of headquarters. Requests for action in Mr. Brewer's areas of interest would be received by headquarters security, generally from the Operations Directorate. The "Security Support Branch" at headquarters would pass the request on to the

SECRET/SENSITIVE

"Assistant Special Agent in Charge of Support" at the field office (Mr. John Hutchinson during most of Mr. Brewer's tenure), who in turn would ask Mr. Brewer to carry out the request.

The following persons have headed the Washington Field Office as "Special Agent-in-Charge":

Charles Kane	1960-1963
Marvin Gentile	1963-1964
John Noble	1964-1968
Ed Klippa	1968-1973
Jack Cryer	Present

Covert Investigations by Field Agents

Such investigations were conducted much less frequently than overt investigations of applicants for employment. Several unofficial covers were used by investigators to prevent the person being investigated from being exposed as a CIA contact.

Technical Operations

Technical operations consisted of the planting of electronic listening devices (King) and the telephone taps (Queen). No technical devices were planted by the Washington Field Office after the formation in 1968 of the "Surveillance and Technical Unit." However, Mr. Brewer has planted technical devices prior to 1968:

1. In about 1966 Mr. Brewer planted a listening device in an apartment at the Savoy Apartments in Washington, D. C. (a CIA Safe House). This device was later removed and Brewer was told it was never used.

2. About 8 years ago Mr. Brewer placed several bugs in a Washington Safe House. He believes they have never been removed. They have never been used to his knowledge.

3. About 10 years ago Mr. Brewer was called back from vacation to bug a cadillac to be used by two Chinese generals.

4. At one time Mr. Brewer bugged hotel rooms in the Washington area where unwitting U-2 pilot applicants were being interviewed.

5. In 1963 Mr. Brewer placed telephone taps on phones in a home in Washington (MOCKINGBIRD case). At the time he did not know he was tapping a news columnist's phone, but he later learned that that had been the case.

6. Four houses in Miami were bugged by Mr. Brewer shortly after the Bay of Pigs incident.

7. A hotel room in Los Angeles was bugged by Brewer several years ago. It was to be used for some kind of interview.

8. A home in Bethesda, Maryland, was also bugged before being occupied by a Cuban National.

In all, Mr. Brewer believes he was involved in more than ten technical operations, but less than 100 prior to 1968. In all cases he was merely supplying technical support for operations at the request of his superiors, and was not witting to the actual operation. In each case he assumed the propriety and lawfulness of the operation.

Since 1966, Mr. Brewer has been engaged in only one technical operation (Operation PARAGON--threat against Director Helms and Vice President Agnew). When that threat was made, Brewer suggested that a line be run into the informing agent's apartment. Such a line was run from that agent's telephone (a telephone tap). This operation was approved by higher authority.

Surveillance

Surveillance was conducted off and on through the period from 1960 to 1973. However, active surveillance did not begin until 1968 when the "Surveillance and Technical Unit" was formed. Prior to 1968, surveillance was restricted to training exercises and surveillance of defectors. Mr. Brewer estimated that he engaged in about ten such operations prior to 1968. Training surveillance continued after 1968, but only one surveillance of a defector was made during that time.

In 1966 Headquarters requested that the Washington Field Headquarters form a sophisticated surveillance unit. Such a unit was not really created until Brewer took over the "Surveillance and Technical Unit" in 1968. After 1968 surveillance took up a large part of the time of the "Surveillance and Technical Unit's" time. The Unit consisted of 14 support agents and was expanded to 20-24 men during some surveillances. The Washington Field Office did surveillance for the entire country with regard to Security Office matters. If a surveillance was conducted anywhere in the country, Brewer believes he would know of it. If surveillance was conducted in the territory of another field office, that field office would have been in charge, with the Washington Office providing the support. The following surveillance was undertaken by Brewer's Unit:

1. Surveillance of Employees or Former Employees

✓ [redacted]

b. Project CAPUSTO (8 Ball): Employee associating with former defector was surveilled.

c. Project TOMCAT: An associate of CAPUSTO was surveilled.

d. Project MONEY: A former employee planning to attend the SALT talks with his new boss was surveilled.

e. Project SIESTA: Surveillance on a former employee and the suspected Castro agent she was living with.

f. Project PINEAPPLE: Surveillance of a former employee living above his means. Washington Field Office surveilled outside D.C. Anderson Associates surveilled in D.C. and at subject's Arlington home. Washington Field Office did not participate in any break-in of subject's apartment.

g. Project AMOS: Former employee surveilled to Champaign, Illinois.

h. Project PIXIE: (last job): Two employees and son of another surveilled for suspected drug use and/or sale.

i. Project PARAGON: Informer who reported threat against Director Helms and Vice President Agnew surveilled in New York and Detroit.

j. MARCHETTI: Former employee threatening to publish classified material (which he could not have obtained during the course of his employment) was surveilled. Three cars were used in surveillance. No police cover.

2. Surveillance of Newsmen (to determine source of security leaks)

a. Jack Anderson: Brewer knew that surveillance was to determine source of Anderson's publishing of classified information. Mr. Brewer questioned his superior (John Hutchinson) about the case. He wondered why the FBI was not involved and understood that the FBI didn't want to touch the case (rumor). Along with Jack Anderson, two of his aides--Les Whitten and Joe Spear--were surveilled.

b. Michael Getler: Mr. Brewer also questioned this surveillance, but not strongly as Getler was relatively unknown. Further, he really didn't know the reason why Getler was being surveilled until later.

3. Other Surveillances

a. A nephew of an assistant to Director McCone was surveilled after he went berserk and threatened to go to the Russians. He was surveilled for two days.

In all cases of surveillance, photographs of the subject and his contacts were taken. Further, the identity of the contact was also ascertained and reported to headquarters. No surveillance was ever placed on a Congressman, Senator, Judge or Justice or other public figure except the newsmen previously mentioned. Mr. Brewer believes that there were no cases of surveillance undertaken by his Unit which did not involve either (1) a threatened security leak to newsmen, or (2) a potential security violation, except Project PARAGON.

The records kept on surveillances include the letters assigning the surveillance to the Unit, the agents' logs, photographs taken and the final report of each project. This information was all sent to Headquarters. The Field Office would also retain copies but never made any use of these files.

Break-Ins:

Mr. Brewer's Surveillance Unit was only involved in one break-in in connection with Project SIESTA, involving a former employee living with a suspected Castro sympathizer. A photographic studio, jointly operated by the employee and her Cuban boy friend, was broken into. This didn't bother Brewer, as there was strong evidence suggesting a possible security violation. Further, the suspected pair was soliciting passport photo business at CIA,which would give them information about the travels of CIA agents. A second break-in was effected by Anderson Associates (a CIA proprietary) in Project SIESTA. Brewer doesn't know who headed up Anderson Associates. He believes that Ralph True, Joe Langon and Don Connor may have had some connection with it.

Mr. Brewer's Surveillance Unit was disbanded in June or July of 1972. Brewer is not sure why the Unit was disbanded. The Washington Field Office still does training surveillance and surveillance of defectors. There have been no instances (to Brewer's knowledge) of potential employee security leaks since the Surveillance Unit was disbanded.

Activity with Dissident Groups

On three occasions (in 1969, 1970 and May 1971) the CIA participated with the Washington police in monitoring peace and anti-war demonstrations. In each case a request was made by the Washington Police Department (MPD), through Captain George Suter, for assistance. The Washington Field Office of CIA furnished six vehicles with communications gear and men to operate the gear. Mr. Brewer believes that two CIA agents and one police officer occupied each car. (More CIA agents than police were utilized,as MPD didn't have the necessary manpower.) The only purpose of this operation was to monitor the movements of the crowds. There was no attempt to penetrate any dissident organization or to photograph the crowds. The CIA agents involved in the May 1,1971, operation carried police ID's. CIA also provided a fully-staffed communications center at MPD to receive communications from the cars. This provided MPD a second radio frequency and freed MPD's own channels for other police business.

Brewer believes that the primary purpose of this operation was to render communications assistance to the local police. The secondary purpose was to monitor crowds so as to protect CIA installations. (For example, MPD had obtained some information that various dissident groups planned to picket CIA Headquarters and planned to harass Director Helms during a planned speech.) All of these CIA operations were verbally approved by Headquarters Support Branch (Mr. Cryer). Total period of time devoted to monitoring dissident groups with MPD (for all three occasions) was about five days. Brewer is not aware of any instance where the Washington Field Office tried to penetrate any dissident groups.

Collection of Information on Dissident Groups

During the period of the demonstrations in 1969-1971, all field offices and resident agents were requested by Headquarters to look out for literature and other information which might in any way affect the CIA. No conscious intelligence gathering of literature was requested. Items to be looked for included campus news clippings, etc.. This project was not a continuing one over the three-year period when most demonstrations occurred. It was renewed from time to time as flare-ups in activity occurred. Mr. Brewer does not know the quantity of material collected or the use made of that material. The only information that Brewer knows was collected by the Washington Field Office consisted of the weekly intelligence summary prepared by MPD. Headquarters specifically asked Brewer to get the summaries (either Jack Cryer, Tex Mills or Curt Rivers),and they were forwarded to Headquarters. No effort was made by Brewer to obtain information concerning any dissident group's intended activities.

Police Cover Operations

Mr. Brewer indicated that Washington Field Office agents have received police cover from the following police departments:

1. Metropolitan Police Department (MPD) During the May 1971 demonstrations, MPD furnished ID's to those CIA agents monitoring the crowds along with police officers. These ID cards were in fact used. No other police cover was obtained from MPD.

2. Fairfax City Police Department: In connection with Operation SIESTA (which included a break-in at the photographic studio in Fairfax City, operated by a suspected Castro Agent) cover was obtained from the police. One CIA agent was given a Fairfax City police badge in case some one walked in on the break-in. The badge was never utilized. Brewer didn't actually remember obtaining this badge, but it was obtained by some one.

3. Fairfax County Police Department: Apparently undercover CIA agents in the county (under DOD cover) were being continuously harassed and challenged in the county while on operations. They feared their cover might be blown and felt it would be good to have police cover to prevent this from occurring. Mr. Brewer himself may have suggested getting badges and identification from the county police. In any event, he thought it was a good idea and Headquarters approved it (per John Hutchinson, Assistant Special Agent in Charge of the Washington Field Office). Thereafter, (latter part of 1971) Brewer went to [redacted] and asked about obtaining some badges and ID's. [redacted] reported that [redacted] was originally reluctant to give CIA the badges and ID, but in early spring of 1972 he changed his mind and relented. Brewer does not know if Osborn called [redacted] or if there was any arm-twisting by the CIA. Brewer himself did no arm-twisting. Nine patrolman's badges and one sergeant's badge were obtained, plus ten blank ID cards. The true names of CIA agents were placed on the cards by Brewer. It was understood that if the badges and ID's were ever used that [redacted] would immediately be notified. In fact, they were kept in a safe at Washington Field Office Headquarters and never used. They have recently been returned to Fairfax County.

No police cover was ever obtained by Washington Field Office, or used by them for the purpose of performing police activity. Brewer stated that local police were always kept informed of CIA activities in their jurisdiction.

Other Assistance Rendered CIA by Local Police

Project SIESTA:

This project involved the break-in into a photographic shop in Fairfax City. Three Fairfax City police assisted in the operation. One entered the apartment with several CIA agents; one stood watch on the front steps; and one waited in a squad car outside the building. Much material in the photographic studio was photographed. Surveillance was constantly maintained on the operators of the studio while the break-in was being carried out.

Use of Fairfax County Facilities:

On at least one occasion the Fairfax County police station was used for CIA training purposes. CIA desired to assure themselves that new recruits for covert overseas duty could not be "broken" if siezed by foreign authorities. Consequently, CIA officials would "arrest" these unwitting recruits on some bogus charge and take them to Fairfax County jail where they would be subject to strong interrogation to see if they would "break".

Other Assistance

Almost every police department has agreed to immediately notify the CIA if one of its agents is arrested.

Assistance Rendered to Local Police by the CIA

Training Programs:

In late 1971 a course in photography was offered to officers of local police departments by the Washington Field Office, and in 1972 courses in both surveillance techniques and photography were offered. Representatives from MPD and most large suburban police departments attended. These courses were stopped after the printing of a New York Times article criticizing the training of New York City police by the CIA.

Metropolitan Police Department:

1. May Day - 1971: MPD was furnished six cars equipped with communications gear, plus two men for each car, from the Washington Field Office (WFO). WFO also furnished a central communications command post plus operators. The purpose of this assistance was to permit the monitoring of crowds.

2. In about 1972, Brewer performed a telephone tap for MPD in connection with an internal affairs matter where eleven police officers were potentially involved in a bribe. Brewer understood that a court order was obtained before the taps were put on. [redacted] of MPD made this request and CIA Headquarters approved it.

3. During 1969 demonstrations, [redacted] of MPD asked Brewer if he could wire a lamp in the apartment of a witting police informant who had penetrated anti-war dissident groups. Brewer passed this request on to security headquarters, and the Technical Services Division performed the wiring. CIA did not monitor or receive copies of any conversations recorded.

4. Shortly after a CIA surveillance training course which several MPD officers attended, MPD became desirous of maintaining surveillance on one of its unwitting police informants to see if she was doing what the police paid her to do. MPD asked Brewer if his men would assist the new trainees in the project. Brewer's surveillance unit did furnish assistance, including four cars and at least one man for each car. These CIA agents, together with MPD officers, surveilled the subject for one and one-half days. This is the only time Brewer's surveillance team actually provided manpower to assist MPD in a surveillance.

5. On two or three occasions between 1970 and 1972 the Washington Field Office loaned the MPD Morals Division a device to tap a touch-tone telephone. The request came from [redacted] and [redacted] Ed Sayle of CIA was CIA's contact with [redacted] and [redacted] for equipment requests. Dollard or Foran would call Sayle, who in turn would direct Brewer to provide the equipment.

6. On two or three occasions between 1970 and 1972, Sayle directed Brewer to provide receiving devices to MPD. Once [redacted] of MPD personally contacted Brewer and requested a receiver. It was provided (ostensibly for training purposes).

7. On several occasions covert miniature transmitters were furnished to MPD on an indefinite loan.

8. The Washington Field Office also gave MPD personnel technical advice on use of double tape machines and advice on photography from time to time.

MPD received no assistance from the Washington Field Office when they set up their Intelligence Division in 1967-68. No other assistance was ever rendered MPD concerning solving particular crime or interrogating a particular witness. Sometime after Director Schlessinger became DCI, the MPD was asked to return all equipment previously loaned to it by the CIA, and most was returned. Apparently a list of this equipment has been prepared. (The list may include other police departments as well).

Montgomery County Police Department

In about 1970, Mr. Brewer loaned some transmitters to [redacted] (Ret.) and [redacted] of the county police. They had already been loaned some receivers before Brewer came with the Washington Field Office.

Fairfax County Police Department

1. Years ago the county was given an old Ampex 601 recorder equipped to take a telephone tap off a dial phone.

2. On one occasion Brewer accompanied a county police representative to U.S. Recording on S. Capitol Street to help him pick out a dial recorder for telephone taps.

3. In 1969-70, Brewer loaned some photographic equipment to the county police forces intelligence unit. The equipment has never been returned.

No personnel have ever been loaned to the county. No assistance has ever been given concerning a specific crime or witness.

Other

1. In 1969 or 1970 metal detection demonstrations were given at CIA Headquarters to representatives of all Virginia and Maryland Police Departments.

2. Director Helms owned a beach house near Lewes, Delaware. On one occasion Brewer met with the chief of police there concerning the security of the beach house, as Helms had been receiving threats. Apparently Osborn gave the police chief a box of flares and other equipment (as a gift to the department) for the chief's assistance.

At some point during the interview, Mr. Brewer indicated that he had not discussed his testimony with any representative of the Agency prior to the interview--except the General Counsel.

IMPRESSIONS

Mr. Brewer was originally somewhat reluctant to be interviewed and at one point was considering whether he should retain a lawyer. However, as we went along he opened up considerably to the point where I now believe I have a pretty good understanding of the Office of Security's Washington Field Office. It would appear that the Washington Field Office did conduct much, if not most, of the physical and technical surveillance directed against American citizens subsequent to 1968. In every case the surveillance was directed by higher authority. It also appears that the Washington Field Office gave substantial assistance to local police departments in the Washington, D. C. area. Much of this assistance was obviously an appropriate exchange of information between two intelligence units. Most disturbing is the incident where CIA agents assisted MPD officers in a bona fide police surveillance (a law enforcement function), but this seems to have been an isolated case.

MAJOR SUBJECTS TO BE COVERED IN THE TESTIMONY OF HOWARD J. OSBORN

February 17, 1975

Background of Mr. Osborn

See the written statement submitted to the Commission by Mr. Osborn dated February 11, 1975.

Activities of the Office of Security Giving Rise to Questions

1. Taping Systems in Certain CIA Offices

In the offices of the DCI, the Deputy DCI, the Executive Director-Controller, the Deputy Director for Support (now Administration), the Director of Security, and the Deputy Director of Security, a system of telephone taps and microphones has existed. This system has made it possible to record covertly any telephone conversation or office conference taking place in those offices. All CIA officials in whose offices such equipment was installed were fully aware of its presence and its capability of being activated only by them. Portions of the system have been disconnected in recent years.

2. Covert Uses of Listening Devices by the Office of Security

In each instance the installation of listening devices was expressly approved by the Director of Central Intelligence:

a. A conversation which occurred in a motel between [redacted] and Admiral Rufus Taylor, former Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, was covertly recorded. This was a meeting arranged by Admiral Taylor for the purpose of attempting to persuade Mr. [redacted] not to divulge sensitive information in a book which he was then writing;

b. Interviews with defectors have been covertly recorded from time to time;

c. With the approval of Attorney General Katzenbach, a telephone tap was placed on the telephone of a CIA employee who was alleged to be a spy of a foreign country;

TOP SECRET (XGDS 5B(2) EO 11652
By Authority of: ____________

CIA HAS NO OBJECTION TO DECLASSIFICATION AND/OR RELEASE OF THIS DOCUMENT AS SANITIZED

3 AUG 94

d. Polygraphs of job applicants and some contractors have been routinely covertly recorded;

e. The field offices of the CIA have from time to time installed covert recording devices to record conversations of CIA employees with others where there was some reason to be concerned about the loyalty of such employees.

3. Physical Surveillance

Physical surveillance of individuals in this country has been very rare as far as the Office of Security is concerned. Circumstances under which surveillance has been conducted have been limited to the following:

a. CIA employees and contract agents believed to be divulging classified information to unauthorized persons;

b. Victor Marchetti to find out if he was getting information from current employees of the CIA;

c. Jack Anderson, Les Whitten and another legman to determine their sources of classified information, and Michael Gettner, a staff writer for the Washington Post, for the same purpose;

d. A female contact of the Latin American Division (and some of her associates) who reported to the CIA the existence of a plot to assassinate the Vice President and to kidnap the Director of Central Intelligence.

4. Watergate Contacts

a. The McCord Letters

b. The Pennington Matter

c. Assistance to E. Howard Hunt and White House re Ellsberg

5. Covert Informers Employed by the Agency

a. Within the Agency and Its Contractors
The Office of Security employs a wide range of confidential informers from among the general roster of employees of the Agency. Included here are plumbers, chauffeurs, guards, telephone maintenance men, electricians, members of the char force, etc. These employees are paid additional compensation to act as infomers and to report to the Office of Security on any potential security problems which they observe among their fellow employees at the Agency.

A few outside employees, i.e., non-employees of the Agency, are also retained for the same purpose. This would include employees of the telephone company and construction workers engaged in the construction of Agency buildings. In all instances, however, the purpose is to maintain security among CIA employees and those working for CIA contractors.

Two proprietary companies, called Anderson Security Associates and General Personnel Investigations, have been used to do large-scale investigations of the personnel of companies who contract with the CIA.

b. Outside the Agency

In 1967 and 1968 the Office of Security arranged for Anderson Security Associates to have its employees attend meetings and other functions of various organizations thought to represent potential threats to CIA personnel or installations and to report on such threats. A list of organizations to be checked for indications of such threats was provided to Anderson Security Associates, which in turn provided regular reports to the Office of Security on the activities of the organization monitored.

There was also coordination between the Office of Security and local police departments to cover the same activity. An effort was made to determine the size of anticipated demonstrations and to anticipate what security forces would be necessary to cope with them.

In 1967 and 1968 the Office of Security directed the field offices to solicit or report information on anti-war and dissident elements. The CIA was concerned about the safety of its personnel, such as recruiters on college campuses, and its offices around the country. The field offices were directed at about that time to establish a clipping service on campus and other newspapers to report on organizations and individuals who might represent threats to CIA personnel or offices.

As a result of the information fed into the Office of Security relating to organizations and individuals who may represent such threats, a substantial number of files were accumulated on individuals and organizations.

6. Mail Intercept Programs in New York and San Francisco

7. Cover Operations Using Local Police Cover

Arrangements were made several years ago with [redacted] of the Fairfax County, Va., Police Department for the issuance of badges and other police identification for use by CIA security personnel. This involved about 15 sets of identification.

These badges and other identification were never used by the CIA. They were all returned to [redacted]

Similar arrangements have been made with other police departments.

Strict orders were issued that the use of identification as local police officers was to be limited strictly to situations involving actual cover for surveillance purposes.

8. Training of State and Local Police and Other Assistance

Assistance was rendered to many local police departments, including those of the cities of New York and Chicago, and to the Maryland and Virginia state police during the period 1965 to 1972. He states that this program was vigorously and enthusiastically approved and supported by Mr. Helms.

Assistance consisted of training of personnel, the loaning of equipment, and the declassification of materials and techniques in such areas as photo analysis, surveillance techniques, metals detection, explosives detection, locks and picks, hidden microphones, telephotography and covert photography, and the setting up, handling, and organization of intelligence operations.

This program was terminated upon passage of an amendment to the Law Enforcement Assistance Act, which prohibited assistance to local and state police departments by the CIA.

9. Break-Ins Without Warrants

Mr. Osborn states that the only break-ins which have occurred to his knowledge by security personnel of the CIA have been those involving employees, former employees, or CIA contact agents who were under investigation for suspected disclosure or classified information.

10. Counter-Audio Sweeps

At the request of other departments and agencies, including Congressional Committees, the Office of Security conducts "counter-audio sweeps" of their offices to protect against telephone taps, hidden microphones, and other intercepts of audible communications.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE FILE

FROM: ROBERT OLSEN

SUBJECT: Summary of an Interview of Howard Osborn, conducted on February 10 and 11 in the offices of the Commission by Mr. Robert B. Olsen

Present throughout the interview, which was conducted from 2:00 pm to approximately 5:30 pm on February 10 and from 12 noon until 2:45 pm and from 4:45 pm to approximately 8:00 pm on February 11, was the attorney for Mr. Osborn, Jack Debelius.

Mr. Osborn appeared voluntarily at the request of the Commission staff. At the outset, Mr. Debelius raised a series of questions:

1. He asked us to supply an outline of the authority of the Commission. He was handed a copy of the Executive Order creating the Commission and spelling out its duties and powers.

2. He asked whether the Commission had subpoena powers, and he was advised that it did not.

3. He asked whether the Commission had power to grant immunity to witnesses, and he was advised that the Commission does not have such power.

4. He asked what liaison has been established, or will be established between the Commission and the various Senate and House Committees which will be investigating the CIA and other intelligence activities. He was told that the Commission expects to establish such liaison, but that none of the ground rules or arrangements have yet been agreed upon.

5. He asked whether Mr. Osborn would have an opportunity to review the transcript of any recorded testimony that he may give to the Commission or to the Commission staff. He was told that the Commission staff had agreed upon a policy of allowing any witness to examine the transcript of his own testimony.

6. He asked whether Mr. Olsen had been cleared for security and whether Mr. Osborn was free to reveal all levels of classified information in the course of the interview. He was advised that such a clearance had been obtained for Mr. Olsen and that Mr. Osborn was free to answer fully any questions put to him within the scope of the responsibilities of the Commission.

TOP SECRET (XGDS-5B(2) EO 11652
By Authority of ______________

Mr. Debelius stated that he had carefully reviewed his own situation as a former employee of the Office of Security within the CIA and that he had concluded that there was no prospect that he would be called as a witness either by the Commission or by any Congressional or other committee. Hence, he did not feel that there would be any conflict in his representation of Mr. Osborn under the canons of ethics applicable to the legal profession.

Background of Mr. Osborn

Howard Osborn graduated from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute in 1940 and shortly thereafter entered the military service. After World War II he was briefly with Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, and then joined the Central Intelligence Agency in late 1947. He served in various assignments within the United States and Europe prior to September 1963, including assignment as Assistant to the Inspector General and positions within the Directorate of Plans. In September 1963 he was named Deputy Director of Security. At that time the Director of Security was Bob Bannerman. On July 1, 1964, he was named Director of Security, and he continued in that position until early March 1974 when he applied for disability retirement and went on sick leave. He was retired on disability on December 31, 1974, having not returned to work since going on sick leave on March 8, 1974. He states that he had no involvement whatever with Agency activities after March 8, 1974.

Activities of the Office of Security

The Office of Security provides guards and security personnel to protect the physical facilities of the Agency. It has responsibility for overall security measures for all CIA installations, both in the United States and in foreign countries.

Counter-Audio Sweeps

At the request of other departments and agencies of the United States Government it conducts "counter-audio sweeps" of their offices to protect against telephone taps, hidden microphones, and other intercepts of audible communications.

In the case of Congressional committees and subcommittees, it conducts such sweeps of hearings rooms on the occasion of classified presentations by CIA personnel. Mr. Osborn further stated that there may have been other occasions when such sweeps were made of Congressional committee rooms, at the committee request, where classified presentations were to be made. Mr. Osborn does not, however, specifically recall such other occasions.

It also seems to Mr. Osborn that the Office of Security has made similar counter-audio sweeps for one or more individual congressmen or senators of their offices in the Senate or House Office Buildings, but he again has no specific recollection. The Office of Security also makes such sweeps of the homes of officials of the CIA with their knowledge.

He knows of no case in which the CIA has made a sweep of any other residences.

It does make sweeps of private firms who have CIA contracts, but always with the knowledge and consent of the firm.

He states that his Office has never used equipment for counter-audio sweeps for "positive intelligence."

The sweeps conducted included physical inspection, checking all telephones for taps, checking desks, walls, ceilings and floors for listening devices or radio receivers, and may involve such sophisticated measures as counter-laser measures and the use of a Dodge mobile home equipped with sophisticated equipment capable of picking up a radio transmission from nearby premises.

Taping Systems in Certain CIA Offices

Mr. Osborn stated that Mr. Helms had authorized for use in his office, in the office of the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, in the office of the Executive Director-Controller, in the office of the Deputy Director for Support (now Administration), in the office of the Director of Security, and in the office of the Deputy Director of Security a system of telephone taps and secret microphones which made it possible to record covertly any telephone conversation or office conference taking place in those offices. The taping system could be activated with respect to telephones by depressing a button on the telephone in the office or on the telephone at the desk of the secretary in the adjacent office. The taping system to record office conversations would be activated by depressing a button under the carpet in the vicinity of the desk of the person occupying that office. All CIA officials in whose offices such equipment was installed were fully aware of its presence and its capability of being activated only by them.

The recorded conversations from all of these offices, except those in the Office of Security, were recorded in a central bank of recorders located in the basement of the building. Those emanating from the Office of the Director of Security or Deputy Director of Security were recorded on twin recorders located down the hall from those offices.

All recorded telephone and office conversations were transcribed. In some instances the tapes were retained, and in some instances they were erased. It is not known whether the Agency retains any copies of the typed transcripts. From time to time, particularly as an official has departed from the CIA, he has ordered tapes erased and transcripts destroyed.

Mr. Osborn reports that Mr. Colby directed the removal of the recording and telephone taping equipment from his office when he became Executive Director-Controller of the Agency and again when he became Director of Central Intelligence. Mr. Bannerman also had the equipment taken out of his office when he became Deputy Director for Support (Administration). Apparently all other officials in whose offices such equipment was installed used it from time to time.

Positive Uses of Counter-Audio Equipment

Mr. Osborn stated that he wishes to clarify his previous testimony that counter-audio had not been used in a positive sense. What he meant was that it had not been used in the positive sense under any of the circumstances referred to above. There were, however, several situations in which telephone tapes and covert recording devices were employed by the Office of Security:

1. A conversation which occurred in a motel between [redacted] and Admiral Rufus Taylor, former Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, was covertly recorded. This was a meeting arranged by Admiral Taylor for the purpose of attempting to persuade [redacted] not to divulge sensitive information in a book which he was then writing;

2. Interviews with defectors have been covertly recorded from time to time;

3. With the approval of Attorney General Katzenbach, a telephone tap was placed on the telephone of a CIA employee who was alleged to be a spy of a foreign country;

4. Polygraphs of job applicants and some contractors have been routinely covertly recorded;

5. The field offices of the CIA have from time to time installed covert recording devices to record conversations of CIA employees with others where there was some reason to be concerned about the loyalty of such employees. In each instance the installation of such listening devices was expressly approved by the Director of Central Intelligence. Mr. Osborn recalls only three such instances:

    a. In 1972-73 such a device was installed in an effort to uncover details where an old defector was being forced to make kickbacks of his compensation from CIA to his CIA case officer;

    b. At a date which could not be recalled by Mr. Osborn a device had been installed to record activity of a female employee of the CIA who had become closely and intimately associated with persons believed to be dissidents;

    c. In about 1968 or 1969 at the request of Mr. Frank Bartamo of the Department of Defense the CIA planted listening devices at the apartment of a serviceman doing highly sensitive cryptographic work. This was done with the full knowledge of Mr. William Sullivan of the FBI. Mr. Osborn speculates that the CIA was called upon to accomplish this task for the Department of Defense because Mr. Sullivan believed that J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the FBI, would not approve.

Mr. Osborn states that there may have been other instances where such listening devices were installed within the United States, but he does not recall any others. He is emphatic to the effect that after President Johnson issued an Executive Order prohibiting telephone taps without the authority of the Attorney General, the CIA never to his knowledge covertly tapped a telephone within the United States except in the one incidence authorized by Attorney General Katzenbach.

Physical Surveillance

Mr. Osborn states that physical surveillance of individuals in this country has been very rare as far as the Office of Security is concerned. He doubts that it has exceeded ten times during his tenure in the Office of Security.

He describes those circumstances under which surveillance has been conducted as being limited to the following:

1. CIA employees and contract agents believed to be divulging classified information to unauthorized persons;

2. [redacted] to find out if he was getting information from current employees of the CIA;

3. Jack Anderson, Les Whitten and another legman to determine their sources of classified information, and [redacted] a staff writer for [redacted] for the same purpose;

4. A female agent of the Latin American Division who reported to the CIA the existence of a plot to assassinate the Vice President and to kidnap the Director of Central Intelligence. This surveillance was conducted under the supervision of Mr. Ober, of the Directorate of Operations, with the full knowledge of the FBI.

   Also included in this surveillance was some of the contacts of this agent in Detroit, Miami, and New York City. The agent involved here was Thelma King, and the surveillance took place in 1971. (Mr. Osborn reports that a conversation between Miss King and her case officer in a New York hotel was also covertly recorded.)

Mr. Osborn is emphatic to the fact that every instance of physical surveillance in his experience was authorized by the Director of Central Intelligence except that Mr. Brownman, the Deputy Director for Administration, may have been the official to authorize the surveillance of employees, but it is possible that these also were approved by Mr. Colby as DCI. Mr. Osborn is also emphatic to the effect that no member of Congress has ever been placed under physical surveillance, has ever had his telephone tapped, has ever been covertly monitored with respect to any conversations or communications, or has ever had a security check performed on him by the CIA.

Watergate Contacts

1. The McCord Letters: Mr. Osborn states that a letter directed to Mr. Helms in late June 1972 was referred to his office as a part of the "crank mail" received that day. He recognized the signature on the letter as being that of a former employee of the Office of Security, Mr. James McCord. Mr. McCord had shortly before that been arrested in connection with the breakin at the Democratic National Headquarters on June 16, 1972. Mr. Osborn states that he immediately brought this letter to the attention of Richard Helms, the DCI.

McCord Letters (continued)

Mr. Helms directed that the letter should be retained in the file, but that nothing further should be done about it and that he would take care of it. Thereafter a series of letters were received from Mr. McCord by Paul Gaynor, then the Chief of Security Research Staff within the Office of Security. These letters were received by Mr. Gaynor at his home. Each letter was promptly brought to the attention of Mr. Helms. The thrust of these letters was that the Committee to Re-elect the President and high officials within the Nixon Administration were planning to blame the CIA for the Watergate break-in. Mr. Helms directed that these letters not be referred to the Justice Department and that he would take care of them. Mr. Osborn recalls being present when the matter was discussed with the General Counsel of the CIA, Mr. Houston, who advised that the CIA was not obligated to reveal these letters to the Justice Department.

At a much later date, Mr. Osborn gave full testimony with respect to these McCord letters and the actions regarding them to the Nedzi Subcommittee of House Appropriations Committee and to the counterpart Senate Subcommittee.

2. The Pennington Matter: For many years a man named Lee Pennington, a former FBI agent, has been retained by the CIA as a confidential informant. His compensation from the CIA has been $250 per month. Mr. Osborn stated that he has no idea what kind of information has ever been supplied to the Agency by Mr. Pennington in exchange for the compensation paid him.

In August 1972 Mr. Osborn was on vacation during the time his deputy, Ermal Geiss, was in charge of the Office of Security. (The Office of Security had been designated by the DCI as the liaison with all other governmental agencies and departments relating to Watergate matters.)

While Mr. Osborn was on vacation an FBI agent named Arnold Parham contacted the Office of Security and requested information on a man simply named "Pennington". The request was directed to Steve Kuhn of the Office of Security. Mr. Kuhn's deputy, Hollis Whitaker, took the request of agent Parham to Ermal Geiss and asked whether the FBI should be given the names of both Penningtons or just one of them. Mr. Geiss instructed Whitaker that Parham should be supplied only with the name of Cecil Pennington, a retired employee of the CIA, who was not related in any way to Lee Pennington. Geiss instructed Whitaker that Lee Pennington's name should not be given to Parham.

Mr. Geiss would have known that James McCord while he was employed in the Office of Security had acted as the case officer for Lee Pennington, that McCord was involved with the Watergate break-in, and that the FBI was really interested in Lee Pennington.

Mr. Osborn states that all of the above information came to his attention in February 1974 and that he had no knowledge of it until that time.

Pennington Matter (continued)

Lee Pennington and a man named Charles Wylie were the only two confidential informants who Osborn can think of who were employeed as such by the Office of Security during his tenure with that office. (This is in addition to CIA employees and the employees of propriety investigating companies who have been used as informants.) Mr. Wylie was a journalist and writer who was paid $10,000 per year, plus certain travel expenses, by the CIA to act as an informant, but Mr. Osborn has no idea what kind of information he provided to the Agency in recent years. He does recall that many years ago Wylie provided information regarding the Vienna, Austria, Youth Festival and also some information gathered on the trip he made to Japan. Mr. Osborn states that he has never met Lee Pennington or Charles Wylie, nor has he ever talked with either of them in person or by telephone.

(Mr. Pennington was apparently terminated as a CIA informant on December 31, 1973.) Mr. Osborn states that he "started action" to terminate Wylie in about January or February 1974. He thought that Wylie had never provided anything to the Office of Security and that it was "no time to have a domestic informant."

Both Pennington and Wylie had been informants for the Office of Security for many years. They had been retained in that capacity even before Mr. Osborn became Deputy Director of Security in 1963.

In February 1974 in connection with a search of files in the Office of Security some indication was turned up that Mr. Osborn had been informed in January 1973 about the fact that Lee Pennington had entered the home and the office of James McCord at the request of Mrs. McCord on January 22, 1972, to locate and destroy records which would have revealed a "link" between Mr. McCord and the CIA. Mr. Osborn denies that he received any such information. The information was allegedly given to him by Paul Gaynor, Chief of Security Research, in the Office of Security.

Mr. Gaynor retired in 1973 at the request of Mr. Osborn, who had been directed to cut a GS-16 from his staff in a personnel reduction move. He states that Mr. Gaynor accepted this request gracefully and retired.

Osborn and Gaynor have never discussed with each other the subject of Lee Pennington or the deception practiced on the FBI in August 1972. Osborn does not think that Gaynor opened up the subject, but he does believe that Gaynor has testified before either one of the Congressional committees investigating Watergate or the Special Prosecutor's Office.

After Mr. Gaynor retired, Lou Vasaly of the Office of Security has handled contacts with Wylie and Pennington.

In January or February 1974 Mr. Osborn sent Sidney Steinbridge of the Office of Security to New York to terminate Mr. Wylie.

Lee Pennington died in the fall of 1974 of natural causes. He was in his middle 70's.

3. Assistance to E. Howard Hunt re Ellsberg Break-In

Mr. Osborn states that the Office of Security had no involvement whatever with the assistance rendered by the CIA to Mr. Hunt in connection with the break-in of the offices of Ellsberg's psychiatrist and that he had no knowledge of that matter prior to the break-in. He is now acquainted with the White House request made to General Cushman for assistance to Mr.Hunt in 1971. He is also now familiar with the fact that the CIA provided to Mr. Hunt disguise equipment, false identification papers, and a camera , in response to the White House request. He also now knows that Mr. Hunt arranged for the development of the photographs which he had apparently taken on the occasion of the break-in at the office of Mr. Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

In 1971 Mr. Osborn received a request from Mr. Young at the White House for the psychological profile on Daniel Ellsberg. He says that Mr. Young stated that the White House had been very pleased with the profile which had been developed by the CIA on Fidel Castro and would like the same kind of profile on Ellsberg.

Osborn stated that he responded to Young that the CIA personnel had a great deal of biographical material on Ellsberg. Young assured Osborn that the White House would provide material on Ellsberg. Osborn responded that such a request would have to be approved by the DCI, Mr. Helms.

Osborn then took the matter to Mr. Helms, who approved the project and told him to provide the requested assistance to Young.

Young thereafter sent materials from time to time to Osborn relating to Ellsberg. It was Osborn's impression that these materials were very fragamentary and would not be sufficient to provide a meaningful psychological profile . Nonetheless, the request and the materials were turned over to the doctors at CIA and a draft of a profile was ultimately worked up. Mr. Young did not appear to be very well pleased with the draft.

Mr. Osborn surmises that the break-in at the offices of Dr. Fielding (Ellsberg's psychiatrist) was accomplished for the purpose of gathering more information with which to develop a better psychological profile.

Covert Informers Employed by the Agency

The Office of Security employs a wide range of confidential informers from among the general roster of employees of the Agency. Included here are plumbers, chauffeurs, guards, telephone maintenance men, electricians, members of the char force, etc. These employees are paid additional compensation to act as informers and to report to the Office of Security on any potential security problems which they observe among their fellow employees at the Agency. If an employee, for example, has been convicted of a crime or is thought to be engaging in any contact which would make him susceptible to blackmail, that matter is supposed to be reported to the Office of Security. Likewise, if any employee is observed conducting himself in a suspicious manner, such as requesting information from files which do not concern him, that is to be reported.

A few outside employees, i.e., non- employees of the Agency, are also retained for the same purpose. This would include employees of the telephone company. In all instances, however, the purpose is to maintain security among the CIA employees and those working for the CIA.

The only staff employees retained as informers are those who work in the records office of the Directorate of Operations. Several staff employees in that office were recruited at the request of Mr. Thomas Karamessines because of the extremely high level of sensitivity and the records maintained in that office.

When the CIA Headquarters was constructed in the late 1950's, the Office of Security recruited various members of the construction work force to maintain security against the installation of listening devices, telephone taps, or other penetrations of the premises. [redacted]

In 1967 and 1968 the Office of Security arranged for the Anderson Security Associates to have its employees attend meetings and other functions of various organizations thought to represent potential threats to CIA personnel or installations and to report on such threats. A list of organizations to be checked for indications of such threats was provided to Anderson Security Associates, which in turn provided regular reports to the Office of Security on the activities of the organization monitored.

Anderson Security Associates was in reality run by Mr. Ralph True, a CIA Headquarters case officer, who also ran a similar wholly-owned proprietary company on the West Coast, General Personnel Investigations, Inc.

The Anderson company has since folded.

[redacted]

Surveillance of Dissident Groups and Activity

It has been mentioned above that Mr. Osborn informed us of the activity of the Anderson Security Associates in maintaining in the Washington, D.C. area a check on individuals and organizations who would represent potential threats to CIA personnel or organizations.

There was also coordination between the Office of Security and local police departments to cover the same activity. An effort was made to determine the size of anticipated demonstrations and to anticipate what security forces would be necessary to cope with them.

In 1967 and 1968 the Office of Security directed the field offices to solicit or report information on anti-war and dissident elements. The CIA was concerned about the safety of its personnel, such as recruiters on college campuses and its offices around the country. Its recruiting office in Ann Arbor, Michigan, had been bombed at about that time. Mr. Osborn also believes that the field offices were directed at about that time to establish a clipping service on campuses and other newspapers to report on organizations and individuals who might represent threats to CIA personnel or offices.

As a result of the information fed into the Office of Security relating to organizations and individuals who may represent such threats, a substantial number of files were accumulated on individuals and organizations.

Mail Intercepts

Mr. Osborn reports that a mail intercept program in New York City began in about 1952 and ended in 1973. He learned of this program when he became Director of the Soviet-Russian Division in the Operations Directorate. He states that the program involved the identification of parties within the United States sending and receiving mail with persons in the Soviet bloc countries and the identification of the persons in the Soviet bloc sending and receiving such mail. Selected items of mail were also opened and photographed, and then resealed and forwarded. Mr.Osborn states that he cannot recall any specific use made bv the CIA of the information so obtained. The primary purpose of the program as he understood it was to provide information to the FBI. He recalls several conferences regarding the program. It was his position that the three personnel from the Office of Security who worked on the program were not performing any useful service for the Office of Security, that it was a drain on the budget of his office, and that the CIA had no business tampering with the mail in the first place. Mr. Colby, when he was Executive Director-Controller of the Agency, supported Mr. Osborn's position on the matter. It was opposed by Mr. Angleton of the Directorate of Operations, who argued primarily that the information derived from the project was vitally necessary to the FBI. Mr. Helms elected to have the program continue. It was finally terminated bv Mr. Colby during the time that Mr. Schlesinger was DCI in 1973.

Mr. Osborn also thought that continuation of the program was too risky in the light of public and Congressional attitude toward the CIA. He thinks that the program originated while Allen Dulles was DCI and that it was undertaken with the knowledge and consent of the Postmaster General. However, this is hearsay, according to Mr. Osborn.

Mr. Osborn is also acquainted with the fact that from 1969 to 1971 the project of mail surveillance occurred from time to time in San Francisco. The Office of Security made the arrangements with the Post Office Department for this program, but it was carried out by the Far East Division and the Technical Services of the Directorate of Operations. The Technical Services Division at that time was headed by Rod M. Kenner, who is now retired and living in Florida.

The arrangements with the Post Office Department were made by Jack Turton of the Office of Security. Mr. Osborn has only the vaguest knowledge of the purpose of this project and could offer no further light than that it involved some checking on the stamping and postmarking of mail from the Peoples Republic of China. The project was orally okayed by Mr. Helms. Mr. Osborn has no knowledge of any other mail undercover projects in New Orleans or elsewhere.

Cover Operations Using Local Police Cover

Mr. Osborn stated that arrangements were made several years ago with [redacted] of the Fairfax County, Virginia, Police Department for the issuance of badges and other police identification for use by CIA security personnel. It is Mr. Osborn's recollection that this involved about 15 sets of identification.

These badges and other identification were never used bv the CIA. They were all returned to [redacted]

This arrangement was inspired by difficulties which had been encountered by security personnel in conducting a physical surveillance of [redacted] It seems that [redacted] lived in a residential community and his home was situation on a cul-de-sac. This made it extremely difficult to cruise by his home or station a security car anywhere near his home without attracting the attention of other residents in the neighborhood. Security personnel who may have been sitting in a car within several blocks of the [redacted] residence would have attracted the curiosity of the residents and the operation would be threatened if such residents approached the car and asked what the occupants were doing there and if they were given straight-forward answers. According to Mr. Osborn, it was highly desirable that the security personnel be able to respond to such inquiries by saying that they were police performing official duties. Most citizens, he says, would accept that as sufficient, whereas their curiosity would be even further aroused if the security personnel identified themselves as being with the CIA.

Mr. Osborn states that he had issued strict orders that the use of identification of local police officers was to be limited strictly to situations involving actual cover for surveillance purposes.

Mr. Osborn seems to recall that the Office of Security had similar arrangements with the Washington, D. C. Metropolitan Police Department, and he thinks that there were instances in which such cover was actually used, but he does not recall specific cases. He also states that it is possible that CIA field offices would have used similar cover of local police departments, but he has no knowledge of such instances.

Wire Taps

Mr. Osborn states that he has no acquaintance with the wire taps made of the office and home phones of two syndicated columnists in Washington in 1962 and 1963, which wire taps are revealed in the file as having been authorized by Attorney General Robert Kennedy. (The file reveals continuation of activity with respect to the surveillance of these columnists into the period of when Mr. Osborn was in the Office of Security as its Deputy Director. The file does not, however, show any indication of actual awareness on the part of Mr. Osborn that telephone tapping was involved. On the contrary, there are indications in the file that these telephone taps were discontinued immediately prior to Mr. Bannerman becoming the Director of Security in 1963, at which time Mr.Osborn also became the Deputy Director of Security.)

Training of State and Local Police and Other Assistance

Mr. Osborn states that assistance was rendered to many local police departments, including those of the cities of New YOrk and Chicago, and to the Maryland and Virginia state police during the period 1965 to 1972. He states that this program was vigorously and enthusiastically approved and supported by Mr. Helms.

Assistance consisted of training of personnel, the loaning of equipment, and the declassification of materials and techniques in such areas as photo analysis, surveillance techniques, metals detection, explosives detection, locks and picks, hidden microphones, telephotography and covert photography, and the setting up, handling, and organization of intelligence operations.

This program was terminated upon passage of an amendment to the Law Enforcement Assistance Act, which prohibited assistance to local and state police departments by the CIA.

Mr. Osborn feels very strongly that the program of cooperating with and assisting police departments in improving their capability to fight crime was proper and that its termination is a serious disservice to the American people. Referring to the prohibition on CIA "police and law enforcement functions" in the National Security Act of 1947, Mr. Osborn is of the opinion that the CIA in sharing its information and technical developments with state and local police departments was not exercising any police or law enforcement function.

The Huston Plan

Mr. Osborn states emphatically that the Office of Security had no knowledge whatever in developing or assisting in the so-called "Huston Plan," relating to domestic security operations. He states that he had never heard of it until it hit the papers at the time of the Watergate investigation. All relationships with the Inter-Agency Domestic Intelligence unit was handled for the CIA by Mr. Helms and Mr. Ober.

The Nosenko Affair

Nosenko was a KGB agent who defected to the United States in Switzerland in the early 1960's. His interrogation was handled under the supervision of the SR Division of the Directorate of Operations, especially by David Murphy and Peter Bagley of the SR Division.

Mr. Osborn states that he repeatedly protested the treatment of Nosenko. After more than two years of solitairy confinement in a special facility for which the Office of Security provided all security measures, Mr. Bruce Solie of the Security Office finally arranged for the release of Nosenko and gradually increased his privileges and freedom.

Mr. Osborn states that Nosenko has proved to be the most valuable defector in the entire history of the CIA. He has been responsible for identifying nine Soviet agents, including a major in the Pentagon.

Surveillance of Justice Douglas

Mr. Osborn has no knowledge of the alleged surveillance of Justice Douglas (referred to in an article in The Washington Post on February 3, 1975, page D-11).

Contact with The White House

Mr. Osborn states that he was not involved and has no information regarding any request from the White House for files relating to the coup in which Premier Diem was overthrown in Vietnam, or regarding the Bay of Pigs operation in Cuba. The CIA personnel who would have been involved in such matters were William Nelson, Deputy Director of Operations, on the Bay of Pigs matter; and George Carver, then Special Assistant to the DCI for Vietnam affairs, with respect to the Diem coup.

The only other contact of any nature with the White House recalled by Mr. Osborn was one which he seems to remember occurring in about 1963 when the Office of Security was consulted by the Secret Service with respect to counter-audio measures to protect against bugging and wire taps in the White House. He thinks this occurred during the Presidency of Lyndon Johnson.

Unauthorized Break-Ins

Mr. Osborn states that the only break-ins which have occured to his knowledge by security personnel of the CIA have been those involving employees, former employees, or CIA contact agents who were under investigation for suspected disclosure of classified information. (Details are in the files provided to the Commission.)

General

Mr. Osborn states categorically that the Office of Security has never to his knowledge:

- -- conducted any audio surveillance, telephone taps, physical surveillance or personal investigation of any member of Congress or public official;
- -- maintained any file for political or other improper purpose of any such congressmen or public official;
- -- pulled any file for examination for purpose of checking up on any such member of Conress or public official.

Mr. Osborn states that he does not recall any instance during his career with the CIA to which any particular activity of the Agency was examined in the specific light of Section 403 of the National Security Act of 1947; i.e., he does not recall any assessment of a proposed or ongoing activity from the standpoint of whether it was improper as a "police", "law enforcement", or "internal security" function.

Impression

Mr. Osborn impresses the interviewer as being honest, intelligent, and dedicated to the interests of the United States and its people. His memory appeared to be in error in some details, but considering the wide range of the interview and the time period involved, coupled with the wide breadth on responsibilities and the number of personnel under his supervision in the Office of Security, this is to be expected.

There is one area in which the interviewer was doubtful concerning the complete candor of Mr. Osborn. That was the area of his knowledge concerning the Pennington matter.

STATEMENT

Mr. Vice-President, Governor Reagan, distinguished members of this Commission. I am here willingly at your invitation; I shall answer all of your questions fully and candidly.

My federal service has extended over a 32 year period, 27 of those years were spent with the Central Intelligence Agency. I am proud of my service with the C.I.A., and I am proud of the thousands of dedicated men and women with whom I worked in the C.I.A. I retired from the C.I.A. on December 31, 1974, after having been on sick leave from March 8, 1974, until the date of my retirement. My last ten years of active service with the C.I.A. were spent as the Director of Security. I was responsible to the Director C.I.A. and to other senior C.I.A. officials for personnel security and for the security and protection of classified information, data and installations, both in the United States and abroad. During my tenure as Director of Security, I served successively under Mr. John A. McCone, Admiral William Raborn, Mr. Richard Helms, Mr. James R. Schlesinger and Mr. William F. Colby.

I am aware of allegations given recent prominence by the news media that C.I.A. conducted improper activities in the United States. Since my departure from active status in March, 1974, I have had no access to Agency files or records with which to verify or refute such charges. I can assure the members of this Commission my full cooperation but it is possible that my recollection of dates and details may be imprecise or unclear without access to particular files and records of the C.I.A. To the best of my knowledge and belief, all of the actions and activities in which - participated, or which I rected are recorded and documented in C.I.A. files.

At all times, while serving as Director of Security I acted with the knowledge and approval and at the instruction of the Director of C.I.A., and in many, if not most instances, with the knowledge and approval of other senior Agency officials in the chain of command. I should like to emphasize that Security in the Agency is a service and support function and its activities are not self-generated. Among other services, the Office of Security provided guidance and assistance to employees with personal problems; it provided support to other Agency components upon authorized request and performed tasks and special inquiri assigned to it by the Director of C.I.A. The Director of C.I.A. was empowered and directed by the National Security Act of 1947 to "protect intelligence sources and methods". By virtue of and extension of that authority, those actions and activities within my purview were designed to prevent potential penetration of the Agency by hostile intelligence services, afford protection to the Agency's domestic installations and to determine the sources of unauthorized disclosure of classified and sensitive intelligence information to public media.

While I am not now privy to precise statistical data, I believe the United States Government Agencies involved in intelligence activities can document the fact that the number of hostile foreign intelligence representatives in our country has increased significantly in the last ten years. One of their prime targets is the United States Intelligence Community.

Any investigation and review of C.I.A., or any other element of that community should be made within that context.

After many years of service in the security field, I can fully understand the extreme sense of frustration among the United States Government officials regarding unauthorized disclosure of classified information. It is devastating to read the contents of a highly classified document disseminated in the intelligence community and then a day or two later, to read the same information ad literatum in the press. I believe most firmly in freedom of the press, but I believe also that there should be a sense of responsibility accompanying such freedom; that sense of responsibility seems often to be buried or absent in the publication of classified information which could endanger our national security.

I welcome the opportunity to appear before this Commission and to assist it in acquiring facts relevant to its investigation. In the course of developing such facts, I am hopeful the Commission will look at the possible consequences of the Agency's failure to act even if the Commission should find fault with individual conclusions or judgments made by Agency officials.

I shall endeavor to answer all of your questions and I shall put aside my citizen's schield against self-incrimination. That decision is based on my desire to assist the Commission to the full extent of my ability and for the equally cogent reason that I do not believe that any action I performed was unlawful or in derogation of my duties to the United States Government.

Physical Surveillance

Mr. Osborn states that physical surveillance of individuals in this country has been very rare as far as the Office of Security is concerned. He doubts that it has exceeded ten times during his tenure in the Office of Security.

He describes those circumstances under which surveillance has been conducted as being limited to the following:

1. CIA employees and contract agents believed to be divulging classified information to unauthorized persons;

2. Victor Marchetti to find out if he was getting information from current employees of the CIA;

3. Jack Anderson, Les Whitten and another legman to determine their sources of classified information, and Michael Getler, a staff writer for the Washington Post, for the same purpose;

4. A female agent of the Latin American Division who reported to the CIA the existence of a plot to assassinate the Vice President and to kidnap the Director of Central Intelligence. This surveillance was conducted under the supervision of Mr. Ober, of the Directorate of Operations, with the full knowledge of the FBI.

   Also included in this surveillance was some of the contacts of this agent in Detroit, Miami, and New York City. The agent involved here was Thelma King, and the surveillance took place in 1971. (Mr. Osborn reports that a conversation between Miss King and her case officer in a New York hotel was also covertly recorded.)

Mr. Osborn is emphatic to the fact that every instance of physical surveillance in his experience was authorized by the Director of Central Intelligence except that Mr. Brownman, the Deputy Director for Administration, may have been the official to authorize the surveillance of employees, but it is possible that these also were approved by Mr. Colby as DCI. Mr. Osborn is also emphatic to the effect that no member of Congress has ever been placed under physical surveillance, has ever had his telephone tapped, has ever been covertly monitored with respect to any conversations or communications, or has ever had a security check performed on him by the CIA.

Watergate Contacts

1. The McCord Letters: Mr. Osborn states that a letter directed to Mr. Helms in late June 1972 was referred to his office as a part of the "crank mail" received that day. He recognized the signature on the letter as being that of a former employee of the Office of Security, Mr. James McCord. Mr. McCord had shortly before that been arrested in connection with the breakin at the Democratic National Headquarters on June 16, 1972. Mr. Osborn states that he immediately brought this letter to the attention of Richard Helms, the DCI.

McCord Letters (continued)

Mr. Helms directed that the letter should be retained in the file, but that nothing further should be done about it and that he would take care of it. Thereafter a series of letters were received from Mr. McCord by Paul Gaynor, then the Chief of Security Research Staff within the Office of Security. These letters were received by Mr. Gaynor at his home. Each letter was promptly brought to the attention of Mr. Helms. The thrust of these letters was that the Committee to Re-elect the President and high officials within the Nixon Administration were planning to blame the CIA for the Watergate break-in. Mr. Helms directed that these letters not be referred to the Justice Department and that he would take care of them. Mr. Osborn recalls being present when the matter was discussed with the General Counsel of the CIA, Mr. Houston, who advised that the CIA was not obligated to reveal these letters to the Justice Department.

At a much later date, Mr. Osborn gave full testimony with respect to these McCord letters and the actions regarding them to the Nedzi Subcommittee of House Appropriations Committee and to the counterpart Senate Subcommittee.

2. The Pennington Matter: For many years a man named Lee Pennington, a former FBI agent, has been retained by the CIA as a confidential informant. His compensation from the CIA has been $250 per month. Mr. Osborn stated that he has no idea what kind of information has ever been supplied to the Agency by Mr. Pennington in exchange for the compensation paid him.

In August 1972 Mr. Osborn was on vacation during the time his deputy, [redacted] [redacted] was in charge of the Office of Security. (The Office of Security had been designated by the DCI as the liaison with all other governmental agencies and departments relating to Watergate matters.)

While Mr. Osborn was on vacation an FBI agent named Arnold Parham contacted the Office of Security and requested information on a man simply named "Pennington". The request was directed to Steve Kuhn of the Office of Security. Mr. Kuhn's deputy, Hollis Whitaker, took the request of agent Parham to [redacted] and asked whether the FBI should be given the names of both Penningtons or just one of them. [redacted] instructed Whitaker that Parham should be supplied only with the name of Cecil Pennington, a retired employee of the CIA, who was not related in any way to Lee Pennington. [redacted] instructed Whitaker that Lee Pennington's name should not be given to Parham.

[redacted] would have known that James McCord while he was employed in the Office of Security had acted as the case officer for Lee Pennington, that McCord was involved with the Watergate break-in, and that the FBI was really interested in Lee Pennington.

Mr. Osborn states that all of the above information came to his attention in February 1974 and that he had no knowledge of it until that time.

PRESIDENT'S COMMISSION

ON CIA ACTIVITIES

- - -

Langley, Virginia

Wednesday, April 16, 1975

Deposition of WILLIAM C. STURBITTS, called for examination by Counsel for the Commission on CIA Activities, the witness being duly sworn by Thomas C. Hogan, a Notary Public in and for the State of Virginia, in the offices of the Central Intelligence Agency, Langley, Virginia, at 9:50 o'clock a.m., on Wednesday, April 16, 1975, the proceedings being taken down in stenotype by Ruth G. McClenning, and transcribed under her direction.

APPEARANCES:

On behalf of the Commission:

GEORGE MANFREDI, ESQ.,

ROBERT B. OLSEN, ESQ.

PROCEEDINGS

Thereupon,

WILLIAM C. STURBITTS,

called as a witness by Counsel for the Commission on CIA Activities, and having been first duly sworn by the Notary Public, was examined and testified as follows:

EXAMINATION BY COUNSEL FOR THE COMMISSION

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q Mr. Sturbitts, will you state your full name for the record?

A William C. Sturbitts.

Q Mr. Sturbitts, do you recall when we spoke some weeks ago you signed a document entitled, "Advice and Waiver"?

A Right.

Q You understand that document is still in effect?

A Sure.

Q Mr. Sturbitts, by whom are you currently employed?

A You mean the Agency or --

Q That is right.

A Central Intelligence Agency.

Q And what is your current position with the Agency?

A I am a Special Assistant, Latin America, for Economic Intelligence Collection and Operations.

Q And would you briefly review for me the history of your employment with the Agency?

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

A When I first came in I was in the Intelligence Directorate for approximately ten years and I was put on special detail, special indefinite detail, in the Deputy Director, Plans, which is now the Directorate of Operations.

Q What year were you put on that detail?

A I guess it was 1964, January, I believe.

Q And what did that detail involve?

A Cuban operations, economic warfare.

Q And how long were you on that detail?

A I was in the Cuban operations for nine years.

Q Between 1964 and 1973?

A (Nods in affirmative.)

Q And in 1973 did you assume your current position?

A Yes, January.

Q Now, while you were on special detail -- to the DOD?

A Yes.

Q Were you stationed in Washington?

A Yes.

Q And did you commute with some frequency to Miami?

A Yes.

Q Were your activities in Miami in any way connected with the operations of the Miami Station?

A In some way. My responsibilities were worldwide. I took temporary duty predominantly in Europe, and then Miami.

Most of my operations were run out of Europe.

Q Run out of --

A Europe. Some were run out of Miami but the big ones were run out of Europe.

Q Well, in the course of your activities with respect to Cuba did you have occasion to become familiar with the operations of the Miami base?

A Yes.

Q And the situation in the Cuban community in Miami?

A Yes, sir.

Q During the nine years you were with DDO's Cuban operations, who was -- who were the chiefs of the Miami Station?

A I think in 1963 Ted Shackley was the Chief and he was followed by -- I can't think of his name. I should know it. Well, I will come back to that.

Then, the next Chief of Station was [redacted]

Q What years was he Chief?

A I think [redacted] was there about a year and a half. He left in 1968 when we reduced the size of the Station. Let's say [redacted] was there from 1966 to 1968. And then Jake Esterline. He was Chief of Station from 1968 to 1973.

Q Now, what was the formal title of the group to which you were assigned for the 9-year period?

A Well, when I first came in it was known as the Special Activities Staff. It was headed by Desmond Fitzgerald. And then, I believe after that it became the Cuban Operations Group.

Q Now, was this a special group within the DDO or was it attached to one of the area divisions?

A No. Following the Bay of Pigs, they created a thing called Task Force W which was headed by Bill Harvey. And that -- when Harvey left, [redacted] Fitzgerald took over, it became Special Activities Staff. It wasn't attached to anything except -- it reported to the Deputy Director, Plans.

Q And that was Mr. Karamessines?

A Yes. Well, it was Helms at that time back when it was first created. Helms was DDP at that time.

Q And Task Force W was created immediately after the Bay of Pigs?

A Well, not immediately. I think sometime around -- in the Bay of Pigs was in April. I think this was created in September, something like that, 1961.

Q And that subsequently became the Special Activities Staff?

A Special Activities Staff and consequently became the Cuban Operations Group. As the Cuban Operations Group it went back into the Western Hemisphere Division.

Q And what was the date of that reorganization?

A Well, let's see. I would say that was probably around 1965 because Fitzgerald then became Chief, W.H., and then later DDP.

Q Now, Mr.Harvey -- do you recall what position Mr. Harvey held after he left Task Force W?

A Yes. He was [redacted]

Q And is he still with the Agency?

A Oh, no. He retired a long time ago.

Q Do you know where he lives at the present time?

A Frankly, I don't. I have an idea where he lives. He went to work for a friend of mine who had a law firm. Harvey is a lawyer.

Q Indianapolis area?

A Yes, some place around there. It is in the midwest, Indiana.

Q What was the role that was assigned to Task Force W?

A It was the overall Cuban operations.

Q Did the Miami -- when was the Miami Station established?

A Well, I think they had a forward operatio-s base down there about 1960 which was small, [redacted]

Q This was, then, prior to the Bay of Pigs?

A Oh, yes.

Q Now, in addition to Task Force W, was the Miami

Station running any operations against Cuba?

A You mean prior to the Bay of Pigs?

Q Yes.

A I really don't know. It was a small -- it was a forward base and it was more or less as I recall, a support type thing.

Q Well, after the Bay of Pigs when Task Force W was established, did it have sole responsibility for Cuban operations?

A Yes.

Q Or was that shared with the Miami base, Miami Station?

A No. The Miami Station was under Task Force W.

Q All right. Would that also be true of the Special Activities Staff, the Cuban Operations Group?

A Right, except that at the present time the Station has no Cuban operations.

Q I understand that. When were Cuban operations terminated?

A At the Station? Let's see. [redacted] went down there in 1972. It was during fiscal year '72. I think it was in early 1973. It was a gradual reduction.

Q And have those operations been terminated entirely or are they now run out of the Washington area?

A All Cuban operations are run out of Washington.

There are no more paramilitary operations, that type of thing.

Q But there are some Cuban operations being run out of the Washington area?

A Right.

Q Is that correct?

A Right. Worldwide.

Q Mr.Sturbitts, in the last couple of weeks you may have seen some allegations in the press about possible assassination attempts that have been mounted or alleged assassination attempts that have been mounted --

A Right.

Q -- against Fidel Castro. In the course of your activities with respect to Cuba, did you ever learn of any such attempts?

A Well, let me answer it this way. I wouldn't say attempts. I know there was discussion. "Attempts" is too strong a word.

Q Well, can you place in time your first knowledge of any such discussions?

A Well, the first knowledge I had of any discussions, I was on TDY and this was October,November, 1963, with Fitzgeral in Paris. And I knew that he was going to meet -- let me put it another way. I had overheard that discussions were going on with a member of Castro's military but that he wanted, as I recall, he wanted some [redacted] rifles and a telescopic sight.

Q Who wanted them?

A This military guy that was in Fidel's -- I think at one time he was a commandante. Now, I knew that was going on. I didn't participate in it because I was there for another reason. And I know that subsequent to that time that Fitzgerald met with him again and as I recall, as the personal representative of the Attorney General, Bobby Kennedy.

I provided all those files. There are 19 volumes that we gave to your people. But I don't know who was reviewing them. I think Belin was going to do it himself.

Q Yes. He is. He is doing it himself.

You said there were 19 volumes of documents with respect to this.

A 19 files, manila.

Q. All having to do with possible assassination?

A All having to do with this whole time period and -- can we go off the record for a minute?

(Discussion off the record.)

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q The first knowledge of such conversations that you had, I take it you obtained on a trip to Europe with Mr. Fitzgerald?

A I simply overheard it, that is right.

Q And who were the parties to the conversation you overheard?

A A fellow named Nestor Sanchez.

Q And Mr. Fitzgerald?

A Yes, and I really can't recall some of the other people. We were -- we had just moved the Station at that time, in Paris, out of the Embassy into the old Rothschild Palace and we felt that it was probably bugged, so all conversations took place -- we walked around the garden and tyat type of thing, and, you know, I was walking with somebody, somebody was in front of me, and you just overhear conversations.

Q This was in Paris?

A Yes.

Q I see.

Mr. Sanchez -- was he a member of the military?

A No. Mr. Sanchez was in the Special Activities Staff. He was stationed in Washington. And he was in contact with Cuban military-type.

Q Was it your understanding that the Agency had received instructions with respect to this activity from another component of the Government?

A Well, let me put it this way. I don't know whether they received instructions. I have to assume, and I am pretty positive, that this was a result of a Special Group decision. And at this time you have to remember that Bobby Kennedy was overseeing this deal, presumably for his brother, and he was part of that Special Group. He called the meetings, he presided, he did a number of things.

Q Were there any other occasions that you can recall in which the possibility or the subject of assassination of Fidel Castro was discussed?

A No, not really.

Q You referred to this as the first occasion.

A This is the first --

Q Was there a second?

A -- the first time I knew about it or even heard it discussed.

Q Well, prior to the investigation that is currently underway -- I am referring now to our Commission's investigation -- were there any other occasions in which this subject came to your attention after this discussion in the garden in Paris?

A The only other thing that came to my attention was that the decision was made not to provide him with this sight that he wanted. Whether that is right or wrong, I don't know, but that is what I was told.

Q When did you learn that?

A Oh, I would assume in -- must have been early 1964, around February, something like that.

Q Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. MANFREDI: On the record.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q Mr. Sturbitts, are you familiar with a gentleman by the name of Frank Sturgis?

A Indeed.

Q Is your familiarity based on what you have read in the press?

A No. It is what is contained in the files.

Q Have you caused a search to be made of CIA files, particularly the files of the Western Hemisphere Division, in an attempt to determine whether Mr. Sturgis ever had any connection with the Agency?

A I have.

Q What were the results of that search?

A Absolutely no connection, never has been.

Q When we talk about connection, are we talking about an employment relationship?

A That is what I am speaking of.

Q Was Mr.Sturgis ever an independent contractor of the Agency?

A No.

Q Was he ever a contract employee?

A No.

Q Was he ever a regular employee of the Agency?

A No.

Q Was he ever hired to do any piecework for the Agency?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Do you know whether or not Mr. Sturgis ever participated in any type of paramilitary or other operation against Cuba?

A On his own behalf he did, not on behalf of this Agency.

Q How did you learn of those operations?

A Through the newspaper. And through FBI reports.

Q Now, are these recent FBI reports?

A Oh, no. These go back -- I know at one time, the thing that comes to mind, I think he made a leaflet drop over Cuba and this was subsequently reported in the press and by the Bureau office in Miami.

Q Do you know who financed his activities?

A I have no idea.

Q Is it possible that Mr. Sturgis' activities were indirectly financed by the Agency through --

A I don't see how. Frank Sturgis is a soldier of fortune; has been. He has constantly tried to associate himself with the Agency. When I went through his file they wanted me to classify the file and the way I classified it was "don't destroy it, he is an intelligence nuisance."

Q Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. MANFREDI: On the record.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q Have you caused the Agency records with respect to Mr. Sturgis to be assembled in any one location?

A Yes. Ihave custody of them.

Q And what is the volume of that material?

A As I recall, there are five volumes. Your Committee called for them the other day after the article in the paper, I guess it was last Saturday. They called for them Monday and they returned them Monday afternoon.

Q Do you know who examined those files?

A No, I don't.

Q You indicated a moment ago that Mr. Sturgis contacts the DCD office in Miami with some frequency, is that correct?

A Well, not great frequency but he does with tidbits of so-called information.

Q Is this information limited to narcotics, alleged narcotics traffic?

A Recently it has been.

Q Has Mr. Sturgis been encouraged by the DCD office in Miami?

A Mr. Sturgis has been told by the DCD office in Miami to take his information to the Drug Enforcement Agency or the FBI.

Q Do you know whether or not they consider him an established contact?

A No manner.

Q Do they have any -- do they periodically seek to collect information from Mr. Sturgis?

A I can't speak to that but the records that we have don't reflect anything like that. Before they would contact somebody in that context, knowing that there is a 201 file on Sturgis, they would have to coordinate with the Latin American Division before they did anything since we do hold the file.

Q Would you briefly explain what a 201 file is?

A A 201 file is a personnel file. It consists of any information relating to an individual appearing in the press as a result of other agency reporting and that type of thing.

Q Personnel or personality file?

A Personality file, I should say. Excuse me.

Q Do you know whether or not there is any connection or relationship between Eugenio Martinez and Mr. Sturgis?

A Well, I will say this. Obviously, they do know each other. They have to know each other from their days in Cuba.

Q Do you know whether or not Mr. Sturgis ever participated with Martinez in raids against Cuba?

A No. As I recall, we employed Martinez around 1961,

I guess, and he was in our maritime activities. He was a boat captain eventually. And he did participate in infiltrations and exfiltrations and perhaps one or two raids, hit and run, sabotage-type actions against Cuba. Sturgis never engaged in any of these things. He never did it for us nor did he ever do it on any of our boats, planes, or -- anything that belongs to the Agency.

Q When Martinez would run such an operation or captain a boat on such an operation, would he be charged with putting together his own crew?

A No. He had an assigned crew and every boat had a Case Officer operating either out of the -- probably out of the Miami Station. Sometimes I would assume that we did have some people in the [redacted] base. But he, Martinez, would recei his instructions and briefings from his Case Officer.

Q So it is likely that he could have brought Sturgis along on any of these operations?

A Absolutely unlikely. Oh, the guy whose name I was trying to think of, Chief of Station, [redacted]

Q And that would be for a period of time between Shackley and [redacted]?

A Yes.

Q 1964 to 1966?

A Something like that.

Q Would you describe briefly for me the nature of the activities conducted by the Special Activities Staff during your -- and subsequently the Cuban Operations Group during your 9-year tenure with those groups.

A Well, there was -- it was an across-the-board intelligence operation consisting of collection of foreign positive intelligence, counterintelligence, paramilitary activities, covert action, economic activities. That is about the breadth of the thing.

Q Now, these were all conducted through the DDO?

A Right.

Q Now, let's speak for a moment about the paramilitary operations. Were these operations run out of southern Florida?

A Right.

Q And in particular out of the Miami Station?

A Yes.

Q Were there any other CIA facilities in that area of the country that participated in these activities?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Were there any southern harbors other than Miami that were used in these activities?

A Well, we had activities down in the Keys also. As I said, we did have a Key West base.

Q Were there any other bases in that area of the country that were utilized in these operations?

A Well, not that I would call a base. We did have training facilities [redacted]

Q [redacted]

A [redacted]

Q Where were those bases located?

A I frankly don't know. [redacted] I really can't recall them.

Q Were there any other sites within the United States in which paramilitary training was conducted, for people participating in these activities?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Where were these people trained?

A What do you mean?

Q Well, Cubans who participated in these activities.

A We trained them at [redacted]

Q [redacted]

A [redacted]

Q Were any CIA personnel actually involved in these raids?

A Occasionally, I would think that -- you have got to understand at this time that we had a great many contract employees, independent contractors and this type of thing.

Most of the paramilitary operations and the training was conducted by the Special Operations Group which is another entity of the --

Q DDO?

A DDO.

Q Now, the facilities that we have been talking about, training facilities, were manned, then, by the Special Operations Group, or at least supervised by the Special Operations Group, is that correct?

A Well, supervised, yes, and I would think that probabl some of the training was given by their people. [redacted] I would think that in the paramilitary field that the SOG would probably staff the training facility with their people who have the expertise in paramilitary operations.

Q Now, were the people that were being trained at these facilities basically Cuban refugees?

A Yes.

Q And at the outset I take it not many of those people were American citizens?

A No.

Q Or had become American citizens.

A I would assume a great many have.

Q By this time.

A By this time, yes.

Q At the present time, how large is that Cuban community in Miami? Do you have any idea?

A Well, it is extremely large. I would think it is probably -- I was trying to think. I would say up towards a military people.

Q You spoke about paramilitary operations and covert action. How do you distinguish between those two categories of activities?

A Well, actually one can fall into the other. The paramilitary could fall into covert action but in those days we did distinguish somewhat. A lot of the covert action was media placement. We had a number of operations at -- legal-type operations, harassment operations. For instance, Fidel seized a great many art treasures and in particular he had a Napoleonic collection which was supposed to be the finest in the world that he sold to dealers in Europe. He had paintings that were immensely valuable that he tried to have auctioned in London and the London auctioneer would not accept them because he obviously didn't have clear title to them. He was -- they were stolen, in the eyes of the auctioneer. He was forced to auction them in Toronto, Canada.

We ran legal operations, got the owners and had them hire attorneys and bring them to court and this type of thing.

He seized these race horses. He tried to peddle them in Europe and up in Canada. We ran opposition against that type of thing.

Q These were what you considered to be covert operation

A Yes, covert action.

Q Now, this is what you were referring to, legal-type operations?

A Yes.

Q You used legal process to harass Castro.

A Yes.

Q What other types of harassment activities did you run that would fall under this covert action category?

A Well --

Q Would economic warfare be --

A That was sort of something separate unto itself. This was -- the economic warfare aspect of this thing was a decision of the Special Group to enforce an economic blockade.

Q What special group is that?

A It is now called the Forty Committee.

Q Is that 302 Committee?

A Well, it was a 302 at one time, too. First of all, it was called the Special Group, CI, Counterinsurgency. Then it went to the 302 and then it had another name in between there and now it is the Forty Committee.

Q All right. We will return to that a little bit later, but what other types of harassment were you running against Castro --

A This is what I was trying to think of.

Q -- that would be considered covert action?

A Well, as I say, a lot of propaganda, press placement, media placement. It has been so long ago I really don't remember. I know we had a number of things going against him. We used suasion, moral suasion, otherwise. We did some extra-legal things. We tried to get to his sources of supply, [redacted] this type of thing.

Q Let's talk about each of those in turn. You said you used moral suasion. What kind of activities are you referring to?

A Well, in the moral suasion field we -- actually, we were the catalyst in this whole thing and we had the legal activities, the legal -- well, I don't know how you would phrase it, but we operated under the Cuban access control regulations of the Treasury Department, the Trading with the Enemy Act, and we also used the facilities of the Department of Commerce, the Export Control people.

I guess as you are aware, Cuban industry was totally U.S.-oriented. As parts began wearing out and this type of thing, Castro had his little people there running around trying to place orders with subsidiaries of U.S. companies. Where we would find this out through all-source intelligence, we or the Treasury people or the Commerce people would go to the executives of these American companies and ask them to tell their foreign subsidiaries not to provide the spare parts and the other things that Castro might need. We had the Department of Commerce -- we identified 600 of the major U.S. companies that could provide spare parts for Cuban industry. We had the Department of Commerce send letters to those 600 manufacturers and ask them to cooperate with them in denying any spare parts to the Cubans. This was a fairly concentrated effort to really isolate them.

Q All right. And that is what you were referring to as moral suasion?

A Yes.

Q Anything else in that category?

A Not really. None that I can think of.

Q Did you make the same kind of efforts with foreign companies?

A At one point we did but it was absolutely useless, [redacted]

Q Now, did you attempt to reach any other sources of supply?

A Well, we also had what we call a preemptive purchasing program. If there was a single source of supply for a particular item we would go in and buy it to deny the Cubans the market.

Q Would that then be re-sold somewhere on the domestic --

A Yes.

Q -- domestic market?

A No. It would be re-sold abroad.

Q In all cases?

A The cases that I was associated with, it was all sold abroad.

Q What kind of purchases were made?

A Well, we purchased at one point -- we purchased some Bright Stock [redacted]

Q What?

A Bright Stock.

Q What is that?

A Heavy, heavy oil, and since Cuba -- 85 percent of her energy comes from oil, this was considered a critical commodity. Bright Stock can be -- oh, it is almost like tar, melted tar, and it can be cut into additives, lubricants, this type of thing, and this was critical to the Cuban economy. So we had an oil firm purchase this Bright Stock from a dealer for which we reimbursed the guy and the Bright Stock was eventually sold [redacted]

Q Do you know of any sales of such materials that were made within the United States? Resales, I should say.

A No.

Q In addition to preemptive buying were there any other actions taken by this group with respect to sources of supply to Cuba?

A Well, we did provide through third country agents who got orders for Cuban goods, in collusion with the Commerce Department, and I would assume the Special Group, we had replacement parts manufactured that were substandard.

Q And you had them sold through foreign companies?

A Well, we had our agents get the Cuban orders all over Europe. Then they would come back and, as a matter of fact, the former Secretary of Commerce, who is on your Committee, Des. and I met him and he gave us the go-ahead to do this.

Q Mr. Dilion?

A No. He was Secretary of the Treasury.

Q But --

A But you must remember that these American --

Q Mr. Connors?

A Yes. But you must remember these American manufacturer well, their places were nationalized and they were only too happy to work with us. And actually, it was a cash deal, bona fide business. These things were transshipped through two or three countries, finally wound up in Havana.

Q You referred to some extra-legal activities.

A Yes. That is what I was trying to think of, what we did. I just can't think -- I remember this was on one of our activities but I just can't think -- I remember this was on one of our activities but I just can't remember what the extra-legal was. I just can't remember what it was. I know it was one of the parts of the program.

Q This was illegal activities? Is that what you are referring to?

A Well, I wouldn't say they were illegal, but they weren't exactly legal, I don't think. Perhaps they were in a gray area some place.

Q Well, whose laws are we talking about, international law, the laws of the United States?

A I would have to go back and review the thing. I really can't remember this. I would have to go to the files.

Q Where could we find that kind of thing in the files?

A I would think probably down [redacted] some place.

Q Would it be possible to obtain that material some time during the lunch hour?

A No. [redacted]

Q Well, is there some place in the building where you could refresh your memory?

A Not to my knowledge. All that stuff has been shipped. This is talking 11 years ago, 12 years ago. All that material has been retired.

Q What category of activity would we be talking about when we refer to extra-legal activities?

A This is what I was trying to think of and I can't think of what it was. I know extra-legal activities was one parts of the program that we were involved in.

I might have a chart in my safe downstairs that might tell me what that is.

Q Well, let's make a note of that and we will have to come back to that.

A All right.

Q Who else would be knowledgeable about extra-legal activities that were run against Castro?

A Well, the people that would be knowledgeable are probably retired and I was running the program. So I ran the economic program.

Q Well, these are activities that were run in connecti with the economic program?

A Yes.

Q We talked about media placement during this nine-year period. To what are you referring when you refer to media placement?

A Well, stories or news items that perhaps our propaganda people wrote. We had them placed in newspapers and magazines throughout the world.

Q Would this also include broadcasts over radio stations?

A Oh, yes. Radio is a very big part of it.

Q Now, were any of these newspapers or magazines published within the United States?

A Not to my knowledge, no.

Q These were essentially foreign publications?

A Yes.

Q Were any of them published in the Cuban community in Miami?

A No. The intent was to get world opinion against Castro. You don't do that by publishing in the United States.

Q What about the radio broadcasts? How were those handled?

A Are you speaking of Radio Swan now?

Q Well, I am unfamiliar with how many radio stations were involved. Was there more than one radio station?

A No. We only had the one radio station but we did contract time with Florida stations, a station in New York.

Q For broadcasts to what areas?

A For broadcasts to Havana.

Q And the station in New York, was that received also -- was that also broadcasting to various areas of the United States?

A I have no idea. I don't know whether they used a particular frequency to get this out or whether they did it on short-wave or what they did.

Q But the intention was to reach Cuba.

A Reach Cuba.

Q You referred to a station in New York, referred to as Swan. Were there others?

A There were a couple in Miami that I recall. Not in Miami. I think there was one -- yes, there was one in Miami, I think, [redacted]

Q Where was Radio Swan located?

A On Swan Island.

Q Where is Swan Island?

A Swan Island is a little glob around Honduras.

Q As far as you can recall, were there any other radio stations in the United States that were utilized to broadcast propaganda materials toward Cuba?

A Well, there conceivably could have been, not that I recall right now.

Q Do you recall any attempts by the Agency or groups affiliated with the Agency to raise money from the American public to support those propaganda activities?

A No. As far as I know, Radio Swan and this type of thing was fully subsidized by the Agency.

Q Do you recall the advertising campaigns that were run in connection with Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty?

A Oh, yes.

Q Was anything of that nature done in connection with Cuban propaganda?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q And that would include both the publications and the radio?

A Right.

Q Let's talk about economic warfare for a couple of moments. Could you describe for me briefly the type of economic activities that were conducted against Castro?

A Well, first of all, we wanted to denigrate the regime, his credit worthiness, and this type of thing. We worked very closely with the Coordinator of Cuban Affairs in the State Department and, well, for instance, in those days, I guess it was back in 1964, the price of sugar had jumped from about a penny a pound to 13 cents a pound, something like that, and we couldn't understand why. So we kept -- Fidel kept saying that he had such a poor crop and this type of thing and we just couldn't figure out why he had such a poor crop because some of our own island assets told us they were out there cuttin this cane like mad and the mills were working 24 hours a day, this type of thing. So subsequently, we found out that he was lying and he was storing the raw cane in the schools, any place. He had no storage facilities and put it any place he could.

So in cooperation with a couple of sugar brokers in New York, we surfaced this fact and the price of sugar took a real tumble and all of a sudden then Cuba started exporting.

It was this type of thing that obviously he was trying to build up the world price because he didn't have any money, he was so short on his exchange, and obviously we didn't want him to get the exchange. So it was those types of activities.

Q Was the assistance of any U.S. businessmen or U.S. companies enlisted in that effort?

A Oh, yes.

Q In what manner did you use U.S. companies and businessmen?

A Well, we simply used them as the experts. A great many -- the sugar industry in Cuba was controlled by the American community, by American bankers, and obviously they lost everything when they had to pull out. Sugar is the lifeline of Cuba as far as any exchange, foreign exchange, this type of thing, and it was naturally our Number 1 target. So it was only natural that we would go to the American businessmen.

Q What kind of assistance did you seek or obtain from these businessmen?

A Well, we simply talked with them about why -- you know, the market conditions were, why the price was rising, if we could find out that Fidel has plenty of sugar, what would happen to the market price. This type of thing.

Q They were used as consultants,basically.

A They were used as consultants, basically, yes.

Q We have spoken about the investment American business had in Cuba. Did it ever come to your attention that American organized crime --

A No.

Q -- had considerable investment in Cuba?

A No. Well, everybody knew that the Mafia was in Cuba. I mean, all the casinos and this type of thing.

Q The casinos were run --

A I knew that long before. When I was in the Air Force during the war, I used to fly into Havana on weekends and this type of thing.

Q I understand that. It was fairly well known.

A It was a criminal element.

Q The Mafia was involved with the casinos in Havana.

A Right.

Q Do you know of any attempts by the Agency to enlist the support or assistance of any crime figures in any manner whatsoever in the Agency's efforts against the Cuban regime?

A No.

Q Have you ever heard of Mr.Roselli?

A Oh, yes.

Q When was the first time you heard of Mr. Roselli?

A Well, I guess it was -- it seems to me it was either Drew Pearson or Jack Anderson had an article on him a number of years ago.

Q Was that the first time you heard of the man's name?

A Yes, as I recall.

Q Is that also true of Sam Giancana?

A No. I have heard that name but I don't know where.

Q In connection with --

A Not in connection with the Agency, no.

Q In connection with the casinos or --

A No.

Q -- gambling interests in Cuba?

A No.

Q You know of no instance in which organized crime figures were used as consultants by the Agency?

A Only what I read in the paper. I had no knowledge of that whatsoever.

Q Do you know of any offers of assistance from figures of that type --

A No.

Q -- who were interested in getting back into cuba?

A No.

Q We were talking about economic warfare. We have talked about attempts to keep the price of sugar low. What other types of economic activities were conducted against Castro's Cuba?

A Well, we used all-source information to find out what his commercial dealings were. When we would see -- well, for instance, the Nicaro Nickel Mine which is a source owned by the General Services Administration, finally got back into production and nickel, of course, and still is -- was in short supply. We had a [redacted] firm, [redacted] who was buying [redacted] output of the Nicaro mines. And this [redacted] firm ex ported to the United States. So we went to the Treasury Department and to the Foreign Assets Control people and said, isn't there something we can do to stop these [redacted] exports coming into the United States? So they looked into the thing and indeed they did.

Q Who owned the mine?

A The U.S. Government owned it when Castro took it over.

Q I see.

A General Services Administration. And it was leased out for operation. But the ownership rested with the Government.

So the Treasury simply made the [redacted] provide a Certificate of Origin for the nickel that went in -- they export a lot of metal that contains nickel, silverware, knives and forks, this type of thing, and -- you know, stainless steel, and since nickel is used as a hardening agent we simply -- Treasury simply said you can't import any more into this country until we have a Certificate of Origin. As a matter of fact, there was a boat that was pulling into the dock in New York and they wouldn't let it unload. They just turned it around. Eventually, over a period of months, [redacted] found other sources and export privileges to the United States were restored.

You know, it is -- you just -- any time you raise or lower a tariff you have economic warfare. It is that simple.

Q Were there any other instances that you can recall of economic warfare in which you enlisted the support of American business firms?

A I know we were in touch with a great many American business firms. We enlisted everybody's support that we could.

MR. MANFREDI: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q When we broke for a moment we were discussing other instances where the Agency has enlisted the support of American business in economic warfare against Cuba. Can you think of any other such instances?

A Oh, certainly. The Cubans were having an awful time with their Maritime fleet, such as it was. [redacted] We simply went to the [redacted] people and told them -- asked them to cooperate with us, which they said they would. They notified their manufacturer's representatives around the world if they got any orders from the Cubans they were to be refused. This type of thing.

We did the same thing with --

Q Let's just stop for a second. Now, was [redacted] compensated in any way for cooperation with the Agency?

A No.

Q Were they compensated for the loss of business involved in that activity?

A No. No.

Q I take it, you received similar cooperation from other companies.

A Oh, a great many other companies, yes.

Q Did any American companies refuse to cooperate in that manner?

A No. Not a one.

Q Were there any legal sanctions threatened against any companies?

A No. No.

Q Were there any sanctions that could have been brought to bear upon those companies had they chosen to trade with Cuba?

A Well, in the first place, they couldn't trade with Cuba. They couldn't get export licenses from this country anyway. Then, under the Foreign Assets Control Act of the Treasury Department you have the extra-territorialty clause in there where a subsidiary of an American company cannot -- foreign subsidiary of an American company cannot trade with the country that is designated and Cuba was a designated country. And all the businessmen were well aware of this. Nobody tried to twist their arm.

Q Other than insuring that these companies refused to accept orders from Cuba, which I take it you feel they were legally constrained from doing, what other types of support did you receive from American business?

A Well, if American business -- sometimes they would receive correspondence, particularly, say, from -- well, they received it from Cuba asking for publications and this type of thing. They would normally forward all this type of thing to the Commerce Department and the Treasury Department, or in some instances they might call me and I would just give them a Post Office box to send the correspondence to.

Q Any other types of support solicited or received by the Agency from American business?

A No. Not that I can recall. There just wasn't one firm we approached, and God knows we approached I don't know how many, that wasn't extremely cooperative. As a matter of fact, a lot of them, you know, thought we weren't doing enough, that we ought to do a little more than we were doing, the government wasn't really pushing Cuba the way it should, but outside of that, nothing. There wasn't any problem of cooperation. There wasn't any arm-twisting. It was all voluntary.

Q Did you identify yourself as CIA --

A Yes.

Q -- in dealings with these companies?

A Indeed, I do and we went to the top level, even the Board Chairman or the president. No problem at all.

Q Let's talk about paramilitary operations. We started but didn't really discuss that in any depth.

What kind of paramilitary operations were run against Cuba by the CIA?

A Maritime operations.

Q Is that the extent of it?

A That is the extent of it.

Q Were there any aerial operations?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Leaflet drops?

A No.

Q Bombing?

A No. Of course, you had the over-flights. As far as I am concerned that is the only aerial activity.

Q That was run by another directorate, wasn't it?

A Yes.

Q Aerial photography, and so forth.

A Yes. They run a flight when you ask them. It has to be requested and that is about it.

Q And those were run out of the United States?

A Oh, yes.

Q Can you think of anything, any other type of paramilitary activity other than maritime operations.

A No. I really can't, no.

Q Am I correct that those operations were manned by CIA contract employees?

A Right.

Q Which would include Cuban refugees.

A Right.

Q And some CIA officers?

A Right.

Q Any other branches of the services, Armed Services, involved? This, of course, is posted Bay of Pigs.

A Yes. No, not to my knowledge. You have got to remember that probably down [redacted] we probably have people on detail from other -- from the military branches in the Government, but other than that I don't think that -- of course, during the Bay of Pigs operation we also had people detailed into the Agency.

Q Now, the training of persons involved in maritime operations, I take it, was conducted in part within the United States and in part outside of the United States. Is that correct?

A I would think probably the major portion of it was conducted within the United States.

Q [redacted] would be considered within the United States.

A Oh, yes.

Q Or were there any locations where it was conducted outside the United States?

A Following the Bay of Pigs, I don't think so. Not to my knowledge. I just don't know, I just don't recall but I don't think that -- I think all the training was done domestically.

Q Now, what kinds of operations are included within this category of maritime operations?

A Well, the infiltration operations, infiltrating agents into Cuba, exfiltrating agents, hit and run sabotage raids. That is about the extent of it.

Q Now, when did these operations commence? Was it shortly after the Bay of Pigs?

A I would -- I think these operations were probably at their height during the period about 1963 through, say, 1967. The program was terminated in 1968, I think in December 1968, something like that.

Q Why was the program terminated?

A First of all, it was too expensive. It wasn't providing enough intelligence and it simply wasn't -- economically, it wasn't feasible to continue these things. The agents were getting wrapped up. We were -- we just felt that the return wasn't sufficient for what the investment was.

Q You say the agents were getting wrapped up.

A Yes.

Q What do you mean by that?

A When we infiltrated an agent, Cubans would identify him and capture him.

Q These various types of paramilitary operations that were conducted by the Agency I trust were approved by the Forty Committee?

A Every operation received a specific approval from the Forty Committee.

Q In advance?

A In advance.

Q Now, what was the procedure for submitting -- for initiating such an operation?

A Well, normally in the case of an infil or an exfil. or perhaps we wanted to lay down the cache.

Q You are referring to a cache of arms.

A A cache of anything, replay of radio, batteries, whatever they might need. If we decided that we should have one of these operations and the request would go from here over to the, I guess to the White House and then the Forty Committee at its weekly meeting -- they used to meet very frequently -- they would either approve the operation or say no. These operations had to be planned well in advance because the tides had to be right, the moon had to be in the proper phase for communications and this type of thing. And these things, all these were coordinated with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Navy, the Coast Guard, the FBI. If we were exiltrating people, the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Every Government agency or enforcement agency or military agency that had any involvement whatsoever, and the entire thing was coordinated.

Q Do you know of any such paramilitary operations that were run unbeknownst to the Forty Committee?

A No.

Q What kind of volume of operations are we talking about?

A You are not talking about a very big volume of operations because of the planning that had to go into these things. I would say that probably at the height of the thing they may be running three or four a month. No more than that.

Q You have heard Eugenio Martinez refer to having run 300 operations.

A I have seen that.

Q Is that inaccurate?

A Well, it all depends on what is in his mind. He may have considered some of the training exercises as operations. Obviously, these guys trained. In order to run one of these operations, you know, you would have to have a mother ship in place and rubber boats and [redacted] people to go in to see if there were mines and this type of thing on the shore before you go. So he may have considered that all these training exercises were operations but no way did he ever participate in any three or 400 active operations into Cuba.

Q Now, from what specific locations were these operations launched?

A They were mostly launched from [redacted]

Q Any other locations?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Now, would you describe for me the kind of hit and run sabotage operations that were conducted?

A Well, we conducted one hit and run sabotage against the Texaco refinery.

Q What used to be the Texaco refinery?

A What used to be the Texaco refinery.

MR. MANFREDI: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

THE WITNESS: These things, a great amount of planning went into these things. We did have a model of the refinery. We agonized over the best approach to the refinery and this type of thing to do the most effective damage. This was run. It was successful, as I recall, not totally successful but it was a successful operation. By that, I mean they didn't do as much damage as they wanted to because they had to get out because the Cuban defense came after them. It was that type of operation that we did.

As I recall, another time we took a team in to burn some cane fields. Really, the classical operations that we did in the maritime activities were the infiltrations and exfiltrations.

Q Were any CIA operations run out of Guantanamo?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Was it impractical to use the base there for --

A Well, the base is so surrounded and has been that I think if a guy went through that fence you would carry him back. He wouldn't walk.

MR. MANFREDI: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. MANFREDI: Back on the record.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q Are there any other categories of sabotage [redacted] other than what you have just described?

A Well, we did lay down a cache, if you will, sabotage kits to be used by our own island agents. They contained ✓ sugar to dump into gas tanks and metal fragments to put down crank cases. Things of this nature.

One of our main objects was to, of course, sabotage all the oil. We did that with a big operation. We made our own oil, substandard. Additives, I should say, not oil. We contracted with an American firm for that. And we shipped it in through third countries in Europe. It did hit the target.

The thing we wanted to get at was the oil and the automotive machinery on the island. We knew it was breaking down and if we could get a complete breakdown we would have everything at a standstill because in those days the automotive equipment wasn't coming in that rapidly from Europe because Castro didn't hve the money to buy it and they weren't going to extend the credit.

The railroad system was in total disaster. The Soviets had such a long logistics line, supply line, plus the fact that the Cubans didn't like the Soviet equipment because they were used to good American equipment. And these were principal targets that we were trying to get to.

Q In your experience at the Agency can you think of any other analogus or similar paramilitary operations run from a base in the United States?

A No.

Q I know there has been some paramilitary training in the United States.

A Oh, yes.

Q In connection with other operations.

A Oh, sure.

Q But do you know of any paramilitary operations that were actually run out of the United States?

A No.

Q As far as you know, then, this is a totally unique situation.

A As far as I am concerned, it is, yes.

Q Now, how large a Navy was actually organized in Miami? On a previous occasion you described this to me as the third largest Navy in the Caribbean.

A That is right.

Q What kind of equipment did these people have?

A Well, we had -- honestly, everything from a canoe up to three to 500 foot mother ship. We had Boston whalers, rubber boats. We had a number of craft in, say, the 27 to 45 foot length. And they looked like real tubs. They were painted and they looked like they wouldn't even float but they had the fastest engines in them. They could outrun anything. They were extremely well armed. We had our underwater demolition teams. We had a pretty good Navy.

Q Did these craft operate under non-official cover in the Miami area?

A Yes.

Q Were there a variety of covers or was there one firm?

A No. Variety.

Q Fishing companies?

A Well, fishing companies, Geodetic Survey, marine supply. In all, I think during the period that the station and these other entities were under commercial cover, or non-official cover, I think we had 100 so cover companies.

Q Did any of these companies actually engage in any legitimate commercial activities?

A Not to my knowledge, no.

Q None of them -- were any of them in competition with firms in that area?

A These are probably what we would call devised facilities. They were probably registered with the State of Florida and they paid taxes and this type of thing, but if one was blown or became known, we just crossed that out of existence and started up a new one.

Q What did Eugenio Martinez do when he wasn't running these operations?

A Well, he was down -- this is one of the reasons, as I told you before, we brought him back and put him under that contract, that retainer, because of the years that he spent under such strict operational discipline down in the Keys. Obviously, he didn't stay down there all the time. He came back -- he might come back once a month, or something like that, to see his family, perhaps once every two weeks if he got some time off.

Q I see. So some of these boats and personnel were actually stationed full-time [redacted]

A Oh, yes. Oh, sure.

Q Were there any operations run out of the United States which involved destruction of crops or poisoning of sugar or anything of that sort?

A What did you have in mind specifically? You mean the Puerto Rican thing?

A Well, that is one of the things I had in mind. Would you describe that for me?

A Well, this is, I guess you could term it a target of opportunity. This was where a vessel was carrying Cuban sugar to the Soviet Union and I forget exactly now what happened to it but I know that it got a hole below the waterline, or something, and had to put into Puerto Rico for repairs.

In order to repair it, I guess, and get it in the drydock or wherever it was, they had to remove the sugar and put it in the warehouse and at that time I guess somebody came up with a plan to try to widen the rift between -- there was a rift at that time between the Soviets and Cubans and to put a harmless substance into the sugar that would make it acid, sour tasting, and it wouldn't harm the sugar or the individual, and some of this was done. And then when it leaked, of course, we had to get rid of it and we had a sugar firm buy it back from the Soviets.

Q Bought it back from the Soviets?

A Yes.

MR. MANFREDI: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR.MANFREDI: Back on the record.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q Are there any other operations in which crops were -- were there attempts to destroy crops in Cuba?

A No. No.

Q Place foreign substances in Cuban products?

A In Cuban products?

Q Yes.

A No. Not that I recall. You see, Cuba really -- in those days the only thing, Cuba was exporting sugar and nickel. The agriculture sector of the economy was in absolutely total chaos. God, they didn't have any citrus, they didn't have anything, and the poor people in Cuba were literally starving. There just wasn't anything to eat. And Fidel was going around with this big plan -- of course, there were a number of experimental cattle ranches in Cuba. King Ranch had one there. I forget -- several other European and American companies that had experimental cattle ranches there and they were experimenting with the, you know, cross-breeding and this type of thing.

Fidel was preoccupied with this. He went up to Canada and paid $100,000 for a bull and -- so he just put it on an old Cuban Airways airplane. The damn airplane few too high and the bull became sterile by the time he landed in Cuba. No thought given to, you know, pressurizing the cabin and keeping the temperature at a certain point and this type of thing. So he was helping us all along the line and this here again, we generate propaganda, incompetence and this type of thing.

But as far as sabotaging any Cuban product, no, we didn't go into that. Our object was to enforce the blockade and cut off his sources of supply.

Q When was the Miami Station established?

A As a station?

Q Yes.

A I think in September 1961.

Q And that was several years before you became involved in Cuban matters?

A Yes.

Q Do you know of any other facilities of that nature within the United States, Agency facilities?

A You mean, targeted against the opposition?

Q Yes.

A A station as such?

Q Yes.

A No. You have some communications facilities that you really call stations because here again, they are not directed towards any domestic activity. They are in support of overseas communications.

Q Of course, we have [redacted] bases and DCD offices and Office of Security officers, and so forth.

A Right.

Q But I am talking about actual stations.

A Operating stations, no.

Q This is the only such station in the United States as far as you know, is that correct?

A Right.

Q And was this station established to deal primarily with Cuban activities?

A Yes.

Q Cuban-related matters?

A With Cuba, period.

Q Did it have, when it was established, any other responsibilities with respect to Western Hemisphere activities?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Entirely limited, then, to Cuban activities?

A Yes, and in support of Cuban activity and other countries in the Hemisphere.

Q When you joined the group dealing with Cuban activities, what was the size or the number of personnel attached to that Station?

A To that Station? Well, the Station had probably a couple hundred staffers there, full-time employees of the Agency, plus I don't know how many contract employees, independent contractors, probably another 200 minimum. It was obviously the largest installation we had. I think at its height it had over 500 people in it.

Q Full-time Agency people?

A No, no.

Q Combination of contract and --

A And full-time, yes. A regular employee we call a sta employee.

Q Now, would Martinez have been one of those contract people?

A Yes.

Q Even though he was located [redacted]

A Oh, yes.

Q And what kind of facilities did the Station have in Miami? Physical facilities.

A Well, they were located [redacted] It was a self-contained unit. It was pretty well off the beaten path, in fact, damn well off the beaten path. [redacted] We had our own guard force.

Q Official cover?

A No. [redacted]

Q [redacted] What was the cover?

A It was [redacted] It was called -- [redacted]

Q Engaging in any business?

A No.

Q Now, in a community of that type, Cuban community, how long could [redacted] last?

A Well, obviously it didn't, but it was research activities. Funded -- [redacted]

Q Yes, I understand.

A So it was a research activity and the only people that ever paid any attention to the place were the newspapers. You know, somebody would make an inquiry, you know, we can't accept any work, we are loaded with Government contracts and this type of thing, [redacted] The guard force, of course, were like -- well, they wore uniforms, similar to the Pinkerton people and this type of thing. And I think that there was -- in the later days at that site I think the [redacted] had offices in there and some other Government agencies, in other buildings, of course.

Q And this particular Station, then, was under the supervision of the group we have been discussing?

A Yes. They were staffed within the Cuban Operations.

Q When did the Western Hemisphere Division resume responsibilities for the Miami Station?

A Well, when Des. Fitzgerald left as Chief of the Special Activities Staff and became Chief of the Western Hemisphere Division, he brought it back into the Division.

Q [redacted]

A [redacted]

Q [redacted]

A [redacted]

Q When you joined the group in 1963, what functions were being performed by the Miami Station?

A Well, all the classical intelligence functions. I think I have lined them out at one time -- collection of positive intelligence, counterintelligence, paramilitary, this type of thing. Covert action.

Q This is the list of things you gave me earlier in the deposition?

A Yes.

Q Which of these activities, if any of them were actually being conducted within the Cuban community in Miami?

A Well, the collection of foreign positive and probably counterintelligence.

Q So the Agency was conducting counterintelligence activities in the Miami area?

A Yes, sir.

Q Can you give me an example of the kinds of counterintelligence activities that the Agency would be conducting in that area or was conducting in the area at that time?

A Well, we had a number of joint operations, as I recall, with the Bureau. We had identified a Castro agent that came in by small boat and when she was -- she came in with a number of other people. When she hit the -- they had a reception center up in Opa Loca that was really a HEW operation. The Domestic Contact Division office had people out there and we did, too. Our people from the DDO [redacted]. When the [redacted] people did the preliminary interrogation of these people they had to fill out forms, where were you born, this type of thing, biographic-type thing. These forms would be passed to our people who would look at the forms and based on previous experience or what they might have been doing, and they felt that perhaps they might have some information of intelligence value, they would reinterrogate them.

It was in this manner that this gal came to our knowledge. We surveilled her for a long time and determined that obviously she was receiving messages and she was sending messages. So along with the Bureau we put a surveillan on her and we obtained a van with DF equipment in it and indeed, she went on the air in the morning at 5:00 o'clock or 4:30 or whatever it was, and the direction finder found it was being beamed toward Cuba, this type of thing, and that was oen of the examples of the CI activities we were involved in.

Q. Were there many activities of that type?

A. Not really. You have got to remember that the Bureau's Cuban squad was fairly small. I mean, it was a large squad in terms of FBI squads. It had 36 people on it, something like that, but 36 people trying to follow a couple of hundred thousand Cubans around, you know, it is pretty negative. This was one of the reasons that obviously from -- in those days when we had formed these revolutionary fronts which were being run by the Cuban exiles, they were reporting to Case Officers and they would report on things in the community, of people they thought were suspect and this type of thing. These leads in turn were then given to the Bureau and it was to this extent that we got ourselves involved in CI activity.

Q Would it be fair to say that the involvement in CI activities in that area was primarily a function of the overwhelming number of these people and the Bureau's inability to properly staff the thing?

A Yes, yes. You have got to remember, too, that a lot of the people on that Cuban squad were in the legal section of the Embassy in Havana. You know, the FBI overseas is known as Legal Attaches, obviously working out of the Embassy the same as our Station was, and a lot of our Station officers from Havana were down in Miami at that time. So there was a relationship there that had gone over a period of years between the Agency and the Bureau.

MR.MANFREDI: We will reconvene at 1:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 11:45 o'clock a.m., the taking of the deposition was recessed, to reconvene at 1:00 p.m., this same day.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

Thereupon,

WILLIAM C. STURBITTS,

called as a witness by Counsel for the Commission on CIA Activities, and having been first duly sworn by the Notary Public, was examined and testified as follows:

EXAMINATION BY COUNSEL FOR THE COMMISSION (Cont'd)

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. When we recessed for lunch you were talking about the Miami Station . Do I understand that the Miami Station was the largest CIA station in the world?

A. The largest CIA station in the world. . .

Q. At its height?

A. Nothing comes anyplace close to it.

Q. I wonder if you could describe briefly for the record what the AMOTS were.

A. Well, the AMOTS were Cuban a Cuban intelligence organization in exile. We full intended -- this was part of the overall contingency plan that US Government had. Should Castro ever be overthrown, these people would be the nucleus to go into Cuba and form a new Ministry of the Interior.

Q. Now, Ministry of the Interior, is that a euphemism for Security Agency?

A. Well, in most countries of the world the Ministry of Interior, unlike ours, is the security force, internal and

Q. And these people were Cuban exiles?

A. Cuban exiles.

Q. How large an outfit were the [redacted]

A. Well, at one time -- I can give you the exact figures but I know it well exceeded over 100, probably closer to --

Q. Go ahead.

A. Probably closer to 150, something like that.

Q. Now, would that 150 persons be included within the three to 500 who made up the Miami Station?

A. No.

Q. That was over and above the personnel of the Miami Station?

A. Right.

Q. These people were fulltime CIA employes, weren't they?

A. Right. WEll, let me -- these people really were -- they were being subsidized by the Agency. [redacted] Then we had another smaller group that did the interrogating and they were under [redacted] -- I just don't recall what it was. [redacted]

Q. The salaries of these people, although paid indirectly, were paid by the CIA?

A. That is right.

Q And was training provided them by the Agency?

Q. Oh, yes.

A. You said the smaller group of the two groups that made up the [redacted] conducted the interrogations, is that correct?

A. Right.

Q. When you speak of interrogations, are you referring to debriefings?

A. I am referring to debriefings of newly arrived exiles or perhaps exiles that had been in the country whom during their time here had acquired new information.

Q. How were those -- how and where were those debriefings conducted?

A. Well, normally the debriefings were conducted at Opa Loca.

Q. That is the Air Base?

A. That is the old Air Base there but that is where the reception center was for all the Cuban refugees coming in.

Sometimes if there was going to be a lengthy debriefing, we had a residence which we rented and the interior was changed into small rooms like this where you could bring people in, sit them down, under controlled conditions, and debrief them without any interference and this type of thing.

Q. For how long a period did these debriefings go on?

A. You mean in terms of years?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I would think that I would probably say from about 1962, and I think the debriefings as such, of course -- we relied principally on the airlift for the people coming out and when the airlift was cut off, which Castro did -- cut off about, I guess about 1970 or '71, in that timeframe --

Q. I see.

A. -- that stopped the flow of the refugees, so we just terminated that part of the activity.

Q. Well, in addition to debriefing refugees that came in in the airlift, did the smaller group of AMOTS have any other intelligence gathering functions --

A. No.

Q. In the community?

A. Well, I can't give you a real yes or no to that. I would suppose that there is an outside possibility they could have been used to debrief people within the community, within the Cuban community, but we had in the organization -- all these people were Cuban with the exception of we had what we call an On-Site Case Officer, who was a fulltime staff employee and he had a couple of assistants, including a secretary. These people were directly under his control. Though the organization as it was set up, they had their own chief and this type of thing, but the chief took his instructions from the On-Site Case Officer

Of course, if these people went out and did something on their own, they could do things we were not aware of, obviously. You can't -- you know what they are doing during their eight or ten hours that they are going to work everyday but once they leave, we don't know what they are up to.

Q. Did they have CIA credentials?

A. No sir, because [redacted]

Q. Did CIA levy any intelligence requirements upon these people other than in their duties -- in their debriefing capacity, I should say?

A. No. When -- there were -- obviously there was a standard debriefing form that covered questions of intelligence interest or a battle, you know, anything -- economic questions, morale, and this type of thing. When these questions -- when these people were debriefed and the debriefer wrote up the report, it would be sent from the [redacted] over to the Station. If the debriefing report contained something of positive intelligence, of that nature, the Case Officer -- well, not the Case Officer but a staffer in the Station may or may not jot down some additional requirements and ask that that person be recontacted and asked specific questions.

Q. Now, in addition to debriefing, what else did this smaller broup of [redacted] do for the Agency in the Miami area?

A. This was their prime purpose.

Q. How large was that particular group?

A. Oh, there were only about, I would say at the outside, I think there were about five debriefers with the support people which would be secretaries, translators, strictly administrative types. I don't think there were more than probably 12 or 15 in that group, if there were that many.

MR. MANFREDI: Off the record.

(Off the record discussion)

BY MR. MANFREDI: Back on the record.

Q. Before we move on to further discussion of the AMOTS could you briefly describe for me what role the CIA plays in resettling Cuban emigres?

A. CIA doesn't resettle Cuban emigres.

Q. What Agency is charged with that responsibility?

A. Health, Education and Welfare.

Q. Does CIA play any role in that process?

A. We may assist if we are asked but the idea of the whole airlift was having relatives here for somebody to claim you when you came in so you wouldn't become a ward of the State of the Government, and normally when these refugees came in, they were processed through the Center and then they had a place down on Biscayne Boulevard they called Freedom House and this was, of course, all run by HEW, and they -- if need be and they had to stay overnight or stay several days, HEW would put them up and care for them in Freedom House.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

Then as soon as they could, of course, they would move them to the areas where they wanted to resettle them, where the relatives were, this type of thing, and we had nothing to do with that whatsoever.

Q. Turning back to the [redacted] and to the larger of the two groups, what was the name of that group again?

A. [redacted]

Q. We can call them [redacted] for short?

A. Really, they are both -- the only reason we separated the two groups was for security because we had one group housed over here and the smaller group was over here. Obviously we couldn't bring these refugees into the larger establishment, so that is why we took the smaller establishment [redacted]

Q. Okay. What activities was the larger group engaged in?

A. WEll, the larger group was engaged in the collection of intelligence. They compiled dossiers on the principals inside Cuba. They carded -- they kept card files on every refugee that came through the reception center. They provided they did do economic and social reporting. They put out a monthly newsletter based on the information they collected.

The information these people collected as opposed to the information we collected, ther's was all unclassified. That came from -- all the information they had came from human source or overt publications. We subscribed -- well, the proprietary subscribed to a number, a great many newspapers, periodicals, Spanish language type things.

Q. Well, they were doing clandestine collections as well, weren't they?

A. I don't know if you could call it clandestine. What did you have in mind?

Q. Well, would they run agents in the community?

A. Well, yes, there were penetrations of the Cuban community, yes.

Q. And that is clandestine collection, isn't it?

A. WEll, I call that human resources.

Q. All right. Where are these files now?

A. They are in the Headquarters here. A great many of them were really destroyed. It got to be rather comic. We went down there several years ago just looking through the files to see what kind of shape they were in and they had such great information for intelligence value in there as a picture of a gal who might be the daughter of a Cuban refugee who just won a swimming meet. It got rather ridiculous. So we purged those files and took out that material, you know, which just didn't have any pertinancy at all.

Q. How are the files organized? You indicated before that there is a card, index card for each Cuban refugee?

A. Right.

Q. Are there soft cover files as well?

A. Yes.

Q. For each Cuban refugee?

A. No. Not for each Cuban refugee. I think, as I recall, those card files were up in the milli-ns and I forget, we had I guess the manilla files, probably went into the tens of thousands, I would think.

Q. Now, is there any way to determine from those files which of those exiles have become United States citizens?

A. No way.

Q. Has there been any effort to make such a determination?

A. We made an effort at one time but this -- you can become nationalized out in California and your record of nationalization wouldn't be reflected here in Washington for two years. That is how far they are behind.

Q. So I take it --

A. So there is no central index you can go to. I mean, there is a central index you can go to but it is not current.

Q. I take it, then, that there is a possibility that the CIA has some files in Miami or here in Langley on Cubans who are now American citizens?

A. Absolutely true.

Q. Now, are any of those files likely to contain derogatory information about the individuals involved?

A. Well, no. One of the things these people do, of course, we had targets for recruitment. It could range from anything from a first mate, a captain or chief engineer of a Cuban maritime vessel to Fidel. When we targeted these people as possible recruitments, for possible recruitment,we would ask that all the information on that individual be assembled so that we could do a complete target study -- habits, you know, everything right down the line. In case of some of the more important ones, of course, we had psychological studies prepared where we had enough information. But this is one of the things these people did. If we said we want everything you have on the first mate of the -- one of the Cuban ships, then they would start looking through the papers or anything else to come up with anything they could on what the guy's current activities are, his background, his life habits, this type of thing.

Q. Well, the AMOTS were going to be the intelligence service of Cuba?

A. Right.

Q. And they obviously were going to perform some function in addition to recruitment of agents?

A. Right.

Q. I take it they were trained in counterintelligence, gathering of positive intelligence, recruitment and all of the traditional skills, is that correct?

A. That is about right.

Q. So I trust that they had files that were amassed for purposes other than recruitment?

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

A. Well --

Q. For example, let me ask you this. Were any of these files on Cubans who were suspected or thought to be a possible internal security problem?

A. No. No. They didn't keep those types of files. We would simply task them with through your sources what do you have on so and so. They would not be told the reason why we wanted the information on anybody.

Q. Well, I guess with several million fiels or several million cards and tens of thousands of files it is difficult to make generalizations about the kind of information that is in those files?

A. Well, that is right.

Q. So I guess I won't ask you to do so, but I want to ask you this. I trust that there is the possibility that some of these files do contain what you in the trade refer to as derogatory information?

A. I would assume so.

Q. And that so much of them may -- some of the subjects of those files may now be American citizens?

A. Right.

Q. And finally I take it that no effort has been made to study that particular situation?

WARD & PAUL
...st Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

You know, we have a traveler program where when Cubans travel, whether they are on an island or perhaps other places, their names turn up on manifests and this type of thing. Well, these are put into a machine system. What we did when these cards were all transferred back here in Miami, we did go through them at random and pick out cards and then try to match it up with what the machine system had to see if there was updated information in the machine system that would show that this guy had become a naturalized citizen, and it didn't work out. So --

Q. Excuse me, off the record.

(Off the record discussion)

MR. MANFREDI: Back on the record.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. I want to straighten out confusion in my own mind where these files presently reside. The cards I take it are presently here in Washington?

A. The cards and what is left of the files.

Q. That is the soft cover files?

A. Yes.

Q. And --

A. I assume they are either here or down at the Records Center.

Q. And where is the computer system?

A. You mean our machine system? We have -- information on the cards?

A. Right down on the third floor.

Q. That is not the hydro system?

A. Oh, no, no.

Q. This is a separate --

A. This is a complete -- only the Latin American Division uses this particular system.

Q. What kind of records -- strike that.

The [redacted] are still in existence, aren't they?

A. No.

Q. I thought they were going out in June.

A. Well, okay. They are on the books until June.

Q. I see.

A. But they have all been let go. They were let go -- they were all given six months termination bonuses and told to go find a job.

Q. Do they have any facilities, physical facilities, in Miami at this time?

A. no.

Q. So there are no records in Miami?

A. No. No. We brought all those records back here.

Q. Did the [redacted] have law enforcement responsibilities in the Miami community?

A. No. No.

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. What else did they do, this larger group of [redacted] that was not doing debriefings?

A. Well, when they were trained in trade craft we would send them to other countries, in Europe and within the Hemisphere to train some of the local services in those countries. They served as safe housekeepers in other countries. They served in listening posts where we had audio --

Q. Foreign listening posts?

A. Oh, yes, foreign.

Q. Any domestic listening posts?

A. No, no.

Q. Any domestic surveillances conducted by these people?

A. I would assume -- this I cannot answer because I reall don't know. I know that they did a great number of things but to my knowledge there wasn't any domestic surveillance conducted by them.

Now, if it was conducted, and if it is a matter of record, I don't know where it could be.

Q. What intelligence gathering activities did they conduct in the Cuban community in Miami?

A. One of the big problems we had was within that Cuban community, as I said earlier, were some of the militant anti-Castro groups and this just drove the FBI and the Coast Guard agencies in Miami plus the State government enforcement agencies up the wall and, of course, I guess it was around -- the Government allowed a lot of this to go on for awhile but I guess about 1965 or 1964 they got a little tired of it and they started to tighten up.

I am sure the AMOTS were in part responsible for proposing alerting us and in turn we alerted the enforcement agencies when there was going to be a raid against Cuba by one of these militant groups. A number of times raids were aborted, picked up by the Coast Guard or Florida Coastal Patrol or the Bureau, this type of thing.

Q. These people were arrested?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Prosecuted?

A. Not really.

Q. Any of them American citizens?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. This would be Alpha 66 type groups?

A. I don't know whether this guy -- well, you know, they are still after this Masferrer and this guy Donestevez. I don't know if they ever did get him in jail but they had him up on so many charges and he was a Cuban exile that made it big here. He was a boat manufacturer, small boats, but whether he ever served any time or not I don't know. I know he was convicted

I truthfully don't know whether any of these people ever went to jaul or not.

Q Other than identifying operations by militant anti-Castro groups, what other intelligence gathering did the AMOTS engage in?

A. Well, of course, there was a counterintelligence -- I wouldn't call it a project but a counterintelligence interest at that time because we knew that they were infiltrating agents.

Q Cubans were?

A. The Cuban Government. They couldn't do it very well on the airlift because, as I said before, the aged, infirm, and young, but they did infiltrate them by small boat. And I don't -- well, we had knowledge that this was on and we did try to identify those people whom we thought would be suspect.

Q Was that done in cooperation with the Bureau?

A. With the Bureau, yes.

Q Because of their manpower limitations you folks were in a better position to do it?

A. Yes, and language-wise, too. That is always a big factor.

Q And this was conducted through the AMOTS?

A. Yes.

Q How substantial was the counterintelligence operation in the community?

would call a great number of suspect infiltrees, but they lid come up with a few promising ones and ones it turned over to the Bureau, of course, we have no idea what the hell ever happens to it because, you know, you just -- unless you personally know the guy in the Bureau that is handling the case, you might as well forget it. You have got too many other things to do.

Q. What other positive intelligence gathering activities were they engaging in?

A. Well, as I told you, one part of them were engaged in [redacted]

Q. Where was that done?

A. Down in Florda, [redacted]

Q. This is Southeast of [redacted]

A. Yes.

Q. What ere they [redacted]

A. Well, originally they were set up to assist with the commo. for the infiltration.

As we phased down the maritime activities, they were made available to [redacted] such as the border guards. Another important one was the sugar network. We had the border guards, sugar, transportation, maritime. I think there was an interior network they covered too. [redacted]

Now, since they belong to us we could levy ceratin requirements on them if we wanted to, which we did very infrequently because the common interests, -- we have a common interest in what [redacted] has an interest in and unless there were one particular operation going that they wanted to cover exactly what the Cubans were doing, then we would task our people with that.

For instance, we knew a Cuban vessel was taking arms into Africa and our operators saw the thing leave Havana and then there was absolute silence. So nobody knew where the thing was. But we knew arms were being loaded and we finally located the boat in an African port, I mean the [redacted] it came back on the air. And this is the type of thing. As a matter of fact, they were unloading arms in Algiers. And 200 Cuban troops.

MR. MANFREDI: Off the record.

(Off the record discussion)

MR. MANFREDI: Let's go back on the record.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. Were the [redacted] exclusively foreign [redacted]?

A. Exclusively foreign [redacted]

Q. Were they [redacted] one terminus of which was the United States?

A. No.

A. Right.

Q. On the Island?

A. Right.

Q. Or between the Island and other locations?

A. Yes.

Q. But not between the Island and the United States?

A. No. Let's go off the record on that.

(Off the record discussion)

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. To your knowledge were the AMOTS engaging in the intercept of any communications, either that facility or elsewhere, in the Miami area or in the southern part of the country?

A. No.

Q. Of other communications?

A. No.

Q. Is that their only intercept facility?

A. (Nods affirmative)

Q. Do you know of your own personal knowledge -- strike that. Do you have any knowledge of any wiretaps, surveillances, breakins or activities of thqt type other than what we have discussed --

A. No sir.

-- that were conducted by the AMOTS?

A. No sir. I want to go off the record a minute.

(Off the record discussion)

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. I understand that a study of the history of the [redacted] has been prepared by one of your members.

A. That is right.

Q. What is his name?

A. I think it is Joaquin -- I can't remember the last name. The poor guy is dead now anyway. Well, I will just have to get that for you.

Q. What is the title of the study?

A. The title of the study -- it is part of the historical series of the Miami Station and I think it is just entitled "The [redacted] Organization."

Q. What is the historical series of the Miami Station?

A. [redacted] What we try to do as we go along, from year to year, is set aside what is considered to be some of the more siginificant things the station might do or that might occur in the station personnel-wise, this type of thing, and then these things are written.

Q. I see.

A. At intervening periods of time.

Q. When was this particular report prepared[redacted]?

A. I think it was prepared in 1967 or '68.

Q. It is a fairly lengthy document, isn't it?

A. Yes.

activities of the [redacted].

A. It starts back in 1959 when we first started using this gent..

Q. First started using what?

A. First started using, I forget what his name was.

Q. I see. Is it a chronological study of their activities?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have a copy of that in your custody?

A. Yes.

Q. I would like to see that document. And we will try and obtain it through Hank Knoche's office.

A. Okay.

Q. Excuse me just for a minute.

(Off the record discussion)

MR. MANFREDI: On the record.

BY MR. MANFREDI: I wonder if you would -- let me ask you this. There have been some allegations in the press that prominent newsmen in the Miami area have in the past been agents of the CIA.

Mr. Olsen just came into the office and I asked him to join us because some of your involvement in Cuban activities in the Agency in the Miami area touch peripherally on some of the things had has been charged with investigating, so I am going to turn

MR. OLSEN: Thank you, George.

BY MR. OLSEN:

Q Can you begin, since I have not been in on the beginning of the interview here, can you start off, Mr. Sturbitts, by giving me about a one or two minute resume of what your contacts were with the Cuban elements in Florida and elsewhere withing this country on behalf of the Agency?

A. Well, I was a member of the Special Activities Staff which was in effect the Cuban task force at Headquarters and the Miami Station functioned under the Special Activities Staff in a variety of intelligence collection and operations.

Q Who was the head of the Special Activities Staff?

A. Desmond Fitzgerald.

Q And who was his immediate superior?

A. Dick Bissell. Excuse me. No. At that time it was Dick Helms. He was the DEP.

Q Deputy Director for Plans?

A. Deptuty Director for Plans.

Q What period of time are we talking about now?

A. We are talking in the period of 1963 to 1965.

MR. MANFREDI: Off the record.

(Off the record discussion)

BY MR. OLSEN:

Q So you were not involved in this Special Activities during the 1959 to '61 period?

Q. Or the period leading up to the Bay of Pigs?

A. No.

Q. And you were not involved in this program at all durin the same time that E. Howard Hunt was involved in it?

A. No.

Q. Do you know what the position was Mr. Hunt occupied in connection with the Cuban operations of the Agency during the period of 1959 to '61?

A. To my recollection, Howard Hunt was on the Covert Action Staff dealing in propaganda.

Q. Was this propaganda directed to the Cuban people in this country?

A. No. Cuban people abroad.

Q. And what was his connection with the planning for the Bay of Pigs?

A. I would have to review the record to really answer that. I don't know.

Q. Didn't he spend an awful lot of time in the Miami area?

A. He commuted quite a bit.

Q. Between Washington and --

A. Washington and Miami.

Q. -- and Miami. During the period of 1960 and early '61?

A. Right.

published materials that he was the person who was in charge of organizing a political unit among Cubans in this country which would constitute the Cuban government in exile. Do you recall where that was?

A. That could be quite true.

Q. Have you reviewed, Mr. Sturbitts, the Agency's entire files relating in any way to the Cuban operations and particularly with reference to whether they reflect any contacts between the Agency and Frank Sturgis?

A. Yes.

Q. Or Frank Fiorini?

A. There is no relationship.

Q. Is it your testimony that the records and files of the Agency reveal no official or unofficial contact of any nature with Frank Sturgis?

A. To my knowledge that is true.

Q. I take it from that that you are emphatic in your testimony that he was never an employee of the Agency?

A. Extremely emphatic.

Q. And you are also equally emphatic to the effect that he was never a contract agent of the Agency?

A. Exactly.

Q. Do you know whether he ever served in the capacity of being an informer or informant to the Agency?

Q. YOu mean a source of --

A. Source of information of another agent. Another agency agent.

Q. Do the files of the Agency reflect any matter?

A. To my knowledge I don't recall anything like that but it is entirely possible that that could have happened without being a matter of record.

Q. Do the files of the Agency reveal any instance whatever in which Frank Sturgis was ever asked to undertake any kind of an operation or activity on behalf of the Agency?

A. To my knowledge, nothing.

Q. Do the files of the Agency reveal any evidence whatever that Frank Sturgis was ever paid anything directly or indirectly by the Agency?

A. To my knowledge, no.

Q. Now, when you say "to my knowledge, no", in answer to some of these questions, do I understand that to mean that you are giving us the full benefit of your knowledge on the basis of a full review of the Agency's records and files?

A. On Frank Sturgis, yes.

Q. Okay. During the period of time that you were with the Special Activities Group from 1963 to '66, first of all, can you tell us when that began in 1963?

A. When the Special Activities Group --

Group began?

A. It began -- well, it began around June of '63.

Q. Now, with particular reference to the last half of 1963, including whatever period in June '63 may not have been involved, were there a great many Cubans in the southern United States who were active in revolutionary fronts that were being sponsored by the Agency?

A. Wellm you mean Agency sponsored fronts?

Q. Yes.

A. The Agency subsidized these fronts in an effort to have unity rather than these split factions, split anti-Castro factions. Obviously the leaders of the fronts knew that the CIA was subsidizing. Supposedly the people that joined these fronts did not know they were being subsidized by the Agency or the U.S. Government.

Q. But when you say "supposedly," does the fact appear to be otherwise?

A. WEll, based on my experience with the Cubans and this type of thing, and their penchant to talk, I would think that it wouldn't take long for knowledge of any subsidy to surface itself.

Q. Was it your opinion and impression at that time, Mr. Sturbitts, that a great many Cubans considered themselves to be involved in the CIA organizations?

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000
WARD & PAUL
First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

Q. And again with particular reference to the Miami area?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there also Cuban activity of this sort elsewhere in the United States? I am asking now particularly with reference to New Orleans.

A. There was some Cuban presence in New Orleans. I am really not familiar with what happened in New Orleans that was sort of a sideshow to Miami.

Q. But the same is -- it is possible that some of the same Cuban organizations which were being sponsored or funded by the Agency also had activities or operations in New Orleans?

A. I don't know if I can answer that, whether they had the same functions. I know that some funding arrangement for subsidizing the organizations in Miami was carried out through New Orleans.

Q. Well, can you be more specific about what you mean by that?

A. Well, in other words, to fund these organizations we were subsidizing there had to be some ostensible source of income for them to continue what they were doing. A great number -- well, not a great number, but a number of select people were -- well, they were selected and then they were talked to, to pose as trustees, if you would, or directors or wh[illegible] you might have of some of these organizations in order to get the funding through to the organizations.

These people were normally prominent people and --

Q. And did they get funded by the Agency, then, through the mdeium of prominent and well-to-do people?

A. These well-to-do people ostensibly would call a friend of theirs that had been made trustee of another type of activity and say, you know, we are trying to assist these Cubans in this type of thing. Could your organization give us any money, and the guy on the other end would say, sure, we can probably lend you $25,000 or something like that, or donate $25,000. This is the way the funding went into the fronts.

Q. And was some of that funding arranged through people in New Orleans?

A. I would think so. I believe so.

Q. Were any of the people in New Orleans through whom that funding operation was effected people who turned out to be involved in the investigations conducted by Jim Garrison?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. How about David Ferrie? Was he ever connected with the Agency in any manner at all in providing funds or assistance to Cubans or Cuban groups?

A. I couldn't say. I am just not familiar with -- we had a great many people that did this.

Q. How about Clay Shaw? Was Clay Shaw ever used as a

A. This I do not know either.

Q. Pardon?

A. This I don't know.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. Where would that information be available?

A. Well, we have a guy that used to work with me who was down in New Orleans at that time. He would probably know.

Q. Is he in the building?

A. Yes.

Q. What is his name?

A. [redacted]

Q. [redacted]

A. Yes.

BY MR. OLSEN:

Q. Who is [redacted] with now? Which department?

A. He is still with the DDO.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. Western Hemisphere Division?

A. No. He is on one of the staffs. He is on the -- I think Career Management Group Staff.

Q. Is he officed near you?

A. No. He is down in the basement.

BY MR. OLSEN:

Q. Do the Agency files reveal who the intermediaries were

A. Oh, yes.

Q. -- to the Cuban movements?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know wheiter -- do you know the identity of any of them in New Orleans?

A. No. No. Totally unfamiliar with anything that took place in New Orleans.

Q. I take it that Frank Sturgis was never an intermediary for providing funds to the Cuban fronts?

A. The files that I have don't reflect it.

Q. I think we covered this already just a few minutes ago but let me make sure that we have got it on the record.

I understood you to say that it was your impression in 1963 that large numbers of Cuban exiles, Cuban people in the southern United States, talked about and believed that they were involved in the CIA sponsored activities. Is that true?

A. That is right.

Q. Was it also your understanding and your impression that there was a good deal of talk among this Cuban element in the southern United States about plans or prospects for the assassination of Fidel Castro?

A. I would say no. I don't think there was -- you have got to remember that these people were embittered. They lost their homeland, their possessions, they lost everything and they

Q. That is Fiedl Castro?

A. That is right, and they would probably verbally do anything they could to get rid of him.

Q. Was there a lot of talk about killing Castro among these Cubans?

A. I would say among the Cuban exiles there probably was a lot of talk about that.

Q. Did you participate yourself in the overhearing of such conversations?

A. No.

Q. Was this a matter of something that was reported to you?

A. Well, it was -- I really don't remember what the source of it was but I know in my discussions with people at the Station and from my visits down there and that type of thing that this subject always came up. What were they going to do with Fidel? How are they going to get rid of him and this type of thing. I don't mean the Agency people. This is what the Cuban exile community was discussing.

Q. Yes. Do you know what Howard Hunt was doing for the Agency in 1963?

A. Well, it seems to me he was here at Headquarters in '63 and I think he was assigned to the European Division of the DDP.

Q. This is your best recollection --

A. Yes.

Q. -- at the moment. Is it possible that he was with Domestic Operations Division in the field of proprietaries engaged --

A. I guess you are right, yes. I believe he was there.

Q. Did you personally know Howard Hunt?

A. No.

Q. Never met him?

A. I met him. That is all. I can't say I know him.

Q. You would not have known anything about his whereabouts on any particular day, then. Is that true?

A. Can we go off the record?

(Off the record discussion.)

THE WITNESS: Let's go back on the record.

BY MR. OLSEN:

Q. I would like to have it on the record.

A. Do you have a particular day?

Q. No. I am just asking you if your acquanitance with Hunt was such that you would have known of his whereabouts on any particular day.

A. No.

Q. Was it very infrequently that you ever saw him?

A. Oh, I would see him in the halls, this type of thing, but -- bump into him perhaps downtown on the street.

Q. But you would have no occasion for knowing from one day to the next where he was?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever conducted any kind of inquiry on behalf of the Agency as to where he was on November 22, 1963?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did you conduct that inquiry?

A. I have done it twice that I recall and the most recent one was I guess -- I am just trying to think. Well, it wasn't too long ago because we did have an inquiry and we obtained the time and the attendance records from the Office of Finance which showed that Howard Hunt was on sick leave on that day.

Q. Was this just fairly recently?

A. Yes.

Q. I understood from what files I have seen, Mr. Sturbitts, that the only records that were available from the Office of Finance showed that he had had nine hours of sick leave during the two-week pay period ending the 23rd of November but that the records were not available as to how much sick leave or annual leave had been taken on any particular day.

A. Well --

Q. Am I mistaken?

A. As I recall, he was in a duty status one day and a sick leave status the next day and back to duty the next day. I would have to check that with my Budget and Fiscal Officer. He is the chap that got that for me..

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

Q. Can you check that for us?

A. Sure.

Q. And give us the results of that?

A. Yes.

Q. Because this is much more detailed information than I have been previouly aware is available in the files of the Agency.

A. All right. I will do that.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. Do you want to make a note of that?

A. Let me have a piece of paper.

Q. YOu might also want Mr. Sturbitts' phone number which is 351-5106.

THE WITNESS: That was 22 November, right?

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. That is the day.

A. 1963.

Q. In response to whose inquiry was that investigation made?

A. I don't know. I would have to look that up, too. I don't recall exactly who asked for it. I don't know whether -- I will just have to check that. I don't know who it was.

Q. And the date? Do you have any idea when you made the inquiry?

A. No. But Ican find out from the B and F guy, hopefully.

WARD & PAUL
410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

Q. You said there was a previous inquiry?

A. Yes. The previous inquiry came from Archie Roosevelt who is now retired and was at that particular time the Chief of European Division.

Q. When was that inquiry received?

A. That was about a year ago, I guess.

BY MR. OLSEN:

Q. About the first time these photographs began to be circulated?

A. Yes.

Q. About the bums in Dallas?

A. Yes, and actually I think this -- Archie's inquiry came from some magazine or newspaper man in Europe. Archie was [redacted] for a long time and he apparently made a lot of acquaintances over there among the media.

Q. This is something you are relating to Der Sterm Magazine?

A. That is right.

Q. And did I understand you to say thqt in checking with the Office of Finance that it was positively ascertained that Hunt was on sick leave on November 22nd?

A. Well, I will have to check that. That is the way I understood it but I did get this through our Budget people who have the contact with the Office of Finance.

Q. And that he was on annual leave the day before?

A. No. He was on a duty status the day before, on sick leave, and then on duty status the following day.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. Was there any effort to determine what Mr. Hunt's previous pattern with respect to sick days had been?

A. (Nods in negative)

BY MR. OLSEN:

Q. November 22, 1963, was a Friday. When you say that records reveal that he was on a duty status the next day --

A. It was a Friday. Then I was mistaken.

Q. Does that mean he was on duty the following Monday or on the next day, Saturday?

A. No. On the following Monday. I didn't realize the 22nd was a Friday.

Q. Will you check that thing for us and give us a brief memo together with whatever supporting -- copies of supporting documents you can find?

A. Okay.

Q. As promptly as possible on this question.

I think that covers the subject matter.

MR. MANFREDI: I can give you another moment if you want. Can you think of anything else?

MR. OLSEN: I think that is all.

MR. MANFREDI: Okay. Off the record.

(Off the record discussion)

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q. I am sorry for the interruption but over the long haul I think probably I saved you some time.

We are talking about newspaper editors when we were interrupted -- or when I invited the interruption. I guess I ought to be fair.

Is it not a fact that the Agency had some relationship with some prominent newspaper officials in the Miami area?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was the nature of that relationship?

A. Traditionally the Chief of Station maintained the relationship with officials of the Miami Herald, particularly the Latin American editor, as well as relationships with staff members of it, I think it is the Miami News and stringers for the other newspapers and periodicals stationed in Miami.

Q. What was the purpose of those relationships?

A. I really couldn't say what the prupose of the relationship was. I mean, the same reason that we establish a relationship with the press in this town. There were certain things that might come to the attention of the press involving true names and incidents that we felt should perhaps not be surfaced at any particular time.

Q. Do you have any knowledge of use of the press in Miami for propaganda purposes?

A. No. No.

lbh 1
folos
msl

Q Would you know if that were the case?

A No. I really wouldn't know, but the relationship was a two-way street. It wasn't simply that we assisted these people as well as they were assigint us.

Q What assistance would you render for members of the press in Miami?

A Well, in the case of [redacted] we would put him in contact with the Chiefs of Stations of areas he periodically visited and the Chiefs of Stations would give him background briefings and this type of thing on the developments within a given country.

Q Was that done evenhandedly for various newspapers?

A Predominantly, I would say probably [redacted] received probably a little more attention [redacted]

Q Was he also used as a source?

A No.

Q Do newspapermen in Washington, D.C., receive similar briefings?

A Yes.

Q We talked with Mr.Olsen for a short period of time about fronts, revolutionary fronts. How large were these organizations?

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

A Well, the membership varied. As I said, we were principally interested in the leadership of the organizations. Once the organization was established and the leadership took over, then they would take care of enlisting the, I guess, getting membership from the Cuban exile community to join.

Q What were their functions, the fronts?

A Well, it was to bring some unity out of this chaotic thing of the splinter groups and get -- as I said, it was a political organization in exile.

Q Did they conduct any operations?

A No, not that I know of.

Q Just like a political party?

A Like a political party.

Q How many of these fronts were there?

A There were several of them. I really don't remember the names of them. The FRD was one. The Revolutionary Democratic Front. I guess that was probably the biggest one. And there were some others.

Q The RDF?

A FRD.

Q I see.

A Front Revolutionary Democratic. It is the Democratic Revolutionary Front.

Q All right. Are these groups still in existence?

A I would think not. I really don't know.

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

mbh 3

Q Is there a CIA station in Puerto Rico?

A No. There was but there isn't any more. There hasn't been one there for years.

Q When was it disbanded?

A I think the station was established around 1958 and -- perhaps it was established before that. I think it went out of existence in 1958.

Q Do you know why it went out of existence?

A No, I don't. I don't have any idea.

Q Do you know what function it was performing?

A (Nods in negative.)

Q You mentioned earlier that Bernard Barker worked in the Cuban community for the CIA?

A He worked with these fronts, too.

Q Was he performing any intelligence function in the community?

A Intelligence functions. Well --

Q Was he collecting information?

A Sure. If he got information that he thought was worthwhile he would pass it on.

Q Now, would he have been considered one of the three or 500 persons employed or assigned to the Miami Station?

A Yes. He was a contract employee.

Q And were intelligence requirements levied on such contract employees?

A Normally, the requirements are pretty standard, or they were at that time. But here again, you always have ad hoc type things that pop up from time to time, and have to be surfaced.

Q Some of these contract employees were, then, in the business of collecting intelligence information in the Cuban communities in Miami.

A Right.

Q Now, I think we finished with [redacted] but can you think of any other functions performed by [redacted] that we have not discussed in the course of the afternoon?

A No, not really. No.

Q I think you previously described them for me as the eyes and ears into the Cuban community.

A Right.

Q And they actually had a physical facility in Miami which was their headquarters, did they not?

A Exactly.

Q And there was a CIA Case Officer who managed to supervise that facility.

A Yes.

Q Now, what has happened to [redacted]?

A [redacted] were gradually phased down and will go out of existence -- [redacted] are out of existence, aren't they? Isn't it the [redacted] or -- these are the [redacted]

Q And [redacted] are [redacted]?

A The [redacted] are [redacted].

Q [redacted]

A Yes. The only reason we use two different names is that in each of these things in those days we had to have a project which had to be renewed every year to get the funding.

Q So [redacted] and [redacted] --

A Synonymous.

Q -- are cryptonyms?

A Yes.

Q Do the initials stand for anything other than --

A No. Just pick them out. If you want to encrypt somebody you just call downstairs and they give you a crypt. You don't have anything to do with it. [redacted].

Q Now, turning to the Miami Station's involvement for assistance to the Secret Service in connection with the political conventions in 1968 and 1972, would you briefly describe for me the nature of the assistance provided by the Agency to the Secret Service?

A At the request of the Secret Service we conducted name traces on individuals whom the Secret Service wanted traced. These includedthe employees of all hotels in Miami Beach where any convention activities were to take place, employees of catering services, limosine service, employees in -- what do they call it, the Civic Center in Miami. It is a big auditorium down there. I forget what they call it. Foreign news people and media, television, radio people.

Q Were these people on whom name traces were requested. all foreign nationals?

A All foreign nationals.

Q Was there any check made to determine whether any of them were American citizens?

A We levied on the Secret Service as a requirement that they have identified these people by nationality before we would run a name trace. Inadvertently, at one time they did submit a list, a rather long list of American citizens which we promptly sent back to them and told them we could not trace.

Q And this practice was followed both in 1968 and 1972?

A That is right.

Q And where were these names traced?

A They were traced back here and also in Miami. The Miami Station did their name check and we did our name check here. In the case of Cubans, probably the Miami Station had more information on the Cubans than we would have back here.

Q But the names were traced through Agency files?

mbh 7

A Through Agency files.

Q Was Secret Service receiving cooperation from FBI on this as well?

A Oh, yes.

Q And in effect, they were getting an all-Agency name check --

A Right.

Q -- on people who might pose a security threat --

A Yes.

Q -- to a candidate?

A Well, they were just trying to determine who might be a security threat.

Q That is right. Potential threat.

A Yes.

Q For what political parties -- strike that.

In 1968 was this service provided for both political conventions?

A Both political conventions.

Q Were they both held in Miami that year?

A No. I guess it was in 1972 they were both held there. I think it was just the Democratic in 1968.

Q These requests did come from the Secret Service rather than --

A From the Secret Service and it was -- the Director of the Secret Service came to the DCI and asked him for support.

Phone (Area 202) 544-6000

Q Do you still maintain the records with respect to that tracing activity?

A I have all the names that have been traced.

Q And they are on little cards down in your files?

A Yes.

Q Why have those records been maintained? Is there any reason those records have been maintained?

A Well, because we were told to maintain them when the Watergate thing broke.

Q I see.

A And since then nobody will destroy anything.

Q OK. Are you aware of any picketing at various places in the country that has been conducted by Cuban groups?

A I was not aware of it until I was told of it. I still don't know whether this was a spontaneous action on the part of these people or whether they were instructed to do it. I tried to run that down and I have been unable to.

Q At what locations has it been reported that pickets were located?

A Airline offices in New York, Miami. I think another place. I forget where it was.

Q Have you in fact been able to verify that these persons were Cubans?

WARD & PAUL

410 First Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003

A Well, it is a matter of record in the AMOT history that this indeed did take place. Now, what I have been trying to determine is whether the On-Site Case Officer authorized this, which I fully doubt.

Q Who was the On-Site Case Officer?

A At that time it was a fellow by the name of Tony Sforza.

Q Is he still alive?

A Yes, he is down in Miami. But I just do not know whether this was a unilateral action on the part of the AMOTS against the countries that were then trading with Cuba, notably Spain and Great Britain and France.

Q Other than this incident which we -- strike that.

What kind of an investigation have you conducted?

A I have talked to people, which is really all you can do. There is no other way you can do it.

Q You have been unable to determine who, if anyone, authorized this activity? Have you been able to identify any of the persons who participated in the picketing?

A No.

Q With what frequency did this activity occur?

A I don't have any idea. I only know of one instance.

Q This was in New York City?

A New York City and Miami.

Q Do you know of any organized political activity that [redacted] engaged in?

A To my knowledge, they didn't engage in any.

Q Any political activity.

Do you know of any other activities that they have conducted within this country, they or any of their members have conducted within this country that we have not already discussed this afternoon?

A No.

Q Any political activities? Any operations?

A No. Not really. Of course, we have used certain select individuals to what we call hand-hold defectors, Cuban defectors. In other words, live with them until they are resettled and this type of thing. And this is another activity they engaged in. But other than that, I can't think of anything else.

Q Do you know of any criminal activities that have been attribited to --

A I have heard of some allegations which have never been proven.

Q What are the allegations?

A The allegations concern break-ins and surveillances and this type of thing.

Q Have those allegations been made with any frequency?

A Well, I forget who it was. It was during the Watergate trial. Some of these allegations that came out and I think they were carried in the Anderson column but we made file checks and this type of thing. One particular activity was supposed to have been carried out in Rockefeller Center in New York and it turns out it was taken out of context. It was a training mission and -- training exercise. These guys were being trained in surveillance in New York and they were simply asked to go into a branch of the Manhattan -- Chase Manhattan and to come back out and then they were supposed to diagram the layout of the bank. And this to some of them meant casing the bank when in fact it was just a memory exercise.

Q With what frequency were those kinds of training exercises conducted?

A Well, whenever there was an -- whenever it was felt that these people, selected individuals, were to be trained in trade craft.

Q And did their trade craft training include such things as surveillance?

A Sure.

Q And break-ins?

A No. Not break-ins. Nor surreptitious entry. As I said, in the case of this particular thing, it was misinterpreted as casing the bank. These exercises were given -- they could have walked into your office, your outer office and said -- the instructor could have said two hours later tell me what is in that outer office? What is the layout of it? This is just for observation.

Q You stated earlier none of those allegations have been proven. Have any of them been proved to your satisfaction?

A No. Ithink we disproved them to my satisfaction.

Q I take it you do not believe they took place other than the training exercise?

A Oh, no. No. I don't believe they did.

Q Do you know of any instances where members of that group have broken in, made any other type of illegal entry in this country?

A No.

Q Have you ever been present at any discussions of the legality or illegality of maintaining stations like the Miami Station within this country?

A Legality? No.

Q How about the propriety?

A Well, to my knowledge, that really never came up. No one to my knowledge, has ever questioned the legality or the propriety of having the Station.

Q There have been some allegations in the press and elsewhere about possible misuse of Cuban exiles, members of that community, by the CIA. Are you aware of those?

A No.

Q We received some correspondence and I have seen some articles that suggest that the Cuban community is sort of a resource that is occasionally tapped by the CIA for various operations in this country.

A You mean this country?

Q Yes. Picketing was one example. There were also some other examples of unusual activities. Do you have any knowledge of use by the CIA of Cuban nationals or exiles for any type of operation within this country?

A No.

Q Do you know whether or not the Agency has provided any financial support for Cuban businessmen in this country?

A No. Not to my knowledge.

Q Other than the maintenance of cover?

A No.

Q Establishment of businesses?

A No.

Q No?

A No.

Q In the course of our discussions today we discussed the AMOTS, the AMDUKES, various political front groups, revolutionary front groups. Are there any other emigre, Cuban emigre groups in the Miami area which have been supported by the Agency, either financially or otherwise?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Are you familiar with the appendix that was attached to Mr. Colby?s statement?

A Yes.

Q Did you have some role in drafting that?

A You mean the Miami Station thing?

Q Appendix J, entitled, "The Miami Station".

A Yes.

Q You wrote it?

A Yes.

Q It has a familiar ring about it. There are references to indigenous organizations, emigre organizations. Are there any others other than the ones we have been discussing?

A Not to my knowledge. There are, you know, if you want to call it an organization, we did, you know, subsidize the hell out of Juanita Castro.

Q Yes, I am familiar with that.

A You are familiar with all that and that is by the board now, too.

Q She was doing --

A Propaganda.

Q -- propaganda broadcasts.

A Yes.

Q Do you have any personal knowledge of what kind of intelligence-gathering activities are conducted in the Miami area now [redacted]?

A There are no domestic activities at all [redacted] [redacted] All Cuban activities have been moved back here to Headquarters. The [redacted] now is completely and solely involved in the intelligence in the Caribbean.

Q Does [redacted] -- I beg your pardon -- does the Headquarters component that now handles the Cuban situation in Miami run any agents in the Cuban community?

A No. Well, let me explain that to you. We do have a career agent who has been with us for a good many years in Miami and we do use him to contact relatives of Cubans who are still in Cuba. I mean, relatives who are in the U.S. who have relatives in Cuba.

Now, this is done principally with the idea of a recruitment target, determine weaknesses or strengths, this type of thing. He does contact these people all over the United States. If we come across an individual that looks like he might be recruitable, or perhaps we could even double him, we will, after we make our preliminary assessment, and we find out where relatives and these types of people are, we will ask this career agent or instruct him to go contact these people, be it New York, New Jersey, Chicago, or whatever.

Q So you use Cuban, now citizens or aliens in this country, as access agents.

A Right.

Q Just like foreign associates would do.

A Exactly.

Q Are there any more people like Bernard Barker who are contract employees of the Agency who still work in the Miami-Cuban community?

A No. None.

Q That entire apparatus has been --

A Has been dismantled.

Q -- dismantled. What is the current size of the Miami Station?

A I really don't know but it runs between 11 and 14, as far as I know. I think it will be 11 by the next fiscal year.

MR. MANFREDI: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR.MANFREDI: Let's go back on the record.

BY MR. MANFREDI:

Q There are presently no Cuban Ops being conducted out of Miami?

A No. All Cuban Ops. are being conducted out of Headquarters.

Q And even from the Headquarters location there are no paramilitary operations?

A No.

Q No covert -- well, there is some propaganda activity being conducted still?

A On a very small scale, and the covert action facility that we had, the radio, taped program, is being terminated by 30 June. So for all practical purposes, it is terminated now.

Q The [redacted] is under [redacted].

A Yes.

Q And it has been decreased to how many people?

A Between [redacted] and [redacted].

Q And it has absolutely no responsibilities with respect to Cuba?

A Absolutely none.

Q And its responsibilities are entirely directed to other Latin American countries?

A To Caribbean countries.

Q Caribbean countries. And I trust that there are other Agency stations in the Caribbean?

A Yes.

Q Well, I have no further questions, Mr. Sturbitts. If you have anything you would like to add you are welcome to do so.

A No, I have nothing.

Q I want to thank you on behalf of myself and the Commission for your cooperation.

A Sure.

Q I am sorry we had to take so much of your time.

A That is all right.

Q Thank you again.

(Whereupon, at 3:35 o'clock p.m., the taking of the deposition was concluded.)

Record Number 157-10011-10085

SUBJECT: Meeting with DCS Headquarters' Officers

Shirley STETSON, for at least ten years the backbone of DCS/OSS and recently reassigned to DCS/Washington, and John WILSON, recently designated as Jim DURBIN's replacement in Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill Office which covers North and South Carolina, visited CI/SO on 9 July 1970 and were briefed by CIA officer and the writer from 1100 to 1200 hours. This was follwed by lunch(CIA officer / could not accompany) and discussions until 1315 hours.

2. The following highlights are made a matter of record:

a. Reports from "Chico" concerning B'Nai Brith in NYC are still being received by DCS but, as is the custom, they are being sent to a / CIA officer in CI/SPG initially, ~~xxxx~~ rather than to CI/SO. It is believed that the CIA officer / has been absent for about two months and this may account for the fact that CI/SO has not been receiving the material.

b. Upon the departure of STETSON for Washington and of a CIA officer for LA, Peter HOUCK will assume responsibility for Case 52722. HOUCK has just completed his CT program and before that spent a year in DCS on the Soviet Block Desk where he handled nuclear matters. He is well-regarded.

c. John WILSON is young, short, red-haired, aggressive, slow-speaking, former CT who has spent two years in DCS Head quarters. He previously served as a missionary for the Mormon Church in Austria with his wife. He stems from Ogden, Utah and the wr opines that he could be slated for the job of Gen. Sterling RYSOR's replacement in Sal Lake City in five to ten years when RYSOR retires. WILSON is sensitive, flushes easil has a friendly somewhat-shy manner yet expresses his opinions easily. He does not as a ball of fire or a personality guy but seems serious and level-headed. As has noted with many Mormons, he seems to save his greatest enthusiasm for discussing a the Mormon Church. How true it is that there is no such thing as a half-committed person. As a result of his year or two of missionary duty in Austria with 300 other met him, I only saw him on the TV a few months ago, he looks like a broken man, he did that day anyway. But he was a very mysterious, very --

MR. OLSEN: To use the house term, he was a spook?

MR. MARCHETTI: Yes. He was a very exotic character. And all kinds of stories float around about Jim Angleton. And I am sure that some are nothing more than apocryphal and some are pure rumor.

What intrigued me about this Runge thing is that subsequently another reporter -- and this time the guy identified the man he had been talking to -- the man he had been talking to was Bill Harvey, who was one of the people responsible for exposing Philby, in fact Philby gives Harvey the credit in his book under a pseudonym -- that Harvey said to this guy, oh, yes, the Agency -- to this reporter -- yes, the Agency has been penetrated, it may even be now -- he made some pompous statements of that nature. But then when the guy tried to dig deeper, Harvey held him at arm's length.

MR. OLSEN: Who is Harvey?

1(B)

MR. MARCHETTI: Bill Harvey was a scenario officer. [redacted] He had been Head of the Cuban task force.

MR. OLSEN: Which Cuban task force do you refer to now? The one that was organized --

MR. MARCHETTI: Within the Agency, the Agency's own

Soviet defectors and peoplw who claim to be and have subsequently been found to be legitimate defectors.

MR. MARCHETTI: You mean foumd to be illegitimate defectors?

MR. OLSEN: No, found to be legitimate defectors -- well, either way.

(?)

MR. MARCHETTI: Well, they would turn up from time to time. Usually I didn't have any direct dealings. They were handled by the Clandestine Services. But you would know the case. There is the famous case of Olenevski (?), who is this Polish intelligence officer who said that he was a KGB plant in the Polish service, and he is the one that many people on the extreme right like to point to as having identified all kinds of agents within the US Government. Eventually I got to the point where he was taking out ads in the newspapers to the effect that he is the tsaravitch, he had survived the shooting, and the legal claim and the throne.

At this point you don't know if the guy was nuts all along, and I don't know what the official thinking about it at the Agency is.

But there have been anumber of others over the years. There is Golonevski.

MR. OLSEN: How do you spell his name.

MR. MARCHETTI: G-O-L-O-N-E-V-S-K-I.

These names are a matter of record. YOu will have defecotrs which you believe to be questionable as to whether or not it comes within the charter of the CIA?

MR. MARCHETTI: No. As I say, I have no first hand knowledge on this subject.

You remember the [redacted] case?

MR. OLSEN: Yes. YOu mentioned that in your book, I believe, don't you?

MR. MARCHETTI: I was in the Agency at the time that happened, but I knew practically nothing about it in the Agency. For one reason, I didn't pay any attention to it. I had no reason to. But it was after getting out of the Agency.

This happened to be a case where [redacted] under Agency orders, was directed to [redacted] as being a Soviet agent [redacted] And [redacted] apparently to this day claims absolute innocence, and said that he was framed, and it was done for other reasons, because he didn't see eye to eye with the Agency.

MR. OLSEN: YOu don't know the story behind that, I take it?

MR. MARCHETTI: No. But you could find out. I don't know what the Agency was doing. All I know is that Helms submitted some sort of affidavit which the judge accepted, and on the basis of that the case was resolved in favor of [redacted] He had to idneitify [redacted] as being in the Agency's employ and acting under orders from the Agency. The reasons why, they are seem to work properly except in the US. And I am wondering what kind of use in the US you might be aware of?

MR. MARCHETTI: That wasn't what I meant by that. What I meant was, it worked good under laboratory conditions here, but when I would take it out to the field, it wouldn't work.

MR. ROETHE: You weren't referring to any use of these beams here in the US?

MR. MARCHETTI: No, I was not.

But that is that system that people are talking about now, the laser people bugging system, where they can get a building across the street there and direct a beam here and pick it up. It has become quite popular in recent years, at least they talk about it.

MR. OLSEN: YOu mean in the spy literature?

MR. MARCHETTI: Yes.

MR. ROETHE: At page 196 you refer to monitoring of embassy traffic from Maryland and Virginia. Were you referring to CIA's activity in monitoring, [or NSA]?

MR. MARCHETTI: [NSA.]

MR. ROETHE: You are not aware of any CIA activity of this nature?

MR. MARCHETTI: No, not here in this country. [In fact, the only case that I was aware of overseas that the CIA did it, if they did it at all, they did it because NSA, for]

~~certain political reasons, the Government didn't want NSA in there, the military personnel.~~]

MR. ROETHE: There is one reference to breaking into embassies at page 199. And there is no reference to any particular embassy. Are you aware of any activity where the CIA was actually implicated in breaking into an embassy? You have already talked about the Cilean Embassy.

MR. MARCHETTI: This was based on information that was availabe in the Houston Plan, which by that time had become public. And also certain background information about [~~the capabilities of the NSA in its technical field~~,] and certain CIA clandestine abilities. And it was all rolled into one as a supposition.

MR. ROETHE: On page 207 you indicate that many individuals at CIA were pressing for action against the KGB here in the US as the FBI was not doing a good enough job?

MR. MARCHETTI: Yes.

MR. ROETHE: Do you know of any actual operations that were ever taken by teh CIA, or do you have any evidence of such operations?

MR. MARCHETTI: No, I do not.

MR. ROETHE: On page 216 you refer to training of New and Chicago police. What kind of training are you referring to, or do you know?

MR. MARCHETTI: That is just it. I am not exactly sure

During this period Papich developed a good relationship with Jim Angleton of Counterintelligence and found that he could work effectively with Angleton. In the early 1960's the relationship between the two agencies was probably the best that it ever got. While some flaps continued to occur, both agencies seemed to be making an effort to learn the responsibilities and jurisdiction of the other.

Relationships Between 1965 and 1970

During the Johnson Administration there was a deterioration or a cut in the number of projects directed towards the Soviets. Hoover's desire to become engaged in extensive counterintelligence work lessened. Many of the FBI's programs to identify illegal aliens attempting to penetrate the U. S. Government broke down. Hoover became extremely cautious and conservative in the area of counterintelligence, which greatly disturbed Papich, who felt strongly about the Soviet threat and who was convinced that strong counter-measures were necessary. For example, Papich tried to promote consideration [redacted] 1B 1(S)

During 1967 and early 1968 Papich saw no signs from Hoover that the programs and projects that Papich felt so necessary would be reinstituted. Papich was receiving the message that his relationship with Hoover was coming to an end. Papich was physically and mentally worn out trying to keep the two agencies working together. In 1968 Papich wrote a polite letter to Hoover expressing his concern with what was happening in the area of counterintelligence. He appealed to Hoover to reinitiate some of the effective programs aimed at Soviet penetration of the United States. While Hoover was extremely angry at Papich for writing such a letter, he did not fire him to the surprise of many. Further appeals by Papich to Hoover to reinstate programs were of no avail. From that point on, the relationship between Papich and Hoover chilled and any idea that Papich brought to Hoover from the CIA concerning joint counterintelligence efforts was generally rejected and accompanied by a critical remark.

While Papich's 1968 letter had brought no change in Hoover's attitude, Hoover did keep Papich on as liaison. In the Fall of 1969 Papich confided to his wife that he was seriously considering retiring in the Spring of 1970. By the first of the year he realized that his career was effectively at an end and that he could no longer effectively accomplish his responsibilities as liaison between FBI and CIA. He decided to submit his letter of resignation, to be effective in early April of 1970.

EFFORTS TO IMPROVE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN CIA AND FBI

Efforts by Papich

Under Hoover there was little exchange of ideas at the highest levels of the CIA and FBI. This was merely Hoover's style. Papich was able to get people exchanging ideas at the working level and this was done with Hoover's approval.

Papich supported CIA innovative approaches to targets of mutual interest to both agencies and frequently became involved in conflicts with Hoover. for such interest and action. When any CIA promoted projects were approved, the responsibility was placed on Papich to assure that there would not be any invasion of FBI jurisdiction or violation of agreements. For instance, the CIA through the Domestic Operations Division (now the Foreign Resources Division) was always looking for foreigners in the United States to recruit as agents abroad. [redacted] 1B (S) In the 1960's the CIA came to Papich to see how ~~the Domestic Operations~~ Division could recruit without conflicting with the Bureau. Papich set up a program and sent it to Hoover recommending approval, but Hoover indicated that he was concerned with possible CIA invasion of the FBI's jurisdiction. [redacted] 1B (S) The program apparently worked well and much valuable information was given to the FBI which satisfied Hoover. Perhaps more importantly, new CIA/FBI relations at the field level were developed. However, Papich was well aware at the time the program was set up that if it flapped, Hoover could immediately kill the project.

Papich also advocated the exchange of lecturers between CIA and FBI to give the two agencies some understanding of what the other agency was doing. Such an exchange of lecturers and training facilities did not come about until about the time that Papich retired.

Papich also suggested an actual trade of personnel for short periods of time so that personnel from one agency could become familiar with the various problems that faced personnel from the other agency on the working level. This suggestion was never approved while Papich worked for the FBI.

Papich reiterated the fact that he had a very good working relationship with Jim Angleton. He feels that this relationship was probably responsible for the FBI's arrest of the Russian spy Rudolph Abel. Apparently a Soviet agent came to the CIA with information on Able. The FBI was contacted concerning the debriefing of this agent, but Hoover wanted nothing to do with it. Papich cooperated with Angleton, and the information obtained led to Able's arrest and conviction.

3/24/75

The following grey areas were delineated by Papich:

1. The question of whether the FBI should recruit agents in the United States for use by the CIA overseas or whether this should be left to the CIA.

2. [redacted] (S) 1B

3. [redacted] (S) 1B

4. The question of who should provide cover in the United States for CIA operations overseas.

5. The handling of agents suspected by CIA to be Communist agents overseas who travel to the United States.

6. Inadequate communication between the two agencies in resolving bona fides of defectors of interest to both agencies.

7. See the subheadings below.

Papich believes that in fairness to the men in the field a more clear-cut delineation of jurisdiction is needed. He did state that from time to time documents were put forth by Hoover concerning the FBI's jurisdiction in particular areas. Generally such a guideline would be issued following a particular flap in an operation involving both the FBI and the CIA. Papich could not point to any specific document but suggested that we ask Kelley for this type of information.

Papich did feel that there were some areas of jurisdiction that were clear-cut. For instance, CIA is not to investigate violations of the law in the United States. However, it is not Papich's opinion that the determining factor of jurisdiction is a strictly geographic one. (At least it shouldn't be.)

Espionage Matters

Papich felt strongly that the FBI had the responsibility to investigate any possible violations of the espionage laws. He could point to no case where the FBI refused to undertake this responsibility where reasonable evidence of espionage existed, even if the suspect was an employee of the CIA. In some instances, the CIA might come to the FBI with information had the personnel, and the FBI would have become aware of such activity on a massive scale. However, Papich did receive a continuing supply of information from Ober. Most of this information related to the relationship between domestic and foreign groups. Incidentally, information pertinent to internal security may have been picked up and passed on to the CIA. Papich is also aware that some of Ober's recruits were gathering information in the United States as well as overseas on occasions when the student's travels ended and he or she returned to the States. This information was also passed on to Papich. Papich acknowledged that on occasion the FBI would provide CIA with an introduction to a sympathetic student in a dissident group.

2. Project [redacted] (Office of Security) (S)

(1)(B) per CIA

Papich knows almost nothing of efforts to penetrate dissident groups by the Office of Security. He feels that if such a project had been extensive, the FBI would have become aware of it, as FBI had a large Washington Field Office and was very interested in the dissident groups and constantly monitoring them. Papich could not recall an incident where a CIA asset working for Women's Strike for Peace was turned over to the FBI. He did recall occasions when Ober's group turned over assets to the FBI when the asset returned from overseas and no longer wished to work abroad. Papich believes that only a small amount of information on dissidents was ever sent to the FBI from the Office of Security.

Papich states that during this entire period of the dissidents, the atmosphere was such that something had to be done by someone to learn what the more militant of these dissident groups were planning. Riots, bombings, and destruction of property were rampant. Citizens and newspapers were screaming for action to bring this unrest to an end. It was a difficult time for all Federal agencies.

Criminal Cases

Papich is not aware of any instances when the CIA has undertaken law enforcement tasks in the United States. This does not mean that there was not some cooperation between the FBI and CIA in criminal cases. For instance, Angleton's overseas agents would frequently obtain information connecting Americans with criminal activities in the U.S. Angleton would contact the FBI and together Papich and Angleton would develop the CIA's source of information to assist the FBI. A good example of this led to the arrest and conviction of a New York City official during the Lindsay Administration.

5/24/98

Penetration of Embassies in the United States

Papich has no knowledge of any CIA efforts to obtain positive intelligence by [redacted] Papich believes that if the CIA attempted to gain positive intelligence information through [redacted] this was an improper action which should have been performed by the FBI. 1B (S) (S)

Information Obtained From Tax Returns

Papich is unaware of any instance where CIA has made use of tax returns to obtain information on Americans.

PAPICH'S PHILOSOPHY AND MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS

It is Papich's belief that while the intelligence services of the United States presently obtain great amounts of information through new technological developments, they are still unable to read the minds of the leaders of foreign countries. Consequently, they must attempt to penetrate through clandestine efforts. The only way to successfully penetrate is to permit those conducting the operation to go about their business unburdened by numerous reporting requirements. Papich's philosophy is "If you want the job done right, give me X number of men and leave me alone." He questions whether this philosophy can be adopted in the United States in 1975, as faith in the leadership is an essential factor. He believes that such operations can be controlled and overseen by the Director of the CIA, the Director of the FBI, and the President.

Papich indicated that the differences between Hoover and Sullivan have nothing to do with CIA. Hoover was convinced that all dissident groups were directed by the Communist Party, whereas Sullivan disagreed. These differences affected the Hoover-Sullivan relationship only after Papich retired.

Papich believes that the FBI lost stability when A. H. Belmont (the No. 3 man at the time) retired in 1967. He presently resides in Palo Alto, California. Belmont was loyal to Hoover, but he had excellent rapport with the agents and could put things in their proper perspective. In fact, Belmont was most useful in resolving differences between CIA and Hoover. Belmont's successors (DeLoach and Sullivan) could not measure up.

BACKGROUND

Charles William Wiley, lecturer, photographer and free lance journalist, was born 17 November 1926 at Flushing, New York, of American-born parents. He married Katina Calamara, who was born on 18 March 1927 in New York City, on 11 February 1950. They had three children, a daughter, now age 23, and two sons, currently (1974) ages 15 and 13, respectively. Katina died by suicide in April 1973. He currently resides with his two sons in Parlin, New Jersey.

The son of a professional actor, Wiley was, himself, a child actor on stage and radio from 1931-1941. In 1942 and 1943 he toured with U.S.O. shows and from 1943 through 1944, was an assistant stage manager in New York City. From 1933 to 1942, he attended the New York City Professional Children's School. He enlisted in the U. S. Navy and served honorably as a Seaman from November 1944 to July 1946. From 1946 to 1951, he held many part-time and temporary jobs in New York City and Miami, Florida, as a salesman, interviewer, bellhop and U. S. Postal Clerk. From 1949 through 1954 he attended night school at New York University and earned a B. S. degree in Journalism. Also, from 1951 to 1953, he was an underwriter for Guardian Life Insurance Company and from November 1953 to October 1954, an agent for Fidelity Life Insurance Company, both in New York City.

EVENTS LEADING TO RECRUITMENT

Charles W. Wiley first came to the official attention of the Office of Security (OS) on 9 September 1955, when Carl F. Heney (Executive Officer, OS) forwarded a letter written by Wiley to Ermal Geiss (Chief, Personnel Security Division, OS), who in turn directed the letter to James W. McCord [Security Research Staff of the Office of Security (SRS)]. How Heney obtained the Wiley letter is unknown, inasmuch as the name of the addressee was deleted in the letter. However, the letter was recorded in the Executive Registry under number 6-9881. The Wiley letter is dated 27 April 1955, gives Wiley's address and telephone number, and Wiley advised that he was working on an index of the Daily Worker for the years 1933-1945 "and thought that perhaps you might be interested in specific information that I am likely to find."

On 10 September 1955, James W. McCord contacted Wiley in Flushing, New York. At that time, Wiley explained the nature of the index of the Daily Worker for the years 1934-1945, by stating that he was preparing the index under a grant from the American Legion Americanism Committee, headed by Lee Pennington (a former employee of the FBI). Wiley started the index in November 1954. Wiley stated he contacted the major government agencies in Washington to ascertain what information in the Daily Worker would be of most interest to them, and in addition, contacted a couple of Congressional Committees which McCord surmised were the House Committee on Un-American Activities and the Senate Internal Security Committee. Wiley estimated it would take two and a half years to complete the index. At that time, Wiley was receiving part-time clerical assistance from the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion Post in Flushing, New York. Wiley also indicated an interest in Agency employment after finishing the index.

The results of McCord's interview with Wiley were brought to the attention of Robert Bannerman, Deputy Director of Security, by 21 November 1955, when Bannerman opined that "this may be valuable."

RECEIVED FROM
SEP 30 1975
CIA

McCord met next with Wiley in Washington, D. C., for two days, ending on 1 December 1955. By that time, Wiley had indexed 150,000 names of the Daily Worker covering January 1934 through June 1936. Wiley stated that the FBI in New York City and the American Legion were already making "extensive use" of the index cards. Wiley stated that one of his purposes being in Washington was to secure financing for the index continuation. He stated that his $5000 a year grant from the American Legion Americanism Committee would expire at the end of December 1955, and if negotiations with that body were unsuccessful, he would attempt to secure financing from the Senate and House Investigating Committees. Wiley stated that the FBI has indicated the strongest desire that he continue the indexing but that in his discussion with Mr. DeLoach (Cartha DeLoach, an FBI senior official), no indication of forthcoming financial support from the Bureau for this work was indicated.

In recording this contact with Wiley, McCord opined:

> "I think it is obvious that the index which Wiley is working on would be of considerable value to the Security Office and to CIA, particularly since the Communist Party membership and activities during the 1934-40 period were for the most part very open and extensively advertised in the Daily Worker. An example of how open their activities were is indicated in the fact that Elizabeth Bentley's name was mentioned in a 1935 issue of the Daily Worker at a time prior to her going underground and acquiring a RIS (Russian Intelligence Service) mission. If the Daily Worker thus bears a record of (Communist) Party activities of an individual such as Bentley, who later became so prominent in RIS activities in the United States, then the possibility always exists that the names of persons later connected with OSS (Office of Strategic Services) and other governmental activity may also be mentioned in the 1934-40 Daily Worker issues, which have heretofore never been indexed by any government agency.

[illegible]

SEP [illegible] 1975

> "Because of the obvious value of having access to such an index, the writer (McCord) recommends that we encourage the continuation of Wiley's index project in any way in which we are able to further such work."

(There is no objective evidence in the file other than the above to support Wiley's contention that he was given encouragement by Mr. DeLoach of the FBI to continue the project.)

The above was brought to the attention of Harlan Westrell (Chief, Counterintelligence Branch, SRS), who in turn brought the matter to the attention of Colonel Sheffield Edwards, Director of Security, circa early December 1955.

Via a memorandum dated 19 December 1955, McCord informed Westrell of the receipt of additional correspondence from Wiley, and McCord included a rehash of the metter including statements:

> "I hope the Office of Security can encourage the continuation of the project, at least until the index is completed up through 1940, which would take about another year of work by Wiley. The index has considerable potential CE (counter espionage) value to this Office, for one thing, by virtue of the fact that there will be numerous heretofore unidentified Communists' names turn up in the index, some of whom went underground during the World War II years. The index may give us the one clue necessary to detect any such penetration existing within this Agency. The value in protecting the Agency thereby is of course inestimable. The continuation of the project would have other merits, which we have discussed previously."

McCord also recommended that, should the project fail, the Agency consider employing Wiley.

RECEIVED ROOM
SEP 1975
CIA

McCord recommended that Wiley had a personal acquaintance with a number of the well-known ex-Communist Party key functionaries, such as Louis Budenz, as well as a personal acquaintance with the heads and research people in all of the Federal Congressional Committees, and State Investigating Committees in New York State.

McCord was next in contact with Wiley on 27 December 1955, receiving an account of pertinent points retrieved by Wiley from the indexing project. In addition, Wiley stated he had discussed the indexing project with Herbert Philbrick (an ex-FBI penetration of the CPUSA), who had a continuing interest in the project and had indicated he would be willing to help Wiley get a job in the newspaper field should the project be terminated. Wiley also commented that he had had lengthy political discussions with Karl Wittfogel (one-time Communist) in recent years, and was in contact with Wittfogel a few weeks before.

Speculation on identity of Private Individual

When McCord's 27 December contact with Wiley was brought to the attention of Bannerman, he directed Westrell to "Explore with Jim Angleton (CI Staff) the possibility of getting about two months' expenses for subject (Wiley) and in the meantime we can complete our clearance of him and try to make out a project. We should also make a survey of his work to be certain a project is justified." Westrell, in turn, directed McCord to talk to Birch O'Neal (CI Staff) about the matter.

In the interim, on 24 December 1955, Wiley completed a Personal History Statement (and a report of medical history) reflecting he had been employed since November 1954 on a grant from the American Legion, 1608 K. Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., under the supervision of Lee Pennington. As a result, McCord scheduled National Agency Checks in the name of Wiley on 9 January 1956.

On 17 January 1956, McCord informed Westrell, receiving his OK, that Wiley intended to place an article in the monthly newsletter, "Political Research" published by an organization affiliated with the NTS (anti-Soviet Russian emigree organization). The article was to announce Wiley's indexing project and solicit funds.

On 27 January 1956, McCord informed Westrell, Paul F. Gaynor (Chief, SRS), Bannerman and Colonel Edwards of the results of a meeting he had that day discussing Wiley's indexing project with Birch O'Neal and Herman Horton (CI Staff). In essence, it was agreed that some Agency funding of the project should be forthcoming, and Horton evidenced interest in Wiley for CI Staff employment after completion of the project. Both Bannerman and Colonel Edwards evidenced interest in Agency funding of the project, the latter asking for figures as to cost.

McCord was next in direct contact with Wiley in Flushing, New York, on 29 January 1956, obtaining highlights of security interest developed from the indexing.

By 6 February 1956, figures were produced showing that $13,500 would cover one year continuation of the indexing, $7,000 for Wiley, $3,000 for a clerk typist; and $3,000 for part-time help and supplies. On this date, Gaynor noted he "would like to see this project completed if at all possible."

By the first week of March 1956, "front office" verbal approval had been given for OS funding of the project, labeled Operation Recall, concurrent with a meeting between McCord and Wiley and arrangements were made for transporting the completed portion of the index to Washington, D. C. McCord estimated the value of the index at that time as being between $15,000 to $25,000 in labor alone. During this week, favorable National Agency Name Checks were concluded on Wiley and Colonel Edwards and Colonel White had approved using Security Office funds to total $10,000 in all, to continue Wiley's indexing for one additional year. The partially completed index was turned over to the Agency on 8 March 1956.

RECE ROM

Following the approval of the project funding, McCord contacted Lee Pennington, of the Americanism Committee of the American Legion in Washington, D. C., asking, and receiving wholehearted agreement, for Pennington to provide cover for Wiley's work. The cover arrangements were so concluded. It was made clear to Wiley that CIA was purchasing the end product of his work and that he was not now a CIA employee. However, McCord did advise Wiley that he would attempt to secure Agency employment for him at the conclusion of the project; and that in the coming year Wiley should work on the indexing, continue regular contact with his sources of information in New York City - keeping the Agency advised of anything that may be pertinent to our areas of interest, and finally, build a cover story which would enable Wiley to contact and interview various ex-Communists and ex-Soviet agents in the New York area.

SECURITY PROCESSING

On 9 January 1956, James McCord of SRS requested National Agency Checks (NACs), excluding CIC, to be made on Wiley. These checks were returned on 24 February 1956 and all were either favorable or no record. NACs were again requested on 30 September 1958 and were returned either favorable or no record on 30 October 1958. On 24 November 1958, a Covert Security Approval was issued to the Security Research Staff to permit Wiley's use as a covert associate of the Security Research Staff.

ACTIVITIES

March 1956 - June 1959

In mid-March 1956, through a letter by McCord extended from his home address, arrangements were made for Wiley to come to Washington, D. C., for three days to brief Hazel Mackie, Personnel Pool (Office of Personnel), on certain administrative matters for the processing and typing of the index. The Personnel Pool work would result in 8 full copies of the index: three copies to the Security Office, one copy to Staff D, one copy to CI Staff, one copy for the FBI, one copy for the American Legion and one copy for Wiley.

(It is presumed that a copy of the index was given to the FBI; however, there is no document which could be located that states a copy was in fact given to the FBI.)

Concurrent with McCord's interest in Wiley, he and Morse Allen (SRS) were working on Operation Recovery, a project set up in 1955 whose objective was gaining access to and debriefing former and known agents of the international Communist movement who were involved in espionage activities directly or indirectly against the U.S. Government. Attendant to this operation, by April 1956, Wiley at the request of McCord had completed:

a. A summary of newspaper items on the Vladimir Asaturov case;

b. A summary of information on the Robert Osman case;

c. A summary of information on the Robert G. Switz case;

d. A summary of information on the Mary Martin espionage case; and

e. A summary of information on the Michael Gorin espionage case.

1975

CIA

Wiley was sent his first check covering the index project on 9 April 1956. By 22 May 1956, he had met Morse Allen.

McCord further reported on 1 May 1956 that during discussion with Wiley he told Wiley that there are three areas in which he could work during the coming year (1956-57) which would be of interest and would enhance his value to CIA. One would be the continuation of the index project, another would be the continuation of regular contact with his sources of information in New York City, keeping CIA advised of anything that may be pertinent to our areas of interest. The third would be the building for him a cover story which would enable him to contact and interview various ex-Communists and ex-Soviet agents in the New York area.

Wiley told McCord that he, Wiley, was in contact with Herbert Philbrick during the spring of 1956, and asked McCord to work on getting him, Wiley, some (American) Legion credentials. Wiley also enclosed reports on one Alexander Koral. He stated he had begun taking Russian language lessons from a Russian girl working for NTS.

On 20 March 1957, McCord informed his supervisor that Wiley's work on the index project would expire in May 1957. McCord indicated he would like to use Wiley for another year on the indexing project.

On 13 April 1957, Wiley tendered additional materials from the indexing project; a copy of an article by Alfred Kohlberg, "A Red Dream"; an open letter to the President of the United States requesting either a new trial or pardon for Morton Sobell, attaching a list of 200 signers; and a list of publications and organizations fighting Communism in the U.S. prepared by Herb Philbrick, given to Wiley. Wiley was advised that he may be called upon soon to work on some material on Soviet Espionage (David Dallin material, a noted author of books on Soviet Intelligence), requiring about one month's work; that he may be called upon to follow the Albam (Jacob Albam) trial developments in the press; and that an attempt would be made to renew his grant for another year.

On 21 June 1957, Harlan A. Westrell, Chief, SRS, requested the Director of Security for authorization to continue the Daily Worker indexing project for one year which had yielded approximately 500,000 names in the index. On 22 August 1957, Sheffield Edwards, Director of Security, requested and received, such authorization for circa $10,000 from the Deputy Director of Support.

During this period (1956-1959), Wiley worked with Herbert Philbrick on a book which Philbrick was preparing entitled "The Most Dangerous Group in the World." He also was "building his cover" as a newspaperman and had numerous contacts with Earl Browder (ex-chairman of the CPUSA).

From 5 to 19 January 1959, Wiley made a fact-finding trip through the Mid-West and the Southeastern states of the U.S. contacting newspapers, "conservative" individuals, police agencies, and information repositories to determine the extent of their information concerning Communism and the Communist movement.

During the summer of 1959, SRS initiated and completed a study through Wiley of the Columbia University newspaper, "Spectator" and the City College of New York newspaper. This, unlike the Daily Worker index, was a study of the various issues for information pertaining to Communists and radical organizations and individuals. Don Ingles, Wiley's cousin, conducted the study and was paid for his time.

Financial records indicate that the indexing project's gross funding from March 1956 through May 1957 was $10,000. Out of that amount, Wiley was given $8,600 in salary and the other $1,400 was for expenses. The same total amount was approved for the period June 1957 through May 1958 and was expended as follows: $7,900 for salary payments and $2,100 for expenses. A like amount ($10,000) was set aside for the period June 1958 through June 1959 and expended at the rate of $734.17 per month in salary payments and the rest, $265.83, in expenses.

In connection with the index, Wiley was also given specific requests to compile reports on several individuals and organizations which were of peripheral interest.

SEP 1975
CIA

On 30 April 1958, Wiley prepared a report on his contact (Charles Raphael) with the International Commission of Jurists, and the location of possible files on Soviet Espionage Commissioned by Philip Chancellor to be gathered by Sidney McLaglen.

On 2 May 1958, Wiley prepared a report on his chance meeting with Vladimir Oserov, Tass reporter.

Wiley reported that on 28 June 1958, he attended a birthday cocktail party at the apartment of and for Dr. J.B. Matthews, and identified others in attendance.

On 6 December 1956 (sic), Wiley reported receiving a call from J.B. Matthews inquiring about Jack Rubenstein (Rubinstein).

In the fall of 1958, Wiley reported meeting JoAnn Mellors, from England, active in the anti-Communist organization Common Cause.

On 1 November 1958, Wiley prepared a report on the "Links Between the Anti-Defamation League and the CIA in the Middle East," following a conversation with Michael Rich.

On 8 December 1958, Wiley prepared a report on a contact with Colonel Aharon Yariv, an Israeli Embassy official. On 3 March 1959, this report was sent by Helene Finan to James McCord and Clifton Carrico.

In March 1959, Wiley prepared four reviews of articles appearing in 1941 and 1942 editions of Social Justice Magazine pertaining to General Walter G. Krivitsky.

On 19 April 1959, Wiley prepared a report covering his introduction to Haviv Shiber, General Secretary of the Anti-Communist League in Israel. There is a notation on the report that Wiley was going to give the information also to the FBI.

CONTRACTUAL RELATIONSHIP - July 1959

On 1 July 1959, this Agency entered into contract with Wiley, as an independent contractor, at the salary rate of $9,100 per annum, with additional compensation in the amount of 5% of the above sum, to be paid in quarterly installments, representing the Government's contribution toward Wiley's choice of programs for insurance, retirement, medical and health. The contract specified that he would be reimbursed for operational travel as directed by OS, and for other approved operational expenses, subject to accounting applicable with Government regulations.

The annual compensation was subsequently increased on 1 July 1960 to $9,900 per annum and on 1 July 1961 to $10,500 per annum, plus additional 5% as noted above. Salary has remained at the latter level to the date of his termination. The contract was to run for an indefinite period, and could be terminated without notice in the event of a breach of contract or by Wiley rendering himself unavailable for acceptable service, and could otherwise be terminated by either Wiley or the Agency with 90 days' notice.

From 1955 to 1959, Wiley was paid in cash, and for several years after the contract was signed, officers of SRS continued to pay Wiley his salary either in cash or through bank money orders. In 1964 payments of salary were made by the Office of Finance directly into his bank account in New York City.

From 1959 to the present time, SRS obtained a copy of each year's Federal Income Tax Return, and on at least two occasions, Wiley was given a personal briefing on the management of the Agency funds, vis-a-vis income from his self-established firm, World News Analysis, by Agency Finance Officers. In 1964, because of his failure to comply with the SRS's instructions to furnish complete details on his claimed expenses, the regular payment of "operational" expenses was terminated, necessitating that he reduce expenses which were not reimburseable from the firm's income.

Regarding his overseas travel, for the early years, he was reimbursed in toto for travel expenses. However, once World News Analysis had become established and had acquired some regular source of income, the reimbursements for his overseas travel was decreased, and only a token contribution was made toward lengthy trips.

ACTIVITIES, July 1959 - January 1974

WORLD YOUTH FESTIVAL, VIENNA 1959

Shortly after Wiley signed his contract with this Agency, he became involved in the World Youth Festival (WYF) held in Vienna during July 1959.

A memo dated 19 February 1959 to the Acting Chief, SRS, from Helene Finan (SRS) reports on a meeting between Finan and Wiley at which Wiley furnished information relative to the forthcoming WYF to be held in Europe in mid-summer 1959. According to this memo and an accompanying one, Wiley said that Herb Romerstein (ex-Communist and HCUA employee), with the aid of Alfred Kohlberg (NYC importer and long-time anti-Communist activitist) and Colonel Archibald Roosevelt, has a project extant to send a delegation of 10 or more people to the WYF in Vienna in July, along with the left-wing American delegation. Romerstein, who is running the "show" for us (Finan's words) has asked Wiley to help and Wiley will, but not in an overt manner. Wiley told Romerstein the project was his and Wiley should not be given any prominence. Wiley and his wife will sign up next week. Don Sweeny (sic) of the American Legion and several individuals from various state police will also be among the group witting of the project. The group, probably no more than 10 in all, will attempt subtle propaganda, will sit singley throughout the hall and interject controversial or embarrassing topics into discussions. Wiley will play the role of the typical American with his ever-ready camera. Wiley will also work on behalf of the I&NS in gathering names and pictures.

Helene Finan reported on 12 March 1959 to the AC/SRS that Wiley will attend the WYF in Vienna in summer of 1959 for us (SRS). A 17 March 1959 memo states Wiley will leave New York with the delegation on 20 June 1959. After the Festival, the group (less Katina Wiley) plans to spend three weeks in the USSR as members of the U.S. delegation to the Festival. Wiley later changed his plans to include a visit to Europe and the Middle East before and to Europe and England after the Vienna and USSR phases of the trip.

On 18 May 1959, Morse Allen wrote a memo to the Chief, SRS that Wiley is now a newspaperman and a magazine writer, accredited under the auspices of the North American Newspaper Alliance, the Spades Syndicate, The Indianapolis Star, The Richmond Times Dispatch and probably several other publications. Wiley is a member of an anti-Communist group privately sponsored who will attend the Vienna Youth Festival and will make themselves known during the Festival. Wiley will probably cover the Festival for the Newhouse Newspaper Chain, National Review and U.S. News and World Report. He has received $500 in private subscriptions to cover the cost of his transportation to the WYF. The cost of his proposed itinerary amounts to $1,056.70 for transportation. Allen recommended the Office of Security pay the additional cost of $556.70 with the understanding that any remuneration received from his writings be offset on an equitable basis.

On 19 May 1959, James McCord noted to Allen, "Ok, see me," referring to the request to approve the additional cost and possible later offset. There is a 16 June report from Wiley acknowledging receipt of $556.70.

The New York Times reported on 3 August 1959 that Charles Wiley, his wife, and Joanne Mellor, a British subject living in New York City, were "roughed up" when they attempted to join a parade of Eastern Bloc delegates to the WYF. Wiley and company waited until the parade had started and then unfolded their banners with such slogans as "Remember Hungary," "Remember Tibet," and "What About Soviet Imperialism?" That incident got much press coverage, particularly because Wiley's wife was obviously pregnant.

A 14 September 1959 memo for the record from Wiley reflects that in a meeting with staff members of the HCUA, Wiley was instrumental in talking HCUA out of holding hearings which would be intended partially to expose the alleged inept, but expensive, effort made by CIA to infiltrate the WYF with a large group under cover of the Independent Service Committee. The Director of Security memoranda concerning the foregoing was forwarded to the Legislative Counsel on the 16th and 25th of September 1959 and the 27th of October 1959. They were also forwarded to the Office of the DCI.

In February 1960, Wiley did testify before HCUA as an expert regarding the 7th WYF and covered "violence" against himself and other anti-Communists and the Communist dominance of delegations.

On or about 1 April 1960, the House Committee on Un-American Activities was interested in consultations with Wiley based on articles by Wiley appearing in the American Legion Magazine, Elks magazine, National Review, and the Ukranian Quarterly, apparently based on Wiley's observations of Iron Curtain countries derived from his travels to the USSR, the World Youth Festival in Vienna, and other Iron Curtain countries during the summer of 1959. (In February 1960, Wiley had testified before HCUA about his experiences at the Vienna Youth Festival.) The HCUA staff members interested in Wiley were Francis McNamara and Richard Arens.

During the course of his trip to the WYF, Wiley apparently drew some official attention to himself in Israel.

Circa 20 August 1959, a State Department memorandum was forwarded to McCord regarding conversations William Anthony, Press Officer, American Embassy, Tel Aviv, Israel, had with Wiley at the American Embassy on 20 and 21 July 1959. In substance, Anthoney stated Wiley represented himself as a columnist connected with the "Newhouse Chain" but in his questioning of Anthony about Israeli politics, he (Wiley) "tries to give the impression he either is in or just outside the Washington intelligence community." Upon receipt of this memo, McCord advised Morse Allen, SRS, "We need to straighten Wiley out on being too clandestine."

Circa September 1959, Wiley prepared five reports relevant to some of his travels to the Middle East, Soviet Union and Austria attendant to activities of the World Youth Festival in Vienna in the summer of 1959. One report concerned a former Syrian Communist leader (Elias Mourkos); and Syrian intelligence agents. Another concerned Wiley's observations as of 9 August 1959 when he was in Kiev, USSR, relative to an anti-regime student in Kiev. A third report concerned the presence of Anthony Churchill at the Vienna Youth Festival from late July to early August 1959. A fourth report concerned Wiley's meeting with one Damdindorje in Cairo, Egypt, on 2 July 1959 who Wiley characterized as a possible defector from the Mongolian Peoples' Republic; and the fifth report pertained to the possible compromise - through Soviet guides - of the Yale Chorus Group in the USSR in July 1959.

In the fall of 1959, Wiley prepared three additional reports attendant to his travels involving the World Youth Festival in the summer of 1959. One report concerned the presence of Chua Cheng Lok at the Youth Festival; another concerned Wiley's meeting with Dr. Waldemar Wajszczuk on a train travelling between the Soviet border at Brest and Warsaw on 16 August 1959, who Wiley characterized as a possible Polish defector; coupled with a report on Wiley's meeting with Bogdan Kolodziejski and Jerzy Solecki in Vienna in late July 1959, who Wiley characterized as "Polish journalists (intelligence agent?)"; and a third concerned a 29 June 1959 meeting in Belgrade with Tom Duckinovic, characterized as a defector from Yugoslavia.

CUBA TRIP, ARREST AND DETENTION, 1960

(There is no conclusive evidence such as formal memoranda in the file to indicate that this Agency initiated action to send Wiley to Cuba. However, inferences from routing slips, memoranda and expense voucher payments would indicate that this trip was for CIA. Contrary to inferences by SRS officers, there is no indication, again such as a formal memorandum, in the Wiley files that he, under CIA instruction, courted arrest and detention so that he could find out information about the three staff employees who were imprisoned there. This does not preclude that there might not be written notes of such a plan buried in other files. The best indicator is Paul Gaynor's comment on a routing slip to CIA Cover Employee dated 2 February 1970, "His (Wiley's) imprisonment in Cuba was an operation on behalf of FE-TSD-OS-DCI-DDP.")

On 9 August 1960, Wiley reported the following information to Morse Allen of SRS concerning his trip to Cuba:

Mr. Wiley arrived in Havana the morning of 26 July 1960 and was arrested in Havana at the Libre Hotel at approximately 7:00 p.m. on the evening of 27 July 1960. During the period between his arrival and his arrest, Mr. Wiley stated that he had made no business type contacts and that he had merely wandered about the streets of Havana looking for news items. (Wiley is covered as a correspondent for radio station WOR of New York City plus other newspaper correspondent type coverage.) During this period, Wiley stated he contacted Ruby Phillips of the New York Times and he met and talked with Dave Webber, a stringer for NBC who was staying at the Libre Hotel. In addition, Wiley stated that he had spent a certain amount of time doing nothing but moving about the Libre Hotel. Wiley stated further that during the 26th and on the 27th he had been interviewing delegates to the Latin American Youth Congress then convening in Havana, Cuba. During these interviews, Wiley had acted as a typical newspaperman and had with him a tape recorder which he had brought with him when he came into Cuba and which he had previously registered with the Cuban customs authorities.

SEP [illegible] 1975

Wiley stated that the actual arrest came about in the following way. He stated that he had talked with a young man from the United States. The young Cuban who was obviously violently pro-Castro and also had talked with a young man from the United States. The young Cuban had been telling Wiley that everything was fine in Cuba and that it was not a police state and he was conducting his discussion with this young Cuban in more or less routine reported style when all of a sudden a police officer with two others moved to the table where he was sitting and stated that they wanted to talk to Wiley outside. Wiley asked the ranking officer who he was and was told that he was the Chief of the Public Relations of the Youth Congress. However, after some argument , Wiley was forcibly taken outside although not roughed up by the two assistants to the ranking police officer and also taken at the same time was the young Cuban whom Wiley had been interviewing. All these police officers were in plain clothes.

Wiley stated that they were placed in a car and taken directly to G-2 Headquarters in the Miromar Section of Havana which is a building between 14th Street and Fifth Avenue and bears the number 1219 (this address known to the United States Embassy). Wiley stated that during the ride in the car to the G-2 Headquarters, he needled the young Cuban who kept insisting that this was not an arrest and seemed shocked by the whole performance. Wiley added that this Cuban, as far as he knows, was dismissed from the prison after a statement had been taken from him by the police the same evening.

Wiley stated that he was taken to a reception type of room in the G-2 Headquarters and to his complete amazement some fifteen minutes after he was taken there, into the reception room came Jake Rosen, a well known New York Communist whom Wiley spoke to and positively identified and another U.S. Communist whom Wiley identified as being one of those who was on tour of the Soviet Union with Wiley after he had gone to the Vienna Youth Festival previously. Wiley stated that he could not recall the name of the second Communist but stated he could be identified since Wiley has a photograph of him at his residence. Rosen and this other Communist were dirty and their feet covered with mud and he learned later from one of the guards in the reception room that both of these men had come from Sierra Maestre where they had been visiting.

SEP 20 1975
CIA

Wiley said he talked to Rosen and there could be no question of his identity. (NOTE: In discussing the identity of these individuals with Wiley, it was agreed that a possible examination of both cases would be in order since a possibility exists that Rosen and the other Communist were illegally in Cuba.)

Following this short period of time in the reception room, Wiley was placed in a cell in the jail about 9 x 15 feet long which contained six bunks and 15 other prisoners. Wiley stated that in this cell he met FNU Acosta, a man named Costas and Major Gallo Martinez whom Wiley described as the former Adjutant General of Castro's Army.

Wiley stated that after about one hour in the cell, the guards came and took him to another room for interrogation. On the way to the interrogation room, Wiley stated he saw Jake Rosen and the other aforementioned man in one of the inner offices and both seemed in high spirits. Wiley commented that he had learned later from other prisonsers that Rosen and this other individual had complete run of the Headquarters and were allowed to make phone calls and Wiley stated that he established through other prisoners that Rosen had made at least three phone calls; one to the National Hotel, one possibly to the United States Embassy and one to an unknown private number. Wiley also learned that at one of the three numbers Rosen spoke to someone for about an hour and apparently this someone was known as "Mike." Wiley stated that he also learned that the two Communists were seen with Captain Alvarez of G-2 and were observed on most friendly terms with Alvarez and were, in fact, reported as being arm in arm with Alvarez. One prisoner believed that they were talking about Wiley since this prisoner overheard the name "Cholly" (ph), the way Cubans referred to Wiley's first name Charles.

According to Wiley, the interrogation was conducted by the previously mentioned Alvarez and a Cuban woman who claimed that she had been arrested by the FBI recently in

SEP [illegible] 1975

CIA

Miami, Florida, and further claimed that she had been slapped by an FBI agent. Wiley stated that this woman mentioned the name of the man but he cannot as yet recall the agent's name. Wiley also believed that the arrest had occurred in Miami within the last few months, also no specific date of arrest was mentioned. Wiley stated that Alvarez and the woman both spoke English although not well.

Wiley stated that the interrogation was strictly routine. They wanted to know why he was in Cuba, when he had arrived, had he ever been in Cuba before, who he worked for, etc. Wiley stated that he worked for radio station WOR and that he held strictly to his newspaper correspondent cover. Wiley stated that Alvarez attempted to talk tough at times but Wiley laughed at him and denounced the Cuban police, the Cuban military and the Cuban government to Alvarez and, in fact, invited Alvarez to do anything he wanted to. Wiley stated he bluntly asked Alvarez just why he was arrested and according to Alvarez said "we think you are an FBI spy." Wiley stated that he pointed out the stupidity of Alvarez to his face and that Alvarez from time to time became furious during the interrogation.

Wiley stated that the interrogation which was completely fruitless lasted about twenty minutes, at the conclusion of which he was given a sandwich and was told that he would be released in the morning. Wiley stated that he demanded that he be allowed to call the U.S. Embassy but this was denied. Because of this, Wiley stated that he wouldn't eat a thing until the U.S. Embassy or one of their representatives had made contact with him. He stated that he took the sandwich and gave it to some prisoners. Wiley stated at the conclusion of this interrogation he was taken to a different cell which he described as being about 15 x 15 feet having triple bunks in the cell occupied by 26 other men whom Wiley described as MRR types. Wiley described this cell as filthy, no ventilation, no lights. He stated he spent seven days in this cell and in fact went on a hunger strike. He stated he refused to eat anything and touched no food except on the Sunday following his arrest after he had been promised his release the following morning at which time he had a little soup and some other food. He added however because his release was not forthcoming as agreed, he went on another hunger strike and had no food until he was released on the following Wednesday, 3 August.

FROM
SEP 30 1975
CIA

Wiley stated that there was no other attempt at interrogation made either directly or indirectly during his stay. He stated that on Saturday night an official from the U.S. Embassy visited him. Wiley did not know this man's name and Mr. Kessler from the Embassy who has been previously mentioned visited him Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Wiley commented that prior to his release he gave what he regarded as significant information (which will be referred to in the second section of this report) to Kessler, since he thought the information should be surfaced and he could not tell how long he would be kept in the prison. Wiley cautioned the writer at this time the possible compromise of his connections if this information was handled incorrectly.

Wiley stated that he suffered no particular harassments while in the prison. He stated that some of the guards talked tough and tried to act tough but Wiley stated he behaved in his completely stubborn and obstreperous manner at all times and refused to cooperate in every possible way. He stated that the regular prison guards were friendly and he had no trouble with them but the special military guards and the army type were the constant subjects of his scorn and hostility. He stated that as a form of annoyance he was told twice that he was going to leave and then after he had prepared to leave, he was told that it was a mistake and that his leaving had been cancelled.

Wiley stated that on Friday or Saturday in the morning which had been the 29th or 30th of July he was checked over by a doctor at the prison for fungus infection and because of the fact that he was on a hunger strike and that it was obvious that he was weak from hunger, Wiley said nothing came of this but on Tuesday the 2nd of August, he was taken within the prison to a doctor who immediately sent him to a hospital, address unknown (in Havana), Camp Libertad. At this hospital Wiley was given a check up and he was told he would have to eat. Wiley stated that he would resist any effort to force feed him and he refused to take any food and any medication from a Cuban doctor or Cuban attendant. Wiley said that at the hospital he was placed in a psycho cell with about twelve persons some of whom Wiley thought were political types but most of whom were criminally insane. Wiley commented that obviously the prison attendants and officials were very worried about Wiley's health because of his refusal to eat and he was constantly being checked by various doctors. Wiley stated that he was released from the hospital and was given back all of his effects except his tape recorder and his hat. On Wednesday, 3 August, he was released.

RELEASED FROM

Wiley commented that the individuals who were political prisoners impressed him very much; they seemed "real men" and were fanatically anti-Castro; most as far as Wiley could tell were connected with the MRR. He stated the regular guards were obnoxious and were detested by the prisoners. He commented that the G-2 Headquarters, as far as he could tell, had been in operation somewhat over two months and that they had probably processed over 5,000 prisoners since he recalled seeing the number attached to his card as 5028.

Wiley commented that while at the hospital a civil officer, Rolando Fiallo, came to his cell and acted as an interpreter. Fiallo told Wiley that he wanted to help him and offered to do anything for him that he could. According to Wiley, Fiallo appeared to be a strong anti-Castro type who had a great desire to come to the United States. Fiallo told Wiley that he had a good friend who was an important defector from the Cuban Embassy in Mexico. Wiley commented that Fiallo sounded very honest but that he could not tell whether this man was a plant or not.

Wiley stated that while he was in prison, guards brought in a man by the name of Leonardo Julio Walter, an Argentine doctor. Wiley stated that he found out that this Walter had been picked up at the airport as soon as he had landed and that when he was placed in the cell with Wiley and the others, the doctor gave the impression of a perfectly furious individual. According to Wiley, Dr. Walter kept insisting that he was a friend of "Che" Gueverra. Walter was an obnoxious type, according to Wiley, and stated time and time again emphatically that he hated all North Americans and in no circumstances would he treat them medically. Wiley could not understand why this man was brought into the prison but reported it simply as an incident of interest.

Set out below are items of particular interest which have been reported in more specific terms by Mr. Wiley to assist Chief, SRS and are set forth below for record:

Wiley reported that MRR source who was interrogated said that a man FNU Gorky was a Russian or East German who sits in on all interrogations of political prisoners at the G-2 Headquarters Building. According to Wiley, this man does not speak Spanish and his source could furnish no description.

According to Wiley, an MRR source told him that he had received the following information from another MRR man who worked at the place mentioned. This source reported that there were twenty crated MIG fighter planes at the San Antonio "bath" (Wiley could not recall the Spanish word used here). This source stated that this was an air base built by the U.S. Government. The source further reported that he had heard that between 30 and 35 Cuban pilots were presently in Czechoslovakia on a seven months training course getting instructions for flying the aforementioned MIG fighters.

Wiley stated that he had given full details concerning the Soviet freighter that had come in with the large crates to Assistant Chief, SRS. Wiley stated that it was most interesting that his source told him that the freighter had come through Cuban customs and into the harbor without any routine harbor clearance and had swung immediately into its berth along side one of the Havana docks. According to Wiley the source was one of the longshoremen who had been impressed to unload this Soviet freighter. The crates unloaded were enormous being 70 feet long approximately. Source also stated that one of the crates had broken but because of the careful packing of whatever it contained, source was unable to identify its contents. According to Wiley, these huge crates were placed on big trucks and were taken to specific areas, each one accompanied by jeeps. Wiley himself could offer no explanation of the crates or what they were made of nor the size or capacity of the trucks that moved these large crates. Apparently Wiley's source could furnish no additional details other than those given to Assistant Chief, SRS.

Wiley stated that he learned from a former policeman who served under Batista that every G-2 station in Havana had cached 400 Czech machine guns and approximately two million rounds of ammunition. Source told Wiley that he knew this to be true because he had worked putting these items there. Wiley himself definitely discounts this story.

Wiley reported that a source had obtained from another source who worked at this place that there were 200 Russian or East German (European) technicians at the Baracoa (ph) base.

Wiley reported that he had received information that at Marianu or Marianal there had been observed a number of pairs of cranes. These pairs of cranes consisted of a large crane and a small crane which are apparently built together and are so designed that they are used for handling odd shaped or unusual sized material. No other details given.

Wiley stated that inside the prison cell while he was first incarcerated, he heard that the Cuban police claimed that they had in prison the head of the sabotage group, the head of the Activist group and the Chief of Finance of the MRR movement in Havana. Wiley stated that he got pretty close to the men in the cell. They apparently liked him and in fact talked quite freely to him and that when he mentioned this to several of these individuals, the various men did not deny to him the above. Wiley said that these prisoners admitted that they were connected with and were leaders of one of the two major sections of the MRR in Havana.

Wiley stated that one of the above mentioned men whose name is Hermando Marchecho claimed that while being interrogated he was able to see reports which were signed by three or four individuals which he recognized as double agents in the ranks of MRR. Marchecho stated that as far as he was concerned, the appearance of these names on reports indicated that a heavy penetration of the MRR had been made by Castro's intelligence. According to Wiley, Marchecho was completely discouraged by this but nevertheless clearly indicated to Wiley that he and his associates and his organization would continue the struggle against Castro.

which he could then be considered an expert. Subject has contacted a number of organizations in radio, television, newspapers and magazines who had evidenced an interest in securing from him stories, pictures and taped interviews. Approval for the trip was requested and $3,000 toward financing of this trip. He was to depart toward the end of May and return around the first of August. The memo is initialed "OS/SE" (SE being Sheffield Edwards, Director of Security).

Ultimately his travel voucher covering this trip reflected expenses of $4,544.38 with $3,000 advanced and the "balance not claimed." His cover accounting for 7(6)-6/62 lists "Deficit on trip to Asia" 1,544.38 as an expense and is offset against listed income for that period. Besides other countries he was in during the period 5/15 to 8/18/62, he spent 12 days in the USSR and 14 days in Helsinki.

In September 1962, Wiley reported on an item from a September 1962 edition of the National Review concerning a statement by Red China's Marshal Chen.

Sometime in the fall of 1962, Wiley submitted three reports relevant to a trip he made during the summer of 1962. One report covered reports Wiley made to the U.S. Embassies in 1962, reflecting that after travelling through Sydney, Australia, Wiley contacted Rollard Haggart Bushner, American Embassy, Djakarta, in early June, reporting that the Dutch were preparing to pull out of New Guinea; that in late June Wiley gave a copy of an exclusive interview with President Diem of Vietnam to Robert Francis Krill, a USIS official in Vientiane; and that in late July (1962) Wiley contacted the political section of the American Embassy in Helsinki reporting information he had obtained in Samarkand and Tashkent, Soviet Union. In each case he identified himself only as a newsman who thought he should report interesting information to his government. Wiley also reported to SRS interesting persons visiting the USSR in July 1962, to wit: Cyla Singer and Professor and Mrs. Quincy Wright, who he met in Tashkent; and Douglas A. Dawkins, who he met in Tbilisi. He also formally reported on Ed Leland, who he met in mid-June 1962 on a flight from Phom Penh to Saigon. In addition, he formally reported information he received from an enlisted man at the U.S. Air Station in Peshawar, Pakistan, in early June 1962, concerning overflights by U.S. jets in Southern USSR.

TAIWAN AND FAR EAST TRIP - 1964

According to a memorandum dated 27 October 1964 from Morse Allen to Chief, SRS, the "Chinat" government offered Wiley a two week, all expense paid, round trip to Taiwan as a result of Wiley's American Legion magazine article on Tibet. Wiley will lecture and talk in Taiwan, and his planned departure was on or about 5 November 1964.

Allen recommended that Wiley be authorized to proceed in this trip without any outside instruction in targets. Allen further recommended that Wiley be given money in amount of $500 to $1,000 to permit him to take advantage of the "Chinat" trip and make a "free lance" trip through Far East (Tokyo, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Thailand, Vietnam, Malaysia) and return via Manila, P.I.

Paul F. Gaynor, Chief, SRS, noted in a slip of paper attached to Allen's memorandum that the Director of Security approved $1.000 advance on 28 October 1964. Wiley acknowledged receipt of the $1,000 cash on 10 November 1964.

On 16 February 1965, an accounting for the above trip was submitted by Wiley and $37.28 of the $1,000 advanced was returned as the unused portion of the advance.

In the interim, by 16 November 1964, Wiley had contacted Radio Free Europe in New York on his own, and had been slated to do research on the Far East utilizing RFE files or in conjunction with RFE officials. Wiley was also scheduled to act as a free lance interviewer and reporter during the course of an impending trip to the Far East. Through efforts of SRS, this activity on the part of Wiley was curtailed.

WORLD YOUTH FESTIVAL, ALGIERS - 1965

The 9th Communist sponsored WYF, after early speculation as to the probable site at which it would be held, was finally announced for Algeria from 27 July to 6 August 1965. This WYF, however, was cancelled in late June 1965 despite the advance planning and arrangements that had gone into it.

An August 13, 1964, memo from Morse Allen to C/SRS, Subject: 9th WYF, concerns what, if anything, SRS and/or Wiley might do regarding the probable holding of a 9th WYF during the summer of 1965. Wiley had several weeks earlier reminded Allen that he, Wiley, had attended the last one at Helsinki and had been active in the "disruption of that festival." Wiley wanted to know if SRS had any planned operations in connection with 9th or had SRS given any thought to setting up some plans. He pointed out that it would take considerable time to execute plans for another penetration effort. Allen told Wiley that Wiley was too old and too well known to spearhead any U.S. activities in that direction. Allen said Wiley could, however, organize and direct it, possibly from without the area, if it were decided for SRS to take part. Wiley indicated that he would be perfectly willing to commence working on it and to direct the operations from behind the scenes. Allen asked Wiley to write up and submit a proposal regarding same if he had a chance. Allen suggested to C/SRS that the matter of penetration and a disruptive effort in connection with the 9th WYF be given consideration in the near future.

An October 1, 1964, memo for the record by Morse Allen records an interview he had with Wiley on 30 September 1964. One long paragraph titled "Communist Youth Festival, Algiers, July 1965" - notes that Wiley had spearheaded anti-Communist attacks on Youth Festivals in Vienna and in Helsinki previously, has disrupted their programs, and has to a considerable extent interfered with their propaganda at these festivals. Because of this, Wiley is interested once again in divisive and disruptive efforts against the Communists in Algiers in 1965. This time Wiley states that it would be impossible to bring a big group to Algiers and would in fact be dangerous because of the attitude of the Moroccan government. Wiley believes that it would be best to have a small team of 3 to 6 trained individuals who could proceed to the Youth Festival at Algiers and who would be directed not at disruption or propaganda, but would aim at intelligence gathering. Wiley himself stated that he would again volunteer to go to Algiers at this time, not ostensibly connected with the aforementioned group, and only as a free lance newspaperman. Wiley pointed out that undoubtedly he is now the top news authority in the U.S. on CP Youth Festivals. Wiley states that he believes he can arrange financing from private organizations and individuals for the 3 to 6 individuals mentioned above and possibly enough for travel by himself although this may not be obtainable. Wiley requests a study of this matter and advice.

Ethel Mendoza, SRS, received a phone call from Wiley on 30 March 1965, wherein Wiley advised he had mailed material to Mendoza she had requested. Wiley further advised he was then on a lecture tour of the United States. Wiley also discussed a previously proposed trip to Algiers to cover the World Youth Festival and requested information as to whether he would be allowed to cover the festival. Paul F. Gaynor recorded that the Director of Security gave his approval on 31 March 1965, but that Wiley's activity at the festival should be as a passive observer only.

A note dated 12 April 1965 to Chief, SRS from Ethel Mendoza regarding a 9 April 1965 phone conversation with Wiley states that in view of Wiley's plan to attend the Youth Festival in August, she suggested that he not repay the $1,000 advance for the China trip, but keep it until he is assured of complete outside financing for the Algiers trip. He would, as in the past, utilize this fund to cover any deficit for his own travel costs; not for any of the group which he supervises at the festival. Wiley also inquiried as to extending his travel in August to include 4-6 weeks in South America. Also, regarding Algiers financing, Mendoza said she learned only very recently that the anticipated funding in some part will come from the backers of the American Security Council.

An April 16, 1965, note from Mendoza to C/SRS advised that CA Staff (Covert Action Staff of the DD/P) is definitely planning to send an American group to the 9th WYF in Algiers, 27 July - 6 August 1965 and some of the DDP area divisions also plan to infiltrate some of the foreign country groups.

A 21 June 1965 memo from Wiley reflects the status of his fund raising activities for the 9th WYF project and some data regarding the project. Funds raised to that date were some $1,485 or more under auspices of "Christianform, Inc." Wiley said the goal is to send 6 delegates, 5 young men and a girl with a seventh person in Algiers outside the delegation. He will take no active part in the project than to keep in touch through the coordinator outside the delegation. Among other things, each delegate is to get as much information as possible about the U.S. delegation, including photos. On return, all information on domestic leftists will be given to the FBI directly by the delegates. Wiley said there is good hope that the projected budget of $3,000 will be fulfilled and that none of the money raised for this project will be used to pay Wiley's expenses. They will be covered by the Cover Organization earnings.

Although the WYF was belatedly cancelled in late June, Wiley did follow through with the So. American phase of his planned travel. Expense and travel vouchers reflect that Wiley was in the U.S. in July and in the U.S. and South America in August and September 1965.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRIP - SUMMER 1965

Notes in early July 1965 indicate Wiley was planning a trip also to South America. There is indication he was to be in Washington, D.C., for SRS consultation on 12, 13 and 14 July 1965.

Sometime in July 1965, Wiley prepared a memorandum which he captioned "Re: Proposed South American Trip - July 1965." He suggested private financing and gave his targets as the political and military situation - especially Castro/Communist influence and insurgency war danger.

There are notes of discussion with Wiley on 15, 20 and 27 July 1965.

In response to a request from Morse Allen, Wiley prepared a partial list of his potential contacts for the South American trip and submitted the list on 27 July 1965. Paul F. Gaynor noted, "Ok to make trip to South American per Director of Security 7/28/65. P. F. Gaynor, SRS/OS." Wiley listed numerous personalities in South America apparently resulting from suggestions to Wiley by the following:

Admiral Radford, who suggested

Brig. Gen, Vernon "Dick" Walters

Norman Carignan, W. R. Grace Co.

Meade Brunet, RCA International

Among the numerous potential contacts listed by Wiley were Paul Bethel and Jules Dubois who Wiley was told to avoid because they were being watched by local services in South America. Wiley was told to be careful in contacts with Manuel Artime and the DRE representatives.

On 30 July 1965, Allen met with Wiley in Washington, D.C., giving him instructions and a briefing for the South American trip. This data was formalized into a memorandum by Allen on 5 August 1965 and forwarded to Chief/SRS, P. F. Gaynor. Allen recorded:

> "1 - On Friday, 30 July 1965, pursuant to instruction from Chief, SRS, the writer met Wiley at the Washington National Airport and talked with him concerning his pending trip to South America.
> "2 - Wiley was given a series of suggestions and certain instructions which are set forth following:
> a. He was under no circumstances to visit Latin America and the trip was to include only countries on the continent of South America, starting at Panama and thence South.
> b. He was not to see either Paul Bethel or Jules Dubois.
> c. If he saw any of the Cuban colony in Miami on his way South, he was to stick strictly to his cover and he should remember that most of these people were connected with the Agency and would report the contact. He was specifically told to avoid Enrique Abascal.

d. Concerning the DRE representatives in any contacts either in Miami or in South America, he was to use extreme caution for two reasons: (1) Many are now or have been on our payroll and they would report any contact; (2) Many of these people are unreliable and some are clearly left wing.

e. He was told that he was at all cost to avoid risk of capture and was certainly not to subject himself to unnecessary hazard. (He was specifically told to stay only at the best hotels since low-grade hotels in South America often constitute a personal security risk.

f. He was told that he should use utmost discretion in contacting U.S. officials since many of these--State, USIA, AID would report his contact.

g. He was given specific and detailed instructions that he is to report without fail upon departure from each country except in the places in which he expects to stay more than a few days. These reports are to be detailed and to cover contacts and information gained. He was not to make reports of any kind to any person or U.S. government agency except CIA and then through agreed-upon channels only.

NOTE: It was agreed that Wiley will send these reports by mail to his wife in New York City who will, in turn, send them by mail to the writer's Washington address. In the event of urgent matters, he is to cable his wife as a newspaperman would and she, in turn, is to call the information in as soon as possible. Wiley has agreed to this and has worked out the necessary details with his wife who will technically be the "office" of "World News Analysis."

"3. Chief, SRS made suggestions as follows relative to particular targets of interest:

a. Chicom activities which are reflected in the civil rights movement in the United States.

b. A study could be made of why universities and colleges in South America are safe haven for communist and radical activities and apparently cannot be touched by police. Chief, SRS felt that this had possibilities of a serious article.

4. Writer obtained from Wiley a rough itinerary of his tour through South America. Hotels are not included but apparently Wiley's wife will have some of these forwarded to her by Wiley as moves from country to country. List follows:

Bolivia - to August 6

Ecuador - 2 or 3 days

Peru - to August 15

Bolivia - to August 20

Chile - 3 or 4 days

Argentina - to August 27

Uruguay - day or 2

Paraguay - to September 1

Brazil - 2 weeks

Venezuela - 2 or 3 days

Home - September 17

Wiley wrote reports from Lima on 10 and 13 August 1965; Buenos Aires received circa 2 September 1965; Asuncion on 31 August 1965; and Brasilia, on 8 September 1965.

A draft of some of the information was prepared on 15 September 1965.

The file contains handwritten notes of interviews with Wiley, dated 5 and 9 March 1966; 3, 7, 14, 17 and 27 February 1966; and a copy of an article from the "National Review," dated 5 October 1965, by Robert Peter, captioned, "Communist Priests in South America."

Wiley prepared a fairly extensive report circa late captioned "Brazilian Intelligence, Recife," but which also has subheading of: Lino J. Rocha; Arturo Salazar Larrian; Irving Lee Sanders; Eleen Proud; Deak Rusk in Uruguay; Chicoms in Santiago, Chile; Peruvian Killed Righting for the Viet Cong; Guido A. Dias; A.U.D. Police Training; Return to Venezuela; Chinese Espionage in Argentina; Jose Roberta W. Penteado; and Dan Caswell. Circa the same time, Wiley prepared a report captioned, "Rolanda Garcia, Argentina," with subheadings of: Argentine Intelligence, Indonesian Embassy in Argentina; RIS in Rio; Jose A. Vega; Robert Prichard, Ruy Alencar; and Illegal Passports in Manus, Brazil.

A sterilized version of all the foregoing was prepared in SRS and passed to Jerry Mullane, WH/SO, on 27 December 1965 by Morse Allen.

Wiley had also given reports on: Chicoms in Chile; Barrientos Killed in Vietnam; Secret Talks Among Military; Lack of Soviet Response to Increased Chicom Propaganda; and Local Stringers for U.S. Publications Connected with Commies.

It was possible Wiley would prepare reports on: Action Popular; White Russian Refugees in Brazil, Russian Repartiates from South America; and Chicom Spy Suspects in Argentina.

OTHER ACTIVITY, 1965-1974

There are handwritten notes of conversations with Wiley dated 7, 14, 18, 19 and 24 May 1965. The gist is that Wiley was apparently planning a trip to the mid west and then later to Algiers in North Africa. During the 19 May 1965 conversation between Morse Allen and Wiley, "Allen talked to Charles re Miss M's (Mendoza's) comments that Charles had not complied with instructions re vouchers. He (Wiley) claimed misunderstanding and that he could not accurately furnish desired info on vouchers she presently held. Allen told Chrles to use his memory and any notes he had and to fill in desired info per the written instructions given him by Miss M. (Ethel Mendoza). He said he would do so. Allen then told him to explicitle follow written instructions from Miss M. (Ethel Mendoza) or vouchers could not be accepted.......Charles was also reminded of reports due which he should get out prior to leaving on his speaking tour. He agreed." Apparently, the trip was to start on 23 May lasting until 1 June 1965 and the Young Americans for Freedom were picking up all expenses. Wiley was going to Cleveland, Milwaukee, Chicago and Minneapolis.

There are notes of conversation with Wiley dated 2, 7, 10, 15, 17, 22, 25, 28 June; 2, 6, 9, July and 27 July 1965. Apparently Wiley was having trouble with his back at this time and could not sit down and bend for typing. He was given the name of Dr. David S. Baldwin, 20 East 68th St., N.W., to contact. Regarding his travels, Wiley was told he would have to submit detailed reports of contacts to show what he is doing, etc. Apparently, the mid-West speaking tour was partially geared to gather funds for Algerian trip.

There is a note in the file, to wit:

"For Wiley

"Why not get the American Legion magazine to publish an Article 'Chaos in our Colleges' with a hard attack on the weak knee college and university advisers that permit violence, disruptions, waste of college and tax payers money, phoney students - what about the decent students who want to study, etc." This note was apparently written by Morse Allen.

SEP [illegible] 1975

A 2 July 1965 handwritten note apparently prepared for a briefing of Wiley states partially, "Turn over any assts to 'B' (FBI) they want - cooperate."

In July 1965, Mendoza received information from Wiley concerning his contacts with the American Security Council (ASC) and a mid-West speaking trip during the period 24 May to 1 June 1965. The latter trip, according to Wiley, was paid for by the Young Americans for Freedom. Regarding his contacts with the American Security Council, Wiley advised:

> "My contact with ASC goes back to the middle 1950's when I first met John Fisher. At that time he was setting up the organization based on Harry Jung's files. Before it was named ASC, the org. was the Mid-American Research Library, and, later, Fidelifax. (Perhaps vise versa).
> "Over the years I've been in touch with ASC frequently. In addition to Fisher, I know Jack Ison and Bill Lambie - both former FBI men who worked on the subversive desk in New York (and elsewhere?). Ison left ASC in 1962 to join the Hoover Co., Canton, Ohio. My last information is that he was in their White Plains, N.Y. office. Another man in the Chicago office whom I met was D. Alspaugh, a research specialist. I have no knowledge of his background.

"In the Washington Office, I know Lee Pennington a friend for years before he joined ASC. While he was in Washington, I also knew Frank Johnson (a former ONI man?). I believe he is presently in Europe.

"My first contact with Dewitt Copp was in the fall of 1964. (NOTE: During my conversation with Copp he told me that the Chinese Air Force U-2 Flights were tied in with CIA). I spoke to him about my trip to Asia because of his having been in the area and to obtain outlets for material. Copp was in close touch with the Chinese Embassy, and I think it was Frank Toa who suggested I see him. Copp offered to take taped material from me. My only other contact was a phone talk with him in March 1965.

"While in Taiwan I was told by Col. Caithness of the U.S.M.A.A.G. office that Copp had directly attributed information to another MAAG officer who had briefed him. When the story was printed (by North American Newspaper Alliance?), the officer was in trouble. Caithness indicated that he thought it was an honest breakdown in communication between the officer and Copp and that it was not deliberate. During my March phone conversation with Copp I told him about Caithness' disclosure to me (he had agreed that I tell Copp about the situation). Copp seemed quite surprised.

"On March 16 I had dinner with John Lewis in New York. Lewis is handling radio programs for ASC (out of the Washington office). He also produces shows for NBC radio (including a farm program). I've also had several phone conversations with Lewis in Washington.

On 29 December 1965, Wiley called Morse Allen, gave information concerning a forthcoming Esquire article on espionage; and brought up the idea of moving to Washington. Apparently Allen arranged to have Wiley call Cecil Tighe, SRS, the following Monday and for Tighe to advise Wiley to come to Washington in the near future to discuss the matter with Tighe and Gaynor. Apparently, Allen was removing himself from contact with Wiley at about this time.

Apparently on 14 January 1966 Gaynor and Tighe met with Wiley discussing his possible move to Washington, his lecture tour and use of vouchers for travel expenses. A notation dated only 1966 states to the effect that Wiley's company, World News Analysis, is known on the "Hill" because of the relationship between Filipello (sic) and Congressman Daddario. "Numerous persons know Wiley is CIA, other than perhaps a half-dozen of his own friends. These include Eugene Lyons, Jay Kennedy, Elsa Bernaut, Hede Massing, etc. (Note: Mccord is not aware of the first two names above, and this possibly would have some bearing on any assignment McCord may have been considering.)"

A handbill dated 6 January 1966 reflects Wiley was to be a speaker at a "Pro-Vietnam Teach-In" sponsored by the Young Americans for Freedom and the Princeton Conservative Club. Wiley is characterized as a free lance journalist, and an authority on International Communism who covered wars in Katanga, New Guinea, Laos, Vietnam, Algeria and Angola.

In early 1966, Wiley provided adverse information on Fred Coldren, Executive Director, International Federation for Freedom, Inc.

In early 1966, Wiley prepared reports concerning Daniel Davidson, special assistant to William Bundy and Steve Tyler, a free lance writer who in 1957 had attended the World Youth Festival in Moscow.

In early 1966, Wiley prepared reports concerning Vladimir G. and Emma Treml; Dr. and Mrs. Ivan D. London, Robin Moore; and Peter Korn. An additional report concerning Treml was prepared in February 1966.

In February 1966, Wiley prepared a report concerning Christopher Emmet, William Pawley, William T. McConarty, Mr. (FNU) Aistrop, Mr. (FNU) Eng, and Jay Kennedy.

In February 1966, Wiley prepared a report concerning Gene Farmer, Sr., Editor, Life Magazine whom Wiley met while discussing an article on Soviet spies.

There are handwritten notes of contacts with Wiley on 19 and 21 April 1966 mainly concerning articles about CIA which appeared in the May 1966 issue of "Esquire." Wiley did not know the authors. After apparent approval by the Director of Security, Wiley was authorized to contact one (Fnu) Erickson of "Esquire" to determine the identity of the authors.

There are notes of a verbal report by Wiley dated 27 April 1966 concerning Alex Roark.

In March 1966, Wiley prepared a report captioned, "Rumours of John and Robert Kennedy Affairs" apparently based on information from Nancy Czarnecki with whom Wiley apparently had just had contact. She is from Los Angeles, California.

In April 1966, Wiley prepared a report concerning George Freyman of Bellingham, Washington; and concurrently a report captioned, "Tourists Going to the USSR and Iron Curtain in Summer of 1966," specifically mentioning Stephen Talbott and Richard Bocklet.

In April 1966, Wiley prepared a report concerning Geoffrey Aldridge, USAF, Information Office of the Alaskan Air Command, Elmendort Air Force Base; and Lt. General Raymond J. Reeves, Commander-in-Chief, Alaska, who Wiley had apparently met in the area of Kotzebue on 8 April 1966.

Circa 6 June 1966, Wiley prepared two reports concerning John Riley, member of the Veterans of OSS.

On 28 July 1966, Wiley submitted a short report on Camera Press Pix, a British corporation engaged in world wide distribution of photos taken of the Vietnam war in and around Hanoi.

A report concerning Col. Esteban Venture Nova, dated 5 August 1966 was forwarded. Nova supplied certain information about Trujillo and Herb Romerstein, an HCUA investigation, sat in on the interview.

Wiley, on 2 September 1966, submitted information about the Queens Chapter (Long Island, New York) Women Strike for Peace.

On 21 October 1966, Wiley submitted a report concerning Michael Struenlins (Streulens) based on information he had received from John Lewis, American Security Council, Washington, D. C. on 22 September 1966. Concurrently, Wiley submitted a report on Ray McConnon as received from Herb Romerstein.

On 5 August 1966, Wiley prepared a report dealing with a potential trip to South Africa extended by Ghemus J. J. Geldenhuys, Public Affairs Officer, Information Service of South Africa, N. Y. Wiley again submitted a report on this topic on 21 October 1966.

On 2 November 1966, Wiley submitted a report on Edward Scannel Butler who was in New York on 26 October 1966 to review a documentary film he had produced about Castro. Apparently Butler had a radio debate with Lee Harvey Oswald just prior to President Kennedy's assassination.

In late 1966 or early 1967, Wiley submitted a number of public brochures distributed attendant to the production of the films, "Troublemakers," "Mass," etc.

In early 1967, Wiley prepared a report concerning Vladimir G. and Emma Treml based on a personal letter; and concurrently a report on Dr. and Mrs. Ivan D. London.

Circa November 1966, Wiley prepared a report concerning a recent trip to Chicago and Milwaukee indicating some individuals he contacted. Wiley captioned the report, "Attempts to Stop Recruiting on College Campuses, (II)."

In late 1966, Wiley prepared a report on information he received from Lyle Munson on 30 November 1966 concerning a former CIA man (William Cornielson) connected with Dow Chemicals Company.

Sometime before 2 December 1966, Wiley prepared a report which he captioned, "Attempts to Stop Recruiting on College Campuses." Wiley leads off the report with the statement, "Under the cover of investigating a leftist campaign to drive U. S. Government spokesmen and recruiters for government agencies from the colleges, I talked over the situation with those listed below, the following report is based on the combined thinking of all. (Those interviewed: former Rep. Donald Bruce, Don Appel of HCUA, Bill Mavrye of Senate Internal Security SubCommittee, a number of Young Americans for Freedom leaders, Paul Brehhah of the New York City Police, Peter McEleney of the New York State Police, Ruth Matthews, Herbert Larson of the N.Y.C. Arlington House Publishers was the subject of a report submitted during January 1967. The report discusses the factional fight to control the publishing company.

In March 1967, Wiley prepared a report which he captioned, "D.C. Reaction to Exposure of CIA Cover Operations." It would appear that the majority of the information came from Nick Nonnenmacher, administrative assistant to Rep. Henry C. Shadeburg.

Circa March 1967, Wiley forwarded three brochures distributed by the Canadian Loyalist Movement which were mailed to Wiley (?) by F.C. Pilkington, North Vancouver, B.C., Canada.

An undated report, captioned, "Edward (Ted) Scott" is based presumably on information provided to Wiley by Malcolm (Mac) Johnson, news manager, NBC-TV, New York City. Scott was then an NBC stringer in Cairo, Egypt.

An advertisement in Human Events, 19 August 1967, identifies Wiley as the Executive Director, National Committee for Responsible Patriotism, 500 Fifth Avenue, N.Y., N.Y., 10036. This group had planned a series of parades throughout the country on October 21-22 1967, mobilizing support for U.S. soldiers in Vietnam and respect for law and order. Wiley's participation with this group was the topic of an article appearing in the 20 August 1967 edition of The Worker, captioned, "The Elusive Charles Wiley," rehashing some of the prior material published about Wiley's background.

At least two magazine articles written by Wiley were introduced into the "Congressional Record." One on 22 June 1966 by Senator Peter H. Dominick (also previously submitted by Senator Joseph M. Montoya) and another on 27 April 1965 by Representative E. Bradford Morse.

In December 1970, Wiley prepared a report concerning David Braum of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War.

In early January 1972, Wiley submitted a program captioned "Friendship Program for Foreign Military Personnel Stationed in the United States," which in essence would be a U.S.O. for foreign military personnel stationed in the U.S. Wiley contended it would build up good will and friendship. Wiley was told we have no interest in such a project.

The fall 1972 "Arlington House Publishers" contained an article by Intelligence Source edited by Charles Wiley, as to why Source a charter member of the Americam Communist Party, joined the Party and then left to fight Communism. From 1970-72, Wiley, at the request of SRS, monitored Source book to make sure any operations in which Source might have been involved were not exposed.

Intelligence Source a former KGB officer who defected in , has been and continues to be of Agency interest. For some time, Source had expressed a personal desire to author a factual book on the KGB based on his personal knowledge and observations. The draft of a proposed manuscript was prepared, and Source requested assistance in obtaining an editorial review and an introduction to persons in the publishing business who might be interested in publishing a factual type book on the KGB.

Wiley was introduced to Source as an individual who could give editorial assistance and had certain contacts in the publishing business. During July - August 1972, Wiley met Source on three occasions. There was a degree of incompatibility of temperaments, in addition to a difference of opinion concerning general content, format and tenor of the proposed manuscript, and at the request of Source any further involvement of Wiley with regard to the proposed manuscript was terminated.

Circa September 1973, Wiley prepared a report which he captioned, "Personnel on Staff of Soviet Exhibition at EXPO, Montreal, Canada - July 1973," wherein he indicated he attended EXPO on 14 July 1973. He also provided a photograph of an individual believed Russian, he thought of interest. Vasaly directed the report of photos to John Dempsey, C/RB and Bruce Solie. The latter said he was unable to do anything with the photos at the time and directed the material back to Vasaly for the Wiley file.

On 6 November 1973, a report was received from Wiley concerning one Pamela Spates, who indicated to Wiley she had been active in SDS and later the Weathermen.

VIETNAM TRIP - 1967-68

On 4 December 1967, Wiley reported that he had received an official invitation to visit Vietnam through the Foreign Ministry of that country. The Vietnamese Government will pay all his transportation and living costs while on the trip and the invitation resulted from urgings by Nguyen Quoc Ten, press officer of the Vietnamese mission to the U.N. in New York City. Wiley was certain that his reputation as a friend of the Vietnamese triggered the invitation.

Approval was given him to make the trip; however, his request to extend the trip through other places in the Far East and Europe was turned down.

On 18 December 1967, Cecil Tighe(SRS) reported in the memo to the Chief, SRS, that Wiley briefed him on the forthcoming trip on 15 December 1967. Wiley was told to stay out of the front lines and take precautions not to involve himself in any situation that might jeopardize his safety. Ralph True (Chief/SAD, OS) accompanied Tighe to the meeting and True presented a requirement to Wiley to which he acceded. Apparently True's presence at the meeting had the approval of the Chief, SRS. Wiley agreed to cooperate whole-heartedly with True. For the record, Wiley was loaned a two-suit suitcase, "medication in the form of tablets," and was instructed to purchase a Leica camera case and sufficient color film. There is no explanation in the file concerning the requirement levied by True.

Wiley submitted a report concerning a debriefing concerning his Vietnam trip.

"During a debriefing session in Washington, D.C. 30 April 1968 (by Bob Long?), I was rather surprised by the lack of interest in my findings. The interviewer asked almost no questions and didn't take notes. In talking to someone who has a great many sources of information available, I had little way of knowing what might be of interest to him. On several occasions during the interview I specifically asked if there were any particular information that he wanted. There was no response.

"I was in Vietnam for over a month - through the Tet "truce" offensive - as a guest of that country's government. I had private discussions with President Thieu, Vice President Ky, Some of these were very frank. All were long (over two hours each with Thieu and KY) and I was treated as a friend. In addition, I saw many top U.S. leaders - including General Westmoreland and representatives of other nations (the chinese ambassador, the commander of all Thai troops in Vietnam, etc.). In nearly all cases I either knew them previously or reached these men through personal introductions from mutual friends. At no point in the debriefing was I asked whom I had contacted and there was no interest when I volunteered the information.

"The fact that I have an almost open door to the office of the Vietnamese ambassador in Washington and their United Nations Mission also met with no response. I am in a position to get their thinking on almost any subject and am also somewhat influential."

On the transmittal slip to the C/SRS, Tighe noted, "too bad Wiley went on about domestic political matters at the debriefing instead of concentrating on Vietnam."

EUROPEAN TRIP, 1970

Wiley, who claims that the basic reason for the trip was an invitation from the German Ministry of Defense, visited West Germany, England, Italy, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Yugoslavia. During the German sojourn he visited the German Army, Navy and Air Force installations. He was told prior to departure that CIA had no tasks for him to perform. The results of Wiley's trip appeared in the American Legion magazine for March 1971. Financial and other records fail to reflect any approval of and payment for Wiley for this trip.

Circa August 1970, Wiley prepared a report on one Benigno Naval from the Philippines, near Manila. Apparently, Wiley met Naval "enroute to the Bonn Airport." This information was formalized into a report on 25 September 1970 and sent to C/ID/1 with the intention it be provided to FE Division.

WORLD FESTIVAL, EAST BERLIN, 1973

In 1973, the Communists sponsored another WYF, this time held in East Berlin. Sometime prior to the event, Wiley brought up the question of our possible interest (SRS or other Agency components) and his availability and capability to be helpful finding appropriate delegates, funding, and providing cover. Despite being shunted off such an activity, he did apparently assist a young woman acquaintance, Third Agency Source, to travel as one of the American delegates. He considered her his protegee and claimed to have given her training and counsel and also to have directed her to the FBI. Source, ostensibly a member of the leftist group of American delegates, observed, took photos, and went on to the USSR with the group. She allegedly made her information and photos available to the FBI in debriefings and reports after her return.

Circa 14 August 1973, Wiley submitted a list of attendees at the 1973 Berlin Youth Festival. When Louis Vasaly brought the list to the attention of John P. Dempsey, Chief, Research Branch, with the suggestion of providing the list to CAS and "Ober's shop," Dempsey indicated the latter.

SECRET

INVOLVEMENT IN CUBAN EXILE ACTIVITIES

On 28 October 1960, Wiley prepared reports on Michael M. Moonry and Alex Rorke, the latter of which had been arrested in Cuba.

Wiley submitted an undated report captioned, "Directorio Revolucionario Estudiantil (Cuban Student Directorate)," particularly concerning Lesmes Ruiz, Jr., of the Revolutionary Student Directorate (DRE).

A Wiley report captioned, "Contact with the Cuban Revolutionary Student Directorate" is undated, but reflects Wiley's first contact with the DRE.

Wiley informed Morse Allen on 19 December 1961 that an FBI approached him and asked him to "nose around" about the people coming off the island (Cuba) or to get one of his boys to do it. Wiley further advised that the agent who made the request was Third Agency Employee of the New York Office (FBI) who wanted to attend a meeting of the P.I. which, according to Wiley, is a small anti-Castro Cuban group.

On 27 December 1962, Wiley reported of Ethel Mendoza of SRS, his then case officer, that he, Wiley, believed a trip to Miami, Fla, in the near future could be very profitable from both the straight reporting aspect, and through his thus being able to re-establish contact with several Cubans with whom he is acquainted. His most important contact is with Manuel Artime, one of the leaders of the Cuban invasion force, who has just been released by Castro. Miss Mendoza further noted that Wiley is also acquainted with several other Cubans of some importance, one of these being a member of the "Alpha 66" group which ran several small operations against Cuba during 1962.

From 31 January through 10 February 1963, Wiley was in Miami, Fla., contacting Cuban exiles and exile organizations. His main target was Manuel Artime and his associates, with secondary target, the Cuban Student Directorate. He submitted a long and detailed report of his trip. Some of the information was published into finished memoranda.

A report dated circa February 1963 concerns a "Castro Raid on British Islands."

Circa February 1963, Wiley preprared a report on U.S. citizens and Canadians in Cuba.

The file contains a copy of HN-1-30, dated 25 February 1963, announcing the Agency formation of a "Task Force on Cuba" under the direction of James J. Hitchcock. Colonel Edwards brought the matter to the attention of Robert Bannerman with the comment, "This might be the place to feed in reports from Morse Allen's source. Bannerman advised Paul Gaynor and Allen, "When you have report already, we can take this up with Hitchcock."

On 12 April 1963, SRS prepared two final reports based Wiley's information concerning J.M. Hernandez, aka: "Manolin;" and the Comite Latino Americano de Informacion (Latin American Information Center).

On 5 June 1963, Wiley prepared a report on "Cuban Exiles and Associates," specifically mentioning Paul Bethel, Manuel Ray, Manuel Artime and Alex Rorke.

On 8 August 1963, Wiley verbally reported information he had received regarding Cuban activities.

On 11 September 1963, a report was prepared in SRS on the basis of a phone call to Wiley, concerning Nira Hardon and "Artime."

An undated report prepared by Wiley (including conversations with Enrique Abascal in late September 1963) concerned recent information on Cuban exile activity from New York sources.

On 4 October 1963, Wiley prepared a report concerning the Revoluntionary Student Directorate leadership. He indicated he thought very highly of this organization.

On 15 September 1963, Wiley prepared a report which he captioned, "Details of Town Hall Rally and Cuban Planning for It" which concerned Cuban exile activity to be directed against the rally of leftist American visitors to Cuba." Wiley also indicated he was involved as an advisor to the Cuban exiles regarding his opinion as to American reaction to specific activities, the scope of press coverage, their rights in the hall, etc.

Under the date of 9 October 1963, SRS prepared a 7 page formal report based on Wiley's above-mentioned Cuban reports which was captioned, "Information Regarding DRE and Other Cubans - New York City." This report was given to WH Division on 11 October 1963.

Sometime after 10 November 1963, Wiley submitted a list of his contacts in New York City during the weeks of 28 October and 4 November 1963.

Sometime in very late 1963, Wiley prepared a report containing information on Lee Harvey Oswald which he received from Enrique Abascal, wherein Abascal alleged he met Oswald in New York "last winter in Greenwich Village." Wiley stated, "I urged Abascal to go to the FBI with the information and offered to arrange a meeting. He promised to tell them the story, and made contact through an agency (O'Brien) whom he knew because of past activities." Abascal also provided information on Cuban exile matters.

On 26 December 1963, Wiley prepared a report on general Cuban matters based on information he received from Enrique Abascal. This matter was given to WH Division on 3 January 1964 by Morse Allen.

Sometime before 21 January 1964, Wiley prepared a list of his contacts for the period 9 December 1963 to the end of 1963.

Circa 30 September 1964, Wiley provided verbal information concerning Miss Manuela Fogel which was formalized into a report by Morse Allen on 11 January 1965.

The file contains notes of a conversation dated 7 October 1964. Apparently on the basis of this conversation, Morse Allen prepared a formal report which he captioned:

"Cuban Information, Source - Enrique via Wiley," which pertained to Soviet missile and submarine activity in Cuba. This report was brought to the attention of the Director of Security with the recommendation that a sterilized version be brought to the attention of Jerry Mullane, WH Div/Security or CIA Cover Employee of WH Div. On 9 October 1964, the material was passed to Bruce Cheever (DD/P) on the instructions of Howard Osborn.

On 30 April 1966, Wiley prepared a report on Oswaldo F. Hernandez-Campos, a veteran of the Bay of Pigs.

OVERSEAS TRAVEL

Wiley's financial records, i.e., travel vouchers, Federal Income tax forms and cover organization accountings, reflect the following travel:

From 17 June to 25 August 1959, Wiley went to France, Spain, Algeria, Tunisia, Italy, Yugoslavia, Greece, Egypt, Lebanon, Syria, Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Israel, Cyprus, Turkey,

SRS underwrote $556.70 of transporation costs to be offset by earnings, if sufficient. The amount was advanced on 16 June 1959. There are no other vouchers in the 1959 travel and salary vouchers file concerning this trip.

Apparently between 6 June and 29 June 1960, Wiley visited Cuba, Jamaica, Dominican Republic and Puerto Rico. The 1960 Federal income tax return shows two trips to the Caribbean; however, no dates are shown. One of 21 days to the areas mentioned above. The cover organization accounting for the period December 1959 to June 1960 shows a 21 day overseas trip - airfare: $232.18 and 21 days per diem.

Between 23 July and 4 August 1960, Wiley went to Cuba. The 1960 Federal income tax return noted above shows one trip of 9 days to Cuba. The July 1960-June 1961 cover fund accounting shows a Cuba trip expense of $500.80 and this expense was offset against cover fund income. There were no other vouchers available concerning this trip. It is felt that this trip was approved by the Agency. A news account, dated 4 August 1960, reflects that Charles Wiley was expelled by the Cubans on that date after 8 days in prison without charges.

From April through July 1961, Wiley traveled through Africa and Europe. The 1961 Federal income tax return reflects a trip of 73 days. The July 1960 through June 1961 cover accounting shows expenses of 73 days per diem $1,460.00 less a home office (CIA) advance of $147.29 - $1,312.71 as offset against income. A travel voucher for April-July 1961 shows: Per diem $1215.29. Transportation $1324.06, other $907.65 for a total of $3497.00. From this was subtracted an advance of $1900.00 by SRS on 13 April 1961. An itinerary for Africa and Europe for April to July 1961 shows: Lisbon, Tangier, Dakar, Conakry, 15 May - 22 August 1962 - the 1962 Federal income tax return reflects a 93 day trip to Australia, S.E. and Mid-East, Asia, USSR and Europe. An April 1962 memorandum reflects that the Director of Security approved $3000 toward this planned trip. The cover accounting for July 1961-June 1962 shows a deficit on a trip to Asia of $4,538.38 minur $3,000.00 ($1,538.38). The file contains a billing from the Cosmos Travel Bureau, Inc. for $2,521.54 and receipts for same paid in April and May 1962. The file contains a copy of a Form 281 Request for Advance of $3000.00, dated 1 May 1962. A travel voucher form 22 covering May-August 1962 shows $4,544.38 in expenses for the trip. The itinerary is as follows: Auckland, Melbourne, Canberra, Syndey, Brisbane, Sydney, Djakarta, Singapore, Kuala Lumpur, Bangkok, Saigon, Phnom Penh, Vientiane, Rangoon, Calcutta, Katmandu, New Delhi, Agra, Srinagar, Rawalpinki, Peshawar, Kabul, USSR (11-23 July) Helsinki, (July - August) Stockholm, Oslo, Copenhagen, Berlin, Frankfurt, Lugano, London and New York City.

The 1964 Federal Income tax return reflects a 31 day trip to Asia from 15 November - 31 December 1964. On 27 October 1964, in a memo to Chief/SRS, Morse Allen stated that the CHINAT Govt. has offered C. Wiley a two week, all expense paid, round trip to Taiwan. He recommended approval, plus "I also recommend that Wiley be given some money in the amount of $500 to $1000 to permit him to take advantage of the CHINAT trip and make a 'free lance' trip through the Far East (Tokyo, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Thailand, Vietnam, Malaysia) and return via Manila, P.I." A note in file indicates that $1000 was ok'd by the Director of Security on 30 October 1964. $1000 was advanced Wiley on 10 November 1964. The trip was made in November and December 1964. A travel allowance concerning the trip shows: Expenses of $962.78 expended out of $1000 advanced. Itinerary as of 15 November was Alaska, Tokyo, Hiroshima, Nagasaki, Tokyo, Seoul, Taiwan (26 Nov-11 Dec) Hong Kong,

The 1965 Federal income tax return shows a 49 day trip to South America from 31 July to 17 September 1965. Originally an extended trip had been approved to include the 9th World Youth Festival as planned for Algiers. The World Youth Festival was cancelled, but a trip to cover Bolivia, Ecuador, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Brazil and Venezuela remained. Expenses were to be covered by the cover fund. In a memo concerning his proposed South American trip for July 1965, Wiley advised that "The cover fund is sufficient to pay all expenses, and the income from the trip should be enough to return the money and show a profit (perhaps a very good one)." A travel voucher shows expenses for the trip 31 July 1965 to 17 September 1965 of $2234.72. The itinerary: New York City, Miami, Panama, Bogota, Quito, Lima, Cusco, La Paz, Santiago, Cordoba, Buenos Aires, Asuncion, Iguape, Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, Brasilia, Rio de Janeiro, Reclife, Belem, Manaus, Caracas, New York City. The cover accounting for 1965 shows the South American trip expense of $2234.72 was offset against income and there is no record of an advance.

No foreign travel is reflected in the Federal Income Tax Returns or files for 1966 or 1967.

The 1968 Federal income tax return reflects a 55 day trip to Athens, Cairo, Indo-China, Manila, Taipei and Seoul. An 18 December 1967 memo to Chief, SRS, from Cecil C. Tighe related to his briefing Wiley regarding the up-coming trip by Wiley to Vietnam and Laos, warning him to exercise care and not expose himself unnecessarily to danger.

An accounting of the expenses for the trip 16 January to 9 March reflects that air transportation was supplied by the Government of Vietnam. The itinerary shows: Athens, Bangkok, Vientiane, Saigon, Hong Kong, Macao, Manila, Taipei and Seoul. Total other expenses of $828.11 were incurred and are reflected as an expense in the 1968 cover accounting and offset against income.

SEP 30 1975
CIA

Wiley's 1969 Federal income tax return reflects a 21 day trip to Germany, Belgium, and Luxemburg and claims transportation was furnished by the U.S. Armed Forces. A memo of a trip to Germany 20 January to 8 February 1969 indicates Wiley was covering airlift operation Reforger I. This trip was apparently as an invitee of the U.S. military which supplied most of the travel needs. No travel voucher was submitted to CIA but overseas trip expenses of $502.26 are charged as expenses in the 1969 cover fund accounting offset against income. The itinerary shows: Brussels, Germany and Luxemburg.

The 1970 Federal income tax return indicates a 2 month trip to Europe, primarily Germany, during July and August 1970. It says much of trip expense provided by the West German Government. Wiley did not make the usual claim for per diem expense in the Federal income tax return. In his cover accounting for 1970, Wiley shows an overseas trip expense of $664.74 to be offset against income. He indicates transportation from D.C. to Germany and return was provided by the German Air Force and that a three week tour of German bases was covered by the German Defense Ministry. The Trip took place in July and August 1970 and besides Germany included: London, Paris, Rome, Brussels, The Hague, and Zagreb.

No foreign travel is reflected in the Federal Income tax return or office records for 1971.

Wiley's 1973 Federal income tax return shows a one month trip to Vietnam, Hong Kong, and Taiwan. Wiley's 1972 cover fund accounting reflects expenses of $497.36 for a Vietnam trip but in his income he shows an allowance of $475.00 made by the National Committee for Responsible Patriots (NCRP), for the trip. The expense listing attached reflects those expenses and claims roundtrip airfare and some other expenses were provided by others (possibly air transportation expenses were provided by some segment of the Vietnam Government). The itinerary shows: Hong Kong, Vietnam, and Taipei.

Whether Wiley had any foreign travel in 1973 is unknown since his 1973 Federal income tax return and cover fund accountings have not been received to date, 25 March 1974.

UTILIZATION, CONTROL AND CASE OFFICERS

On 9 January 1963, Morse Allen of SRS wrote the first memo spelling out Wiley's detailed use by the Agency. It is quoted in part as follows:

"UTILIZATION FROM 1957 TO DATE

"In the original plan, Mr. Wiley was to be used for special research work, special investigations, and in very general terms, as a penetration into right-wing groups and the right-wing literary field in New York City. He has conducted research on organizations of interest to SRS, carried out specialized assignments of a covert investigative nature on individuals of interest to this Staff, and gradually began to develop himself into a free lance writer and journalist. During this period, Mr. Wiley extended his field of contacts to include a great many persons and organizations in the right-wing and anti-Communist category, and thus was able to furnish us as required, information on activities and many individuals in this area. Under SRS guidance, he conducted harassment exercises against the Communist World Youth Festivals in Vienna (1959), and Helsinki (1962). In addition, he obtained considerable valuable information on individuals in attendance at the Festivals and the Communist tactics used in these Communist sponsored meetings.

"Further, during 1959-1962, Mr. Wiley made many trips in behalf of SRS, including a journalistic trip to Cuba where he served a jail sentence in Havana in an effort to obtain information of a matter of grave interest to this Agency. He has made many trips overseas; has visited most of Africa, the Near and Middle East, most of Europe, much of Asia, the Satellite countries and has been twice in the Soviet Union on our behalf. In addition to important information, photographs, etc., which he obtained for us, his stature as a writer-journalist-photographer has increased, which in turn has widened his circle of contacts. His last trip, which took him through Southeast Asia, across the Soviet Union and ended at the Youth Festival in Helsinki this past summer, was highly productive, and it will be recalled that Mr. Wiley and his covert associates thoroughly disrupted the Communist Youth Festival. Information on the Soviet Union which he obtained while there has been given to SR Division in a series of debriefings.

"WORLD NEWS ANALYSIS

Approximately three years ago, in an effort to provide Mr. Wiley with a more substantial mechanism for operations and to increase his journalistic reputation, it was decided that he would set up a news-gathering service based in New York City and secure, where possible, the services of writers or journalists who would feed him news stories from various points in the world. This would have the advantage of being a legitimate news-gathering service and at the same time possibly being later used as an information-gathering organization for intelligence purposes. Acting under instructions from SRS, Mr. Wiley set in motion the World News Analysis; opened a small office in Flushing, New York, had press credentials made and conducted business to a certain extent in the name of this organization. CIA Covert Source

Details of this will not be covered in this report. Mr. Wiley still conducts certain business through this mechanism (WNA), but at the present, with the exception

"CURRENT AND IMMEDIATE OPERATIONAL ACTIVITY

"Mr. Wiley is currently being used more or less in line with the original idea of the project. His activities can be grouped as follows:

B. Maintains close association with organizations of the right, the extreme right and the numerous anti-Communist refugee groups, mainly in New York City.

C. Maintains personal contact across the board with the leaders and officers of practically every known anti-Communist group of significance in New York City and many in other parts of the United States. He knows on a personal basis nearly all of the outstanding anti-Communist writers, labor leaders, and Civic leaders in New York City.

D. He has close working connections with, and has written a great deal for, the American Legion (using his own by-line).

E. He has a great number of connections in Congress and is known personally to probably all of the Congressmen and staff of the House Committee on Un-American Activities and the Senators and Staff of the Senate Internal Security Committee. He maintains continuous liaison with the FBI and State and City Police in New York.

F. He travels often, gives innumerable lectures and talks to all types of organizations who wish to use the services of a highly professional and talented anti-Communist speaker.

G. While not engaging in political activity of any type on the local scene, Mr. Wiley from time to time engages in the formation of committees for 'single-shot' organizations aimed at harassment of the Soviets or local Communists, particularly in New York City. It was he who spearheaded the anti-Khrushchev demonstrations in New York when Khrushchev visited the United Nations in 1961.

"LONG-RANGE TARGETS

"Much thought has gone into the ultimate disposition of Mr. Wiley and at present the basic thinking is as follows:

RECEIVED FROM
SEP 30 1975
CIA

A. If Mr. Wiley, because of his talents and capacity as a writer-journalist and his considerable knowledge of Soviet activity throughout the world, is offered a highly remunerative job job with a major publication, news service or radio chain, Mr. Wiley (ostensibly) will sever his connection with us and go on the payroll of the organization chosen and will retain our connection on a purely personal basis.

B. If Mr. Wiley does not find this situation attractive, he is to be considered for conversion to staff employee, where his considerable capabilities could be fully exploited.

"However, these ideas are not yet at the point of development and Mr. Wiley is to continue to operate under the current arrangement."

On 15 January 1963, Allen wrote a further description of Wiley's use to the Chief, Security Research Staff through the Deputy Chief, Security Research Staff as follows:

"1. Attached herewith is a summary and a status report on Charles William Wiley which was requested by Chief, SRS, several weeks ago. The report was prepared after numerous conferences with Mr. Wiley by Miss Finan, Miss Mendoza and Mr. Allen. The attachment referred to as a 'Contact List' was prepared upon our instructions by Mr. Wiley himself and no additions or corrections have been made. It is believed self-explanatory.

"2. For matter of record, we wish to again emphasize that certain items are omitted from the Contact List and omitted generally from the report itself for security reasons. These are as follows:

1) Because of Mr. Wiley's various activities, he has succeeded in effecting several penetrations into Communist Party organizations in New York City. Details and names are omitted in this category.

FROM
SEP 30 1975

2) Mr. Wiley's contact with Earl Browder is not noted in the Contact List, for obvious reasons, although SRS ran Wiley against Earl Browder for several years, principally as a RECOVERY target. This contact is still being used, and, for the record, Browder apparently is fond of Wiley and enjoys his company.

3) In addition to the above, Mr. Wiley has conducted activities with cognizance of SRS which are omitted because of their sensitive nature. Very briefly, these activities can be summarized as follows:

a. Scouting anti-CIA attacks in the various media and organizations to which Wiley has access.

b. Stopping same insofar as possible (as demonstrated in American Legion activity).

c. Discovering and blocking anti-CIA attacks or attacks on Agency personnel 'on the Hill.'

d. Writing or helping write pro-CIA articles in the various media with which Wiley has contact.

"3. We have made no recommendation to the basic report, but it is the considered opinion of the writers of this report that Mr. Wiley's services are unique and outstanding and that he should be retained for the present in the same contractual way, with consideration strongly urged to effecting a method whereby his salary or reimbursement can be increased."

A hand written comment on the memo is as follows: "Concur in Retention - W. M. Knott (who was the then Deputy Chief, SRS).

(Apparently the summary and status report and Contact List to which Mr. Allen refers is the previous quoted memo of 9 January.)

During February and March 1963, SRS representatives met with Wiley for discussion of an objective to place a skilled and controlled source in the newspaper community in Washington, D. C. who would have normal, routine, and ready access to the Washington writing and radio colony. The long range plan was to have Wiley move to Washington, and begin extensive writing and lecturing to establish his prestige, and to slowly curtail his other activities except for keeping his "excellent Cuban and anti-Castro connections." The basic plan was to be forwarded to the Director of Security by the Chief, SRS, for consideration. Tentative approval must have been received inasmuch as on 26 March 1964, Morse Allen requested the assistance of Eugene Lyons for information as to an assessment of Wiley's work, and the best method for establishing prestige for a writer. Wiley was not identified by name.

In the interim, on 30 March 1964, Eugene Lyons contacted Morse Allen, confirmed Wiley's writing talent, and arranged for an introduction of Wiley to Lee Wood (or Woods), General Manager of Script (sic) Howard. Wiley contacted Wood through Lyons and they arranged for a personal meeting on 3 April 1964. The plan, however, fell through since Wiley never moved to Washington.

The plan, as follows, was presented in an undated memorandum form for the Director of Security:

> "During the week of February ____ and on 7 and 8 March 1963, extensive discussions were held with Wiley concerning matters which are set out in detail following. Mr. Wiley is in agreement with Chief/SRS and representatives of SRS that the proposed plan which follows is the most sound, logical, and secure method of obtaining the desired results:
>
> "OBJECT - To place a skilled and controlled source in some type of a position in Washington, D. C., which will have normal, routine, and ready access to the Washington writing and radio colony.
>
> "PROBLEM - Source must have sufficient background and prestige to be accepted; he must have income adequate to be in Washington (ostensibly from his own efforts); he must have a valid reason for being in Washington; he must have high capacity to produce; he must have a strong security sense; and he must have unquestioned loyalty.

R FROM

"PROPOSED SOLUTION:

"a. SOURCE - Source to be used is Wiley. Wiley fits in nearly every particular to the elements set out in the 'Problem' above.

"b. METHOD OF SOLUTION:

"1. Source will begin at once to write articles of importance, aiming at the placing of these articles in national magazines, particularly magazines of the type of Life, Look, Readers Digest, McCalls, Argosy, etc. Source has numerous valid ideas for these articles and already some interest has been shown in these writings by Editors of the aforementioned type magazines. Source will slowly divorce himself from his numerous activities in New York City, maintaining only strong interest in his Cuban connections. Source will need approximately three months to write these articles and to sell them. It is Source's intention that these articles carry his by-line, which is a basic element to building prestige necessary for Source's future activity. Source is convinced he can handle this successfully.

"Note: Heretofore Source has, under instruction, kept the use of his name to an absolute minimum for obvious reasons. This requirement will now be lifted.

"2. At the same time Source will prepare brochures for a lecture tour to be given by Source during the Fall and early Winter, basically on Cuba and Latin America. Already Source has drafted brochures and he will have professional guidance in this matter.

"Note: Source is an excellent lecturer. He has appeared before public forums many times and has a high capacity in this area. This lecture tour, details of which will be set out below, is considered of key importance to the basic problem.

RQM

SEP 1975

CIA

"3. Starting on or about the first of July, Source will make an extensive tour of Central and South America as a free lance reporter/writer/photographer, using his credentials from the World News Analysis. Entree basically will be provided using numerous Cuban contacts Source has obtained throughout Latin and South American countries. This trip will take probably the most of July, August, and part of September and is regarded as essential for back up, for prestige, for area knowledge, and for lecture material.

"Note: Source is known to have excellent Cuban anti-Castro connections which will be sharpened for use on this tour. (Source has been in every area of the world except Latin and South America.)

"c. LECTURE TOUR: On or about the middle of September Source will return to New York City and prepare for the aforementioned lecture tour. (It should be noted that there is no lecture activity during the Summer months.) After preparation, Source will proceed to make a lecture tour covering all parts of the United States and addressing all types of audiences. Source's lecture tour will be run through the sponsorship of the Babcock Agency of Virginia Beach, Virginia. This Agency, which handles among others the important members of the National Review Staff, will be handled on a direct commission basis taking a usual ten percent fee. In addition, through other organizations Source will arrange lectures on his own which is routine and which will not conflict in any way with the Babcock Agency interest. Source anticipates completing the lecture tour about the first of the year 1964, at which time he will return to New York City.

"Note: This lecture tour will serve a dual purpose. It will build up the stature of the

[illegible] FROM
SEP 30 1975
CIA

Source (spreadhis name before the public), and it will give him the necessary opportunity to conduct the following business: As Source makes his lecture tour he will attempt, by direct contact and through already established channels, to determine whether or not he can set up for the basic plan (a) a daily column, (b) a newsletter, (c) a radio spot news broadcast. The lecture tour, of course, will place Source in given areas and it would be completely logical for him to talk to local editors and radio station owners and managers while in the area. He will be backed up by the fact that he is lecturing and that he is a writer because of the previously mentioned articles.

"d. Upon his return to New York City on or about the first of the year 1964, Source will then be able to make a definitive statement as to whether or not he can conduct on a continuing basis and on an economically sound basis (a) a daily column; (b) a weekly newsletter; or (c) a radio newscast bureau.

"Note: Source has evolved an idea of making short newscasts which he believes can be peddled on a spot basis to various local radio chains, perhaps weekly. This idea, which is novel, appears to have a great deal of merit.

"e. After Source and SRS staff have had a chance to analyze the total result, a decision will then be reached as to the feasibility of moving Source to Washington. If the results of the above set out plans indicate that Source can logically appear in Washington, he will then, for a period of about 30 to 60 days while operating either his column, newsletter or radio broadcast bureau, shuttle back and forth between New York and Washington obviously seeking news. He will let it be known to his friends in the newspaper and writing business that the pressure of his work is such that he will need some office space in Washington at which time, more or less on a temporary basis, he will secure in a downtown location a combination business office and living quarters, possibly at some such place as the 1028 Connecticut Avenue Building.

"f. After this test, Source will 'discover' that he can best operate out of Washington and he will then establish an office and purchase a house or other accommodations and bring his family to Washington.

"g. At this point Source will be operating on his own as a news gatherer. He will be established as such and he will have access to the various press conferences and other news making areas in Washington and he will by necessity mingle with the local newsmen and radio people.

"COMMENTS:

"The main question concerning the above plan was whether or not this could be accomplished in a shorter time guaranteeing soundness, logic, and security. Many approaches were studied and for the reasons set out below they were discarded as not workable or unsound. Details follow:

"1. Do we have a cover organization in Washington that would be usable in connection with the set out plan?

As far as we can now determine, there is no suitable cover organization in Washington that would cover the movement of the Source into Washington, explain his presence there, and give him a required freedom of movement in the area of interest. We have no totally controlled newspaper property, news bureau, or radio bureau in Washington, nor do we have any organization where Source could be planted without creating a questionable situation.

"2. Could we establish a 'grant' which would do as a cover for bringing Source into Washington?

"A very careful study of this problem indicates that this is probably not logical. A

RECEIVED FROM
SEP 30 1975
CIA

grant for research would be difficult as Source is not what could be called a research type nor would he have freedom of movement, and he would not have a reasonable excuse for being in certain areas and asking certain questions of interest. If a cover is given, for instance for writing a book, it is believed that this cover would be limited and would preclude Source moving in certain areas of interest, i.e., if he were to write a book on ______________________________, he could logically talk on the subject and interview persons knowledgeable, visit the Hill and some of the press, but it seems doubtful to us that he could convert this into matters of specific interest to us.

"3. Could our Source obtain a position as full-time employee or perhaps stringer of a going organization such as a Washington news bureau or magazine of the type of 'Newsweek' or 'World Report'?

"If we would place legitimately or otherwise our Source in such a position, this might be very limiting. In other words, Source could be confined to desk work and have no access at all to the actual operations of the magazine or getting about Washington as a leg man and reporter. The chance also exists that if he were able to obtain such an assignment, because of his contacts he might be sent out of town immediately. Furthermore, Source does not necessarily have the background of taking a position as editor or similar type with any established news bureau or magazine. Furthermore, if through various Washington connections we were to approach an established magazine and ask for a 'roving' assignment of Source, it is most likely that the magazine editor or owner would turn down the idea automatically. Finally, in this connection, a possibility may exist that Source, himself, using his Cuban stories and entree, sell himself as a stringer to some Washington news bureau or magazine, but probably only working out of New York.

"4. Could Source obtain employment on a Congressional Committee on either side of the Hill which would give him access to the areas of interest?

"Source has exceptional connections on the Hill and it is believed that through these connections he might obtain some type of assignment on a temporary basis or perhaps on a regular basis. However, in the opinion of the SRS staff this is exceptionally hazardous and if it became known through some misfortune, it would be of enormous embarrassment to Agency officials. In addition, Source might well obtain employment with the Congressional Committee, but his work might be too limiting to permit him to move about and it might well preclude any opportunity he had of making contact with the local press. Furthermore, most Committee assignments, investigative or otherwise, generally follow a 9 to 5 routine on the Hill and free lancing and freedom of movement are not easily obtained in Congressional Committees. It is regarded as impossible to place Source on a Congressional Committee if the employing Senator or Congressman was to be informed even in a most nominal way of Source's mission.

"5. Can the basic plan be telescoped on a shorter basis?

"This is considered questionable by those who have worked in this area for some time. If we shorten the approach, we would obviously cut down on our Source's background and prestige, particularly in an area where stature is necessary. The articles using Source's by-line, if they are successful, would be very important and would serve as a basis for everything that would follow. The South American trip is needed and Source would have at the present time the best possible chance for success based on his Cuban contacts which are very strong at the present time. A possibility also exists on such a trip that Source might be fortunate enough to achieve an important newspaper scoop which, of course, would build prestige and quite conceivably place his name prominently in the public eye. The lecture tour, of course, is essential not only for prestige purposes, but to make the necessary survey to determine the best possible media for Source if and when he ultimately moves to Washington.

"The long range proposal set out above appears to be the most secure and most logical way into the target. If it is necessary to go after a shorter method or a more direct approach, every effort can be aimed at this. However, it is possible that a long range plan as set out above might be used successfully in combination with a shorter more direct plan unless the shorter plan would result in the blowing of the Source prematurely."

On 1 October 1964, Morse Allen wrote a memorandum for the record reporting an interview with Wiley as follows:

"On 30 September 1964, the writer talked with Wiley at the writer's apartment in Washington, D.C., for several hours. The conversation was general and part of it was devoted to the discussion of financial matters, routine operational problems, and comments primarily on the local New York scene.

"Of particular interest, however, in addition to the above, were the following:

> "(a) Earl Browder - After discussing Wiley's connections with Browder, the writer directed that Wiley interview Browder as soon as possible and discuss with him the recent deaths of Togliatti, Thorez, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn and find out what significance, if any, Browder makes of these matters. SRS recently had information that Browder had given some information of intelligence value to an English writer and it was felt that it would be of interest to reopen Wiley's connections with Browder. Wiley was asked to stress the Togliatti paper.
> "(b) Malcolm X - Wiley had previously interviewed Malcolm X (Malcolm Little) before the former's recent trip to Egypt and Africa and the Middle East. The writer requested Wiley, at his earliest possible convenience, to reinterview Malcolm X, particularly stressing Malcolm X's views of individuals with whom he had talked and any personalities of information which could be of intelligence use. It should be noted that Wiley regards Malcolm X as probably the shrewdest of the Negro leaders and according to Wiley, Malcolm X talks freely to him because Wiley and Malcolm X have an understanding not to mince words or to be evasive when they are talking.
> "(c) Communist Youth Festival, Algiers, July (?) 1965 -
> It should be noted that Wiley has spearheaded anti-Communist attacks on Youth Festivals in Vienna and in Helsinki previously, has disrupted their programs, and has to a considerable extent interfered with their propaganda at these festivals. Because of this, Wiley is interested once again in divisive and disruptive efforts against the Communists in Algiers in 1965. This time Wiley states that it would be dangerous because of the attitude of the Moroccan Government. Wiley believes that it would be best to have a small team of three to six trained individuals who would proceed to the Youth Festival at Algiers and who would be directed not at disruption or propaganda, but would aim at intelligence gathering. Wiley himself stated that he would again volunteer to go to Algiers at this time, not ostensibly connected with the aforementioned group, and only as a free lance newspaperman. Wiley pointed out that undoubtedly he is not the top news authority in the United States on Communist Party Youth Festivals. Wiley states that he believes he can arrange financing from private organizations and individuals for the three to six individuals mentioned above and possibly enough for travel by himself although this may not be obtainable. Wiley requests a study of this matter and advice.

RECEIVED FROM

"(d) Bay of Pigs Book Review - Wiley stated that he cannot as yet explain why the National Review did not publish his Bay of Pigs review, but in fact paid him for it. He is convinced that the review was withheld because of some Agency influence. He submitted correspondence from Frank Meyer, one of the editors of the National Review in this connection.

"(e) The Kennedy Book - Wiley commented that his friend Dick Whalen, an outstanding young writer, has just completed a book on either Joseph B. Kennedy or the Kennedy family for which Whalen received $100,000 in advance. Wiley states that he has helped Whalen write the book, giving him advice and assisting him editorially. Wiley states that there are two items of which he is extremely pleased of his work in connection with this book:

(1) He convinced Whalen to rewrite the chapter on the Bay of Pigs, focusing the blame from the CIA to John F. Kennedy, and

RE FROM
SEP 30 1975

(2) He had deleted from the book an entire section which was devoted to alleging that CIA was responsible for the assassination of Trujillo.

(3) Wiley added that the Kennedy book contained an index and just before the book was to go to the printers, a proofreading of the index showed that there were numerous errors in it. The publishers, upon discovering this, asked Wiley to correct the index, making such annotations and corrections as necessary with highest priority. Wiley stated that it took him 36 hours of continuous work to complete and correct the index and for this effort he has sent the publishers a bill for $500.

"(f) Free China Weekly - Attached is a copy of the Free China Weekly, dated 6 September 1964. This publication is published for overseas distribution from Taiwan and is a propaganda sheet of the Chinese Nationalists. Wiley called attention to the article at the top of page 3 in which the Free China Weekly comments on the article written by Charles W. Wiley in the September issue of the American Legion Magazine concerning Tibet. Wiley indicates that is good publicity since the paper is sent all over the world."

In December 1964, SRS prepared a blind memorandum outlining the use of Wiley, to wit:

> "Wiley has been a contract agent of SRS since 1959 and operates under a non-official cover of a one-man news agency in New York City. He is actually assisted clerically by his wife, who is witting.
>
> "Wiley, 38 years of age, is a born and bred New Yorker who comes from a theatrical family. He came to our attention in 1955 when he was compiling an index of the Daily Worker on a grant from the Americanism Commission of American Legion. The grant was depleted before the index was completed; SRS arranged to finance same, and eventually obtained a copy of the index. From 1957-1959, Wiley was financed as a cleared source from both OS and CI Staff funds.
> "Wiley's contract does not require renewal and can be terminated for cause or otherwise with a maximum of 90 days notice. SRS has no agreements with Wiley as to length of contract and he is not entitled to leave, retirement, or other benefits normally due an employee.
>
> "Wiley is paid from OS funds in the amount of $10,500 base salary, plus a quarterly payment of $131.25 in lieu of retirement and hospitalization. He is paid his local travel expenses (which in the last fiscal year have been extremely low) on a monthly voucher arrangement. All payments are deposited through covert Agency channels into a separate bank account for Wiley in New York.
> "By virtue of his non-government activities in obtaining photographic assignments and in assisting other writers in research, in addition to occasional sales of his articles directly to publishers, Wiley's cover firm has so far been self-funding. He usually requires a large out-lay of cash in addition to his regular payments only if he is making an overseas trip.

"Wiley is known to be a CIA employee by numerous individuals, such as: the staff of National Review; Herbert Romerstein, a close friend of Wiley and a former Communist; Lee Pennington, Elsa Bernaut and Hede Massing; J. B. Matthews and his wife, former Communists with whom Wiley is friendly; and by CIA Covert Source He is suspected of being a CIA employee by various Cuban refugees with whom he became friendly following his incarceration in a Cuban prison.

"Wiley's firm was used as a cover for various assignments given by SRS to CIA Covert Source , to the extent that WNA press credentials were in their possession until 1964. CIA Covert So. is known to have discussed his Agency affiliation and correspondence through Wiley with at least several other persons and furnished considerable written material relating thereto to Congressman Daddario."

In February 1967, Wiley suggested that in light of the then recent disclosures about CIA and youth activities, he be actively engaged in many media activities designed to counteract the bad publicity.

On 3 March 1967, Cecil Tighe sent a note to Paul Gaynor stating that Wiley suggests he be permitted to make overtures to the media for personal appearances and articles regarding his involvement in the various youth festivals. Tighe said he advised Wiley: "Nix - to stay quiet." Tighe asked Gaynor whether he concurred. The memo is merely signed: "Noted" by Gaynor.

A blind memorandum dated 7 March 1967 contains the following:

"During Wiley's employment by OS/Security Research Staff, he attended the 7th World Youth Festival at Vienna in 1959, and the 8th at Helsinki in 1962, following which he furnished detailed information to this Agency, as well as to FBI, HCUA, etc. He also made trips to Cuba in an attempt to secure details relating to a matter of sensitive interest to DDP, and on the second trip in 1960 was confined for eight days by the Cuban authorities before being expelled. He has visited the USSR, and several Iron Curtain countries, the Far East, Middle East and Africa, Central and South America, Korea and the Republic of China. His interviews at the front in Vietnam with American enlisted men during 1964 received considerable attention when utilized by one of the major radio networks, and his articles regarding Vietnam and other projects which appeared in a well-known magazine received much favorable comment."

Sometime before 24 January 1967, Wiley prepared two reports relative to a possible trip to Hanoi. When the reports were presented to Paul F. Gaynor, Chief, SRS, on 27 February 1967, Gaynor designated "No" to certain proposals made by Wiley, to wit:

a. The use of credentials from established media.

b. Accompaniment of Wiley by FBI controlled sources (known to Wiley) in leftist circles.

On 7 April 1967, Cecil Tighe, SRS, wrote Wiley a letter which confirmed Paul Gaynor's oral instructions given Wiley in Washington on 29 March 1967. Wiley's instructions were as follows:

Limit your activities to:

1. Spotting contacts
2. To assessing them, but under no circumstances be guilty of any recruitment.

On 26 April 1967, Tighe formalized to the C/SRS a memorandum of discussion with Wiley, captioned "Wiley's affiliation with the Support Our Boys in Vietnam parade, New York City, 13 May 1967," to wit:
